Lieut.-Gen. Adna R. Chaffee,
The distinguished retired Chief of the General Staff, U.S.A., who is very seriously ill at his home in Chester Place, this city.

LIEUT.-GEN. ADNA R. CHAFFEE, U.S.A., retired, former Chief of the General Staff, is lying seriously ill at his home, No. 1 Chester place. For several weeks he has been suffering from a typhoid condition, but he is not afflicted with typhoid fever. His condition was reported as slightly better last night, yet exceedingly grave, made more so by the manner in which the disease holds on, so that the worst is feared.

Gen. Chaffee came to Los Angeles to make his home some ten or twelve years ago. He was appointed a member of the Board of Public Works in 1908, reappointed in 1912, and resigned January 1, 1913, to become the head of an insurance company, which position he also resigned last spring.

In his position as president of the Board of Public Works, he was also chairman of the Advisory Committee in the construction of the Owens River aqueduct, designed to furnish this city with water. While having a desire to quit his public service sooner than he did, he determined to remain at the head of the committee until the great project was completed. His services in that connection are regard-

SUMMARY.

THE SKY. Clear. Wind at 5 p.m., south; velocity, 6 miles. Thermometer, highest, 78 deg.; lowest, 57 deg. Forecast: Fair. For complete weather see last page of Part I.

THE CITY. Lieut.-Gen. Chaffee, U.S.A., retired, former Chief of the General Staff, lies critically ill at his home here and the worst is feared.

Capt. Fredericks, closing his campaign, was greeted with joy and pride by his farmer neighbors.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA. A Pasadena man has built a new home outside the city limits to escape an ordinance prohibiting the keeping of his pet monkeys.

PACIFIC SLOPE. Another competent employee at Folsom prison has been removed to make room for a Johnson henchman, showing the falsity of the civil service pretenses of Gov. Johnson.

GENERAL EASTERN. The Colorado Fuel and Iron Company reports that the loss from the strike has been over $1,200,000.

WASHINGTON. A quarantine of the stockyards at Chicago has been ordered on account of the fear of the spread of the foot and mouth disease among cattle.

MEXICO. The elimination of Villa and Carranza by the Aguascalientes convention has produced only a temporary prospect of peace in Mexico.

THE GREAT WAR. The Situation to Date: The Turks annex Egypt.

Formal declaration of war between England and Turkey is officially reported.

New battle develops in East Prussia.

Germans reported retreating in Poland.

Germans sink another English cruiser.

COMMENT ON THE SITUATION.

All doubt has been removed as to whether or not Turkey is at war. Turkey is positively at war and so is England and Russia at war with Turkey. The Turks have admitted it and the Bedouins have invaded Egypt. Germany seems bent on getting all the coal oil she wants now from the petroleum wells in Persia, for which John Bull has the title. As for the battle in Flanders, it has been renewed with old-time fury, but the deadlock still obtains. A battle is again being fought on the East Prussian frontier. The Germans are said to be withdrawing from their advanced positions in Poland.

Editorial Note: Readers will bear in mind, in connection with the sensitive subject of headlines over the war news, that the various dispatches are each captioned in accordance with the text, as nearly as may be. These headlines are written in such language as will briefly and truly express the origin, character, nature and trend of the news report in each case. The Times (which holds itself responsible for the proper presentation, not always for the accuracy of the war news) aims to be impartial, and to give all sides a fair hearing.

G.O.P.

FREDERICKS A WINNER.

Will Lead Ticket to Victory.

Plurality Estimated at from Fifty to Seventy Thousand Votes.

California Expected to Verify the Fine Prophecy of a Republican Year.

Forecast of Tuesday Result by the Committee and an Analysis.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Oct. 31.—Capt. John D. Fredericks and the Republican ticket will be elected in California next Tuesday by pluralities ranging from 50,000 to 70,000 unless all signs fail, according to the forecast made today by the Republican State Committee.

With the close of one of the hottest political campaigns California has ever experienced, the defeat of Hiram W. Johnson for Governor is assured. Reports from Republican organizations and disinterested men and women in every county of the State, a careful canvass in some, the primary election returns and the great Republican registration have been used as bases for the calculation analysis of the situation given below.

In the estimates here given the benefit of every doubt has gone to the "Progressive" party:

How many votes will be cast? A canvass of experts and experienced politicians shows an average of 60 per cent. The consensus of opinion is that a greater percentage of votes will be cast for at least one constitutional amendment than for candidates, so that while interest in measures will bring out the vote, it will not land that vote wholly for men.

In 1910 Johnson polled 177,191 votes—less than 50 per cent. of the Republican vote of the State. But many Republicans voted for Bell. At the recent primary Johnson scratched through with 143,579. This in reality is a gain, for while he had fewer votes than in 1910, he had no opposition at the primaries. The gain was largely due to the activities of the State political machine.

At the 1912 election not more than 62 per cent. of the vote was cast and there is no reason to believe more will be cast in this than in a Presidential election year. California's peculiar and cumbersome system of registration admits of so many duplications caused by people moving from one city to another that, while the Great Register shows a voting population of 1,258,600, it is believed there are more than 100,000 duplications and losses.

As an illustration, in Los Angeles county alone 12,000 sample primary ballots, mailed in August, were returned through the postoffice unclaimed. The people had changed residence and obviously did not vote.

DIVISION OF THE VOTE.

The committee has estimates that the vote next Tuesday will be 60 per cent. of the total registration, divided as follows:

	Registration.	Estimated vote.
Republican	510,200	306,120
Democratic	277,200	138,600
Progressive	217,000	151,900
Not stated	117,600	70,560
Socialist	63,300	44,310
Prohibitionist	37,100	22,260
Scattering	36,200	18,100
Totals	1,258,600	751,850

In this estimate the Republican vote cast is estimated at 60 per cent.; Democratic, 50 per cent.; Progressive, 70 per cent.; not stated, 60 per cent.; Socialist, 70 per cent.; Prohibition, 60 per cent., and scattering, 50 per cent., making an average of 60 per cent.

The total primary vote, plus the written-in vote, for Governor, was: Republican, 242,635; "Progressive," 143,579. Plurality for Republican Governor, 99,056.

In the coming election there is no reason why the supporters of the other Republican nominees at the primary should not remain with the successful candidate, Capt. Fredericks. He is the party choice.

Capt. Fredericks made a wonderful campaign in the northern counties, and, as a result of his visit there, is expected to carry every county north of the Tehachepi, with the possible exception of San Francisco, Placer and San Luis Obispo. In Placer and San Luis Obispo the pluralities against Capt. Fredericks will not be large, as the vote is not heavy.

THE SAN FRANCISCO PROBLEM.

San Francisco is the big problem of the north. Since betting is not based upon "dope"—and there is little or no betting—it must be regulated by that indefinable something known

GERMANS TRYING AGAIN FOR A CHANNEL PORT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Oct. 31, 9:50 p.m.—The German attempts to reach the French channel ports were resumed with renewed energy yesterday. The Germans undertook general offensive tactics from the coast at Nieuport to Arras and while they made progress at some points, they were repulsed at others, and in some cases were compelled to give ground. Near the coast their advance was checked by an extension of the flooded area.

Today the battle is raging with the fury that marked the opening of the last phase of this campaign, and even on the English coast the boom of the big naval guns which are bombarding the invaders' flank could be distinctly heard.

The allies have brought up land and sea forces in an endeavor to check this second effort of the Germans to establish themselves on the French coast, from which they hope to menace England.

The German official report issued early today announced that the German troops had occupied Ramscapelle, which is on the railway and canal between Nieuport and Dixmude, but the French official communication of this afternoon says they were driven out by a counter-attack.

Doubtless the extension of the flooded area, which now reaches be-

TURKEY AND BRITAIN OFFICIALLY AT WAR.

Raid on the Petroleum Fields of Persia Contemplated by the Germans.

Ancient Land of the Pharaohs Involved in the Fray by the Action of the Ottoman Government — Another English Cruiser is Sunk by a Submarine — Violent Fighting in Flanders.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Nov. 1, 1:17 a.m.—Turkey has formally annexed Egypt, according to a German official statement which has been received from Berlin by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company.

VANCOUVER (B.C.,) Oct. 31.—Official messages received by customs officials here from Ottawa state that war has broken out between Great Britain and Turkey.

LONDON, Oct. 31, 8:14 p.m.—It is officially announced in London that the Turkish government summarily shut off communications with the British Embassy at Constantinople Friday last and that the British government must take whatever action is required to protect British interests and territory and Egypt from attacks made or threatened.

It is believed here that Russia has made preparations to protect her Caucasian frontier, but that she will not attempt to invade Turkish territory for the present. Probably the same attitude will be adopted by England in Egypt, which, according to an unconfirmed report received today, has already been invaded by three thousand Bedouins.

One of Great Britain's difficulties will be the protection of the oil fields which she recently acquired in Persia. Indian troops can be brought up for this purpose.

There is much speculation as to what action the Balkan states and Italy will take in view of Turkey's entrance into the struggle, but as yet there has been no definite statement on this subject.

LONDON, Oct. 31, 10:45 p.m.—The British light cruiser Hermes was sunk by a German submarine in the Straits of Dover today. This official announcement was made tonight. Nearly all the officers and men were saved.

GERMAN OFFICIAL REPORT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BERLIN, Oct. 31 (via Amsterdam and London, 7:05 p.m.)—A report received here today from German army headquarters says:

"Our army in Belgium yesterday occupied Ramscapelle (two and one-half miles east of Nneuport) and Prelschoon, and our attacks on Ypres are progressing. Zandvoorde, Chateau Holleneicke and Wambeke have been stormed.

"Further south we also have gained ground to the east of Soissons. The enemy has been attacked and during the day chased from several strongly fortified positions to the north of Vailly (about ten miles east of Soissons) which was stormed during the afternoon, the enemy retreating across the River Aisne and suffering severe losses. We captured 1000 prisoners and two machine guns.

"In the Argonnes and to the west of Verdun and to the north of Toul several French attacks were repulsed with heavy losses for the enemy.

"The battle in the northeastern war theater till now has not been decided. To the west of Warsaw the Russians are slowly following our troops which are now being regrouped."

RUSSIAN OFFICIAL REPORT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PETROGRAD, Oct. 31.—The following official communication was issued from general headquarters tonight:

"On the East Prussian front the plan for breaking through the center of our fortified position around Bakalrzewo, projected by the enemy has failed. During five days of unsuccessful attacks the Germans suffered immense losses. In many places the great accumulations of German dead in front of our trenches caused a moderation of our fire.

"Our troops have progressed in several districts on the East Prussian front.

"Beyond the Vistula we occupy strongly the towns of Gostynin, Lenczica, Lodz and Ostrovec.

"In Galicia the fighting continues without any essential change in the situation."

FRENCH OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Oct. 31., 11 p.m.—The official communication issued tonight by the French War Office says:

"According to the latest advices there is nothing of importance to report. In the center we have made progress in the region of the north of Souain.

"Everywhere else we are maintaining our positions."

A semi-official announcement this afternoon follows:

"In one of our attacks delivered the day before yesterday, a village strongly held by the enemy's infantry, supported by artillery, was taken by a detachment of French unmounted cavalry belonging to two dragoon regiments. The men charged with their lances in their hands. The men left in the village more than 200 dead and abandoned 200 wounded."

RIGHT OF WAY FOR KRONPRINZESSIN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The British Ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, gave written assurances today to the State Department that the German liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie would be unmolested by British ships while being transferred to Boston from Bar Harbor, Me., where she has been interned since her sensational dash back to safety last August. The French Ambassador, Jules Jusserand, has given similar assurances for France.

A REVOLUTION AT THE EQUATOR.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

GUAYAQUIL (Ecuador) Oct. 31.—Continuing their campaign against the present administration of the republic of Ecuador, a rebel band of about 200 men attacked the town of Esmeraldas, on the seacoast, ninety-five miles northwest of Quito today. They were repulsed by the government garrison after six hours of fighting, and left behind them 100 men in killed and wounded. The government forces sustained [illegible]

FRANCE A CENOTAPH BECAUSE OF THE WAR.

Intellectual Life of Nation Benumbed, Stupefied by the Conflict.

Invention, Thought and Achievement Seem Scarcely Worth While to the Franks Until They Know What the Result is Going to Be—Rumor is Mistress of Human Conduct with the Censorship Over Everything.

[BY A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, Oct. 17.—The intellectual life of France appears benumbed, stupefied by the war. No new books, no plays, no public discourses on art or philosophy or social perplexities, nothing but the war, the shadow of it falls on everything.

Invention, thought, achievement seems scarcely worth while until one knows how the war will issue. Even the aptitudes and accomplishments of individual skilled workers have fallen off. Disorder and a universal slackness have set in. How can anything matter while the nation struggles for very life and while every family has its men from 19 to 45 at some place on that battle line stretching from Switzerland to the sea?

The mental life of Paris, radiating thought in time of peace, searching things out, estimating, combining and reasoning, has been replaced by tales about the war, strange fantastic growths that circulate and die, to be succeeded by others as rank and incredible, or simply untrue.

Rumor is mistress of the mental life of most French people. The stricture of the military censorship falls upon everything published. Every Governor of a military district has his own censorship, and it is all of a negative sort. If what purports to be a statement of facts about any aspect of the war is untrue or inaccurate within the view of a censor, it must not be printed. If the written word is true or probably so, it must not be printed, because military operations or the civil administration of the country at war may be embarrassed.

Hence the mind of one of the most mentally active races is nourished by oral communications, uncensored, usually unfounded and with no means existing to verify or correct them. One meets an acquaintance in a restaurant.

"Have you heard the awful thing that happened at the Trianon Hospital in Versailles last night?" he asks.

"Two German women—nobody knew they were German—entered the hospital as nurses. This morning all the wounded were dead. Poisoned."

"But there are a lot of German wounded there."

"Yes, they weren't poisoned."

Then there was the Von Kluck story that pervaded Paris for weeks. It had many forms, but the one usually whispered impressively was that Von Kluck's army, 100,000, 200,000, or 300,000, as the case might be, had surrendered and that the government was keeping it secret so that the French people should not lose their self-control by being too joyous.

The city is filled with rumors of disaster to the French armies, the breaking to pieces of the defense which has held so long against the German invasion, and the imminence of the Germans reaching Paris again. One hears that the forts would not last ten minutes under the great guns of the Germans. At other times all the news traveling from mouth to mouth is of successes in the north, the crushing of whole army corps and the imminent disorganization and rout of the whole German military fabric.

Nothing is quite worth while unless it is poignant either in its intimation of disaster or complete victory. The gruesome incredible episode is told with particular zest.

THE TURCOS.

Or one hears of the Turcos having been set to guard sixty-four German prisoners. Figures in these instances must be precise in order to carry verisimilitude. The Turcos are told not to let the prisoners escape and if they try to do so, to kill them. The French are horrified in the morning to find sixty-four Germans with their throats cut. The Turcos explained that the prisoners moved, although ordered not to do so, and they had to cut their throats to keep them quiet.

The stories of the Turcos carrying heads of Germans and having their pockets stuffed full of ears, have become so common they have lost flavor.

The military administration has taken note of the excessive number of fantastic and often injurious reports circulating. It appears that many of those concerning operations at the front originated from drivers of officers' automobiles.

Black Sea.

TURKISH TORPEDO BOATS DRIVEN OFF BY RUSSIANS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The Petrograd correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company sends the following dispatch:

"The Russian gunboat Kubanets put up a fight against two Turkish boats which entered Odessa harbor and attacked merchant ships. The Kubanets finally drove the Turkish boats off.

"The torpedo boats entered the harbor and fired all their guns. Shells struck the Kubanets, tearing away her wooden superstructure, while steamers in the harbor and warehouses on shore were damaged. The Turks strove to torpedo the Kubanets, but failed.

"The passengers and crew of the steamer Yalta, which was sunk, were saved, and most of the crew of the Kasbeck, which also sunk, got away on rafts."

Suffering.

FORTY-TWO THOUSAND WOUNDED IN BRITTANY.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—"We have 42,000 wounded in this little corner of Brittany alone," wrote a nurse at Val Fleuri, in a letter received today by Miss Mabel Boardman, chairman of the Relief Committee of the American Red Cross.

"Even if we had money," she says, "it would be impossible to buy the things we most need over here. Our only means of procuring supplies for our little neighborhood have long been exhausted. We have to try to get them from London by boat, and from Paris by rail, and these are very uncertain.

"A friend sent word to me that she had sixteen dressings to do at once and not one bandage. All the old linen and many new sheets have been used for bandages and now we have no gauze for compresses, no antitetanus serum, a verw small quantity of iodine and almost no alcohol. What we want especially is good wool either to knit in socks and wristlets, or to make up by the yard for mufflers and chest protectors."

Yser.

GERMANS' FIERCE ATTACK REPULSED BY BELGIANS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

HAVRE, Oct. 31 (via London.)—An official dispatch from the Belgian army headquarters to the Belgian Minister of War says:

"Fierce attacks were attempted yesterday morning by the enemy in the neighborhood of Ramscapelle and Pervyse. The second of these attacks was repulsed, with great loss. The first forced our troops to cede some ground, which later was partially retaken.

"In the afternoon the inundation extended from between the Yser and the railway at Nieuport to Dixmude and reached the neighborhood of Pervyse.

"Before the front between Dixmude and Huyghen there was no important fighting. The allied troops were able to cross the Yser and to gain ground. Toward the east the enemy lost Bixschoote and are only maintaining their position at Passchendaele (six miles northeast of Ypres) with difficulty.

"On the Lys there has been no material change in the situation."

WATCH THE TIMES ELECTION RETURNS.

The Times will bulletin election returns Tuesday night, November 3d, in front of the New Times Building, First and Broadway, and The Times Branch Office, 619 South Spring street.

Up-to-the-minute returns will be received from every precinct in the city, county and State and flashed upon large [illegible] screens opposite the New Times Building, First and Broadway, and The Times Branch Office, 619 South Spring Street.

For the benefit of those citizens who cannot come downtown election night, the drift of the vote for Governor will be announced by blasts from The Times siren whistle, the code for which will be published in Tuesday's Times.

The Times also will give returns by telephone to all who call.

The Penalty of Treachery in France.

On the way to prison.

Many cases of treachery have been discovered in the French army, even among the higher officials. The photograph shows Col. He will be imprisoned for life.

Porte.

WAR IS OFFICIALLY DECLARED BETWEEN TURKEY AND RUSSIA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—War has been officially declared at Constantinople between Turkey and Russia, according to a private message transmitted today through the courtesy of the American Embassy. The Ambassador has not advised the Washington government of the declaration of war; but officials thought tonight his message had either been delayed in transit or that he was awaiting formal notification by the Ottoman government.

The private message which was addressed to a New York business man who has interests in Turkey, was dated 5 p.m. yesterday and reached here a few hours after a lengthy dispatch from Ambassador Morgenthau himself, describing events in Constantinople up to noon yesterday.

Mr. Morgenthau said that early yesterday the Russian Ambassador received instructions from his government to demand his passports as the result of the Turkish bombardment of Russian seaports. The Russian envoy made an attempt to see the Grand Vizier, but he failed, as the latter pleaded illness. During the morning the Turkish Minister of Finance called on the French Ambassador, informing him that the bombardment had occurred without the previous knowledge of the Ottoman government. He placed the blame for the incident on the shoulders of the German officers in the Turkish navy.

This explanation did not alter the purpose of the Russian Ambassador to leave, and the French and British Ambassadors made preparations to leave Constantinople together today.

No mention was made in Mr. Morgenthau's first dispatch of demands by the allied powers on the Porte, and it is presumed the ultimatum reported from London was delivered late yesterday, promptly rejected and diplomatic relations with all three powers severed. This is borne out by the fact that in the private message, filed at 5 p.m., stating that there was an official declaration of war between Turkey and Russia, the prediction is made that declarations of war with England and France would follow immediately.

Advices received here under date of Thursday indicated that Turkey still hoped to confine her belligerency to war with Russia.

The British and French Ambassadors, however, are understood to have made it plain that a declaration of war against Russia would be considered as applying also against Great Britain and France.

No word was received by the American government today as to the probable attitude of Roumania or Bulgaria. A belated message under date of September 29 from Sofia, however, spoke of a speech by the King pro-

Lurking.

GERMANS SINK BRITISH CRUISER IN THE STRAITS OF DOVER.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Oct. 31, 11:10 p.m.—The enterprise of German submarines which have been lurking along the French coast on the Straits of Dover, seeking to get a shot at British ships engaged in bombarding the German positions in Belgium, was rewarded today when one of them attacked and sank the light cruiser Hermes as she was returning from Dunkirk. The greater part of the crew was rescued.

The Hermes was a comparatively old vessel and from a naval viewpoint was of no great value, but the fact that she was attacked so near home indicates that the German submarines must have a base somewhere on that part of the Belgian coast which is occupied by German troops, from which they can menace ships of the allies passing between England and France. Only a few days ago one of them sank the French steamer Admiral Ganteaume, which was carrying refugees from Calais.

How many submarines the Germans have in these waters is not known, but several of them have been seen recently. When ships are guarded by torpedo boat destroyers, as are those engaged in bombarding the German positions, they are comparatively safe, but the opportunity of the submarines comes when one is caught alone, as was the Hermes.

Acute Stage.

INTERVENTION IN MEXICO IS RUMORED ONCE AGAIN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Oct. 31.—That officers of the army and navy now on leave in the United States are being quietly ordered to Vera Cruz or the Mexican border, is asserted by the Army and Navy Journal. Mexican conditions, the Journal states, have reached such an acute stage that intervention of some sort by the United States may be forced.

"Reliable advices," says the Journal, "indicate that virtual anarchy prevails in Mexico City. There is such a disturbance in the Mexican capital that well-informed authorities in Mexican affairs would not be surprised to hear that wholesale outrages had already been committed in the city. So far a strict censorship has kept all of the details of the disturbances in the Mexican capital from publication in this country. It is learned that as a precautionary measure, officers of the army and navy on leave in the United States are being hurried back to Vera Cruz and the Mexican border. This is being done as quietly as possible, so as not to alarm the country or create an impression in Mexico that this government has any intention of intervening.

"Of course Secretary of State Bryan has not given up hope of settling the Mexican situation without the use of the army and navy. The administration will go the limit in order to avoid a clash in Mexico, but it is feared that some outrage may be committed in Mexico City which will arouse the country.

"No hope of the immediate relief of the troops from Vera Cruz is now entertained at the War Department, and while officers on duty there refuse to discuss the matter, enough is known of the situation to draw the conclusion that more troops would be sent to the border and Vera Cruz if it were not thought that such a move would further complicate the situation.

"It has been decided to keep four battleships, the Kansas, Minnesota, Rhode Island and Texas, at Vera Cruz until the troops are withdrawn and peace prevails in Mexico."

Aerial.

LONDON STILL IN FEAR OF RAIDS BY ZEPPELINS.

Streets are Kept Dark at Night and Accidents are More Numerous.

Additional Searchlights and New Guns on the Roofs and the Arches Appear Each Week—Newspapers are Barred by the Censorship from Publishing Weather Predictions.

[BY A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Oct. 23.—London continues its preparations for aerial raids. The streets grow darker and darker and accidents more frequent in consequence. Some say more persons will be killed by the darkened streets than by bombs from air craft. There already have been several fatalities directly due to dim-lit thoroughfares.

Additional searchlights and new guns on roofs and arches appear each week. Two aerial guns have recently been mounted on Gresham College, covering The Bank and on a granite arch on the embankment. Advertisements of insurance against damage from air craft appear in the daily papers and the circulars of the underwriters announce that the rates will be advanced if any Taubes or Zeppelins appear above the city.

It cannot be said that there is any great fear, the papers pointing out that even if an air raid should succeed, the most it could accomplish would be the loss of a few lives and destruction of some property. Even the announcement that Zeppelin sheds are being constructed in Brussels and Antwerp failed to arouse any general alarm in London. Indeed, the royal flying corps at Brooklands probably would not be sorry to see a raid attempted as it has elaborate plans for attacking the aviators.

Meanwhile the order of the press bureau that papers must not publish weather predictions is considered the most humorous feature of the situation.

BY AN ASSOCIATE EDITOR OF "THE ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL."

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Oct. 31.—Official dispatches from France today gave the positions occupied by their troops in greater detail than for some time past. When taken in conjunction with the reports from Berlin, the operations of the last few days may be outlined with some confidence. The rapid thirty-mile advance of the French and English to Roulers at the beginning of last week made the Germans feel that their lines at Lille were to some extent threatened by the salient position of the allies.

In order to dislodge the latter, the Germans took the indirect method of attacking on the flanks of the salient. While pushing the attacks that carried their forces across the Yser, they also brought such pressure to bear upon the French position from Menin to Roulers that they were able to drive back this part of the line five miles to a position through Hollobeke, just south of Ypres. It is noteworthy that the dispatches from Paris have continually claimed successes in this region, while their line has been driven back as described above. Between Lille and Soissons the week's fighting has left the opposing forces without appreciable change.

GERMAN LOCAL SUCCESS.

The German report that they have driven the British back across the Aisne ten miles east of Soissons shows a local success that does not yet affect the general situation. In the district southeast of Verdun the French have been making strenuous efforts to dislodge the Germans from their occupation of the Cotes de Meuse. Both sides have claimed success in this district almost every day, but the net changes of the week are very slight. The French advance from Toul has been held fast on the line from Ailly, on the Meuse two miles south of St. Mihiel to Pagny, on the Moselle, twelve miles south of Metz. To the north of St. Mihiel the Germans have made a small gain by pushing the French back from the position at Hatton Chatel, where they threaten the German line of communications. Along the French border east of Nancy and in Upper Alsace, the French have made important gains. East of Nancy they have again reached the German border, while in Upper Alsace they have advanced ten miles into German territory.

MORE TROOPS NEEDED.

This whole battle line from Switzerland to the North Sea is now engaged in a deadlock that seems unlikely to have a decisive outcome until one side or the other has made a decided gain in the strength of its forces. This can be done by Germany only by sacrificing her campaign against Russia, a most dangerous proceeding in view of the efficiency of the Russian troops, as shown in the recent operations in Poland. By such a hazardous move Germany could add to her armies in France sufficient strength to overcome for a time the advantage that is now held by the allies. The position at St. Mihiel and the bridge across the Meuse River would not have been maintained at such costs and such risks unless the German General Staff had figured on making an important use for this route in an advance at some early date.

The other probable point of vigorous fighting is along the north coast, where the Germans would make an important gain in the strength of their position if they could drive the allies south of Amiens. This would give the Germans the short, direct line through Amiens to the coast, which could be held by a smaller force than is now required to maintain their extended line in the north. They would then be enabled to divert the surplus troops to other operations, such as a turning movement through St. Mihiel or through Belfort against the south flank of the allies.

PLAN OF ALLIES.

The allies are evidently waiting until they have every preparation made before changing their plan of operations. The Russians still continue their policy of hammering at the north flank of the Austro-German forces that are confronting them on the line from Lodz, in Prussia, and in the foothills of the Carpathians, south of Przemysl. The fighting near Lyck on the East Prussian border is at a standstill and has little influence on the outcome of the great battle in Poland and Galicia.

Espionage.

SENT REPORTS TO BERLIN, BUT TOLD NOT TO SPY.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Carl Hans Lody, alias Charles Inglis, charged with espionage and on trial for his life before a court-martial, entered the witness box this afternoon as soon as the prosecution had closed its case.

The prosecutor had declared that the defendant was an alien enemy, a German subject, although he spoke English fluently with an American accent and he had sent valuable reports to Berlin, giving accurate details concerning armaments and the location of British ships and describing places in Scotland.

Lody gave an outline of his mission to England. He said that formerly he was a senior lieutenant in the German army, but that later he was transferred to the reserve. He secured a position to act as tourist agent for the Hamburg-American line. Incidentally, he said, he was well known in New York society.

When in Berlin last July Lody declared he had received instructions from a superior naval officer, whose name he was pledged not to reveal, to select a route to New York. He was not to start for America, but was to remain in England until the first naval encounter was fought between Germany and England and give information regarding the actual losses to the British fleet. He was then to proceed to New York.

Lody said also that he had been instructed to keep track of the movements of the British fleet, but he was warned not to do any spying.

Lody admitted that such instructions caused him uneasiness, but he was assured that he had sufficiently the appearance of an American to travel as an American.

Lody said he had married two years ago an American woman of German descent. This matrimonial venture, however, was a failure and the marriage was dissolved, his father-in-law paying him "$10,000 to compensate me for my financial loss."

During Lody's examination a man who had occupied a seat on one of the War Office benches, and who was supposed to be connected with this branch of the government, was suddenly pounced upon by detectives and removed from the building under military escort.

Flooded.

BATTLE ON THE YSER PROGRESSES FIERCELY.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 31 (via London.)—The battle of the Yser continues fiercely, according to a dispatch to the Telegraaf from a correspondent at Sluis. During the night and forenoon the guns were thundering continuously, the correspondent adds, and yesterday there were severe bayonet attacks. No decisive result has yet been reached. The flooded fields are greatly hampering the Germans.

On Thursday British aviators dropped three bombs in the midst of the German war materials at Lichtervelde (thirteen miles southwest of Bruges,) inflicting great damage and killing three German soldiers.

Yesterday the Germans received reinforcements and the coast line between Ostend and Knocke is being more strongly fortified each day. Guns have been placed in position at Blankenberghe and Heyst and entrenchments made in the dunes. The Germans have burned the pier of Blankenberghe.

Washington.

CLASS COPPER AS CONTRABAND.

British Put the Ban on All Future Shipments.

Release of Steamer Held at Gibraltar is Asked.

Embargo may Stimulate the Trade with Neutrals.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Copper shipments hereafter will be considered absolute contraband of war by the British government, according to the revised contraband list cabled to the State Department today by Ambassador Page in London. The previous list classed copper as conditional contraband. The only other important changes in the revised list is the placing of illuminating oil, heretofore unmentioned, on the conditional list.

The question of contraband shipments came before the State Department today in other ways before the new British list was made public. Formal protest was lodged with the British government through Ambassador Page against the detention of the American steamer Kroonland, copper-laden, en route to Greece, held at Gibraltar.

Mr. Page also was instructed to request the release of the Italian steamers San Giovanni and Regina d'Italia, also detained at Gibraltar, while en route to Italian ports with American copper. The United States government took the position that the shipments were to neutral countries in each case and not subject to seizure.

Some officials were inclined to view the publication of the new British contraband lists as not affecting these shipments because they were made before it was announced. They held, therefore, that the copper cargoes only could be treated as conditional contraband under the previous list. British officials here are understood to share this view.

Advices were received during the day that Italy had published a list of commodities exportation of which was forbidden. Three other neutral countries have taken similar precautions to protect their trade with other neutrals from molestation and the State Department is preparing a tabulated statement of these embargoes for the information of American shippers. The statement will cover shipments to Italy, Holland and Sweden and Norway.

The embargoes apply generally to foodstuffs, clothing and military supplies. The promulgation is expected to facilitate the restoration of American trade with these countries since the probable result will be to free that commerce from the annoyance and delay of search and frequently the taking of neutral ships to more or less distant harbors for thorough examination of their cargoes.

The effect of the embargoes and also of the effort of this country acting for all neutrals to find a common ground of understanding as to contraband with belligerent powers, will be to exempt from seizure anything short of actual contraband carried in neutral bottoms to neutral ports. Department officials anticipate the restoration of virtually unrestricted trade among neutrals as a result.

RULING ON CLASS RATES.

Interstate Commerce Commission Denies Large Number of Applications Affecting California Points.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Oct. 31.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has denied the following applications to continue class rates without observing the long-and-short-haul provisions of the fourth section of the Interstate Commerce Act:

To continue class rates between points on the Nevada and California branch of the Southern Pacific, Mojave to Owenyo and Calexico on the one hand and points on the California and Nevada branch, Mojave to Owenyo on the other hand; between Stockton, Lathrop and Tracy and other points in California; to continue class and commodity rates between points of the Southern Pacific and the Richmond Belt Railway in California and Nevada, also between Hercules, Cal., on the Santa Fe and points on the lines of Nevada County Narrow-Gauge Railroad Company in California via Colfax; to continue commodity rates from points on the Southern Pacific in California to Garland, Cody and Worland, Wyo.; to continue rates on hay and straw between points in California, Arizona and New Mexico, and points in Arizona, California, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah and points in Oregon on the Klamath Falls branch of the Southern Pacific; to continue rates on provisions and supplies when consigned to Chinese, Greek, Italian, Japanese, section or extra gangs from stations on the line of the Southern Pacific in Arizona, California, Nevada, New Mexico and Utah to Reno, Ogden and points between, and stations on the Nevada and California branch of the Southern Pacific; to continue rates on bagging ties, etc., from Galveston and Houston to El Centro via El Paso and Imperial Junction; to continue rates on beans and peas on points in California to points in Arizona, California, Nevada, New Mexico and Utah.

Alberta Postoffice.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Oct. 31.—The Postoffice Department has notified Representative Kettner that the postoffice at Alberta will be discontinued unless objection to that course is made within two weeks, because no suitable person can be found to act as postmaster.

New Teeth for Old People

We put new teeth in old mouths every day in the week.

Good, strong, serviceable Alveolar teeth, without plates, that enable the old people to chew food and keep the stomach in good shape.

Why should any man or woman spend the best years of their lives, the declining years, with a disfiguring partial plate or "bridge," that is there for looks only, when, with no trouble, no pain, they can get a perfect set of teeth that will be as solid as a rock in the mouth.

Many don't believe we can do anything for them, and the others are afraid they will have to undergo an operation to have the new teeth put in.

As a matter of fact, there is no pain or discomfort of any sort whatsoever in connection with

OUR REX METHOD OF ALVEOLAR TEETH, AS PERFECTED BY DR. RANKINE

In Restoring Missing Teeth.

Indeed, it is so simple a plan that it is a wonder it was not discovered years before we invented it.

No cutting, no boring into the gums, nothing about the work that need be dreaded, and when the new teeth are in place, what a source of satisfaction the wearer experiences at mealtime.

We don't say, "Now, be careful when you eat," but, "Use these teeth just as you would if they grew in your jaws."

There is one condition that we must have, and that is that two or more teeth are left in either jaw.

Will you let us look your mouth over? You won't obligate yourself to spend a penny just because you grant this favor.

We are the originators of the PALATAL BAR UPPER, a method designed to do away with the old-fashioned bulky and cumbersome partial plate. The adoption of the PALATAL BAR UPPER will in many cases take the place of ordinary bridge work, eliminating the crowning of teeth, with better results and more pleasing effects.

OUR CHARGES ARE REASONABLE.

We do not ask fancy prices for our work. Just a fair fee—a reasonable sum—just what anyone will gladly and willingly pay for high-grade work such as we invariably execute. Remember that you can always consult us free of charge regarding your teeth trouble, and there is no obligation incurred on your part in so doing.

STOCK YARDS QUARANTINED.

SPREAD OF FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE IS FEARED.

Department of Agriculture Takes Radical Step to Prevent Dissemination of Dangerous Ailment Among Cattle from Infection Believed to Exist in Chicago.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The Department of Agriculture today quarantined the Union Stock Yards at Chicago to prevent shipment of cattle except for immediate slaughter, because of foot and mouth disease.

This explanation of the government's action was issued at the Department of Agriculture:

"Because of the danger that cattle infected with the foot and mouth disease may have passed through them, the Union Stock Yards in Chicago have been quarantined by the Secretary of Agriculture. This quarantine goes into effect immediately.

"Under the provisions of this quarantine no cattle, sheep or swine can be moved from the stock yards in interstate or foreign commerce, except for the purpose of immediate slaughter, and under permits issued by Federal inspectors. In such cases they must be transported in sealed cars placarded 'For immediate slaughter.' The stock in these cars can only be unloaded into reserve pens which have been designated for this purpose by the chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry. Cars used must be thoroughly cleansed and disinfected before they can be moved again in interstate or foreign commerce.

"These measures are considered essential to the prevention of the spread of disease. Foot and mouth disease is one of the most contagious infections known and if it were possible to move stock from the Chicago yards to the country for feeding or dairy purposes, there is grave danger that the disease might be disseminated over large areas.

"Up to the present time no case of foot and mouth disease has been found in the Union Stock Yards, but there is reason to believe that infected stock may have passed through. It is at least certain that shipments of stock have been made from regions where the foot and mouth disease has broken out."

SHIPMENTS PROHIBITED.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—As a precaution against spread of the foot and mouth disease among cattle, the shipment of cattle and sheep from the stock yards here, except for slaughtering purposes, was prohibited by the Bureau of Animal Industries today. It affects those animals which are sent here to be fed and fattened, or for use on dairy farms.

AMERICAN MARINES ARRIVE AT HAYTI.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The naval transport Hancock, with a regiment of marines, today arrived at Port au Prince, Hayti, to protect Americans and their property, if necessary, during the latest revolutionary outbreak. The commanding officer will confer with officials of the American legation as to the need of landing marines.

Turkey Declares War.

claiming the intention of Bulgaria to remain neutral.

With the severing of diplomatic relations between the triple entente powers and the Porte, the American Embassy will take charge of British and French interests, while the Italian Embassy has already taken over Russian affairs.

RUSSIAN ENVOY LEAVES TURKEY.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Oct. 31.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Athens says that the Russian Ambassador and his staff have left Constantinople. It is believed in official circles in Athens that the question of peace in the Balkans depends solely upon the attitude of Bulgaria. Greece, although resolved to preserve neutrality, is closely watching her interests.

ACTION OF RUSSIA.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PETROGRAD, Oct. 31.—The semi-official Russian news agency says that because of the attack of the German - Turkish warships against the Russian coast on the Black Sea the Russian government the same day enjoined the Russian Ambassador at Constantinople to announce to the Sublime Porte the rupture of diplomatic relations with Turkey and his departure with all the members of his Embassy and the Consulates.

The protection of the interests of Russian subjects has been confided to the Italian government.

SINK RUSSIAN MINE LAYER.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 31 (via London.)—The following official telegram from Constantinople is published by the Frankfurter Zeitung:

"A small part of the Turkish fleet in the Black Sea on Thursday sank the Russian mine layer Prut, a vessel of 5000 tons, which had aboard 700 mines, damaged a Russian torpedo boat and seized a coal steamer.

"A torpedo fired from the torpedo boat Hairet-i-Millet sank the Russian destroyer Kubanets. The Mauvenet-i-Millett torpedoed a Russian coast guard ship, which was severely damaged. Three Russian officers were saved by us and imprisoned. The Turkish fleet suffered no loss and the battle was successfully continued."

A dispatch from Berlin announces that telegrams from Turkey say that the Turkish fleet in a battle with the Russian Black Sea fleet sank not two, but four torpedo boats and one gunboat.

NATIONS DEMAND ON THE PORTE.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Both Great Britain and Russia have presented the following demands to the Sublime Porte:

"An explanation of Turkey's naval action in the Black Sea; the dismissal of German officers from Turkish ships, and the dismantling of the cruisers Goeben and Breslau, said to have been purchased by Turkey of Germany. Failing to receive satisfaction of these demands, diplomatic relations with Turkey will be severed by Great Britain and Russia."

The reply of the Porte has not yet been received, but hope is still expressed officially that it may be of a character to prevent the further extension of hostilities.

RUSSIAN FLEET ATTACKS TURKS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Oct. 31.—An official message has been received at Rome from Constantinople, according to a dispatch from the Central News agency, announcing that the Russian fleet had attacked the Turkish fleet near Sebastopol in the Black Sea. Details of the battle are lacking.

CONSTANTINOPLE IN CONSTERNATION.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The correspondent of the Morning Post in Petrograd sends his paper the following:

"The statement published here that the guns of the cruiser Goeben were turned on the Sultan's palace in order to make him yield to the German demand probably is untrue."

A dispatch to the Central News from Petrograd says that up to a late hour Friday, no declaration of war had been received from Turkey. Neither the Russian Ambassador nor the Turkish Ambassador have left their posts, the dispatch says, and continues:

"Consternation prevails in Constantinople and the Turkish Ministry is sitting continuously. The secretary of the Turkish Embassy in Petrograd says that he hopes the misunderstanding will soon be cleared up."

The head of the Moslems in Russia condemns the folly of Turkey, and declares that his followers will remain loyal to the Russian Emperor.

BERLIN CHEERS TURK.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BERLIN, Oct. 31 (via London and The Hague.)—Announcement of Turkey's participation in the war caused enthusiasm in Berlin. A large crowd gathered in Potsdamer Platz and later marched to the Turkish Embassy, cheering for the Sultan. The Turkish Ambassador, Mahmoud Mukhtar Pasha, made a brief speech expressing his gratitude for the manifestation, which he said was certain proof of the affectionate relations of Germany and Turkey.

TRY IT! SAYS SAGE TEA DARKENS AND BEAUTIFIES FADED, GRAY HAIR.

Mixed With Sulphur Makes Hair Soft and Luxuriant and Removes Dandruff.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is coming in vogue again, says a well-known downtown druggist. It was our grandmother's treatment and hundreds of women and men, too, are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is the most popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply dampen a soft brush or sponge with "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Do this tonight, and by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application it is restored to its natural color.

What delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that besides beautifully darkening the hair, they say it produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides prevents dandruff, itching salp and falling hair. Here, you gray-haired folks, get busy: look years younger.

Esteemed.

UNIQUE TRIBUTE TO BIG RANCHER.

AS GUEST OF THE BOARD OF CONTROL, L.A.S.H. CO.

Happy Affair at "The Outpost" Yesterday Afternoon—Maj. Carr the Surprised Recipient of a Substantial Token of Regard.

One of the many men of action—Maj. P. S. Carr—who have played large parts in the striking and exceptional development of the San Fernando Valley was the guest of honor at an agreeable surprise party given him at "The Outpost" yesterday afternoon by Gen. Otis, acting for himself and the Board of Control of the Suburban Homes Company. The list of invited guests numbered fifteen, some of whom were unable to accept.

The purpose of the gathering was to present to Maj. Carr (who has long had an important connection with the American Beet Sugar Company, operating in the San Fernando Valley as well as more extensively in Ventura county) a substantial evidence of the friendship, good will and high regard entertained for him by the members of the Board of Control.

The party inspected "The Outpost" grounds with interest and there was a small dinner, enlivened by small talk and large talk, at the close of which the host made a small talk himself to the company. Gen. Otis said:

Gentlemen—Friends, countrymen and neighbors: Speaking for myself and my associates of the Board of Control of the Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company, I give you welcome, one and all, to "The Outpost." We are assembled here under happy auspices and for a happy object.

• • • • • • • • • • •

"The stag at eve had drunk his fill
Where danced the moon on Monan's rill."

So we are told by Scotland's immortal bard in "The Lady of the Lake." Yet I make bold to say that Sir Walter Scott and the noble stag of his mind's eye had nothing on us here assembled at this stag dinner in the matter of fillin', "though I say it who shouldn't."

You rural stags around me here have had my full permission, my cordial invitation, indeed, to eat and drink your fill, even more fully than that other stag of classic fame, and if you have not done it, I take upon myself no blame for your failure. If, possibly, you have found the liquid fillin' no more ardent than grape juice; I can at least claim in self-defense that I have not undertaken to palm off on you that official breed of brew that comes from the stale, flat and unprofitable banks of the Rio Platte.

I recognize in this group men of affairs, men of strong and high purpose; men of skill and achievement in the handling of great material enterprises; men who know a good thing and a good man at first sight; men who can recognize and are willing to reward loyal and intelligent service and high, fine actions, devotion to promise and to duty whenever and wherever discovered.

Here, around this festive board, are assembled, besides the guest of honor, acknowledged representatives of two great enterprises, both engaged in the work of developing the "back country" of a famous city, dividing and subdividing the land, cultivating the soil, producing useful crops, creating human homes, and building settlements, villages, towns and cities where none existed before. Both these organizations of tireless workers in the soil and near the soil are operating in the fair and alluring vale of the San Fernando, which in five years has been transformed from a vast grainfield, with practically no population, to a region already famous for its high development, intensive cultivation, large production and numberless homes, where happy families look the future in the face with confidence and hope. These organizations, represented here today by men who are moved by a common impulse, animated by a friendly, appreciative and altogether delightful purpose, are the American Beet Sugar Company and the Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company, operating side by side to some extent, and in some measure in conjunction with each other, though on different lines. They have both undertaken great responsibilities, faced formidable tasks, and are accomplishing mighty results on sound lines, designed not only for their own legitimate benefit, but for the good of the Southland as well. They face the world and are prepared at all times to give account of their stewardship.

The honored guest of this happy occasion is known to us all. He is known not only to the great and far-reaching organization which he serves so well in a highly-responsible capacity, and which reposes in him its confidence and esteem, but he is known also to us of the Suburban Homes Company for his work, his efficient supervising operations, and his distinct successes, affecting also our own enterprise (though he has never been on our pay roll) and giving us the opportunity to know and appreciate the character and mettle of this true man.

Maj. Carr, whom I am honored to have sitting at my right hand here at this simple country table, is, I believe, from Missouri; yet he does not have to be "shown." On the contrary, he is able to show us, with whom he frequently comes in close contact. He is capable of showing us the qualities, the strength and nobility of a large and masterful manhood. He can show us what fidelity, loyalty and devotion to duty mean in this world of trial and conflict, where such qualities are so essential to success, triumph and progress in all right directions. He demonstrates in his own person these and many other manly qualities, without the possession of which the noble and puissant deeds that bring high human achievement within the domain of possibility could never be accomplished.

In a long and strenuous life of duty and devotion, in times of peace and in times of war, Maj. Carr has shown the stuff he is made of. When the peril of armed conflict threatened the Republic and the government of the nation, he was found neither backward nor lacking in patriotic zeal, but he promptly marched to the front under that banner which American patriots love. He was ever found right where duty called, his clear, youthful eyes aflame with what the French call elan—literally, "the light of battle." And so he went through the colossal contest to the very end, fighting for the life of the Republic, which, God be praised! was finally rescued by the united and heroic efforts of Union soldiers like himself.

Carr is not only a captain of tens, but is a captain of hundreds when summoned to take the field of industry. He is a forceful executive in the rich region where his splendid services have so long been given. Moreover, he is a picturesque character as well—a staunch friend, a boon companion, a good fellow among good fellows, a man among men. Besides being a linguist, a doer of things and a veteran of ripe years, he is a tireless sentinel, ever on duty, almost rivaling in his activities that perpetual-motion artist, Executive Whitley of our own organization.

I am not under oath here, but freely testify on honor—which is the same thing with a soldier when called upon to speak the truth—that in all my experience in the hearing and writing of language (an experience neither limited nor small) that I never met the equal of our veteran friend here in the use of powerful and descriptive adjectives when the use of pungent language is required to meet the demands of the occasion. As you are all doubtless aware, by word of mouth he can blow great holes in the empyrean, second only in dimensions to those made by the mighty forty-two-inch mortars of which we read in the daily accounts of the colossal war now raging between the embattled nations of the Old World. In making drafts upon his inexhaustible fund of powerful, long-range language, our good, though explosive, friend pours forth a torrent of expletives so rich and fervent that they trench hard upon the domain of religious exhortation; and the difference between the two styles is not always easy to analyze.

He must have been a mule-driver in the war.

There is another relation in which Maj. Carr has won undisputed distinction. I believe that he can detect more quickly and accurately than any other man on the deployed line of action the "cut of the jib" and the curves of character of a certain class of human derelicts in our midst. Whenever he gets a rear view of one of these nondescripts shuffling on all fours down the pike, making off from the place where the tireless sentinel stands on duty at the Sheep Ranch, or sees him disappearing in the copse of the chaparral, the sentinel aforesaid spots the animal with the accuracy of a rifle-shot. In other words, he possesses a marvelous insight, being able to detect, like a flash, the evidences of an abnormal origin, a devious line of descent, and an uncertified ancestry when he sees them marked on the mug or showing in the actions of the animal heading for the "bosque alto," or, in less classic terms, for the tall timber. Others of his malicious breed have made violent and reckless assaults upon our big and bold project, but, without fail, they have been repulsed. We are intrenched.

We are here then, my compatriots and fellow-farmers, to testify our respect and affection for the honored guest of the occasion. We are here to convince him, if that be necessary, that we are his friends and admirers; that we understand and value his work in his own particular field, and also his general work and achievements as a companion of the unique and important section where our joint efforts are being expended, and the good name of which famous spot he delights to help in spreading around the whole world.

It is a spot destined to become even more famous by reason of the liquid blessings that will continue to come flowing down from the high Sierra, through the mighty Owens River Aqueduct, whose triumphant builder, "Bill" Mulholland, we are rejoiced to have with us here.

And now, Maj. Carr, without dilating further upon a subject which requires, in your case, little expansion on the part of friends who know you and who love you with unaffected sincerity, I have the honor and the pleasure of bringing to a culmination the real purpose of this little gathering.

I am authorized and empowered by the members of the Board of Control of the Suburban Homes Company—Messrs. Whitley, Brant, Sherman, Chandler and myself—to shortly place a legal instrument in "your own red right hand." It is a full, unconditional deed executed by the company in your personal behalf to a fine building spot—a subdivision of this once-spreading rancho, later carved up by the resolute body of subdividers and developers whose work you know. This fertile plot to be conveyed to you fronts upon the matchless boulevard, the tract embraces ten acres, and the exact location and description will be found within this formal paper. Build upon the beckoning spot, Maj. Carr, if the project pleases you, a permanent home for yourself and yours!

I shall present to you this testimonial of our regard with unaffected pleasure and the sincere good will of my associates of the board and of myself, your comrade, neighbor and friend. With the testimonial go also our compliments to and good words for the extensive business organization which you have served so long and effectively, with sleepless vigilance and unvarying loyalty. We salute you and them! [Applause.]

The health of the guest of honor was then drunk—in California grape-juice, of course—by the entire company, with enthusiasm; and he made a handsome acceptance of the gift, expressing his complete surprise over the event and the unexpected token presented to him. He spoke with directness and gratitude, and briefly related his various experiences, his disappointments and successes, as a beet grower in the valley, showing how he and his employers had persisted in the experimental work, even at a loss sometimes, until success is at last in sight, "coming up over the hill." Then Maj. J. A. Driffil, general manager of the American Beet Sugar Company in California, spoke, not only in behalf of his great enterprise, but of himself and also of Maj. Carr, his trusted lieutenant, the two having been together for years. The speaker made an informing and enlightening exposition of his company's operations in California sugar-beet growing and manufacturing, referring with justifiable pride to the admitted fact that the Oxnard sugar-beet factory stands at the very head of perfect establishments of its kind in the United States. Maj. Driffil was compelled to cut short his interesting speech in order to catch his car for home, along with his wife and daughter.

Mr. Whitley was the next speaker. He told of his long acquaintance and close business relations with Maj. Carr, and testified to the value of the latter's services to the San Fernando Valley, to the weight of his friendly influence exerted toward inducing the coming of substantial settlers from other sections, and highly praised the character and integrity of this veteran ranchero of the succulent sugar beet.

All the practical and pointed talks were appreciated by the company. William Mulholland's informal remarks from his chair secured close attention due to the matured views of this famed water engineer, aqueduct builder and man of achievement.

The guests parted from their host with courteous expressions of pleasure and satisfaction over the unique entertainment.

GUESTS.

The invited guests, in addition to the members of the Board of Control, were: Maj. P. S. Carr, the guest of honor; Maj. J. A. Driffil, Prof. Hensel, Fred B. Howard, Robert A. Rowan, William Mulholland, Cashier Bliss of Hollywood, W. P. Whitsett, Ross E. Whitley and Mr. Carr, Jr.

ICE BOX FOR THE MAILS.

New Demands of the Parcel Post Seem to Require It.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—An ice box is needed in the postoffice as a result of the farm-to-the-consumer service undertaken by the parcel post. Daniel A. Campbell, postmaster, today opened negotiations with the department at Washington for permission to install a refrigerator plant in the basement of the Federal Building to provide a means of storing perishable goods until they can be delivered.

For the benefit of those citizens who cannot come downtown election night, the drift of the vote for Governor will be announced by blasts from The Times siren whistle, the code for which will be published in Tuesday's Times.

The Times also will give returns by telephone to all who call.

Germans Trying Again.

yond this town, made the German positions untenable.

On the whole, therefore, it would appear that the situation on this most important battle front remains much as it was when the Germans, through exhaustion a few days ago, ceased their heavy artillery fire for rest. The French report tells of various advances and losses, but these usually, so far as distance is concerned, can be marked in feet or yards, and the advance made a few days ago by the British in Belgium of 1200 yards was considered remarkable.

Throughout the great battle front there has been a repetition of attacks and counter-attacks, with at times a pronounced thinning of the lines, whether they have gained a slight advance or have been thrown back. Germans made a particularly violent attack east of Soissons on the Aisne, and, according to the German reports, drove the French across the river.

Reports that Lille has been reoccupied by the French and that Ostend has been evacuated by the Germans lack confirmation and are considered premature, but around the former city fighting of a most desperate character has been going on and the villages surrounding Lille have been taken and retaken time after time.

EAST PRUSSIA.

The East Prussian frontier is again the scene of a big battle. The Germans for five days carried out heavy offensive movements, but, according to the Russian reports, were repulsed with immense losses.

POLAND.

In Poland the Germans are reported to be falling back to new positions near their own frontier, while in Galicia the fighting continues without any material change.

JAP SQUADRON OFF HONOLULU.

[BY PACIFIC CABLE.]

HONOLULU (T. H.) Oct. 31.—The Japanese cruiser Hizen, standing off this port for several days watching for German ships, was joined today by another cruiser of her nationality. The name of the second vessel could not be learned tonight. A third vessel in the offing is believed to be a collier.

The Hizen has been watching for the German gunboat Geier, which put in here for repairs October 14, and is still here.

REPORT GERMANS ARE IN RETREAT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Nov. 1, 2:27 a.m.—The Flushing correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company says:

"Heavy firing can be heard in Sluis from the direction of Thourout. Everything indicates that the Germans are retreating from Dixmude."

ITALIAN ADMIRAL SEIZES AN ISLAND.

BIT OF LAND THAT COMMANDS AVLONA HARBOR NOW HAS AN OWNER.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Oct. 31, 9:04 a.m.—A Stefani Agency dispatch from Rome says:

"A semi-official note has been issued stating that the Island of Saseno was occupied yesterday by Admiral Patris of the Italian navy, who disembarked one battery and a company of infantry. The ownership of this island, which commands the entrance to the harbor of Avlona, Albania, long has been a matter of dispute betwen Greece and Albania."

THE PARIS VERSION.

PARIS, Oct. 31, 8:50 a.m.—A dispatch from Rome to the Havas Agency reports that the Island of Saseno, in the Gulf of Avlona, and near the Albanian port of Avlona, has been occupied by the Italians. Admiral Patris, the dispatch adds, has landed a battery and a company of marines.

Advices from Rome October 27 stated that the port of Avlona itself was occupied the day previously by Italian naval forces. The expedition, it was said, was in the nature of a relief and sanitary organization to aid the large population which had taken refuge in the city to escape the persecution of the insurgents. Everything was done to remove from the expedition anything savoring of political or territorial occupation.

CANADA'S EMBARGO ACT.

Nothing that Could Possibly be of Use to an Enemy of Britain may be Exported.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

OTTAWA (Ont.) Oct. 31.—The Canadian government today placed an embargo on the exportation to any country at war with Great Britain of any article which will be of use to them in prosecuting the war. The order prohibits the exportation of contraband to any neutral country which would in turn re-export the materials to Great Britain's enemies.

Among the articles specifically mentioned as contraband are nickel, nickel ore, woolen goods, food, explosives, horses, fodder, leather, coal, copper, petrol, aeroplanes and barbed wire.

GERMAN MINES ON IRISH COAST.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Official warnings of a German mine field off the north coast of Ireland was received today by the British Admiralty, which warned all ships not to pass within sixty miles of Tory Island. The Admiralty believes the mines were strewn to destroy Canadian transports.

Urgent.

SENDS APPEAL TO CALIFORNIA.

RELIEF FOR BELGIANS MAY GO VIA PANAMA CANAL.

Committee in London Declares There are Supplies Barely Sufficient to Last a Week and 20,000 Tons Monthly are Needed to Prevent Starvation of Unfortunates.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—In response to an appeal to California for help, the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce today notified H. C. Hoover, chairman of the American Committee at London for the relief of Belgium, that an immediate campaign would be pushed with the greatest vigor to charter a ship and send it through the Panama Canal with a cargo of foodstuffs worth $250,000.

All the Chambers of Commerce of California were requested to help, and appeals for contributions were sent to banks and even to farmers and producers direct all over the State. Mayor Rolph issued a proclamation sanctioning the plan and Gov. Johnson was requested to do likewise. A cable to Honolulu asks that the Hawaiian Islands take similar action.

Wheat, flour, beans and other imperishable foods are what is needed. Contributions have been placed in charge of a committee headed by W. H. Crocker.

Others on the committee are Frank Anderson, Herbert Fleischacker, Mark Requa, I. W. Hellman, Jr., J. S. Tobin, W. Mayo Newhall, James Rolph, Jr. (Mayor of San Francisco,) Raphael Weill, A. Sbarboro, William Sproule, and the publishers of the San Francisco Chronicle, Examiner, Call and Bulletin.

HOOVER'S TELEGRAM.

The text of the telegram from Mr. Hoover follows:

"Over 1,000,000 people on bread line in Belgium at present, with supplies estimated to last from one to three weeks. While we are securing some supplies here for emergency purposes, real situation cannot be met without direct exports from States and we shall require upwards of 20,000 tons foodstuffs monthly. Can you interest the people of the State of California to present shipload food from California? If California will give us the foodstuffs we will pay freight and insurance. We should like five portions wheat, three portions beans, two portions peas, with bacon, if obtainable. Must be shipped in neutral bottom, consigned to us, Rotterdam. If there is Belgian Relief Committee in California should co-operate. We want food, not clothes, as this is a question of starvation, and Belgians can clothe themselves for the present. I can think of no greater contribution to this occasion of world's stress than a food ship from California and if possible one from Oregon and another from Washington.

"It might be pointed out that our commission is largely Californian and that we should have support of our own State.

"[Signed]

"HERBERT HOOVER."

A mass meeting will be held Thursday on the floor of the Merchants' Exchange to consider ways and means. Assurances have been received already that the banks of San Francisco will subscribe liberally.

RUSSIAN COLUMN AGAIN DEFEATED.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AMSTERDAM (via London, Oct. 31.)—An official dispatch from Vienna, dated today noon, says:

"Near the Galician-Bukowinian frontier, north of Kuty, a mixed Russian column was defeated yesterday.

"In middle Galicia our troops have occupied Russian positions northeast of Turka, near Stary, Sambor, east of Przemysl and on the lower San. Several Russian attacks around Misko have been repulsed. At Misko, Stary, Sambor and other points hundreds of Russians have been captured.

"The operations in Russian Poland yesterday passed without fighting."

NEW BOOK IS NEUTRAL.

"Europe at War" Gives Fair Hearing to All Sides.

"Europe at War," which has just come from the press, is a magnificent volume of historical events made intensely interesting by the present war. The book fills a long-felt want in supplying the history and information of the previous wars of the nations with each other, and it favors no one side. It is written from the standpoint of an unbiased historian and told with plain, historical accuracy. The author has told in the most dramatic and graphic style of the sudden mobilization of the great fleets and armies, which put into action more men than ever before had answered the call of war. No one can accurately understand the meaning of the events of this war without understanding the historical events preceding this greatest war in the history of the world. In "Europe at War" the author gives a complete and comprehensive account of every great event that has had a bearing on the outbreak of the war. The author, Judge Henry Neil, is a famous writer of histories. He has a most interesting style and you will delight in reading the startling stories of personal experiences of the great rulers and generals.

The book is superbly illustrated and the binding is all that could be wished to entitle the volume to a place on any library shelf. Everybody should read "Europe at War." Every American citizen wants peace and when it is declared you will understand the terms better after having read this interesting book. Readers of this paper can secure the book at less than half its actual value. See announcement elsewhere.—[Advertisement.

BELGIAN KING MAKES APPEAL.

His People are Starving, He Urges Speedy Relief.

Says the Suffering During the Winter will be Keen.

American Friendship to Him a Precious Memory.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Oct. 31, 5:20 p.m.—Albert, King of the Belgians, has asked the American people through the American Commission for Relief in Belgium, to help feed his starving people during the coming winter.

The King's message, written under fire in the battle before Dunkirk, follows:

"I am informed that officials and citizens in Belgium and England are working to save my people from the horrors of the famine which now threatens them. It is a great comfort to me in this hour of sorrow and misfortune to feel that a great-hearted, disinterested people is directing its efforts to releiving the distress of the unoffending civilian population of my country.

"Despite all that can be done, the suffering in the coming winter will be terrible, but the burden we must bear will be lightened if my people can be spared the pangs of hunger with its frightful consequences of disease and violence.

"I confidently hope that the appeal of the American commission will meet with a generous response. The whole-hearted friendship of America shown my people at this time always will be a precious memory.

"[Signed] ALBERT."

OFFICIAL BODY.

The American Commission for Relief in Belgium is an official body recognized by the various governments for the transmission of foodstuffs into Belgium. It is the only channel through which food can be introduced into Belgium and by its association with a committee in Belgium, has the only efficient agency for the distribution of food within the country. H. C. Hoover, chairman of the commission, which has headquarters in London, makes the following appeal to all American newspapers:

"We have received reports from members of this commission who were sent into Belgium. They have the assistance of the National Committee of Relief and its branches through Belgium, together with the help of the American Ministers and Consuls and local officials. Their reports show that there are still some 7,000,000 people in Belgium. In many centers the people are receiving an allowance of a little more than three ounces of flour per capita daily.

"This is not a question of charity or relief to the chronically poor—it is a question of feeding an entire population. The situation affects the wealthy and well-to-do as well as the poor. It touches every home in Belgium. Our experts calculate that in order to avoid actual starvation, Belgium must have every month a minimum of 60,000 tons of wheat, 15,000 tons of corn, 5000 tons of peas or beans and a limited amount of bacon or lard.

"This will allow rations of [illegible] ounces per capita daily, which is about half the usual soldier's ration. All this will cost $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 monthly. There is no money in Belgium. The whole credit machinery has ceased. Eighty per cent. of the people are unemployed.

"A plan may be devised whereby such Belgians as possess property may give obligations to pay when the war ends, but even if we could realize on these obligations we must still have at least $2,500,000 monthly in food or money with which to buy it. That these figures are no exaggeration is proved by the fact that Belgium imports in normal times an average of 230,000 tons of cereals monthly. This, together with its own production and accumulations is now exhausted.

"During the past week we have received and expended in food $600,000 and yet this is only four days' supply. This problem is immediate. The Belgians are helping themselves, but they can do little.—The British and French are under such a strain that they also can do little. Besides, these nations, together with the Dutch, have 1,000,000 refugees on their hands. Americans must feed Belgium this winter. There never was such a [illegible] on American charity and there never was a famine emergency so great.

"This committee and its distributing agency, the Belgian committee, is composed entirely of volunteers, and every dollar represents actual food without any organization expenses. It is our earnest hope that all funds raised for Belgian relief in the United States will be translated into actual food and shipped through the commission.

"Will you, therefore, in the interests of humanity, open a subscription among your readers ear-marked 'For the sole purpose of purchasing and transporting food?' Every dollar raised will be used to purchase food in the United States. Information as to what centers and what relief agencies in the United States will undertake the purchase and dispatch will be cabled later.

"[Signed] H. C. HOOVER,
"Chairman."

ITALIAN CABINET, DIVIDED, RESIGNS

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Nov. 1, 2:25 a.m.—The Italian Cabinet has resigned, according to a dispatch from Rome to Reuter's Telegram Company.

The Italian Cabinet has suffered from the same division of opinion that exists in the country at large. Italy's neutrality has been approved by the whole Cabinet, but there existed among the Ministers two opinions, as in the country, the one favoring military preparations at any cost and the other supporting the idea that the [illegible] of Italy becoming involved through these measures was disproportionate to any advantage she might gain.

seems that the French army is in bad position and to get out it mus lines.

"At 2 o'clock today (September 11)
we were ordered to leave the trenches.
We thought it would be to attack the enemy, but it seems we are to go back. Two French army corps have pierced our lines. Away we went without taking time to eat.

"Today (September 12) we had a little bread with coffee. We are suffering terribly from privation and exhaustion. They tell us we are executing a turning movement, not a retreat. To us it looks like flight. Finally we arrived at Souain, where we hoped to eat, but instead of rations they gave us shovels with which to dig trenches in the pouring rain. While we were at it French shrapnel drove us back with the trenches uncompleted.

"Today (September 14) we have dug ourselves in again and remain, stuck man against man, all day in our trenches. We have eaten nothing all day; we suffer atrociously from hunger and thirst; the rain comes down in torrents, but we can not leave the trenches because of the shower of shrapnel from the enemy's guns. Finally, this afternoon we had our first repast for several days, consisting of rice with a little meat and bread and a morsel of bacon. It was like a drop of water on a hot iron.

"The French have occupied the trenches we left at Souain, three miles back. Today, the French artillery gave us a little respite, and toward half-past six reopened its hellish fire, which continued very late in the night at the rate of a shot every ten minutes, just sufficient to leave us no repose. It is a dog's life we are leading and we shall soon be sick—every man.

"Today (September 23) we have ordered into the first line of trenches, having before us a battalion of the One Hundred and Sixty-first, which has suffered great losses. Toward 11 o'clock the artillery opened a violent fire and the shells simply rained upon our lines. We were obliged to keep closely to our trenches, unable to leave them for anything. We are all nearly famished.

"Today (September 30) the devilish French guns have swept off half of our company. Their fire is so constant that we have not time to fire ourselves. We are still confined to the trenches and it is two days since we were served meager rations of rice and coffee made with rain water. Cold north winds have added to our suffering. Many of the men are so hampered with rheumatism that we are obliged to lift them out of the trenches.

"Today (October 4) we have eaten and the rations were more generous, but it seems impossible for us to satisfy our hunger.

"This morning (October 8) happily it does not rain, but the tempest blows from the north and makes us feel our hunger all the more. They say there are plenty of provisions in the rear; the question is to get them to us in face of the French artillery, which sweeps the ground constantly and makes life impossible, except under cover of the trenches. Hunger is terrible. I suffer horribly from it. I keep up. I don't think I can last much longer."

The cold, also. I am no longer able

FINALLY DIES OF STARVATION.

Diary of a German Soldier Describes Suffering.

Food Supplies Kept Away by French Cannonading.

Daily Fighting, Little to Eat, Too Much for Writer.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Oct. 16.—Here is the story of a German private who was found dead in a trench—not dead from wounds but from starvation—and this story in the form of a daily journal kept apparently up to the last day, was found on him. It begins with the advance of the Crown Prince's army upon the Marne after the battle of the Charleroi and the fall of Longwy.

It covers the battle of the Marne and the greater part of the campaign in the Aisne.

"Yesterday was a day of rejoicing. Our first army has pushed back the French, defeated a division of English cavalry and is before the gates of Paris. In Russia our troops have taken 150,000 prisoners. The joy would have been greater if we had had something to eat. Our division leaves for Marson, Stamand and Bossuet, where we are to bivouac before crossing the Marne tomorrow. We hope to get rations there.

"We finally stopped long enough to take a bite. It didn't take long because what they gave us was just enough to put a sharper edge on our appetites. Then we went toward the Marne, pushing back detachments of the French. They let us come to the very edge of the stream; our advance guard was even partly across the bridge, when their artillery opened fire; it seemed to us that it opened the gates of hell at the same time. We could not advance and we had no orders to retire. We could only stand and watch the carnage around the bridge, where our losses were terrible. We succeeded in saving the flag and our commander and then were ordered to retire. It was not exactly a defeat, the officers say—only a retirement. The battle was resumed a little later and lasted nearly all night. We went forward again but were obliged to dig ourselves in to escape the terrible fire. Our own guns seemed weak.

"This morning (September 7) the French flying machines are circling above us incessantly, obliging us to keep to our trenches. Our artillery seems unable to dislodge the French guns and we fear an infantry attack from the left. It is an artillery day and our troops occupying the canal bridge have suffered terribly. Out of sixty men, twenty-five only remained when the combat was suspended without decisive results. We got out of the trenches toward 9 o'clock and were lucky enough to dig up some raw potatoes, which comforted us a little.

"A great battle was announced for today (September 9.) We have been in the trenches four days now and the rest, after long marches, would be agreeable if there were no dead bodies of men and horses and if the flies did not pester us.

"The great battle did not come off, but today (September 10) we could see, half a mile off, the French artillery strongly intrenched.

"They say strong forces of the enemy are in front of us, but that we need fear nothing. A heavy battle is going on on our right wing. It seems that the French army is in a bad position and to get out it must retire on Paris or break through our lines.

INDUSTRY PENALIZED.

In South Carolina it is a Crime to Plant Too Much Cotton.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

COLUMBIA (S. C.) Oct. 31.—Gov. Cole Blease yesterday signed the cotton acreage reduction bill, passed at a special session of the South Carolina Legislature. The bill provides that not more than one-third of the land cultivated in South Carolina in 1915 shall be planted in cotton. It provides a fine of from $25 to $100 for each acre planted in cotton beyond the specified limit.

RESTORES NERVE OF PARISIANS.

GOVERNMENT MAY RETURN TO CAPITAL AFTER REPORTED GERMAN RETREAT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Oct. 31.—Unofficial announcement was made today that the government would return to Paris from Bordeaux November 20, and that Parliament would meet December 15 to pass emergency laws.

Little by little Paris appears to be returning to more normal conditions. The shops in the Avenue de l'Opera, which had their doors locked and windows whitewashed, have been reopened. Each day another restaurant resumes business and the newspapers which ceased to publish at the time of mobilization, have again begun to appear. The question of reopening the Bourse also is discussed.

From the war arena in France and Belgium the most pleasing news to Parisians today was that telling of the retreat of the Germans across the Yser in the face of a stiff cannonading by the allies. The announcement only a few days ago that the Germans had succeeded in crossing to the left bank of the Yser did more to depress the spirits of the people here than any development of the war for some time.

Their withdrawal now along with the progress of the allies at other points as officially announced is taken by many as marking the first stages of an impending victory. Much interest is taken in the hot fighting in the vicinity of Ypres where the allies have been gaining, because of the great importance of the position to the Germans. Ypres, according to German military men, is the center of the German position between Lille and the sea. They have said that they could not continue their advance unless assured of the possession of it.

"If Ypres is conquered we will have the route opened as far as the heights of St. Omer twenty-two miles southeast of Calais," is a statement attributed to them. However, the most important positions in the combat between Nieuport, Dixmude and Ypres are in the hands of the allies.

The death list of the army men today contains the name of Col. H. Detrie, the youngest superior officer in the army.

EDISON'S GILLS FOR SUBMARINES.

OUR NAVAL OFFICIALS SATISFIED WITH THEM SO FAR AS TRIED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Tests of storage batteries designed by Thomas A. Edison for use in submarine craft to eliminate danger of suffocation by gas generated by batteries now used will be concluded within a month at the New York navy yard.

Navy Department officials here announced tonight that preliminary tests had been satisfactory. If final tests warrant new submarines will be equipped with the Edison batteries and whenever an old craft is repaired and its batteries removed the new ones will be substituted.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—George Fred Williams of Boston, former United States Minister to Greece and Montenegro, whose criticism of the European powers for their conduct in Albania led to a request for his resignation early in July, arrived at New York today on board the steamship Nieuw Amsterdam from Rotterdam.

Mr. Williams said that he was not forced to resign, but he admitted that the statement attributed to him was undiplomatic and he, therefore, tendered his resignation and is now on his way to Washington officially to sever his connection with the diplomatic service.

LET US BREATHE EASIER.

A Hostile Attack upon San Francisco (in Mimic War) has been Successfully Repelled.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—A hostile attack upon San Francisco from the land side has been repelled after a battle of ten days duration. Three separate attempts, directed from Halfmoon Bay, San Mateo and Millbrae, south of the city, were checked successfully, and yesterday a landing party from imaginary transports was crushed. This brought to an end the sham fight of the Coast artillerymen, who returned to their posts today.

Officers who observed the maneuvers said that the mimic war had emphasized the need for available automobiles and motor trucks for the use of the artillerymen, when serving as an infantry force, in time of war; for aeroplane, mounted and motorcycle scouts in squads of considerable size.

BELGIAN DEFEAT IN CONGO STATE.

Germans Report Success on Continent of Africa.

Russians Commit Atrocities in Prussian Campaign.

Berlin Compliments Turkey on Effective Start.

[BY WIRELESS AND A. P.]

BERLIN, Oct. 31 (by Wireless to Sayville)—The following information has been given out by the official press bureau:

The Cologne Gazette declares that in the archives of the Belgian Ministry of War there has been found secret documents setting forth the common plans of the triple entente powers and Belgium for a campaign against Germany.

"The Italian newspaper Stampa reports that German troops in East Africa have inflicted complete defeat on the troops from the Belgian Congo at a point near Kissenji.

"A special correspondent of the Frankfort Gazette in East Prussia reports that there is now a total of 40,000 civilians of East Prussia who are missing as a result of the Russian atrocities in this district.

"In consequence of the ill treatment of German civilians in England, the general in command of the German Army Corps, stationed at Altona, has declared that if Great Britain does not liberate these Germans, all Englishmen in Germany fit for military service will be arrested.

"The Mattino, published in Rome, declares that the revolt in the Union of South Africa is increasing and that the insurgents are well armed, well equipped and well fed. The Daily News of London warns against underrating this revolt.

"The Italians are much incensed at the seizure and detention at Gibraltar of four Italian steamers from the United States. The Ida Nazionale declares that these seizures are illegal and that the cargoes on board the vessels are destined for Italian firms. Two thousand, seven hundred Italian passengers are being detained at Gibraltar.

"The British official statement concerning the weakness of the economic and financial situations in Germany and Austria are wild chimeras of their authors, and the allegation that Swiss contractors are being paid with the German war loan is a mis-statement that long ago was refuted. The Austrian Crown has never been more than 25 per cent. under par and it is today only 4½ per cent. under par."

NO FIGHTING IN POLAND.

The General Staff of the Austro-Hungarian army reports significantly that there was no fighting October 29 in Russian Poland. This shows that the Austro-German forces have been successful in freeing themselves from the enemy, a maneuver which permitted them to make new dispositions of their troops without disturbance.

"The Berlin morning papers give much space to Turkey's 'effective start' in the campaign, but they refrain from commenting on the probable effect of her action on the outcome of the war.

"The Ottoman government declares that when the Russian navy laid mines in the waters of the Bosphorus the Turkish navy opened fire.

"The temperature at Archangel now registers 5 deg. As a result of this cold the White Sea soon will be frozen.

"The correspondent at Dunkirk of the Tribuna of Rome reports that the French soldiers have completely broken down. France's colonial troops, especially those from Africa, are benumbed by the cold.

"Several official English statements have endeavored to explain the success of the German war loan by saying that the subscription of one-quarter of the deposits in all savings banks was compulsory. This is proved to be a stupid lie by the fact that the deposits in all German savings banks amount to 20,000,000,000 marks ($5,000,000,000) while the savings banks subscribed only 884,000,000 marks to the loan.

VERDUN DEVELOPMENTS.

"Military experts of the Belgian newspapers consider that yesterday's developments around Verdun were of the greatest importance, and say there is promise of their resumption with renewed strength. In the fighting south of Verdun, the French are straining every effort to crush and drive out the army, which the end of September penetrated as far as St. Mihiel, and which for a month past has been fighting hard to hold the ground gained. The Germans now have captured the main position, and their forces are operating from the direction of Toul. The French attack from Pont a Mousson also was without results. Attention now can again be directed to the original object of this campaign.

"The opening of naval hostilities by Turkey promises to divert the attention of the Russian forces which have been campaigning in Poland, where they were able to concentrate superior forces against the armies of Germany and Austria. Nothing new has been reported from Poland.

"Austria announces officially that the Russian advance against the Austrian positions in the region of Turka had been repulsed (Turka is in Galicia, twenty-eight miles southwest of Sambor.)

"Special dispatches to newspapers from the Servian frontier report that an entire Servian regiment under Col. Ivanoff walked into a trap at Vishegrad. They had been informed previously that the Servians still occupied this place. This was not so and the regiment was quickly surrounded and surrendered without resistance.

"German military authorities deny as fables almost all the statements regarding the German sixteen-inch howitzers, which are being circulated in Germany and abroad. The test of the guns began six years ago and German artillerymen have been trained in the use of them for several years past. The secret of these guns was preserved with remarkable success."

GERMANS TORPEDO A REFUGEE SHIP.

TRAIN HELD UP IN CHICAGO.

CALIFORNIA LIMITED BOARDED BY DARING ROBBERS IN STOCK YARDS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Oct. 31.—The California Limited passenger train of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad slowed up at the Panhandle crossing, Thirty-first street and Western avenue.

From a pile of ties by the side of the road two men emerged. They hurried to the observation platform. Five passengers were smoking cigars there. One of the men climbed onto the platform.

"You're a lucky guy," said a jovial person. "Almost missed it, eh."

"Yes," said the man. "Hold up your hands."

The man had two revolvers. Passengers stood in a row, hands reaching toward sky, then the other robber jumped up and went through five sets of pockets.

As the train gathered speed, one man dropped off the platform, and then the second.

One of the victims pulled the emergency cord and broke the news to the conductor, who related the affair to the Corwith Yards authorities and to the Brighton Park police.

BRITISH SEIZE ITALIAN SHIPS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

GIBRALTAR (Spain) Oct. 31.—The Italian steamers Regina d'Italia and San Giovanni were seized by the British navy as prizes owing to the fact that parts of their cargoes consisted of war material, it is stated. The vessels will be held pending a decision of a prize court.

The Regina d'Italia and the San Giovanni were bound from American ports to Italy with cargoes of copper. Their seizure by the British brought a protest to the State Department at Washington on October 29 from representatives of four copper companies in New York. No official information of the seizure had been received by the State Department at that time.

GETTING BUSY ON NEW SUBMARINES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 31.—The United States navy has placed orders for six engines for submarines with the Busch-Diesel Engine Company of St. Louis. The contract is worth more than $250,000. Beginning next week the local factory will double its working force in order to fill the contract.

Each engine is to be of 800 horse power, and two engines each are intended for submarines L-5, L-6 and L-7, now being built at Bridgeport, Conn. The Busch-Diesel Company has promised to have the engines ready within a year.

CAPT. DOLLAR EXPLAINS.

Exonerates America and Britain of Responsibility for the Trouble one of His Ships Experienced.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—Complete exoneration of the British and American government from any blame or criticism in connection with the failure of the British steamship Robert Dollar to obtain a transfer to the American flag in the harbor of Rio de Janeiro last month was embodied in a statement given to the Associated Press today by Capt. Robert Dollar, owner of the vessel. According to his version of the affair the Brazilian government was at fault.

He says that the vessel's failure to transfer her registry was not because of any action taken by the British, as had been reported, for the British Consul at Rio de Janeiro first agreed to the transfer and later, September 23, cabled his willingness to clear the ship under the British flag when it appeared that otherwise she must be interned to the end of the war.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Oct. 31.—A dispatch to the Post from Sydney, N.S.W., says it is reported that the German cruisers Scharnhorst and the Gneisenau have been captured as a result of the failure of their coal supply. There is no official confirmation of the report to be had here.

TAPESTRY SAVED FROM CATHEDRAL.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Oct. 16.—Forty-two pieces of tapestry of great value were saved from the Rheims cathedral, including seventeen pieces representing the history of Christ, by Daniel Peppersock, a gift from Henri of Lorraine, Archbishop of Rheims, from 1629 to 16[illegible] and seventeen pieces representing the life of the Holy Virgin, given in 1530 by Robert de Lenoncourt, Archbishop of Rheims.

There were among them also two pieces, considered the best produced by the Gobelin manufactory, representing the acts of the apostles.

Prohibit Prohibition

Suggestions to Business Men

People respect regulation but all of us have, and always will, resent the imperious and absolute prohibition of anything. Prohibition so far has proven a misnomer, an inducement to law-breaking, and consequently a moat in the eye of progress.

No one knows who discovered or first drank alcohol. A nation has never existed without alcohol or war. Guessing about the future from past facts we are going to have them both with us some thousands of years. Even admitting them both evil and with due respect to the "Holier than thou" clan, the truth is, "so-called evil is necessary as a comparison," for who can say what was good if there was no evil?

When prohibition is foisted on a people, the majority of which use alcohol in some way, they are hindered instead of helped, by forcing the sale of poor liquor in joints, instead of good liquor in a respectable place, which is subject to regulation that can be enforced. Every business and professional man should remember the responsibility of influence due to his advertising. No need to worry about hurting business by expressing views contrary to possible client's opinion.

A conviction of sincerity is more advantageous to a business man than doubt as to where he stands. A far greater influence can be exerted by your advertising than your vote at the polls, because all advertising is educational, more or less.

Educating the people to care for their teeth where more than 75 per cent. are neglecting them, is quite a task.

Prohibition is a consideration in this business, too. Fear of pain prohibits many from needed dental service. Our analgesic method by which teeth can be extracted, filled, crowned, or even live nerves removed painlessly is of interest to all in this state of mind.

Beware of bleeding or receding gums, teeth slightly sore or loose and a bad breath. These are symptoms of Pyorrhea, that cause the loss of most teeth.

Our specialties are treating Pyorrhea, and making teeth without plates, or ordinary bridge work.

We also make plates to restore expression and prevent shrinking gums.

I CURE PILES
FISTULA
and all other Rectal Diseases
WITHOUT OPERATION

I TREAT NO DISEASES EXCEPT THOSE OF THE RECTUM AND BOWELS.
I cure without surgery. My patients are not confined in bed and they do not lose a moment's time from their business.
My method is not a "home cure" or a "correspondence treatment," but it is an application of skilled treatments administered under the most rigid antiseptic conditions in my office.

WELL-KNOWN SANTA MONICA MINISTER CURED.
This is to certify that Dr. C. H. White has cured me of a distressing hemorrhoidal ailment of 25 years' duration. His method of treatment is effective, but not severe. He has the appliances, the knowledge and the skill born of many years of specialization in this fruitful source of physical disease. He accomplishes all he claims in his advertising, and at reasonable expense.
I take pleasure in heartily commending the man and his methods.
WESLEY K. BEANS, Pastor First Methodist Episcopal Church, Santa Monica, Cal.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE SUPERINTENDENT CURED.
My Dear Dr. White: I am thankful for the privilege of bearing witness to your ability to treat without pain, and with success, the delicate and disabling diseases which result from sedentary work. To all who need the services of a skillful, sympathetic and experienced specialist in your line I heartily commend you. Very sincerely yours,
ERVIN S. CHAPMAN, D.D., L.L.D., Superintendent State Anti-Saloon League.

WELL-KNOWN PRINTER CURED.
Esteemed Doctor: I cannot refrain from congratulating you and myself on the complete cure of hemorrhoids, from which I had been afflicted for more than 20 years. For the past 5 years I had been practically incapacitated from attending to business. Your treatment is such that no one need fear, as no knife operation is employed. It will be a pleasure to have you refer anyone to me, and I will never be too busy to answer an inquiry. Sincerely yours,
F. A. HARRINGTON, 138½ S. Spring St., Los Angeles, Cal.

STEEL MILL SUPERINTENDENT CURED.
For twenty years I was a sufferer from protruding and bleeding piles. During that time I constantly sought a cure but never saw the time that I thought I could spare the time for a surgical operation. Dr. C. H. White has cured me. This was done painlessly and rapidly. I have renewed my age more than twenty years and can cheerfully recommend him and his methods to all sufferers.
E. J. MOSES, Supt. Cal. Ind. Steel Rolling Mills, 4th and Mateo Sts., Los Angeles.

PROMINENT REAL ESTATE MAN CURED.
I desire to say to my friends everywhere that during the last few months I have been cured of an old and annoying fistula, which had baffled all treatment heretofore employed. This fistula was cured without pain, and without loss of time, by Dr. C. H. White.

Solid Fumed Oak. Arm Rocker and Chair in genuine leather, Library Table and Bed Davenport with mattress complete, all pieces exactly as pictured and on easy terms..................

The Construction

The modern house, flat and apartment—with its lack of spare or guest rooms—has created a pressing demand for just such a set as this. This Living Room Set solves the problem in the most ideal manner, enables you to turn your living-room into a bedroom at any time an extra bed is needed—and, the best part of all, it costs you less than any set of equal style would sell for in any other store in this city.

The Living-Room Set

Presents all the style and appearance of a handsome Library Set by day—it's a beautiful Davenport, Arm Rocker, Chair and Table—yet the Bed-Davenport can be instantly converted into a large size bed—as broad and comfortable as any bed you can imagine.

The Bed-Davenport

This handsome Davenport is made on an entirely new principle—the springs, mattress and bedding are under the seat and come into position when the seat is turned, so you do not sleep on the upholstering, as is the case with nearly all other Bed-Davenports. Has broad, comfortable springs, which support the mattress when the Davenport is open as a bed.

Something Absolutely New

All of these pieces are rich and beautiful in design—made of solid oak, in fumed finish showing the beautiful grain of the wood—and are richly upholstered. The workmanship throughout is of the best order—and every piece can be relied upon to give years of satisfactory service.

The Price—$60

Judged from every standpoint of style, quality and workmanship, this set is one of the most remarkable values we have ever offered. We urge you to see it, examine it carefully, judge it for yourself. We know you will be as enthusiastic over this outfit as we are.

And Note the Terms

In order to open a great many new accounts, we offer this Living-Room Set at this unparalleled low price, and we have made the terms equally pleasing. All you pay is $6 cash and the entire set will be delivered to your home, and you can pay the balance $6 a month. Don't miss this extraordinary offer.

MIGHT CAPITALIZE MOUNT LASSEN.

BUT THE HOMESTEADERS UP "THAT A-WAY" ARE ALREADY ALARMED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 31.—Homestead occupants of government land in the vicinity of Lassen Peak are greatly disturbed because of the fifty-five successions of eruptions of Mt. Lassen during the year, and several of them have addressed communications to the Register and Receiver of the United States Land Office here asking what may be done for them in case the land proves to be valueless because of the eruptions of the historic volcano.

Francis M. Garner, a homesteader whose claim is in township 31, N., twenty-five miles in a westerly direction from the peak, writes that there is extreme nervousness among the settler. He does not say more than that he will be compelled to abandon the claim unless Mt. Lassen becomes less active, but it is expected by officials that these settlers will undoubtedly ask the government to recompense them for their time spent and improvements made on their grounds.

Register Butler said nothing of this character had yet come before the land officials, but the destruction of the land by an "act of God" might permit the government to assist the settlers.

MISS DORIS HENN TIRES OF NAME.

PETITIONS COURT IN OAKLAND FOR PERMISSION TO MAKE IT HAYNE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

OAKLAND, Oct. 31.—Miss Doris Henn, a pretty Alameda society girl, and her brother, Roger Paul Henn, today petitioned the Superior Court to change their names to Hayne, declaring that the name "Henn" was used by their friends to make puns.

The petitioners are the children of William O. Henn, of Alameda, and are well known in society circles of that city.

Miss Henn, who has been known by the name of Hayne for several months, recently turned her attention to the breeding of fancy horses and dogs.

WILSON WILL SOON BECOME A GRANDFATHER, SAYS REPORT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WILLIAMSTOWN (Mass.) Oct. 31.—President Wilson will soon be a grandfather. The stork is hovering around the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre, the latter of whom was Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson, second daughter of the President.

Mrs. Sayre is a White House bride, the wedding being performed in the historic east room on November 25, 1913. After a honeymoon trip, Mr. Sayre took his bride to Williamstown, where he became assistant to President Garfield of Williams College.

Political.

TO CUT LEAD OF DEMOCRATS.

Control of Next House may be Greatly Reduced.

New York "Herald" Predicts Big Republican Gain.

Whitman Expected to Beat Glynn in New York.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Oct. 31.—Democratic control of the next House of Representatives by twenty-four votes and a Democratic United States Senate by seventeen votes.

Dist.-Atty. Whitman, running ahead of Glynn as Governor of New York State, and Ambassador Gerard as United States Senator from New York ahead of Wadsworth.

These are what the New York Herald's extensive canvass of the political situation indicates. The final word of the State-wide poll shows Mr. Whitman maintaining the lead he has held throughout the campaign.

The Democratic majority in the House of Representatives will probably be cut down from 147 to 24. In the present House there are 281 Democrats and six Democratic vacancies; 129 Republicans and fifteen "Progressives."

The next House, according to the indicated results, will include 227 Democrats, 203 Republicans and five "Progressives." Big gains are credited to the Republicans in many States. Ten additional seats in New York State are expected to go to the Republicans. Politicians look to Illinois to cut down the Democratic delegation from nineteen to nine and increase the Republican delegation from five to seventeen. In the President's own State, New Jersey, Republicans are counting on capturing five Democratic seats. Six new Republican members from Ohio, eleven from Pennsylvania and from one to three in several States are indicated in the Herald's canvass.

The canvass of the Senatorial contests indicates that the Democrats will a little more than hold their own. Fifty-three Democrats, forty-one Republicans and two "Progressives" make up the present Senate. Fifty-five Democrats, thirty-eight Republicans and three Progressives are expected to sit in the new body. The Democrats, the canvass indicates, will win one member each from Kansas, New York and Ohio, and lose one in Nevada.

Based on more than 26,000 test votes taken in city and country and typical of every class and type of voter in the State electorate, the Herald poll shows the District Attorney appears to be getting the Republican vote up-State and to be attracting many "Progressives" back to the Republican fold, while at the same time making cuts into the Tammany strongholds in the metropolitan district.

Figured out on the basis of the Herald poll, providing the entire vote is cast along the lines as is indicated by the canvass, Mr. Whitman's plurality in the State would approximate 69,000. Such a plurality, however, is even more than is claimed by the Republican leaders.

William Sulzer has received about 16 per cent. of the votes taken in the poll, and this percentage applied to the probable total vote, would give him about 186,000. His vote is heaviest in the southern tier counties, the East Side of Manhattan and some sections of Brooklyn, where there is a large Jewish vote.

The "Progressive" vote is breaking up and drifting in large numbers to Mr. Whitman and Mr. Sulzer, the poll shows.

Mr. Gerard has made a strong showing in the canvass. Many Democrats who marked their straw ballots for Mr. Sulzer also voted for Mr. Gerard. The Ambassador to Germany is expected to get the full Democratic vote and in addition to this, a considerable independent vote.

Indications are that the vote will be small through the entire State.

CATARRH OF HEAD AND THROAT

Is your nose stopped up?
Does your nose discharge?
Is your nose sore and tender?
Is there pain in front of head?
Do you spit up slime?
Do you hawk and clear the throat?
Is your throat dry in the morning?
Do you sleep with your mouth open?
Now is the time to be cured—don't let it run into complications.

OF THE EARS.

Is your hearing failing?
Do your ears discharge or ring?
Is the wax drying in your ears?
Do you hear better on some days?
Does a cold make your hearing worse?
Don't neglect this until your hearing is irreparably destroyed.

STOMACH AND LIVER. If you have distress and bloating after eating don't neglect treatment. Catarrh of the stomach is most common ailment and can be cured, but remember, a cancer of the stomach we cannot cure. Do not neglect stomach and liver trouble. Consult doctors that know how to cure.

ASTHMA. No one but an asthmatic can appreciate the terrible distress of this disease. Gasping, smothering, panting for breath—suffocating feeling sitting up in bed at night, are but a few of the terrible torments of an asthmatic sufferer. If you are an Asthma victim let not another day pass until you try our wonderful treatment—which gives almost immediate relief and lasting benefits. Call or write.

ECZEMA. This affliction often baffles the skill of the regular doctor—and tries the patience of the specialist—but our methods have proven successful in so many cases that, no matter who has failed to cure you, it is worth your time to consult us. We will gladly explain our method of treatment free of charge.

RHEUMATISM. If you are hobbling about with rheumatic joints or suffering torments from inflammatory rheumatism—come and let us explain our theory and treatment for this painful affliction.

Have You the Hair of a Musician?

Bald or thin-haired musicians are unknown. This same may be said of actors. The reason is that constant appearance before the public makes constant care of appearance a habit. And constant care of hair insures a heavy, attractive growth. In cleansing the hair it is not advisable to use a makeshift, but always use a preparation made for shampooing only. You can enjoy the best that is known for about 3 cents a shampoo by getting a package of canthrox from your druggist; dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. After its use the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.

[POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT]

AMENDMENT NUMBER 46 AND THE MEDICAL TRUST

The old line doctors in the medical trust are asking the people to vote against the drugless practice act or number 46.

They say they are doing this to protect the people against "Quacks." A quack, you know, is a fellow who belongs to the other fellow's school of healing.

The medical trust say they are fighting this amendment to protect the dear public and not for its own benefit or to kill off competition. Competition is the only thing it will not kill off.

Do you believe the trust is working for your interest? The medical trust always made the medical laws before this; it was conceited enough to say that it knew what was best for the public.

The people never asked for laws which created a medical monopoly. Now for the first time the people themselves (55,000) voters have initiated number 46, a medical law of their own choosing.

The trust doctors do not realize that it is not the drugless doctors who propose 46, but it is the people who want that law so they can employ legally the drugless doctors.

People employ drugless doctors now because they receive health through them, but under the present law drugless doctors cannot legally practice, and so the public has to go without their help or ask the drugless doctors to break the medical law.

Give your neighbor the legal right to employ the doctor of his choice.

Vote YES for number 46 and let us have medical as well as religious freedom in California.

The public is fully protected under number 46, which requires drugless doctors to be well educated and of good moral character.

Under the proposed law the drugless doctor must put on his card or sign "Drugless Physician" and he is prevented from practicing surgery.

It does not interfere with the drug doctor. It nearly means equal rights and opportunity to all.

Read amendment 46 for yourself and then you surely will vote "YES" for it.

Recipe to Stop Dandruff

This Home Made Mixture Stops Dandruff and Falling Hair and Aids Its Growth.

To a half-pint of water add:

Bay Rum	1 oz.
Barbo Compound	a small box
Glycerine	¼ oz.

These are all simple ingredients that you can buy from any druggist at very little cost, and mix them yourself. Apply to the scalp once a day for two weeks, then once every other week until all the mixture is used. A half-pint should be enough to rid the head of dandruff and kill the dandruff germs. It stops the hair from falling out, relieves itching and scalp diseases.

Although it is not a dye, it acts upon the hair roots and will darken streaked, faded, gray hair in ten or fifteen days. It promotes the growth of the hair and makes harsh hair soft and glossy.

Republican Year.

FIFTY-SIX THOUSAND IS BOWEN'S ESTIMATE.

W. M. BOWEN, chairman of the Los Angeles Republican County Central Committee, last night issued the following statement:

"Capt. John D. Fredericks, of the Republican ticket, will sweep the State of California by a plurality of 56,000. This estimate is based upon reports made from every county after the most careful analysis of the political situation.

"The northern section of the State is assuredly for the Republican ticket and it is freely predicted that Fredericks will carry every county north of the Tehachepi with a possible exception of one. It is estimated very conservatively that the Republican plurality in the north will be 20,000. The southern portion of the State will add 36,000 to this plurality, divided as follows:

Los Angeles county	28,000
Riverside county	1,750
San Diego county	8,000
San Bernardino county	2,000
Orange county	3,500
Santa Barbara county	2,300
Ventura	1,500
Imperial county	500

"This is a Republican year. The Republican registration proves this fact. The total of the Progressives and the Democrats combined is less than that of the Republican party and the members of this great party are going to vote. They are enthusiastically aroused to the situation. They are going to cast their ballots for more business and less legislation. Under the slogan of prosperity for all they will return this State to the Republican fold by a plurality not less than the 56,000 that I predicted."

Fredericks a Winner.

as sentiment or psychology. In San Francisco what little betting there is shows against Capt. Fredericks in that locality. The Republican State Committee never did expect to carry San Francisco, owing to the great army of boosters Johnson keeps there; to the paid employees of the State who have been doing politics for him for four years, and to the labor sentiment wrongly directed against Capt. Fredericks.

BACON'S VIEW.

Walter R. Bacon, chairman of the State Executive Committee of the Republicans, believes San Francisco will go not more than 5000 either way. A careful analysis of the San Francisco situation shows that nothing short of a Republican landslide Tuesday will win it for Capt. Fredericks. And the fury of the Johnson campaign having long since been spent, the silent voter may turn up a landslide that will make the defeat of Johnson crushing not alone in San Francisco, but in all other parts of the State.

ALAMEDA COUNTY.

Alameda county, once the hotbed of the Johnson brand of "progressivism," has been shocked by the registration and election frauds. These indiscretions upon the part of "Progressive" office-holders and ward-heelers shocked the esthetic sense of the bay region residents, and they have resented it. It is safe to claim Alameda for Capt. Fredericks and Congressman Knowland by at least 500 votes, which is a tremendous gain over 1912.

IN OTHER COUNTIES.

The estimates of Fredericks's pluralities in other counties of the north, taking into the equation every indicative straw and discounting conservatively, are as follows:

County—	Plurality.
Alpine	50
Amador	625
Butte	1,320
Calaveras	750
Colusa	480
Contra Costa	1,760
Del Norte	400
El Dorado	750
Fresno	1,000
Glenn	350
Humboldt	1,450
Inyo	250
Kern	1,500
Kings	650
Lake	750
Lassen	175
Madera	500
Marin	1,500
Mariposa	200
Mendocino	1,200
Merced	500
Modoc	400
Mono	200
Monterey	1,000
Nevada	550
Napa	850
Plumas	300
Sacramento	1,000
San Benito	750
San Joaquin	2,750
San Mateo	1,400
Santa Clara	3,100
Santa Cruz	1,000
Shasta	900
Sierra	350
Siskiyou	350
Solano	1,250
Sonoma	2,500
Stanislaus	500
Sutter	750
Tehama	800
Trinity	350
Tulare	600
Tuolumne	550
Yolo	750
Yuba	500

The estimate here given shows the northern counties will come to the Tehachepi with 40,110, not counting the result in San Francisco, Placer and San Luis Obispo counties. Assuming, for the sake of being conservative, that these three counties will roll up pluralities totaling 10,000 against Fredericks, this would leave a northern plurality for Capt. Fredericks of 30,110.

These figures do not take into account the fact that throughout the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys the Democrats are working openly for Fredericks and Snyder, the latter being the Democratic nominee for Lieutenant-Governor. The excess of Democratic votes over and above the amount estimated in the summary as drawn from that party will increase the northern plurality correspondingly.

THE DOUBLE CROSS.

The double-edged campaign of Johnson—one for the saloon vote of San Francisco, the other for the "dry" vote in Southern California—has disgusted the people of the south who are familiar with the duplicity of Johnson. It remains only for Southern California to keep the ball rolling on down from the north to the State line somewhere around Tia Juana, for here in the eight southern counties there will be a plurality of more than 31,000 votes for the Republican ticket.

SOUTHERN PLURALITIES.

The estimates of pluralities of the southern counties are as follows:

County—	Plurality.
Ventura	800
Santa Barbara	1,100
Orange	1,775
San Bernardino	3,500
San Diego	9,050
Imperial	625
Riverside	1,250
Los Angeles	12,193
Total south	30,293
Total north	30,110
Grand total	60,403

It might be said that this estimate takes too many votes away from Senator Curtin, the Democratic candidate for Governor, but inasmuch as no organization fight is being made for him and as many Democrats have said they will support Capt. Fredericks, and others have said they will vote for Johnson, it is not regarded as possible, and much less likely, that Curtin will poll over 117,000.

STRONG BACKING FOR FREDERICKS.

TWO OLD LINE DEMOCRATS TO SUPPORT THE REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Oct. 31.—"Progressive" claims to a big share of the Democratic vote, their only hope in the face of the overwhelming registration in favor of the Republican party, received a severe setback today when two of the staunchest Democrats in the State declared themselves for Capt. Fredericks.

Attorney J. J. Scrivner, born in Kentucky, a veteran of the Confederate army and a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat, has written to Capt. Fredericks declaring his intention of supporting him. Scrivner formerly lived in Los Angeles, where he was elected to the Legislature, and, always a Democrat, voted for Stephen White for the United States Senate. Later he lived in Stanislaus county and was elected District Attorney. For the first time in his life he is supporting a Republican candidate, and so, he says, are all his friends.

Joseph Gregg, native of Tennessee, former State Senator and Mayor of Woodland, Yolo county, a life-long Democrat, is another who has declared for Fredericks. Gregg predicts that the Republicans will sweep Yolo county.

Punctured.

"PROGRESSIVE" COLLAPSE ASSURED IN WASHINGTON.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

TACOMA (Wash.) Oct. 31.—Wider interest has been aroused by the Washington political campaign this year than by the three-party Presidential fight of 1912, this being due to the injection of the prohibition issue into the present contest. Every city in the State reports a registration in excess of that of 1912 and if weather conditions are at all favorable Tuesday, the total vote promises to be considerably greater than that cast by this State in the Presidential year.

The increased registration is largely accounted for by the large number of women non-voters in 1912 who have been registered early this year in order that they might sign the initiative petitions for the prohibition bill.

The collapse of the "Progressive" party in this State promises to be one of the outstanding features of the election. In 1912 Roosevelt carried the State, taking two "Progressive" Representatives-at-large into office with him and receiving a larger proportion of the popular vote than any other State. Only the vulnerability of the Bull Moose candidate for Governor prevented the third party from making a clean sweep. This year, however, the "Progressives" promise to become a third party in numbers in the State. The majority of voters who have left the "Progressive" ranks have renewed their Republican allegiance.

Contemptible.

DIRTY TRICK OF JOHNSON IS EXPOSED AT FOLSOM.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Oct. 31.—New evidence of the "elimination of politics from the conduct of State institutions," as practiced by those "Progressives" who boast most loudly of "uplift" and "purity," came to light today when Charles Alden, for many years and through a number of administrations the commissary at Folsom Prison, related some circumstances preceding his discharge by Warden Smith. Alden was replaced by a man named Kenney, a brother-in-law of Chester Rowell.

According to persons familiar with the circumstances, the "Progressive" machine, through Lieut. Platt, already had begun preparations for strengthening the cogs, said preparations consisting of ousting all persons of different political faith in the State institutions in favor of Progressives with votes. Alden was asked his politics and horrified by admitting that he was not a "Progressive."

A week later Kenney came to work as a guard, but his time was spent mostly in the commissary department. Alden was warned that Kenney was there to "get his job," but years of faithful service made him incredulous. Seven days after his arrival, Kenney was given the job of commissary and Alden was out. Friends in Alameda interceded, but were told that Kenney was Chester Rowell's brother-in-law and nothing could be done.

MEXICAN PEACE IN THE BALANCE.

Elimination of Carranza and Villa Mere Episode.

Discussion of Mugia Case Stirs up Convention.

Renewal of Fighting at Naco is Imminent.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

EL PASO (Tex.) Oct. 31.—Prospects for immediate peace in Mexico hung in the balance today upon the action of Gen. Carranza and Gen. Villa, both of whom had been eliminated from power by the peace conference at Aguascalientes.

The feeling long displayed between Villa and the Carranza faction was renewed by discussion of the case of Francisco Mugia, the Argentine adventurer, who was executed this week at Villa's headquarters after it was asserted that he had made a confession implicating Gen. Pablo Gonzales, Carranza's most ardent supporter, in a plot to kill Villa.

Gonzales telegraphed tonight a long denial of the charge, in which he declared he never sought to kill any one "who did not have a rifle in his hands," and that he never "would employ the dagger of the assassin."

From Guadalupe, where Villa remains during the progress of the convention, it was reported that others were arrested in connection with the Mugia plot and that these men would be brought before the assembled chiefs to attempt proof that the Carranza faction had sought to assassinate the northern leader.

EXPECT A SETTLEMENT.

Leaders of the rival factions looked for an early settlement of the differences between the two chieftains, following the action of the conference late yesterday in adopting the decree deposing both Carranza and Villa.

The plan which would retire the two opposing leaders was drafted and adopted unanimously by a joint committee on civil and military matters, the members of which are the leaders of both factions. It arranged that the provisional President, to be named later, should take oath of office before the assembled convention.

Later in the night the protocol came up before the assembled body and was passed by a vote of 17 to 112.

The plan of Aguascalientes differs widely from the many other revolutionary plans adopted at various times during Mexico's present-day revolutionary period, in that it is more definite in the matter of arranging a provisional government and carrying out civil reforms. It places full power in the provisional President and the present body of chieftains, which will act in the capacity of a Congress. The plan does not call for elections until after the arrangement of civil reforms by this body. No time is set for the general elections. The plan in this regard says:

FROM THE PLAN.

"Said President will take oath before the assembled convention and arrange the programme of government which will emanate from this arrangement along the best lines to realize in a pre-constitutional period the social and political reforms needed by the country." This plan borders on the suggested commission form of government, since the provisional President would be acting as chairman of the convention.

Gen. Carranza was demoted to the position of general of division, which he held prior to the drafting of the commander-in-chief of the Constitutionalist army during its fight against the Huerta power.

All commanders, Gen. Villa included, were placed under the orders of Secretary of War, who would be named under the new arrangement, although a previous clause clearly stated that both Carranza and Villa "would cease their present functions."

MAY RENEW NACO BATTLE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NACO (Ariz.) Oct. 31.—Renewal of the factional warfare between the Carranza garrison of Gen. Benjamin Hill at Naco, Sonora, and the forces of Gov. Jose Maytorena, leader of the Villa troops in Sonora, is believed imminent. Fighting at Naco was halted eight days ago by an armistice, pending the outcome of the convention at Aguascalientes.

Because of reports that Maytorena's troops were preparing to begin an artillery attack on Sonora, many families in the American town of Sonora today began preparations to leave their homes and move to Bisbee and other towns.

Both Hill and Maytorena have received reinforcements of men and artillery. For this reason it is feared that Naco, Ariz., will suffer more than in previous attacks if hostilities are renewed.

The War Department today ordered an embargo on munitions shipped through the United States between points in Mexico. It is reported that army officers here have recommended that an unqualified embargo on the exportation of munitions of war and supplies be established.

FAVOR RETENTION OF CARRANZA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) Oct. 31.—A telegram signed by Julio Madero and dated Friday at Aguascalientes informed Gen. Hill, at Naco, today, that a majority of the peace convention were not in favor of accepting the resignation of Gen. Carranza as the Constitutionalist governing chief.

One hundred thousand dollars in gold arrived at Agua Prieta today to finance Gen. Hill's campaign in Sonora, which contemplates the capture of Hermosillo, the State capital.

Four carloads of oil have arrived at Cananea, just in time to prevent the stopping of the mine pumps of the copper mines there. Had the pumps stopped the mines would have been flooded.

CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK CHILDREN NEED "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS."

A coated tongue means sluggish liver and bowels—Listen mother!

Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has sour stomach, diarrhoea, remember a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills. Give a teaspoonful and in just a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food, clogged in the bowels, passes out of the system and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless fruit laxative and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on each bottle.

Mother, keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs." Then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no cheaper size. Don't be fooled.

Facts and Figures.

FORECAST BY BACON OF TUESDAY'S RESULT.

"Capt. Fredericks has Taken the State by Storm," Declares the Chairman of the Republican State Executive Committee, Who Predicts a Plurality from Fifty to Seventy Thousand.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Oct. 31.—California will give Capt. Fredericks, the Republican standard-bearer, on Tuesday, next, a plurality up to 60,000 votes. This is the estimate made by Walter R. Bacon, chairman of the Republican State Central Executive Committee, after a thorough canvass of reports from every county in the State.

"Capt. Fredericks has taken the State by storm," said Bacon. "Personality has played an important part in the campaign now closing. On the one hand we have had a man, who, before he became Governor, was probably the most noted defender of criminals in the State. He has appealed to the people of the State in defense of his extravagant administration of the State's affairs with all the art of emotional and tear-compelling argument. He has varied this with abuse and vituperation unparalleled in the history of State politics. In short, he has employed all the devices known to an expert criminal lawyer to win the great jury of California voters to return a verdict at the polls in his favor.

"Capt. Fredericks, on the contrary, has uniformly appealed to the reason, to the calm, dispassionate judgment of the electorate. He, too, is a lawyer, but for twelve years he has given his great abilities, his faithful humanitarian service to building up in Los Angeles county, with its 800,000 population, a District Attorney's office that in many respects is an exemplar to the cities and counties of the United States. This record of twelve years, during which the domestic relations department was established in Los Angeles, saving the county annually $96,000 in cases which are never brought to trial, but are adjusted outside, and during which thousands of the wayward, through his direct personal influence, were turned to paths of rectitude, now stands Capt. Fredericks in good stead.

"For, south of the Tehachepi, where every other man and woman knows him personally as a friend or a neighbor, will come a tremendous plurality. This is a vote of confidence and a vote to promote a public officer who has served the people faithfully to the highest office in the State.

"And when that wave of votes from the eight southern counties strikes the Tehachepi it will meet another wave from the north, from the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys and coast counties, to make the great total of 60,000 plurality for the whole State of California.

"In the country, Fredericks, who, in the midst of his busy life has been an enthusiastic and successful farmer on a small scale, and who understands thoroughly the needs of the farmer, will receive practically three votes out of every five cast, without regard to parties.

"In brief, I believe that this campaign will prove one of the most memorable in the history of the Republican party in this State."

MAJORITY OF THOUSANDS FORECAST FOR FREDERICKS.

Republican Leaders and Chairman of State Central Committee Declare Los Angeles Candidate will be Elected by Largest Majority Governor Ever Received in California—Johnson's Methods Condemned.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—Republican leaders are absolutely confident of the election of Capt. John D. Fredericks. Francis V. Keesling, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, who opposed Fredericks for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, and who since the primary election has worked night and day for the success of his party's standard-bearer, today issued the following statement:

"We will carry practically every county in the State, and Capt. Fredericks's majority will be the largest ever given a candidate for Governor in California. The campaign just closing has been a hard one, but the result has never been in doubt since the result of the primaries. The Republicans carried every county in the State then, and everything points to a repetition of that performance next Tuesday.

"This is a Republican year in California, as well as throughout the nation. Desperate measures have been taken by both the Progressive and Democratic parties to stem the Republican tide, but their efforts have been wasted. One evidence of this is seen in the final registration figures by which Republicans are shown to outnumber the combined registration of those two parties by many thousands. It only remains to see how much Capt. Fredericks's plurality will be."

CONSENSUS OF OPINION.

The election of John D. Fredericks as Governor of California by a majority of from 75,000 to 80,000 was the consensus of opinion of members of the Republican State Central Executive Committee from all sections of the State, who met here today.

Reports showing that from 30 to 50 per cent. of the Democrats will vote for Capt. Fredericks on Tuesday were made by committeemen from several counties. Particularly encouraging was a statement made by Dr. M. E. Nielsen of Sacramento, to the effect that the Governor's strength in Sacramento county has been decreasing at a rapid rate in the past ten days and that, owing to large numbers of Democrats who favor Fredericks, the Republican candidate for Governor has a splendid chance to carry Sacramento by a good majority.

Reports from Placer, Nevada, El Dorado and Amador counties were to the effect that Capt. Fredericks would carry them by a good margin.

RALSTON'S OPINION.

"Fredericks gains strength daily throughout California," declared W. C. Ralston, a member of the Executive Committee of the State Central Committee, "while Gov. Johnson is constantly losing ground. That Johnson is not at all satisfied with conditions is shown by the fact that every member of the State Railroad Commission, together with the commission's attorney, who are paid by the people of the State, are campaigning for the Governor. These men are paid high salaries by the people, and yet they are traveling around the State on passes and engaging in a political campaign.

"I consider the methods followed by Gov. Johnson of using State officials for campaign purposes the most disgraceful episode of his administration. His private secretary, Al McCabe, is managing his campaign from San Francisco, a condition for which no other Governor would ever have dared to stand responsible. In fact, the things done by Johnson in the name of reform are some of the most disgraceful performances in the history of California politics."

RUSSO-JAPANESE TREATY AIMED AT UNITED STATES.

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Oct. 31.—The following remarkable article has been received from a correspondent in Petrograd, who is close to occupants of high places. It never could have passed the cable censor:

PETROGRAD, Oct. 15, 1914.—Ever since the beginning of the present year active negotiations have been going on between the Russian and the Japanese governments in view of a commercial treaty and also of a defensive alliance.

These negotiations resulted in a Russo-Japanese treaty signed in May that provided that, in case of a conflict arising between Japan and the United States, a portion of the Russian fleet was to be sent to San Francisco in order to block that harbor; also that Russia was to forward, by all means at her disposal, any pretensions which Japan might raise in regard to the treatment of her subjects by the United States, and, should a war between the two countries occur, Russia was to lend her help to Japan not only against America, but also in regard to other powers who might not feel inclined to admit the conditions which the former country would offer to the United States, in view of settling permanently their present differences.

His eminent standing as a civil engineer, together with his wide and hard experience in the army, gave him a grasp of the tremendous undertaking that few men possessed. The maintenance of an army of men, sixty miles from a railroad in the High Sierras, during the early days of aqueduct construction, was accomplished largely under his keen direction, when to many it seemed impossible of accomplishment.

Adna Romanza Chaffee was born in Orwell, O., April 14, 1842. He was educated in the public schools of Ohio. In July, 1861, he enlisted as a private in Troop K, Sixth Cavalry, and was promoted to sergeant and first sergeant of the troop. He won his commission, May 13, 1863, when he became second lieutenant, rising to the grade of first lieutenant February 22, 1865, and captain, October 12, 1867. His subsequent promotions were to major of the Ninth Cavalry, July 7, 1888; lieutenant-colonel Third Cavalry, June 1, 1897; brigadier-general U. S. Volunteers, May 4, 1898; major-general, July 8, 1898. He was honorably discharged April 13, 1899, with the rank of brigadier-general, U.S.V. July 19, 1900, he was raised on the rank of major-general of volunteers. Meantime, May 8, 1899, he was made colonel of the Eighth U. S. Cavalry, became a major-general of the army February 4, 1901, and lieutenant-general, January 9, 1904.

He served in the Spanish-American War as commander of the Third Brigade, Second Infantry, Fifth Army Corps; was commander of the China relief expedition in 1900; commander of the Division of the Philippines in 1901; commander of the Department of the East, 1902, and was retired at his own request, February 1, 1906, after more than forty years of service.

ERUPTIONS ON LITTLE GIRL'S HEAD

Scalp Dry Like Powder. Scaled Over. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. No Signs of Trouble Since.

Granite Falls, Wash.—"At the age of two years there came a scale on my little girl's head. Her scalp was very dry like powder which roughed in the hair and mixed with the scales. Eruptions would appear and at times they would itch. They would bleed when I combed her hair. It seemed to scale over from one combing to the next.

"I commenced to treat her as soon as I saw the least sign of the eruption. I tried ——— ——— Solution at first and after washed with ——— Soap but she got no relief. Then I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, lathering her head, then washing and applying the Cuticura Ointment every morning. In two weeks she was well and there have been no signs of the trouble since." (Signed) Mrs. C. F. Johnston, Apr. 14, 1914.

UNSIGHTLY PIMPLES ON FACE

R. F. D. No. 1, Box 11C, Harvey, Ill.—"About two years ago pimples and blackheads broke out on my face. They were red and inflamed and burned terribly so that I sometimes would scratch them. They were very unsightly. I lost much sleep. I used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and the burning stopped. In two months I was well." (Signed) George Madderom, May 5, 1914.

A Message to Big Business.

Big business needs Big men. I know that ten thousand dollar a year men are scarce. I also know that fifty thousand dollar a year men are scarcer, and I would say that the two hundred thousand dollar a year man is one man in a million men. I have a two hundred thousand dollar a year man, one who has actually earned for three years in succession in the real estate business, the above sum, his brains, energy and enthusiasm being his chief assets in accomplishing the same. He is a Big man who developed a town in Oregon from two hundred to twelve thousand in a few years. He is only open for Big things—for connections with Big men. If you have a Big work, and are a Big man, it will be my pleasure to put you in touch with my good friend, the man who made Medford, Oregon. I know that some one in Los Angeles needs him, and I am anxious that he should locate here, as we have been friends for years. I am placing this "ad" unsolicited and unknown to him. If you are a Big, responsible man, with a Big, responsible business, and think you have something John could do for you, present it to me and I will look into it on his behalf.

Accidents.

HALLOWEEN HAS A TRAGIC SIDE.

THREE INJURED AS RESULT OF HOBGOBLIN PRANKS.

Little Girl Seriously Burned When Set Afire by Jack-o'-lantern—Auto Strikes Masked Boy and Spectator Watching Costumes of Passers-by. Male Attire Maids' Downfall.

While thousands of little children dressed as goblins, ghosts and other spooky things made sport in every section of the city, Halloween was dark and dreary in two little cottages. From one, a pretty little girl of 7 years was snatched by the flame from the candle of a Jack o' lantern and carried away in a dying condition, her back and limbs burned and blackened. From the other, the only son, a lad of 10 years, while playing with other lads was struck down by an automobile, and, crying out with pain, was rushed to the Receiving Hospital.

Little Marie Doyle, living at No. 1027 Hawley street, was the first of the children to be taken to the hospital. Bobbing for apples floating in a tub in the rear of the home of J. J. Norton of No. 1015 Hawley street, little Marie swept her white dress through the flame of a Jack o' lantern and fled screaming with her clothing ablaze.

Before her parents were able to reach her she was a mass of flames, and was probably fatally injured, according to the surgeons who treated her at the Receiving Hospital.

The girl was removed from the police hospital to the Pacific Hospital. At a late hour last night her doctor declared that little could be done to save her life.

With his face masked, and wearing a white sheet about his body, Howard McAllister, No. 527 West First street, failed to see an approaching automobile while playing with friends near First and Fremont streets, and was struck by the fender of the machine, which was driven by W. H. Clark of No. 134 South Occidental boulevard. The lad was rushed to the Receiving Hospital suffering from a fracture of the left leg and serious lacerations about the face and body.

According to Mr. Clark and the police who investigated the accident, Howard was so intent on securing a hiding place from which he and his playmates could spring out on pedestrians, to scare them with their weird clothing, that he failed to see the approaching automobile. The lad was removed to the Angelus Hospital.

While watching the persons passing him dressed in curious costumes, C. C. McIntosh of No. 830 Dos Robles, Alhambra, was struck and painfully injured by an automobile owned and driven by H. G. Schroeder of No. 2819 Griffith avenue. The accident occurred near Third street and Central avenue. Mr. McIntosh was taken to the Receiving Hospital and treated for bruises and lacerations of the face and body. According to Dr. Roome of the hospital, Mr. McIntosh may have received other injuries.

All the fun of Halloween night was brought to an end for Clara Shubin of No. 157 North Clarence street and Susan Pivarvaross of No. 106 South Utah street, both 16 years of age, when a big policeman discovered the girls walking the streets dressed in men's clothing. The girls, after receiving a lecture from Detectives King and Oaks, were taken to their homes in a police automobile.

While the nurses and doctors at the Receiving Hospital were busy with Halloween victims, the police throughout the city were also busy attempting to protect fences and small buildings. In the residence districts, all the beats were doubled, and officers were given instructions to warn all small boys to confine their efforts to lawful pastimes and to leave other people's property alone. Up to a late hour no arrests had been made on this score.

During the night four alarms of fire were sent in by children, who thought it was a good joke to see the fire department turn out. Although a search was made for the offending boys, none was discovered. The alarms, which rang in at about the same time, came from Twenty-seventh and Hooper, Sacramento and Mateo streets, and Duane and Alessandro streets and North Main and Alameda streets.

In answering the last alarm, Oscar Ormond, a horseman on Truck No. 2, at the Second-and-Hill-streets station, was thrown from the truck. He suffered lacerations of the head and was treated at the Receiving Hospital.

[POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT]

For State Surveyor-General, Write in the name of Joseph Clark.

"There's a reason.' He is now Manager of THE CALIFORNIA STATE LAND INFORMATION BUREAU, Commissioner of Deeds, Searcher of State Records, 1511 K street, Sacramento, California. "He believes in helping the Belgians, but is more anxious to help us first, who are in California. Many hundreds of thousands of acres of State land is now being withheld from us that may be given away or get into the hands of monopolists. Be sure to write in the name of "Joseph Clark," who will help us get now what is ours." First write in his name on your sample ticket at home, take it with you, and write his name in on the official ballot in the booth as follows:

For Surveyor General,
JOSEPH CLARK.

There is a blank on the ticket for that purpose. Under the present law it is all right to also stamp (X) by the written-in name.

He received many thousands votes at the Primary. "Other candidates are not helping us. Clark is now helping and will continue to help us get land." New Blue Booklet about State land Free on request.

Faces As Fair As A Summer's Day

Are Possible If Stuart's Calcium Wafers Are Used for a Short Time After Each Meal.

Many people have been heard to say that they used creams and lotions for years without effect, yet after five or six days of Stuart's Calcium Wafers their complexions were perfectly clear.

"I Got Rid of Blackheads in a Jiffy by Using Stuart's Calcium Wafers."

It's easy to understand why. Creams and lotions only get at the surface, while Stuart's Calcium Wafers go right into the blood and instead of a sluggish deposit in the skin the impurities that cause skin diseases are destroyed in the perspiration that is exhaled through the pores in the form of invisible vapor. You'll never have a good complexion without pure blood, but you positively will have a fine, beautiful complexion if you use Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

They contain no poisonous drug of any kind, are perfectly harmless and can be taken with absolute freedom, and they work almost like magic. Calcium Sulphide, their principal ingredient, is the greatest blood-cleanser known to science.

No matter how bad your skin may be, Stuart's Calcium Wafers will quickly work wonders with it. It's good-by to blackheads, pimples, acne, boils, rash, eczema and a dirty "filled-up" complexion. You can get a box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers at any drug store at 50 cents a box, and you will be positively delighted with their wonderful effect. A small sample package mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

"You Can't Buy Me a Drink" is the Legend Borne on the Discs Devised by a Banker.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 31.—"You can't buy me a drink," will be the words of caution on a button to be worn by members of an anti-treating club that W. E. Gerber, the wealthiest banker in this county, is planning to form. Gerber says many business men have promised to join the club. He believes the treating habit to be the big evil of liquor.

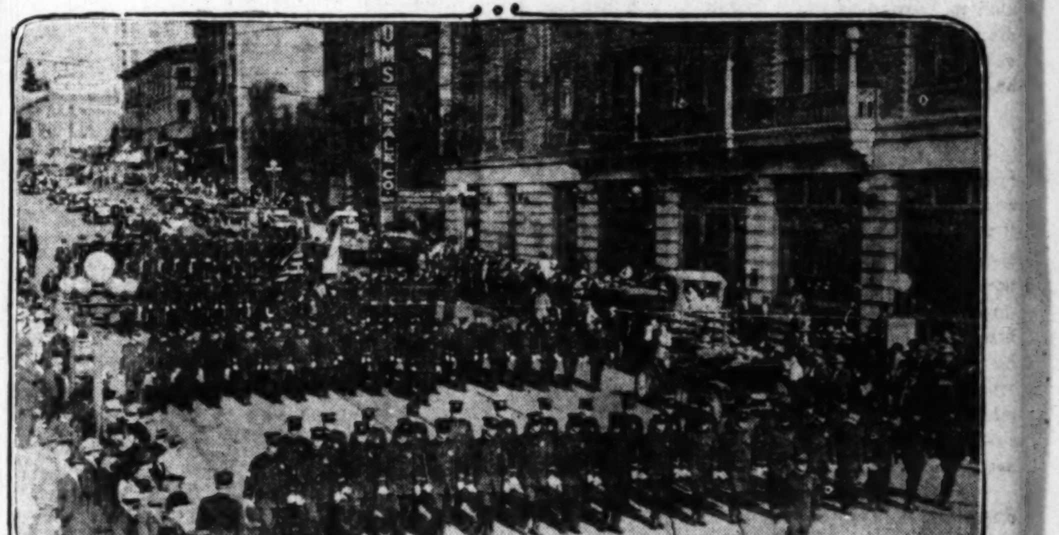
INSPECTION OF POLICE FORCE.

City Makes a Holiday of the Semi-annual Event.

Mayor and Other Officials in Reviewing Stand.

Fine Appearance of the Men Evokes Applause.

The semi-annual inspection of the police department was held in Exposition Park yesterday afternoon, about one-half the force taking part. Preceding the formal affair at the park there was a street parade which attracted much attention, being viewed by thousands of persons massed along both sides of Broadway. The parade was led by the motorcycle squad of twenty-four men, followed by the mounted squad, in charge of Chief Sebastian. The splendid police department band of thirty-five pieces marched at the head of the four battalions of patrolmen each in command of a captain. It was their first appearance for the season after discarding their summer brown uniforms, and they looked natty in their new dark blue sack uniforms and caps.



Main body of Los Angeles police force marching down Broadway

On way to Exposition Park for drill and inspection. The photograph was made as the men passed the Times Building.

Mayor Rose and Police Commissioners Morgan and Owen occupied the first automobile, followed by the City Council and the Civil Service Commission. Fifty other machines followed with officials of the police and other departments of the city government.

LARGE AUDIENCE.

At the park the grand stand was well filled with about 2000 spectators, the officials occupying the center to review the evolutions. Among the spectators were Gov. Johnson and F. C. Roberts, candidate for Congress. Also W. J. Peterson, Chief of Police of Oakland; Chiefs F. F. Compton of Riverside, George Herald, Glendale, and E. E. Randall, Santa Monica.

To entertain the large crowd while the photographers and a moving picture concern were occupying the attention of the police force, Hubert Kettle, motorcycle racer, gave an exhibition, during which he made a mile in 45s.

There was also a race between a small racing car and Motorcycle Officers Gilpin and Finn, who overhauled the racer in front of the grand stand. This was followed by races between several members of the motorcycle squad.

The evolutions in the field immediately in front of the grand stand were performed with so much skill that they evoked repeated outbursts of applause, and no body of trained soldiers ever made a handsomer appearance or marched with more precision. Commendations were heard on all sides for Patrolman Brown, the drill master, and Chief Sebastian was smothered with compliments.

The fine band, which has been organized but about six weeks, made its first appearance under Drum-Major Sergeant Hartmyer, and it too, was the recipient of many compliments, for it plays like a veteran organization.

HOW IT GROWS.

The police department at present consists of one chief, assistant chief, captain of detectives, three captains of police, seven lieutenants, forty-three patrol sergeants, twenty-six detectives and 430 patrolmen. There are also eight policewomen and matrons, secretary to the chief, department accountant, seven stenographers and other police employees sufficient to make a grand total of 575.

In 1901 the entire force consisted of 100 patrolmen and thirteen officers and detectives. In 1907 the entire pay roll contained 236 names.

Chief Sebastian showed pardonable pride in his force yesterday, but said the city needs 200 more patrolmen, ten more detectives, ten more motorcycle men, ten motorcycle speed officers, and a flashlight signal system for the entire city.

"PRINCE" PAUL SHUFFLES OFF.

AND TO THINK THAT HE WAS THE HERO OF A NOVELIST.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Oct. 31.—In furnished rooms at No. 25 West Fifty-first street, which he hired two weeks ago, "Prince" Paul de Clairmont, who was supposed to be the hero of Elinor Glyn's novel, "Three Weeks," was found dead in bed today.

A quantity of cyanide of potassium was said to have been found in the "Prince's" room.

The widow, whose name was given as Mrs. Margaret de Clairmont, refused to give any particulars, and said that she did not want anything printed about the death, which, she asserted, was due to natural causes.

RANCH SOLD ON TEHACHEPI.

[LOCAL CORESPONDENCE.]

TEHACHEPI, Oct. 31.—F. W. Cain and associates of Los Angeles today consummated the purchase of the 3500-acre Blackburn ranch in the Tehachepi Valley for a consideration said to have been $50,000.

This is one of the few large tracts left in the Tehachepi Valley and it is understood that the new owners are planning extensive improvements in the way of developing and conserving the surface water, of which there is an abundant supply, and in getting the available portion of the ranch in shape for planting to apples and Bartlett pears.

GOBLINS JUMP AT ROCKEFELLER.

OIL MAGNATE IS GUEST OF HONOR AT HALLOWEEN PARTY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

TARRYTOWN (N. Y.) Oct. 31.—John D. Rockefeller was the guest of honor at a Halloween party given last night by the Rev. Mr. Nelson, his pastor, who lives on his estate. Seventy-five young people from Pocantico Hills were present and just before Mr. Rockefeller came down in his auto, the house was darkened and goblins and witches jumped at the oil king as he stepped from the car. He enjoyed the scene and laughed heartily at the antics of the young folks. Inside they played all kinds of games, from ducking for apples to finding the ring in flour.

It was not said whether Mr. Rockefeller took part in the games or not, as much secrecy was maintained about his visit, but one girl admitted that Mr. Rockefeller was the leader of all the pranks. He told the young folks stories of when he was a boy and how he played jokes on the neighbors. Some of Mr. Rockefeller's escapades were most interesting.

Ground is Turned at San Francisco for the Norwegian Building in the Exposition Group.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—With the shovel Amundsen, the explorer, carried on his voyage through the northwest passage, ground was turned today for the Norwegian National pavilion at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. The commissioner from Norway, J. H. Hansen, received a deed to the site, and a message was read from the Norwegian Minister at Washington.

Stone Confesses He Killed Wife and Four Children.

Motive, His Absurd Desire to Elope with a "Lucille."

Order for His Arrest is Made by St. Louis Police.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 31.—Scott Stone, a United States army recruit at Jefferson Barracks, near here, who was arrested yesterday afternoon at the request of the State's Attorney of Champaign, Ill., this afternoon made a written confession that he had murdered his wife and four children near Tolono, Ill., on September 28.

He killed them, according to his confession, by dynamiting his home. He himself fled from the house after he had lighted the fuse that set off the explosive. Fire followed the explosion.

In the ruins of the house the bodies of Mrs. Stone and two children were found, but the bodies of the other two children never were recovered. Evidently they had been burned.

The motive of the crime, according to the confession, was that Stone might go away with another woman—a woman in Champaign whose name he gave as Lucille. Her last name, he said, he could not remember. An order for the arrest of the woman was made by telegraph from St. Louis today. It was said that she was planning to leave Champaign.

According to the confession, Stone, on the afternoon of September 27, took his wife and four children, all small, buggy riding. They returned home at 7:30 p.m. and went to bed at 8 o'clock, all sleeping in the same room. The three older children slept at the foot of Stone's bed and the youngest child with the mother. Detailing the crime, Stone said:

"I slept until 10 o'clock, when I felt my wild, roving nature overcoming me. Between 1 and 2 o'clock I got out of bed and went to the barn, where I had hidden ten sticks of dynamite in the wheat bin. I had bought the dynamite at William Redhead's place, a mile and a half northwest of Tolono, and I bought the percussion caps at Doyle's hardware store in Champaign.

"I put the dynamite on a table in the center of the kitchen and ran eighteen feet of fuse from it to the back door. I then went outdoors and lit the fuse. I went to the front gate and leaned over the mail box. A few minutes later I heard the explosion and began calling for help.

"Our nearest neighbors, Charles Nicholls and his son, John, came running up. They had not heard the explosion, but they had seen the light of the fire. They helped me carry out some of my furniture."

Stone said that he had been married seven years.

Stone's arrest here yesterday was due to the story of a woman who told the State's Attorney of Champaign county that Stone wanted her to go West with him and pose as his wife. According to the story, Stone met this woman the day before the fire and told her the next day he would be in jail or she would see his name in the papers. The day after the fire Stone met the woman, according to the story, and said he had obtained the kind of divorce he wanted.

RESCUES A GIRL, GIVEN AN AUTO.

MISS EVELYN ARTHUR OF LOS ANGELES REMEMBERS MAN WHO SAVED HER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BOSTON, Oct. 31.—The officers of the Dorchester Police Station believe that "Jim" Waldron is one of the most fortunate men on earth. "Jim" is the proud possessor of an automobile and it is a regular car. No, he did not buy it; it was a gift. Two years ago, while spending his vacation at North Falmouth Beach, he heard a cry for help. He saw a young woman struggling to keep above the water. "Jim" rushed to her rescue and brought her safely to the shore. They gave their right names to each other and Waldron thought the incident ended, as the girl lived in Los Angeles.

Today Capt. "Mike" Crowley was keeping "Jim," who is the station clerk, busy writing in the record book. A brand new automobile drove up to the door. The chauffeur entered the station and asked for Mr. Waldron. "Jim" was presented and the chauffeur pointed to the machine and said to "Jim," "It's yours."

In the back seat of the machine was a card bearing the best wishes of Miss Evelyn Arthur of Los Angeles. She was the woman "Jim" rescued.

THIS IS ANOTHER CHECKERBOARD.

The Line of Battle and the Big Fighters in the Republican Army.

BY HARRY CARR.

THIS time it is politicians, not Uhlans, who are cavorting around the checkerboard. In a certain sense, however, the battle of next Tuesday in California is as full of peril for this State as the battle of the Yser Canal is for the allies. As between the perils of Zeppelins and the perils of reformers bent on the manufacture of freak laws, gimme the Zeps.

Also, when we come right down to facts, this checkerboard is not so far removed from the real checkerboard of war. In these days of international credits and far-flung commerce, no country in the world can be ruined without every other country in the world being affected. There is not one business or professional man, worker or housewife to whom the grind of this terrific war in Europe has not been brought home in some direct, personal or financial way. And the worst is yet to come. They need strong men in Europe as never before. And because strong men are in the saddle in Europe, we need to choose the best men to conduct our affairs for the next few years—tough years they are likely to be.

'TWILL BE WELL.

It will be well for California if the long, lean frame of John D. Fredericks ballasts the Governor's chair during those years. Fredericks is a good man to have at the wheel when a storm is coming. If personalities may be pardoned, I have seen him pretty thoroughly tested. I remember when he first opened a little office for the practice of law. . I remember when he was first appointed to be the junior deputy in the District Attorney's office; when he tried his first criminal case as a prosecutor. I have seen him at the head of his troop of National Guard cavalry; heard him read the riot act to rebellious blind piggers; seen him personally raiding joints to which other politicians turned a blind eye. With one thing and another, I think I have had a pretty good chance to look him over. And he has stood up under the test.

There is a strong touch of the Abe Lincoln about "Cap" Fredericks. He has the same painful way of looking at the truth with all the varnish peeled off. He has the same direct method of dealing in essentials. When he was commander of the cavalry troop he never seemed to be bawling out orders or dashing around like the rest of them; but everything seemed to be "getting done." I never heard him roast a soldier, but I never have seen better discipline in any militia organization. One thing his troop was famous for: They always made the best time on the march, yet their horses were always the freshest at the end of the journey. I don't know that this is going to help him particularly in driving the wagon of state, but Fredericks is a natural born horseman. No doubt the same qualities that give him a quiet control of animals also give him control of other things. It is a fact that many of the biggest men in American public affairs have been good horsemen.

ON THE SQUARE.

The first case that Fredericks tried in the Superior Court created a small sensation. I forget what it was about. But I remember that two other lawyers had torn up the atmosphere with their eloquence. They had yelped and shouted mixed metaphors and bad English after the fashion of criminal lawyers, for some hours. The jury was getting blue in the face. Then it came Fredericks's turn to release his impassioned eloquence. He let out the kinks from his long frame and advanced upon the jury. Placing one good-sized foot on the rail in front of the jury box, he remarked slowly, "Well, gentlemen, I want you to decide this case just the way it seems right to you. If you believe that fellow, you'd better acquit him; but the way it seemed to me was that his story was pretty thin, pretty thin. I'm afraid that fellow's a liar." Whereupon he sat down and the liar was convicted and sent to State's prison. They believed Fredericks because he believed himself and was on the square.

After he got to be District Attorney, I remember there were some tough dives scattered over the county—run by men with a powerful political pull. They had been tenderly neglected. They considered themselves immune. Without any hot air, Fredericks personally took a big automobile around to the place, loaded up the contraband goods, arrested the proprietor, who was squawking about the political vengeance he meant to have, stuck him on the front seat en route for jail, and that was the end of a traffic that had been a blot on this county for years.

At the same time, he was so square with them and so impartial that men of that character grew to have an unbounded respect for the administration. One instance that most old-timers will remember was the coursing. Running the rabbits had been railed against and yawped against. Reform societies had engaged expensive attorneys; demurrers and injunctions were piled up a foot deep in the courtroom. Finally, it came into Fredericks's jurisdiction. Fredericks carefully looked up the law and found that rabbit coursing was against the law. Then he sent out the simple word, "Don't run the dogs today; you've got to close the park."

The dog men were all loaded to fight the case through all the courts, but the note sounded so businesslike that they sent back the message, "All right, Cap; we've closed." And that was the end of it.

Fredericks is not only a good administrator, but an excellent lawyer. His victory in the famous oil case saved California more than his salary will amount to as Governor if he holds the job twenty terms.

THE OILED ROADS FIGHT.

The Supervisors in the various counties of California had been pouring crude oil over the county roads for a long time when along came an inventor and showed them that he had patented that process a long time before. It looked as though every county in the State was due to be stuck for an enormous sum as royalties, and that good roads in California would become a mighty expensive luxury.

In this crisis, the District Attorney disappeared. And there were those who thought it a mighty poor time for a District Attorney to be taking a vacation. In about a month "Cap" turned up, looking thinner than ever and a little tired and worn and saddle sore. But he had a pocketful of depositions that knocked the oiled roads case into a cocked hat.

He had remembered seeing oiled roads in Pennsylvania when he was a boy and had gone back to talk it over with the neighbors. He secured from the Pennsylvania farmers evidence to show beyond any doubt that they were using oil to make good roads years before this inventor ever heard of crude oil.

Other District Attorneys of the State gave one concerted yell of joy when they heard of it and threw themselves on the Cap's neck, for he saved their bacon, too. This has become one of the great cases in the history of California law.

THE MOST MERCIFUL.

As a criminal prosecutor, there is one thing I can say for Fredericks that should stand to his credit and honor as long as he lives, and as long as his children live after him. He has been the most merciful official who has ever held that office in my time. There are very few prosecutors who will give the defendant as good a deal as he does his own end of it. I know of several men, now respectable citizens, who could have been sent to State's prison had Fredericks been "after a record." Through his gentleness of heart and his good common sense, they have been sent home to their families with a fresh, clean page in front of them and are making good.

A Governor filled with bitter prejudices is a blind pilot. I think I can feel sure in saying that the captain will go into office with no enemies and no special friends. One of Fredericks's God-given gifts is that he can look an issue in the eye on its merits alone, without remembering what happened yesterday.

When he goes to Sacramento—and he will go—he will leave behind him a good lieutenant in the chair. Joe Ford has been his assistant and main stand-by in the District Attorney's office for many years. Ford is really an exceptional lawyer. I don't know why he should want to be District Attorney; he cauld make five times the money in private practice. But as long as he is willing to take the job, it is the county's good luck and is not to the interest of any of us to wake him from his dream.

It would be in the nature of a small disaster to have the District Attorney's office turned over to a new man who knows nothing of its affairs. Owing to the enormous size of this county and the immense volume of legal work to be done, the District Attorney's office has become a big bureau. It would take six months for a new man to find out what on earth it was all about.

AND WHY FORD?

As to the philosophy of electing Ford, any business man will do well to place himself in this position of mind: you probably have a lawyer who is familiar with all your affairs. If you are a business man of big affairs, you probably have litigation. Does it appeal to you as being good sense to suddenly throw all this business into the hands of another lawyer, probably less efficient, and have your business suffer incalculable dangers while he is trying to find out what it is about? As electors of this county, we are all in the position of big business men with an attorney to choose. Considering we now have one better than any other we could possibly get, it seems mighty poor stuff to change.

AND JUDGE JAMES.

There is one other candidate whose career I have followed from the very beginning. When I was a cub reporter, Judge James was a new deputy in the District Attorney's office. James, in those days, was a quiet, self-contained, retiring, studious young lawyer. Of all the deputies we reporters had seen, and have seen since, streaming through the District Attorney's office, James had the finest legal mind. You could see in a minute he was headed for the bench. He had the judicial temperament.

He had quiet courage, too. That was a long time ago and the head of the District Attorney's office was a weak sister who ducked every public responsibility. We reporters learned that the only place we could go for an honest, unequivocal, fearless statement of any public question was to the office of the junior deputy.

Up to that time, most of the business transacted by the District Attorney's office was criminal in character. About the time James came into the office the county began to have a great deal of purely civil litigation—contracts for the Board of Supervisors—legal opinions as to the validity of county ordinances—civil law suits. James was assigned as civil deputy in the office and the whole burden of this work was thrown upon his young shoulders.

The work that he did for the county at that period of his career still stands for lawyers to admire. He proved himself to be a lawyer of the highest ability and the highest character. During the years that followed James became township justice, Superior judge and justice of the Court of Appeals. To each one of these positions he brought honor and ability of the highest order.

Every lawyer is a booster for him to be elected to the Supreme bench. When he was in the Superior Court the attorneys always tried to maneuver so their cases would be tried in his court. His clear, fine scholarly mind was coupled with a grave, courteous patience that made him an ideal trial judge. If he is elected to the Supreme Court the State will benefit by a legal intelligence that is only developed at long intervals. During all the years I have been writing of the doings of lawyers and judges, I have never seen a finer lawyer, a more capable judge or a more honorable man than James.

JOBBERS FILE CLAIMS.

Lieutenant Peterson, of Chicago, a Victim of the Grip.

Left Him so Weak Had to Quit.

Restored to Health by Peruna. Took His Place Once More.

For at least thirty years Peruna has had a great reputation as a remedy for grip. It is especially valuable in cases where the acute stage of grip has passed. The patient remains weak and despondent. No appetite. Cannot work. Everything goes wrong. It is remarkable what Peruna will do in such cases. Lieut. Peterson, of Chicago, is an example. Mr. C. O. Peterson, Lieut. Engine Co. 56, No. 3327 N. Hamilton Ave., Chicago, Ills., writes:

"Last year I had a severe attack of la grippe, which left me very weak, so that I was unable to perform my duties. Several of my friends advised me to build up on Peruna, and I found it by far the finest tonic and invigorator I had ever used. In two weeks I was strong and well, and if ever I am exposed to unusual hardship incident with my duties at fires, I take a dose or two of Peruna and find that it keeps me in good health."

No Trouble to Keep Skin Free From Hairs

(The Modern Beauty)

There is no need for any woman to countenance superfluous hairs, because with a paste made by mixing some powdered delatone with water it is easy to get rid of them. The paste is applied for two or three minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed. This treatment will rid the skin of hair without leaving a blemish, but care should be taken to see that you get real delatone.

Culver City is 1 YEAR OLD!

Culver City Oct. 1913

Culver City celebrated its first birthday anniversary yesterday. In just one year's time an undeveloped piece of acreage—a barley field—located at the intersection of the Venice Short Line, Del Rey and Redondo and Santa Monica Air Lines—has been transformed into a real, live, attractive, substantial business and residence community. Real estate authorities agree that the progress of Culver City is the most important suburban real estate development of 1914.

Culver City is a community with a reason back of it. Its commanding, strategic location between Los Angeles and Venice simply compelled its establishment and rapid growth.

Wouldn't you be glad if you had purchased property in Hollywood, Pasadena or Long Beach ten years ago? The history of these cities, will be, IS BEING repeated at Culver City.

Go down and see the model white business district, the attractive residences (nearly 60 homes completed and under construction,) the practical industrial district, the beautiful public park, miles of macadamized streets, electrolier lighting system, the handsome new P. E. depot, the new bank, theater and many other business buildings.

Your Culver City opportunity has not passed yet—there is still time to take advantage of it. Go down and study the delightful home advantages, learn the WHY of Culver City.

GIRLS! GIRLS! YOU MUST TRY THIS! DOUBLES BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR.

For 25 cents you can make your hair lustrous, fluffy and abundant.

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt, or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

BULLET FOR BLOW.

Slaps Lad Who Insulted Passing Women and Goes to Hospital with Hole in Shoulder.

John Brant, 55 years of age, of No. 914 San Pedro street, landed in the Receiving Hospital early last night with a bullet hole in his left shoulder as the result of an altercation in a saloon at Ninth and San Pedro streets.

According to the story told the police by Mr. Brant, he was shot by a youth whose face he had slapped a short while before. Mr. Brant told the detectives the young man was insulting passing women and that when he spoke to him the offender became enraged and drew a revolver and fired. The police were unable to locate the man.

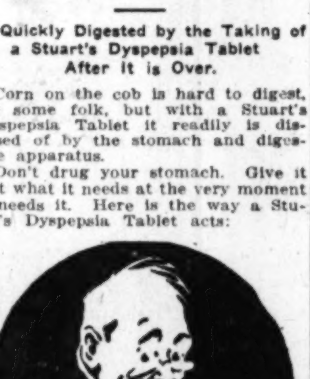
A Hard Meal to Digest

Is Quickly Digested by the Taking of a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet After It is Over.

Corn on the cob is hard to digest, for some folk, but with a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet it readily is disposed of by the stomach and digestive apparatus.

Don't drug your stomach. Give it just what it needs at the very moment it needs it. Here is the way a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet acts:



He—"I can eat corn now and feel O. K. A Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet will quickly digest it."

One takes a tablet just after the meal is completed. It is taken into the mouth like food; is mixed with the saliva; swallowed moist and partially dissolved. It goes into the stomach and is there mixed with the stomach juices which are composed of acids and alkalies.

A Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet reinforces these juices. It quickly digests the elements which such weakened juices cannot digest.

After a while the stomach passes the meal partially digested to the intestines, where it goes through another stage of digestion. Here, as in the stomach, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets strengthen the juices of digestion and complete the work of giving the body the benefit of the meal.

There is nothing harmful in these tablets. Only natural ingredients which the body lacks are supplied. In a short time the blood and digestive juices are given the power they lack. Man can digest any food without injury and the entire health of the body is increased. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold wherever drugs are sold, price 50 cents a box. Anyone wishing a free trial of these tablets please address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., and a small sample package will be mailed free.

ABLE SUPPORT TO FREDERICKS.

Campaign Backed by Men of Note in Community.

Johnson Says "Old Gang" is Behind Candidate.

Here's List of "Gang" that Hiram Excoriates.

"The 'old gang,'" says Gov. Johnson in his speeches, "is back of Capt. Fredericks. The 'old gang' is everything that is despicable in politics—is responsible for the corruption in politics of the past."

There is a "gang" behind Capt. Fredericks. It is composed of old men and young. The roster has been subjected to the innuendo and the open attack of Hiram W. Johnson during all the bitterness of vindictiveness of his campaign.

The men behind Capt. Fredericks, the men who by their moral and financial support of the Republican party in 1914 have made possible his prosecution of a vigorous and apparently successful campaign, are as follows:

Louis M. Cole, Simon Levi Company; R. I. Rogers, vice-president National Bank of California; C. L. Bisbee, Bisbee-Fishburn Company; Frank A. Keith, mining engineer; W. L. Valentine, president Fullerton Oil Company; W. W. Mines, W. W. Mines Company; H. H. Rose, Mayor; H. M. Haldeman, vice-president W. R. Boynton Company; Dan Murphy, La Brea Canyon Oil Company; J. E. Fishburn, president National Bank of California; Joseph Sartori, president Security Trust and Savings Bank; W. M. Garland, real estate; W. H. Harrison, former postmaster; W. H. Booth, vice-president Security National Bank; F. M. Kelsey, insurance; Oscar C. Mueller, attorney; W. B. Corwin, proprietor Hotel Alvarado; Walter F. Haas, attorney; Dr. Walter Lindley, California Hospital; W. F. Ball, cigar dealer; Philip L. Wilson, president Traders' Bank; H. J. Goudge, attorney; W. P. Jeffries, president W. P. Jeffries Company; M. A. Newmark, M. A. Newmark & Co.; Charles Wier, wholesale lumber; W. Rhodes Hervey, vice-president Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank; Donald Barker, attorney; Judge V. E. Shaw, Justice Appellate Court; E. P. Wood, wholesale lumber; C. F. Binkley, 1104 Trust and Savings building; Milo M. Potter, Potter Hotel, Santa Barbara; W. E. Bush, Pierce auto dealer; Motley H. Flint, vice-president Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank; Dr. Guy Cochran, physician; J. Tod Cook, Spohn-Cook Company; A. A. Vickrey, real estate; S. F. VOTE
"NO" ON 3

Miss Corison,

One of the bevy of girl workers in the orange and lemon packing-houses of Pomona Valley who yesterday came from the Citrus Belt to ask city voters to save agriculture by voting "No" on Proposition No. 3, which would cause wholesale reductions of these girls' earnings.

FOURTEEN CENTS' WHARFAGE.

First Fee Collected on San Diego's Half-Million-Dollar Pier—Channels Remain Undredged.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 31.—Fourteen-cents' wharfage toll was collected today by Harbor Master A. J. Foster from the fourteen-ton steamer Golden West. These few pennies represent the first and only collection of real money made by the city of San Diego for the use of the new $450,000 concrete public dock since it was completed last February, with ample harbor space and an expensive public dock.

Shipping at San Diego has been prevented from using the half-million-dollar wharf built by the city, because the city has thus far failed to dredge the channels from the port entry to the expensive municipal pier. For nearly a year the public pier has been used merely for amusement purposes. The reason the Golden West was able to use the municipal dock was because she was in light cargo and has a small draught.

At the present rate of 14 cents wharfage fees per year, it is amusing San Diego mathematicians to work out the problem of how many years it will be before the first year's interest on the municipal $450,000 investment could be paid from the wharfage receipts.

LAYS PEN AWAY TO ENJOY REST.

VETERAN OFFICIAL OF SANTA FE BUILT SOUTHERN LINES OF RAILROAD.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

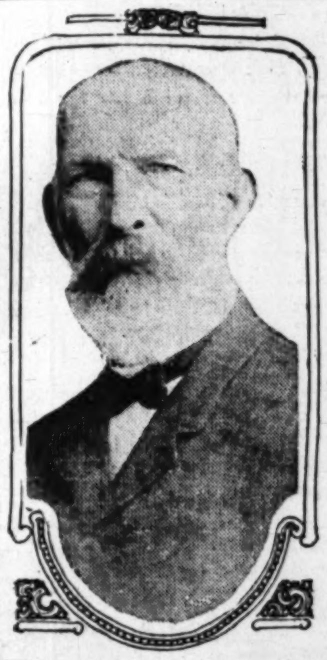
SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 31.—After thirty-five years of service, both as chief engineer and as manager of the fuel department and oil properties of the Santa Fe Coast lines, Fred T. Perris, aged 77, oldest official on the entire system in point of service, will retire on pension November 1, and the offices maintained in this city for the past twelve years under his management will be closed.

Lovingly known as the "father of the Santa Fe," Mr. Perris began service on the old California Southern in 1879, and as its chief engineer ran the lines and supervised the construction of most of the lines in Southern California now used by the Santa Fe.

From Barstow across the arid desert to San Bernardino, through the Cajon Pass the line was constructed to Los Angeles via Pasadena and with but few changes it is the same route used by the railroad. He also constructed the line to San Diego and to Orange. He was at the throttle of the engine which pulled the first passenger train into the city from Los Angeles on September 13, 1883.

Mr. Perris was born in Gloucester, England, January 21, 1837, and came to San Bernardino in 1853. From 1874 to 1879 he was County Surveyor. He entered the Santa Fe, or rather the Calilfornia Southern, service on December 1, 1879, taking charge of the first engineering party. He has been manager of the fuel department for the past twelve years.

The pioneer has been identified with the upbuilding of this city and valley. He was appointed a member of the city's first Water Commission and succeeded in constructing a system that is a model of efficiency in municipal control of water facilities.



Fred T. Perris,
Oldest official on the Santa Fe, who retires today.

GIRLS OPPOSE VICIOUS LAW.

Daughters of Farmers Plead for City Votes.

To Defeat Universal Eight-hour Measure.

Issue Really in Hands of the Crowded Centers.

The citrus belt appealed to the city yesterday to vote "No" on Proposition No. 3 (the Socialist universal eight-hour penalty,) in the 1914 model way, when a bevy of pretty costumed packing-house girls invaded Los Angeles, campaigning for votes.

The girls whirled through the city, tossing broadcast handbills pleading their cause, visited many big centers of interest, and after an arduous day returned to their Pomona Valley homes.

Their main arguments against the Socialists' drastic, universal law, forbidding any work over eight hours, are:

The universal eight-hour law would cut down our earnings 25 per cent.

It would reduce the wages of every worker paid by the piece or by the hour.

Farmers in all branches would be ruined by its impossible penal restrictions.

Payment for overtime work more than eight hours would be cut off everywhere, costing tens of thousands part of their incomes.

California agriculture could not compete against that of other States and nations in the markets, if this State alone suffers such an unprecedented handicap.

GIRLS WELL RECEIVED.

The girls were attired in gay costumes of bright orange, set off by wide shoulder sashes of green, and they traveled from Pomona aboard a big decorated touring car which bore on either side a banner reading: "We, the Citrus Fruit Packers, Oppose the Universal Eight-hour Law. Vote for us!"

As they went through the city, visiting business houses, the City Hall, Federal Building, Courthouse and newspaper establishments, they distributed unique little "reminder slips," shaped in the form of a large figure "3," and bearing the brief motto: "Vote 'No' on 3—It Injures All and Helps None." Many of these cards were pinned on the breasts of voters, both men and women, and thousands of them were distributed by the girls.

The girls, all of whom are employed and paid by the box, according to efficiency and production, in the citrus packing-houses of Pomona Valley, are: Misses Katherine Corison, Ella Hardin, Ruby Bowman, Gladys Troy, Margaret Koenig and Mabel Tuttle. On the auto-campaigning trip from Pomona to Los Angeles they made stops to register their protest against No. 3 at all the larger communities, and at Pasadena they were received by the City Commissioners at the City Hall. They were chaperoned on the unique tour by Mrs. W. L. Hamlin, wife of the prominent Pomona attorney, who is director of the Pomona Valley Anti-Eight-Hour-Law Association.

VISIT MAYOR—CROWDS CHEER.

Broadway crowds cheered when, at noon, the "farmers' daughters" called upon Mayor Rose in his office, by appointment, and presented a formal memorial declaring the need of agriculture being saved by city votes. At the Mayor's office the young women were introduced by Pitt P. Hand, manager of the Farmers' and Fruit Growers' Federation, who in a brief speech outlined their mission. Miss Gladys Troy then stepped forward and presented the appeal to the Mayor, the other girls laying siege to the throng of voters who looked on and pinned "Vote 'No' on 3" badges on the lapels of Secretary George Reuter and others.

"We, workers engaged in packing citrus fruit, and daughters of farmers, directly dependent for our living upon successful agriculture in California, appeal to you to save the farming interests by inducing city voters to stamp 'no' on No. 3," began the formal petition handed to Mayor Rose. The document then recites in detail the reasons why the law is a menace to the prosperity of every person in California, stating that the fruit workers by their own petition induced the Legislature to exempt them from the women's eight-hour law, that they are satisfied with conditions, that the proposed law would cut down the earnings of themselves and thousands of others, and finally that "We can personally testify to the absolute truth of the objection of all the fruit growers that the proposed law would be impracticable and would mean the ruin of the California farmer."

The girl campaigners spent the entire day, which was replete with exciting episodes, in campaigning among city voters. In the evening they returned to Pomona, where they will work among their neighbors and at the polling places on election day.

ISSUE DEPENDS ON CITIES.

The "farmers' fight" against the universal restriction of labor will be carried on to the last minute, with volunteer workers at the precincts throughout Southern California, but the deciding factors will be the vote in the congested centers of the big cities, according to the statement yesterday of Manager Pitt Hand of the Farmers' Federation.

"California's prosperity is at stake in No. 3," said Mr. Hand last evening, "and the very life of the farmer. The importance of defeating this proposed legal experiment is so monumental to the agriculturist that every one of the 15,000 members will continue the fight until the last vote is cast on Tuesday. The city voter will decide the issue, which may be close, and the dangerous part of it is that many city voters are unacquainted with the risks and necessities of ranching. The defeat of the sweeping blow at industry means much to the city dweller, however, for he would suffer heavily from the Socialist law, and therefore we are hoping for at least an even break in the cities' vote."

Several hundred volunteer workers will be at the polls in Los Angeles impressing voters with the importance of voting "no" on No. 3, working under direction of Field Secretary Graves of the Farmers' and Fruit Growers' Federation, whose headquarters at 740 Consolidated Realty building will be open throughout Sunday, Monday and election day.

MONKEY-HOUSE FOR ALTADENA.

Pasadenan Moves His Pets to Welcome Home.

Hotel Green's Owners Coming from the East.

Auto-busses Kept Off Orange Grove Avenue.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PASADENA, Nov. 1.—That he might escape the ordinance which regulates the keeping of monkeys within the city limits of Pasadena, E. W. Knowlton of No. 395 South Grand avenue is going to build a handsome home for his pets on the grounds of his new residence at Mariposa avenue and Maiden Lane, Altadena.

The monkeys are at present in Los Angeles, posing for motion pictures which a friend of Knowlton's is having made. Just as soon as the new home is ready, however, they will be brought to Altadena.

Before the passing of the "monkey" ordinance, Knowlton kept his twenty pets at his Grand-avenue home, where they kept his neighbors up in arms and their master in hot water continually. His friends say that Knowlton bought the Altadena place for no other reason than to escape the Pasadena ordinance, as this district is just outside the city limits.

Mr. Charles Fuller, the biggest chimpanzee of them all, is a "well-known figure about town," though he is not popular despite his sociable disposition. His advances are always repulsed. He has a habit of making cross-country trips around Pasadena, calling on many residents at these times. His feelings were seldom ruffled when his host or hostess became terrorized by his calls.

When he paid the Annandale Country Club a visit last winter the golfers simply vanished in their eagerness to disappear. Calling later at an Eagle Rock home he was actually accused of attempting to kidnap the baby, and was said to have so frightened its mother that she brought suit for damages against Knowlton, but nothing has as yet come of the suit. Returning to town Mr. Fuller stopped at one residence and, carefully selecting the best hat on the rack, stopped at another place, where he completed his attire by appropriating a gold-headed cane.

GREENS ARE COMING.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Green and their charming bud of a daughter, Miss Gleatina Green, arrived here yesterday from Woodbury, N. J., and are domiciled at the Green Hotel. According to the new arrivals, Col. and Mrs. G. G. Green, who are now in New York, will arrive in Pasadena in time for the formal opening of the Hotel Green.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Neustadt and small daughter, Betty, who are with Col. and Mrs. Green, will be here next month, and with the coming of the Greens the whole family will be together, as Mr. and Mrs. William E. Grattan are already at the hotel.

With the coming of Miss Gleatina, who reigned as a charming little social queen last year, the signal for an early season of gaiety is sounded.

CITY BRIEFS.

With the dawn of today the double-decked automobile busses, which ply between Los Angeles and Pasadena, will enter the Crown City on Fair Oaks avenue instead of Orange Grove avenue. The ordinance passed recently to keep these busses off "Quality Ridge" went into effect night before last, but because somebody got their dates mixed, it was overlooked until yesterday and the busses allowed to operate on the most beautiful boulevard in the world for just one more day.

The lifting of a light Japanese jardiniere of ferns for his wife yesterday nearly cost James H. Stuart of No. 319 East Green street his life. As he lifted the ferns, through a peculiar twist of his back, his windpipe was closed and he nearly choked to death. He is a big and husky plumber, employed by Munger & Munger. After resting in hot packs all day, he is much better, though he still suffers from the strain of his back.

BOYS TO SEW ON BUTTONS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PASADENA, Oct. 31.—The boys of the senior English class of the Pasadena High School are going to have their scope of work enlarged by employing themselves in a branch of usefulness not learned from books—they are going to sew buttons on the garments which the girls of the class are going to fashion for the Red Cross. While part of the class is reciting lessons in English, the other part will be making warm clothing for the suffering soldiers of Europe.

All dressed in fetching green and gold dresses, six pretty girls from Pomona paid Pasadena a call yesterday and through the City Commission urged the voters of the Crown City to vote against the eight-hour amendment at next Tuesday's election. They are from one of the big citrus-packing houses of Pomona and are expert packers. They made the trip in a gaily decked automobile. These young women, who are trying to defeat the eight-hour law are Ella Hardin, Ruby Bowman, Gladys Troy, Catherine Corlson, Marguerite Koenig and Mabel Tuttle.

To prevent a nervous break-down, Dr. John Willis Baer, president of Occidental, has gone with his wife for a sojourn in Canada, where he hopes to recuperate. Not once in four years of arduous work has Dr. Baer had a vacation and the northern trip was taken this time because the college board of trustees urged it.

QUEEN PROCLAIMED.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ONTARIO, Oct. 31.—Miss Aileen Hatcher, daughter of Dr. James H. Hatcher, was proclaimed Queen of the Ontario Carnival to be celebrated here November 3 to 7, following the final count of the ballots cast, in what was probably the most warmly-contested campaign in the history of the city. Miss Minnie Hermes of Upland took second place and Miss Eva Bealy of Ontario third. Queen Aileen will be crowned by Mayor Frank C. Crowell Tuesday evening.

NEW CAR SCHEDULE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ALHAMBRA, Oct. 31.—Tomorrow morning thirteen new cars will be added to the present Pacific Electric service between this city and Los Angeles. The new schedule is due to the activity of the local Chamber of Commerce, whose transportation committee was promised about a month ago that the extra service would be given by October 15. Due to the fact that the arrangement had first to be approved by the State Railroad Commission the delay of two weeks was unavoidable. The new service will include a twenty-minute schedule during the day, instead of a thirty-five-minute schedule as formerly, and half-hour service at night, instead of an hour as under the old scheme, and there will be fifty cars daily to and from Los Angeles. This new arrangement accounts for the enthusiasm with which Talloween is being celebrated in the city tonight.

Should Study Spanish.

[Chicago Journal:] From the Rio Grande to Cape Horn the western world speaks two Iberian languages, Spanish and Portuguese. These are so closely allied that a man proficient in one finds the other little more than a dialect. Together they give commercial access to 8,000,000 square miles of the most productive territory on earth, territory with which the United States already has a vast and increasing trade, and in which this country can become commercially supreme—if it tries.

It would seem that the present is a good time for Americans to study Spanish.

FIGHTS WILD FLAMES THAT LEAP FIREBREAK.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA BARBARA, Oct. 31.—With his clothing in flames in numerous places, Fred Parker dashed from a circle of flames on the Jesus Mario rancho near Lompoc and was saved from death by the narrowest margin. The fire had swept a path six miles in length and at least two and a half miles wide, the ranchmen for miles around fighting the flames day and night with desperation.

Today word was received that the big fire is out. It has swept thousands of acres, consuming thousands of cords of wood, an apiaryv and many miles of fencing, besides invaluable pasturage. Parker was trying to save the apiary when cornered by two circles of flames from opposite directions. Several times in his mad race he fell into the flames, overcome. Only strength of will power saved him finally.

Ernest Hammond, who received word of the controlling of the fire today, states that the sky is black for miles with hawks, buzzards and crows, attracted by the immense destruction of rabbits and other wild creatures. Foxes and coyotes contest with each other and with the ravenous birds over the heaps of carcasses.

The fire had been set out by the ranch superintendent, after a firebreak seventy-five feet wide had been plowed. The kames leaped the break easily. Hammond says they rolled in fiery billows up steep ascents to the mesa lands and leaped distances of 250 feet across gulches. It is said to have been the worst fire in the history of all that section.

WATCH THE TIMES ELECTION RETURNS.

The Times will bulletin election returns Tuesday night, November 3d, in front of the New Times Building, First and Broadway, and The Times Branch Office, 619 South Spring street.

Up-to-the-minute returns will be received from every precinct in the city, county and State and flashed upon large screens opposite the New Times Building, First and Broadway, and The Times Branch Office, 619 South Spring Street.

For the benefit of those citizens who cannot come downtown election night, the drift of the vote for Governor will be announced by blasts from The Times siren whistle, the code for which will be published in Tuesday's Times.

The Times also will give returns by telephone to all who call.

British Tanker Puts to Sea on Mystery Mission.

Oldest Resident Recalls Loss of Money Chest.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, Oct. 31.—Government officers in charge of the torpedo flotilla are expressing dissatisfaction with conditions in San Pedro and they threaten quietly to remove the war vessels to Long Beach unless there is a prompt change in the administration of harbor affairs.

According to a navy lieutenant who refused to allow the use of his name, the Los Angeles Harbor authorities have been niggardly in dealing with United States vessels and have charged for the water that was taken from the docks in the inner harbor.

This morning the submarine K-3 came up to the Southern Pacific dock and filled her tanks, attracting hundreds of visitors, who otherwise would have gone to Long Beach to witness the maneuvers of the war craft.

No one in authority was able to give a reasonable explanation why Los Angeles should charge more than other ports on the Pacific and as the navy officials are forbidden to openly express an opinion, it is probable that the flotilla will move away within a few days without any reason being given for the action.

Every day while the war vessels are at anchor in the outer harbor there are hundreds of spectators and the local merchants who have profited are indignant that the small amount of fresh water needed by the war ships should be charged for at so much a gallon.

MYSTERIOUS TANKER.

At midnight tonight the tanker De Sabla will leave port with a cargo of oil, but the officers of the vessel refuse to indicate their destination. There are ample reasons for believing that the De Sabla will meet a war vessel at sea with fuel oil, although much secrecy is being maintained regarding the affair.

After discharging her cargo on the high seas it is probable that the De Sabla will return immediately to Rio Janeiro for another cargo and representatives of the government are showing considerable interest in the ship's clearing papers, despite the fact that no information of value would be indicated in the ship's formal clearances.

That the crew of the De Sabla fear capture by a German warship was indicated today when members of the staff offered premiums to those who would consent to make the trip.

BELATED CARGOES.

Following a quiet week in shipping circles due in a large part to the reported interruption of the canal service on account of alleged landslides, several general-cargo steamers are due to arrive from the Atlantic Coast within the next few days.

Among the ships due to arrive tomorrow from New York is the Texan, with a general cargo for the American-Hawaiian line, and the Santa Cecelia, with a cargo for W. R. Grace & Co.

The Georgian of the Hawaiian line, which arrived from the north yesterday, will finish loading at midnight tonight and will proceed to New York via the canal. Most of the cargo taken on board of the Georgian consists of canned fish and other Southern California products.

MONEY CARGO.

The mystery regarding the finding of money in the bottom of the bay was partially solved today when some of the older water men recalled the fact that a chest containing $50,000 in small coins was lost overboard nearly thirty years ago and it is thought that the tides have carried the money in the wake of the dredger suckers, which are now casting them in the refuse dumps.

More than $15 was recovered today, mostly by small boys, who flocked in scores to East San Pedro to take advantage of the treasure trove brought up from the deep.

Father Alberto Dominguez, a former missionary in Lower California, stated today that the iron crosses were originally brought from England to decorate the graves of old-time Californians, but the consignment was never delivered and he thinks that the rusted pieces probably belonged to the shipment that was lost so long ago that the local records fail to make mention of the fact.

DREDGER AT WORK.

After remaining idle for nearly ten days, the United States dredger San Pedro returned to a point opposite the Globe Mills and is preparing to resume operations tonight.

According to old harbor prognosticators this is taken to mean that the channel gradually is filling with muck and that the dredger will be obliged to work all winter if the storms are to be prevented from interfering with navigation.

It was thought at first that by opening the channel opposite the fish docks that the tides would keep sand from filling, but those apparently best able to judge the situation intimate that the engineers have been disappointed in this respect.

How long it will be necessary to keep the dredgers at work is problematical but it is evident to sea-faring men that the mouth of the Wilmington channel and the main channel opposite San Pedro is giving unexpected trouble at this time.

MILES OF STREETS TO HAVE PAVEMENT

POMONA ADOPTS HALF AND HALF PLAN OF IMPROVEMENT.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

POMONA, Oct. 31.—The City Council has taken steps to adopt plans and specifications which provide for the paving, under private contract system, of over nine miles of streets here, which matter has been delayed because of technical obstacles.

The method followed in Claremont will be adopted. The municipality will advertise for bids for its half of the work, the property owners being responsible for the other half. But bids will only be accepted by the city with the explicit understanding that the contracting firm securing the job shall sign up the property owners for the other half of the work at the same figures at which the work will be done for the municipality.

By following this method it is believed that many objectionable features will be eliminated and there will be avoided the possibility of having two different contractors working on the same street and with different specifications. It is believed that the method will be worked out entirely successfully.

Newly-elected officers of the Pomona Chamber of Commerce are Fred J. Smith, formerly vice-president, now president; A. T. Richardson and J. F. Lobingier, vice-presidents; W. H. Schureman, acting secretary; E. C. Bichowsky, treasurer. Fred Lewis was elected to the board of directors to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Edward E. Gillen.

Steps are to be taken at once to formulate a new plan for the financing of the operations of the chamber, which has been doing such good work for the welfare of the community and which work must be continued if Pomona is to receive her share of advertising among the cities of Southern California which are bidding for the favor of the eastern visitor and new residents.

ANGRY CITIZENS THREATEN LYNCHING OF GUNMAN AT OXNARD.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

OXNARD, Oct. 31.—William Garcia of El Rio was hurried to the County Jail at Ventura today to save him from angry citizens after he had shot and seriously wounded three of Oxnard's police force of five men. The wounded men are Chief of Police W. E. Kelly, shot through the left side; Charles D. Freeman, patrolman, shot in the chest, and William Wilks, patrolman, shot in the neck. Kelly probably will recover, but the other two officers are in a critical condition.

Garcia approached Policeman Wilks late last night and demanded the return of $10 bail he had posted to insure his appearance in Police Court today to answer a minor charge. Wilks told Garcia he would have to see the police judge. Garcia then opened fire.

Kelly and Freeman rushed to the aid of Wilks, but fell before the bullets of Garcia, who afterward was overpowered by deputy sheriffs. The man was placed in jail here, but angry citizens began to gather. There were threats of lynching, and the prisoner was hurried over to Ventura.

STOMACH SOUR? STOP INDIGESTION, GAS, HEARTBURN--PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN.

Don't suffer! Regulate your upset stomach in five minutes.

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. and Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down: Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered, you get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear. Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. Diapepsin is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Put an end to stomach trouble by getting a large 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

THOUSANDS DANCE AT ELKS' BENEFIT.

GAY AFFAIR TO HELP ALONG BIG REUNION PROVES LIVELY PARTY.

One of the largest and liveliest Halloween parties in Los Angeles last evening was the Elks' benefit unmasked ball at Shrine Auditorium. The receipts will be contributed to the fund for entertaining the Grand Lodge reunion in this city in 1915.

The more than 2000 gay dancers were in full swing to the rollicking spirit of Halloween by 9 p.m. The costumes of the dancers included both the weird and the beautiful. The tribe of ghosts and hobgoblins were represented and many of the dancers were in rich costume.

A little bit of the spirit of Spanish-California was mixed with the atmosphere of Halloween. One of the more interesting features of the programme was an old Spanish flower dance in which twelve daughters of prominent Elks participated. The young women were in costume.

The flower girl feature added many dollars to the fund. The young women danced with only those young men who graciously presented them with flowers and the flowers cost money. The numerous booths made it easy for the young men to buy the posies.

The flower girls included: Misses Lilly Adams, Lucile McNamee, Tillie Granas, Marguerite Odenheimer, Genevieve McNamee, Etta Adams, Cathleen Shores, Melba Mesling and Irma Cooley.

Other interesting features of the evening were a balloon and ribbon dance and a drill by the Elks' uniformed drill corps of sixty members.

Motley H. Flint is director-general of the Executive Committee, 1915 Grand Lodge Reunion. The other officers are L. L. Broodeen, chairman; M. F. Shannon, vice-chairman, and E. B. Love, secretary. Following are the other members of the committee: John G. Mott, Frank Bryson, Louis M. Cole, Leo V. Youngworth, John F. Howard, Harry Harrington, Marco H. Hellman, Burt Roberts, George Goldsmith, E. H. Crippen, Edward A. Regan, Thomas J. Darmody, Edward A. Maier, Byron Erkenbrecher, M. A. Hamburger, B. H. Dyas, Robert Marsh, William M. Beamish, C. G. Pyle, M. F. Shannon, L. L. Broodeen, Ralph Hagan, A. F. Frankenstein, Guy B. Barham, John Luckenbach and Gus Melsing.

"EUROPE AT WAR"

By Judge Henry Neil

is printed on fine calendered book paper, page size 6 x 9 inches, handsomely bound in cloth, stamped in gold, with over 400 pages, 16 colored maps, reproductions of the famous cartoons of the times and crowded with wonderful photographic illustrations showing the navies, army maneuvers, rulers, generals, air fleets and scenes from the great battles, many taken as late as three weeks ago. This book is strictly up-to-date. Events which took place only a few weeks ago are given their proper place. You will find many intensely interesting photographs recently smuggled out of the war ridden countries. The best of the world's greatest war cartoons are reproduced in this book. We give the latest official photographs of all the leaders of this war. The maps are clear and accurate. It is a whole library of European history boiled down to the important decisions — the most interesting anecdotes — the most thrilling events. This book in any store could not be bought for less than $2.50. Read our special offer below.

400 Pages Contents 125 Illustrations

Over 125 unusual photos, famous portraits, war paintings and scenes, 16 colored maps of accurate scale, great cartoons —most of them full page size.

NOTICE OF NEUTRALITY!!

"Europe At War" is absolutely neutral. It favors no one side. It draws no conclusions as to the present conflict. It is written from the view point of an unbiased historian. It gives the facts—the history of previous events and shows their relation to what has happened within the last thirty days. Get it for yourself — get it for your boys — get it for the whole family. This great war affects everybody and this great book gives you the rock-bottom facts. After you read it you will appreciate why we under the Stars and Stripes Can and Will Remain Neutral.

The Author--A Well Known Historian

Judge Henry Neil, the author of "Europe At War," has written many other important histories. He is a wonderful writer and, being a great student, is familiar with scores of thrilling personal anecdotes of the great generals and leaders of this and former wars. He gives these startling and personal experience in connection with the story of the nations, which he brings down to events happening as late as a few weeks ago. For instance: Did you know that Emperor William never uses a knife when he dines? Did you know that in 1870, the beginning of the Franco-Prussian War, General Von Moltke, sick in bed, mobilized the German army by messenger? Did you know Lord Kitchener was born in Ireland and why he has been selected to be the head of the War Department? These merely suggest some of the intensely interesting anecdotes in this fascinating story.

Look over the table of contents given on this page. That gives you some idea of the scope of this book. It is a book that you cannot afford to get along without at the present time. Everyone reads the war news and talks about it. By reading this book you will inform yourself and get innumerable points clear in your mind as to why all of Europe is seething with war. You will understand the final settlements of peace.

THE CITY AND ENVIRONS.

EVENTS BRIEFLY TOLD.

Aiding Red Cross.

The American Express Company has instructed all of its local offices to issue express money orders free of charge to any person who may wish to send a contribution in that form to the American Red Cross for relief work in Europe.

Extends Time.

An order extending the effective date to June 30, 1915, of an order handed down last year in which the Pacific Electric was authorized to issue $6,839,000 of refunding mortgage 50-year gold bonds has been issued by the State Railroad Commission.

Cincinnati Visitors.

Word that 125 members of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce will visit this city in a special train in July, 1915, was received yesterday by the Chamber of Commerce. The special will stop at all principal cities on the way to the two California expositions.

Eastern Star Bazaar.

Palestine Chapter, O.E.S., will hold a bazaar in the Masonic Temple, Pico and Figueroa streets, on next Saturday. A chicken supper will be served at 6 o'clock, and there will be a number of booths for the sale of all kinds of useful and fancy articles. Mrs. A. R. McKenzie is in charge of the arrangements.

Ball for Old Folks' Home.

A ball will be given this evening at Shrine Auditorium by the Hebrew Sheltering Home Society. The society now occupies small quarters on Temple street and the proceeds of the ball are to go to a fund for building a suitable home for old people, of whom there are now said to be 600 in the city. Everything in connection with the ball and entertainment has been donated so that the entire receipts will be devoted to the building fund.

One of Original Five.

James McGraw, who was walking a police beat when there were but five policemen in the city, was presented with a gold badge yesterday in recognition of the efficiency and faithfulness of his long service. He was retired on a pension, after having served the department for twenty years. The presentation was made by the Chief of Police in the administration office at the Central Police Station. In his years of service Policeman McGraw was never reprimanded, and his record in the department, that is now closed, is without a stain.

Class and Entertainments.

Beginning tomorrow evening, Mrs. C. E. Richards will conduct a class in mission study at the Y.W.C.A. on "The Child in Our Midst." All young women are invited to the class which will meet at 6 o'clock p.m. On Tuesday morning, at 11:15, Dr. William MacCormack will deliver a lecture on the subject, "How do I Make the Bible Practical in My Daily Life?" Tomorrow evening Mrs. L. C. Mackinson will tell the story of Cadman's Indian songs and sing some of them, as well as some negro melodies. There will also be dialect readings by A. C. Devendorf. Each member may bring one guest.

WRITERS OF TWO NATIONS DINE.

JAPANESE PHYSICIAN HOST AT BANQUET IN HONOR OF EMPEROR'S BIRTHDAY.

Japanese and American newspaper men of Los Angeles were the guests last night of Dr. Kiyomitsu Ikeuchi, vice-president of the Japanese Association of Southern California, at a dinner given at his home, No. 1245 West Jefferson street, in honor of the Japanese Emperor's birthday. Dr. Ikeuchi, who is one of the most prominent members of the local Japanese colony, arranged the affair to promote the acquaintance of his guests and to afford an opportunity for the exchange of ideas.

The menu was elaborate, including many of the choicest Japanese national dishes, such as suimono, chiwanmushi, sunomono, umani, takenoko, matsutake, yakitori, kuchitori, renkon, kamaboko, narazuke, kinton and yokan.

Dr. and Mrs. Ikeuchi, Y. Hirai, president of the Japanese Association of Southern California; S. Fujiokia, secretary; M. Nakamira, attorney, and the following newspaper men made up the party: T. Fujii, S. Hirose, D. Yuasa, H. Tanaka, H. C. Eller, W. M. Barr, M. M. Rathbun, R. T. Van Ettisch and C. F. Hayden.

In welcoming his guests Dr. Ikeuchi said he had been planning such a dinner for some time and was gratified to meet representatives of all the newspapers. He declared that sympathy and understanding will accomplish more in binding nations together in friendliness than material interests.

America and Japan, he said, one on each side of the Pacific, have many common interests and the friendship between them should become closer every year. "Japan glories in American prosperity," he said, "and is proud to claim America's friendship."

BURGLAR BREAKS PLATE WINDOW.

SEIZES JEWELRY FROM UNDER WATCHMAN'S NOSE AND MAKES ESCAPE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CLAREMONT, Oct. 31.—That a burglar could break a plate glass front and steal several hundred dollars worth of jewelry when there was an armed watchman within a few feet of him supposed to be protecting the building, and that he could escape, is the talk of the town.

The jewelry store of Ross Day was burglarized some two years ago and in order to afford some protection he had taken the precaution to have a watchman sleep in the store at nights, armed with revolver and flashlight. The watchman was a young man named Hamilton, a freshman in college here.

At 2 o'clock in the morning he was startled from his sleep by a terrific crash at the front plate glass window. Hastily springing from his bed and throwing his flashlight into the window he saw a man with an ax deliberately smash the window and then grab all the jewelry in sight and escape, and with gun in hand he was too dazed to fire. He has an excellent description of the man.

The Sheriff is searching the country for the burglar. The City Marshal of Claremont, as he hurried to the scene, claims he saw a man running by the church as he came down, but he failed to investigate.

The business men of Claremont have been called together by the Board of Trade to take some action which will afford better protection at night.

FATALLY HURT BY FALL.

Inspector Loses Footing While on Top of Street Car—Fractures Skull on Pavement.

Crashing to the pavement from the top of a street car standing near the Santa Fe station early last night, J. M. Pickering of the Westport Hotel, No. 800½ East Seventh street, an inspector for the Los Angeles Street Railway Company, fractured his skull and right knee. The injured man was taken to the Receiving Hospital and later removed to the Crocker-street Hospital.

According to the crew of the car, Mr. Pickering mounted to the top of the vehicle to inspect a faulty trolley. Just as the inspector reached the trolley he is said to have lost his footing and plunged to the pavement. His injuries last night were declared by the surgeons at the Receiving Hospital to be fatal.

THE WEATHER.
[Official Report.]

LOCAL OFFICE, U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, Los Angeles, Oct. 31.—[Reported by Ford A. Carpenter, Local Forecaster.] At 5 o'clock a.m. the barometer registered 30.01; at 5 p.m., 30.00. Thermometer for the corresponding hours showed 60 deg. and 65 deg. Relative humidity, 5 a.m., 86 per cent.; 5 p.m., 80 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., northeast, velocity 5 miles; 5 p.m., south, velocity 6 miles. Highest temperature, 73 deg.; lowest, 57 deg. Rainfall for season, .32 of an inch. Barometer reduced to sea level.

WEATHER CONDITIONS. — The eastern field of high barometer continues stationary and the western area moved rapidly inland, so that it is fair and moderately cool over the greater part of the United States. The only precipitation of consequence fell in Washington, Oregon and Arizona. Freezing temperatures are limited to the highlands of Nevada and the mountain districts of Colorado. The effect of the southeasterly drift of the Pacific high area is notable in that it lowered the daylight temperatures in Los Angeles and vicinity without affecting the night or early morning values. It is expected, however, that it will be somewhat cooler during the ensuing fair-weather period of the next thirty-six hours.

LOCAL FORECAST.

For Los Angeles and vicinity: Fair Sunday; somewhat cooler; northwesterly winds.

For California south of the Tehachepi: Fair Sunday.

STATE FORECAST.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—Forecast:

San Francisco and vicinity: Unsettled Sunday; probably rain in the afternoon; light southerly wind.

Sacramento Valley: Unsettled Sunday; probably rain; light southerly wind.

Santa Clara Valley: Unsettled Sunday; probably rain in the afternoon; light southerly wind.

San Joaquin Valley: Increasing cloudiness Sunday; probably rain in the north portion; light southerly wind.

California south of the Tehachepi: Fair Sunday; light west wind.

YUMA (Ariz.) Oct. 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch from the U. S. Reclamation Service.] Gauge height Colorado River, 17.10 feet.

CHINESE NUTS FLOURISH HERE.

LITCHIE TREE MAY DEVELOP INTO NEW INDUSTRY FOR CALIFORNIA.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA BARBARA, Oct. 30.—Prof. Peter Bisset of Washington, head of the bureau of foreign plant distribution, has discovered in a private residence here a full-bearing litchie tree, more popularly known as the Chinese nut tree. The discovery he regards as of vast importance to the country at large, as this is the first instance known where the tree has matured a crop in America.

If success in growing trees from these nuts follows, it is announced that a new and immense industry will open to the Southern California fruit grower. The tree was obtained by the famed Dr. Franchesci from China. Dr. Franchesci is now employed by the Italian government introducing American horticultural methods in Italy. The Chinese nut is the meaty, peculiarly flavored nut the Chinese give away at New Year's.

PHILIPPINES HOPELESS.

Capt. H. E. Miller, for fourteen years in charge of constabulary in the northern part of Luzon, P. I., is here today, visiting friends, and makes the announcement that the Filipino will not be capable of self government for 1000 years, if then. He declares that the change in administration at Washington, bringing with it changes in the governing powers on the island, is plainly detrimental to the cause of the Filipino.

Because of the governmental changes occurring every four years Capt. Millere blieves that unrest will be a feature of the Filipino as long as the islands are held by the United States. He believes that Japan will ultimately secure possession by purchase, if not by seizure.

WASHING WON'T RID HEAD OF DANDRUFF
Dissolve It, That's Best Way.

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy, every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you want to preserve your hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for nothing destroys the hair more quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everyone notices it. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

ROBERTS AND OSBORNE, REAL REPUBLICANS, FOR CONGRESSMEN.

PRIDE AND JOY GREET FREDERICKS AT HOME.

Neighbors Grasp Hand of the Farmer Candidate—Campaign Ends.

"Hello, Cap!" Slogan of Genuine Old-fashioned Reception — Johnson Administration Flayed for Poor Business Conditions Met in State — Two Talks Monday Before Club and School.

CAPT. FREDERICKS went back home and talked it all over with his neighbors yesterday. Two thousand of them left their ranches and their orange and walnut groves to tell the farmer-candidate that they were proud of him for the impression his campaign has made upon all of California.

At Downey, not far from the Fredericks ranch at Hynes, where Capt. Fredericks has lived for twenty-five years, the neighbors gathered under the pepper trees in the center of a great arc of autos that came from that great orchard section of the county.

It was distinctly a "hello, cap." affair. Capt. Fredericks had spoken to hundreds of audiences in the campaign behind him but nowhere did he face so many people he could call by their first names.

The last day of the Fredericks campaign was a simple, neighborly, unostentatious visit among the home folks. At noon a dozen autos filled with Republicans escorted Capt. Fredericks to Glendale, where he spoke to a big crowd on a street corner. Shooting across the north end of Los Angeles after that meeting, Capt. Fredericks made a record run to Downey and arrived there just on time.

The first man to greet him was "Uncle Billy" Harris, whom he has known for a quarter of a century. It was "Uncle Billy" who added his pleading and his forceful argument to that of a group of other men when they asked Capt. Fredericks to be a candidate for the Republican nomination. That was months ago.

"Uncle Billy" had watched the campaign, as his neighbors had watched, and he glowed with satisfaction when he read of the Fredericks triumphs in the north. Yesterday he hailed the District Attorney as a conquering hero and the big audience joined in.

GENUINE, HOMELIKE.

The Downey people had staged a genuine old-fashioned reception to their neighbor. The little city was decorated with flags and bunting and pictures of the honored guest. Two miles from Downey a long line of autos waited for the candidate and escorted him to the grove of pepper trees. The cheering lasted several minutes when he appeared.

George P. Adams was winding up a red-hot speech against the Democratic policy on the tariff and in this part of California that kind of argument goes a long ways with the farmers. They know what has happened to their products.

Frank C. Roberts, Republican candidate for Congress, spoke on the fallacy of attempting to make the "dry" movement an issue in the present campaign—and he showed the puny importance of a "Progressive" in Congress.

Ex-Senator Frank P. Flint was applauded when he said: "I used to run an orange grove, but now while I still own the orange grove, I have to practice law to keep it going."

C. C. Chapman, who presided at the meeting, introduced Capt. and Mrs. Fredericks, together—and the double attraction started a spontaneous outburst of applause.

MISSION FULFILLED.

"I have lived here among you all my life," said Capt. Fredericks. "You sent me out on a mission a few months ago—to my mind and heart a mission of bringing back to California the prosperity we enjoyed a few months ago.

"There is some psychology, or will be, in the return of the Republican party to power—a psychology that will go a long way toward restoring good times. It was my love of California and Californians and their institutions that induced me to go into this campaign, and I am glad now toward the close of it to come back and tell my neighbors all about it.

"If I had been the Governor of California in the last four years and now I were looking, as Governor, into the desperate situation of poverty that exists in many places in California—

Our Port.

MOTOR BOAT PIONEERING GLOBE-GIRDLING LANE.

Danish Ship Malakka, Due Soon, is Blazing Trail for Others that will Replenish Oil Tanks Here for Homeward Voyage Through Suez Canal — Harbor Developments are Many.

A HERALD of probable empiric progress for the oil industry of California and the establisher of a new trade lane will drop anchor in this port the 12th inst. It is the East Asiatic Company's motor boat Malakka from Genoa, the first of its kind to pass through the Panama Canal, and the predecessor of others that will take oil here on the globe-girdling maritime lane the Malakka is blazing.

These are days of fecund progress for the port. Last week two additional vessels for coast to coast service, with Los Angeles as a port of call, were launched in the East. Announcement was also made yesterday that the Swedish Johnson line plans to establish direct service between Stockholm and this and other Pacific Coast ports, with five motor boats in service. The new Hill liners, Great Northern and Northern Pacific, are also to stop at this port on their long way from Cramps to Portland for service between that place and San Francisco and possibly Los Angeles and San Diego.

The Malakka is a sister ship of the Siam that made this port early in the year, but infinitely more significance attaches to the Malakka's visit than to the visit of her sister ship. In fact, the Siam's visit here was part of a test trip of the Diesel engines as propellers of large ocean-going vessels and of the possible revenue-tonnage available for carriage between Europe and the Pacific Coast.

TESTS SUCCESSFUL.

Success evidently crowned the related tests, for F. H. Little, manager of the steamship department of Parrott & Co., the representatives of the East Asiatic Company on the Pacific Coast, stated yesterday that the concern will shortly have eight motor boats in Pacific service and that thirteen of its coal-burning steamers are being changed to oil-burners.

The routing for many of these boats will be Copenhagen to Gothenburg, to Christiania, to Glasgow, to Genoa, and other Mediterranean ports, thence through the Panama Canal to Los Angeles and on north, and outbound to Kobe and Hongkong, returning home through the Suez Canal. Some of the concern's ships, however, will retrace the outbound route from Copenhagen by turning their prows homeward at Vancouver. All will call here.

Needless to say, with all these oil-burners calling here and with the addition of the three Johnson line motor boats, the market for oil should receive at least a small-sized boom.

The Malakka will bring a rich cargo to this port, something in excess of 9000 tons, including fish from Norway, wood pulp from Sweden, manufactured product from the British Isles, and olive oil, Castile soap and vermouth from Genoa.

Also a prize without price at the present time, the Malakka has ten tons of sugar-beet seed aboard from Melmo, Norway. The outbreak of the European war left only about 100 tons of beet seed in the neutral countries of Europe and led beet growers here to forecast a small planting the present year. The ten tons from Norway will alleviate the distress somewhat. All our sugar-beet seed is imported from Europe, as the seeds produced here do not run true to type.

The Malakka's schedule from Copenhagen to Los Angeles will be forty-five days. It will be followed by the motor boat Jutlandia about December 4, and by others at about the same interval. The schedule for the Johnson boats depends on the amount of tonnage offered.

WAR'S EFFECT.

In the present confusion in the European shipping trade, due to the war, the service to be offered by the Danish and Swedish lines will be especially acceptable. The Harrison line and the Cosmos line, the former British and the latter German, which made this port in ante-bellum days, are now practically out of service. Many of the Harrison ships that formerly came here are now in British transport service, while Cosmos liners are tied up at neutral ports all along the South American coast.

Another addition to the Emery fleet was launched last week, a sister ship to the Atlantic and Pacific, one of which has been here and the other of which is now on its way here. Crowell & Thurlow of Boston also launched their third steamship last week for the Pacific Coast trade. It is the Edward Pierce, built at Newport News, to carry coal to the Coast, and to take back fruit, nuts, beans and other Coast products.

The two Hill liners, Northern Pacific and Great Northern, will be the finest boats in coastwise service and also the fastest. The tentative schedule between Portland and San Francisco is two hours under the railroad time. These boats were avowedly built to secure the Hill lines their proportion of 1915 travel and many believe that they will make this port.

A significant development of the last week was the decision of the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company to carry one carload of oranges to New York under refrigeration at an early date. There is no doubt on the part of officials of the concern that the test will be successful, but they desire conclusive data to present to the citrus shippers.

WANTED—COW EXPERTS.

Texan Declares Californians Have Suffered Stock Raising to Decline Through Scattering of Efforts.

The cattle business in California is lacking in specialists in the opinion of G. A. Buhler, a cattle "king" of Victoria, Tex. He has observed that the many agricultural and horticultural opportunities of the State have taken the attention of cattle raisers away from their herds.

"Cattle men in California have been trying to raise lemons and too many other things," Mr. Buhler declared yesterday at the Angelus. "The result has been a decline in the cattle business in this State. Once it was the principal business of the Coast. While we could not expect it to remain first, it would have been best for it to have retained its identity.

"A cow is a peculiar animal. It requires special attention for the best results. In Texas there are thousands of men who devote their undivided attention to cattle and with profitable results. California could well pattern after us in this regard. Cattle are becoming scarce and the price of beef is increasing. These conditions justify men in giving special and undivided attention to cattle."

WOULD BRING SANE ADMINISTRATION, CALIFORNIA'S NEED ABOVE ALL THINGS.

IF ELECTED—and indications point strongly to his success—Capt. John D. Fredericks will bring to California an administration of saneness and soundness; and that is what the State needs above all else.

He will be the Governor—make no mistake about that. His campaign pledges—and they are not inconsistent with his public record and private life—range through broad-gauged humanity, touching the human problems that confront the Golden State and the nation.

He is and will continue to be opposed to a system that makes possible daily legislation, the overloading of the ballot, the exploitation of the freakish fancies of a minority of disturbers.

He is opposed to the juggling of men and women under the guise of civil service; to the coercion of employees over whom is held the threat of dismissal if they do not violate the law they have sworn to obey by getting out and drilling for a continuance of the job of their chief.

He stands for economy—and what candidate does not? But in standing for economy in State affairs, Capt. Fredericks points a contrast between the personal economy the taxpayer must enforce upon his life and habits by reason of depression, and the profligacy of State officers who are using the taxpayers' money to extend and perpetuate their self-seeking power.

He is unalterably opposed to the present penal system in California, and has suggested a constructive remedy.

He stands for a return of sanity in legislation; for the minimum of enacted laws to meet the growing demands of the State, and not for the passage of any and all bills that are designed for the interest of a few at the expense of the many.

He will use his power as Governor of California to put an end to legislation that tends to disturb the industrial, commercial and social unrest in this commonwealth.

He will strive for the perpetuation of the policies of the martyred and immortal Lincoln. At the helm of California's mighty ship of state he will lead the people on a triumphant march of progress—not the "Progressive" backward brand.

He is a friend of every honest man and woman in the Golden State and their protection and welfare will be his one aim. He will not work for personal aggrandizement, but will be the servant of the people.

He is a partisan. He believes that the government is founded and its stability depends upon party differences. He does not believe that partisan nomination as against non-partisan choice develops a lower grade of efficiency in public service. The record of great men developed in the past by all parties is the answer to the cry of non-partisanship.

He believes in a return of prosperity and that the return will be brought about by the restoration of confidence through the protective and reassuring principles of Republicanism.

He will use his best efforts to drive from the political life of California the elements of fakery, chicanery and crookedness under the guise of religious purity.

He has made no campaign pledges, is allied with no interest, is the candidate of the Republican party—the dominant party—and of no other man or set of men in California.

If elected he will be Governor of California through four years of honest, efficient, economical, prosperity-producing rule.

And California will be returned into the confidence of investors all over the world as a fruitful State for the investment of money and the development of unbounded natural resources.

Patriotic.

HOME OFFERED AGED FIGHTER.

Veterans Here Ask Control of Independence.

Frigate of Old Navy a Waif at Mare Island.

Not Even Dock Room Now for Her Stanch Ribs.

Societies in Southern California that have patriotism for their inspiration have become interested in the fortunes of the old United States frigate Independence that has lost her mud cradle in the Mare Island Navy Yard and has become an unwelcome relic, almost too aged and worn for even a wrecker to bid for her bones.

Out of restless courtesy to her past the officials of the navy yard permit the frigate to occupy dock space for the present, but the room is needed for more modern craft and she must not remain there long. Many of the Grand Army veterans to whom the exploits of the fighting during the Civil War are still vivid, have started a movement to have the historic old shell delivered into their keeping, that it may be preserved.

It was 100 years ago that the vessel was launched at Philadelphia, and as she swayed forth from her birth-nest a pot of tea instead of the historic magnum of champagne was cracked over her bow and the name "Independence" was bestowed.

Through the exposures of the Civil War, when naval fighting was still largely a matter of grappling hooks and hand-to-hand action, the frigate passed without damage. From a fighter in the navy she became a pensioner, in a way, and was used for a training ship for the recruits to get their sea legs and learn the incidents of ship life. But she became too crude and obsolete for even a school, and finally retreated from prominence until she became a receiving ship, as necessary and as obscure as a loft in a home.

Only the merit of her construction has preserved the Independence against dismantlement and wreckage. The builders who fashioned her put into the frame the choicest timbers, oak that approaches steel in its fiber. Recently an effort was made to drive a modern nail into one of the heavy ribs in the hold. The nail writhed and crumpled under the blows of the hammer, too weak to enter the body of the wood.

Present attention was attracted to the frigate when she lost her mud cradle where she had been contentedly dozing in a secluded cove. The constant attack of the tide unsettled the mud that had become hard and firm, the old frigate so long stilled in disuse wavered and flopped in the unaccustomed activity. She listed, the wide seams in the hull that has been long above water dipped deep, and the boat was flooded. She was sinking rapidly when the navy tugs went and pumped the water out.

Then she was towed to a dock and has been there for several weeks occupying space that is needed for the growing navy. To forestall any accident that might occur to her everything of value has been taken from the Independence, until only a scattering of metal is left in the old craft.

The officers of the navy yard have sought instructions regarding the disposition of the frigate. The veterans of the Civil War and other patriotic organizations became informed of the issue, and from Southern California letters have been sent to the Secretary of the Navy, asking that the boat be delivered into the keeping of these patriots, and by them preserved in Southern California.

Motorcycle and Its Young Rider Give "Fly Cops" Two Merry Chases and Jail Sentence Results.

Police Judge Chambers yesterday sentenced Earnest McNichols to sell his motorcycle. He thought young McNichols, 18 years old, too careless a person to own such a vehicle.

Also he sentenced him to serve at least ten days in jail, and perhaps twenty-five more, for the things he did with the motorcycle. It was a new machine.

According to the testimony of the speed cops, who trailed McNichols, the young man traveled at the rate of thirty-five miles an hour along Fifteenth and Main streets. He was stopped, notified that he was exceeding the speed laws and ordered to appear in court.

Without good grace, McNichols mounted his motorcycle and started down Main street. The speed cops trailed him. At Thirty-first and Main streets he was going forty-five miles an hour. Again he was stopped and ordered to appear in Police Court. He was charged with the same offense, committed in the same street within the same hour.

When the justice heard the details of the affair he sentenced McNichols to twenty-five days in jail or a fine of $25 for the first offense. For the second offense he sentenced him to serve ten days in jail. And finally he ordered him to dispose of his motorcycle and use street cars for one year.

Her Brain is Worth Many Thousands.

Miss Bessie Marks,

Probably the best-educated girl of her age in the world. Her entire legacy of $25,000 has been spent on teaching her a wide variety of subjects, including some which few girls take up. She is now 19; her schooling began at 4.

Learned.

HEIRESS CRAMS ENTIRE LEGACY INTO HER HEAD.

AFTER the completion of a $25,000 education which required fifteen years of "cramming," Miss Bessie Marks, considered the most versatile young woman in Seattle, has come to Southern California for mental and physical rest. She is 19 years old, but declares that mentally she feels 50.

The young woman's comprehensive mental development was conducted under the direction of Rabbi Samuel Koch, a noted scholar of the northern city. Her accomplishments include the usual mastery of the classics, history and mathematics; also domestic science; vocal and instrumental music; philosophy, political economy, agriculture and mechanics.

"My father died when I was 4 years old, leaving a will which provided that all of my part of the estate, with the exception of a few hundred dollars, should be devoted to my education," Miss Marks said yesterday at the Clark. "Father did not say how long he wished me to be engaged in the pursuit of knowledge.

"I decided that I would have it over with as soon as possible but it has taken fifteen years for my mind to absorb $25,000 worth of wisdom and I thank heaven that it's over. The will did not suggest a curriculum and so I have studied a little bit of everything. My guardian felt that part of the money could be used legitimately in traveling, since Bacon is authority for the statement that travel is an education.

"I spent several years touring Europe and the Orient always with a learned tutor at my elbow explaining everything. I wonder that my head did not pop open long ago, but this was father's idea and I tried to follow it out conscientiously."

Miss Marks says that, when she was 9 years old, she was reading Schopenhauer. Before she was 16 she had delved deep into Persian poetry and two or three kinds of philosophy. She speaks Yiddish, German, Italian and Spanish. She has written a book and composed instrumental music.

When Miss Marks was studying agriculture she learned how to milk a cow and she mentions this as one of her accomplishments. She also knows how to repair a motor car.

"I was studying Bergson's 'Creative Evolution' when the money ran out," Miss Marks continued. "I doubt if I ever finish it. I didn't mark the page even."

Adventures Many.

SHADOW FROM THE LAND OF THE MIDNIGHT SUN.

A MERE shadow of his former self, Ralph J. Austin, son of John Austin, a well-known Los Angeles liveryman, returned yesterday from a cruise of more than two years in the Arctic and as the result of many trying experiences is in a serious physical condition at the home of his parents at No. 123 East Third street. When he left San Francisco in May, 1912, the young man weighed 178 pounds and yesterday he tipped the beam at only 104 pounds.

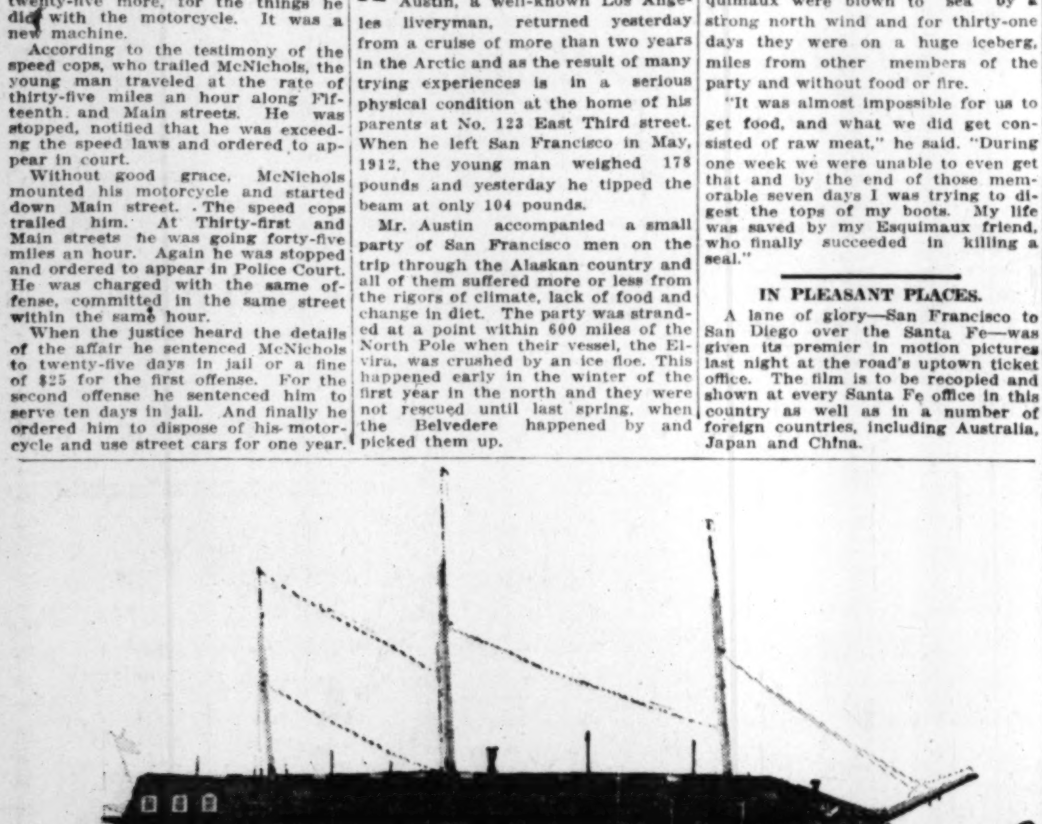
Mr. Austin accompanied a small party of San Francisco men on the trip through the Alaskan country and all of them suffered more or less from the rigors of climate, lack of food and change in diet. The party was stranded at a point within 600 miles of the North Pole when their vessel, the Elvira, was crushed by an ice floe. This happened early in the winter of the first year in the north and they were not rescued until last spring, when the Belvedere happened by and picked them up.

At one time Mr. Austin came near starving to death. He and an Esquimaux were blown to sea by a strong north wind and for thirty-one days they were on a huge iceberg, miles from other members of the party and without food or fire.

"It was almost impossible for us to get food, and what we did get consisted of raw meat," he said. "During one week we were unable to even get that and by the end of those memorable seven days I was trying to digest the tops of my boots. My life was saved by my Esquimaux friend, who finally succeeded in killing a seal."

IN PLEASANT PLACES.

A lane of glory—San Francisco to San Diego over the Santa Fe—was given its premier in motion pictures last night at the road's uptown ticket office. The film is to be recopied and shown at every Santa Fe office in this country as well as in a number of foreign countries, including Australia, Japan and China.



The U.S.S. Independence, a matter of concern to patriots,

Many of whom have written the Secretary of the Navy from Southern California asking permission to preserve her. The hundred-year-old frigate is sinking in the Mare Island Navy Yard.

"Reformer."

FAMILY SPLITS OVER INTRUDER.

"GOOD GOVERNMENT MAN" ACCUSED OF MISCONDUCT.

Husband Leaves Home Because of Alleged Unwarranted Visits of Married Nominee for Judge with His Step-daughter—His Wife Asks for Divorce, Charging Cruelty.

"The sole and only cause of the disruption between Mrs. Roepke and myself at the present time, is C. C. Legerton and his unwarranted intrusion into my home," alleges William J. Roepke in his answer to the divorce complaint of Mrs. Margaret F. Roepke, filed yesterday by Valentine & Newby.

When Mr. Roepke packed his suit case and left his home, never expecting to return, the sole reason was "the unwarranted and disgraceful conduct on the part of Mr. Legerton in frequenting the house for the purpose of visiting and paying attention to my stepdaughter," further complains Mr. Roepke.

Mr. Legerton jumped into the limelight when he became a candidate as a "Good Government man" for the short term on the bench of the Superior Court and was nominated at the primaries without opposition. He celebrated the event by filing a suit for divorce, which is pending. He prepared the papers for Mrs. Roepke in her divorce suit and his probable answer to Mr. Roepke's charge will be that he visited Mr. Roepke's home on professional business connected with the suit.

Mr. Roepke, however, makes still stronger charges against Mr. Legerton in his answer. August 1 last, he alleges, he went to the real estate office of his wife on Melrose avenue "in order to remonstrate with her for permitting her daughter (by a former husband,) who resides with us, to continue to associate or to receive attention from C. C. Legerton."

On that occasion, Mr. Roepke alleges, his wife became angry with him because he objected to Mr. Legerton frequenting his home and paying attention to his stepdaughter. On several occasions, he says he remonstrated with Mrs. Roepke, dwelling on the impropriety of such visits and the disgrace that would arise if they were permitted to continue.

He says he told his wife that Mr. Legerton is a married man who has failed to support his child and that his attentions to her daughter were not honorable. He was informed on one of these visits to his wife's office that Mr. Legerton had just previously been thrashed by the husband of another daughter of Mrs. Roepke's.

In the presence of Mr. Legerton, he says he told his wife that it served him right; that he had no business around there.

"I ordered him out of the house and told him to stay away," Mr. Roepke alleges. His wife insisted that he apologize to him, which he declined to do.

"If he is permitted to come here and visit this house any longer, then I shall stay away. He is a married man and he has no right here."

Mrs. Roepke told him, he says, that Mr. Legerton could come to the house as often as he wanted and stay as long as he desired.

September 30, last, Mr. Roepke found Mr. Legerton alone in the house with his stepdaughter. Mr. Roepke packed up his suit case and departed for good.

Mr. Roepke, according to his wife, who charges him with cruelty, denies he has a patent on the Roepke block tire, and that he owns any such patent. He denies his wife's allegations, which comprise acts of cruelty such as throwing an iron ring, books, papers and articles at her, or in an angry passion tearing down the chandelier.

BRITISH RELIEF FUND.

Entertainment will be Given Friday Evening in Blanchard Hall to Raise Needed Money.

The Overseas Club (British) will hold a patriotic meeting and concert in Blanchard Hall at 8 o'clock Friday evening to raise a fund for the alleviation of the misery and distress of Britishers who have been injured in some fashion in the fortunes of war.

The programme which is now under way promises to be replete with many interesting numbers certain to raise the patriotic enthusiasm of the audience. Several prominent speakers and vocalists have promised their assistance.

The Overseas Club appeals to all British people and their sympathizers for their kindly support and co-operation. No admission will be charged.

"RUBES" AS GUESTS.

Jack Wilson, president of the Ad Club, was Halloween host to a party of "rube" advertising men at his ranch at Rivera. Old clothes, cider, pumpkins, apples and a dance in the barn furnished the entertainment for the evening. The party, which went out in automobiles, consisted of Messrs. and Mmes. O. W. Leonard, E. Ingold, E. J. Elson, C. E. Bireley, J. Harry Pieper, F. J. Wadley, S. W. Botsford, Fletcher Ford, H. B. Tuttle, H. S. Carroll, Ed Norton, A. B. McCallister, A. Carman Smith, G. Herb Palin, Leslie B. Riggins; Messrs. Victor E. Hecht, A. H. Wilkins, Tom Wood, S. Wood and E. C. Taylor; Misses Goldschmidt, Weber, Beemer, Cooper, Cleo Wilson and Margie Wilson.

To Get Rid of Wrinkles and Bad Complexions

It is more important now than during the period of profuse perspiration, to keep the pores clean. All cosmetics clog the pores. In cool weather this interferes greatly with elimination of waste material, injuring instead of aiding the complexion. Ordinary mercolized wax serves all the purposes of creams, powders and rouges, giving far better results. It actually peels off an offensive skin, at the same time unclogging the pores. Minute particles of scarf skin come off day by day, causing not the least pain or discomfort. Gradually the healthy, younger skin beneath peeps out, and in less than a fortnight you have a lovelier complexion than you ever dreamed of acquiring. Mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, is spread on nightly like cold cream and washed off mornings. One ounce usually suffices.

For removing wrinkles, without stopping the pores with pasty stuff, here's a never-failing formula: 1 oz. powdered saxolite, dissolved in ½ pint witch hazel. Bathe the face in this daily for awhile; every line will vanish completely. Even the first application gives surprising results.

FAMOUS FLOWERING PLANTS
BULBS & SEEDS

MAKE A SECOND PLANTING OF BULBS

NOW

AND PROLONG THE DISPLAY OF BLOOM IN YOUR SPRING GARDEN

WHILE

you are making arrangements for your second bulb planting do not forget to include a liberal number of bulbs of handsome Spanish Irises. Nothing more easily grown; nothing more beautiful as a cut flower; nothing will give you a greater amount of satisfaction. The initial cost is small, the returns large, with the simplest of cultural treatment. These Iris are bulbous plants, producing stems three feet high, surmounted with flowers which rival orchids in their beauty of color and form.

HERE ARE SEVEN OF THE BEST VARIETIES IN CULTIVATION.

BELLE CHINOISE—Pure rich yellow. Flowers very large.
CAJANUS—Striking deep golden yellow. Comes into bloom later than the preceding.
CHRYSOLORA—Beautiful pale yellow shade.
BRITISH QUEEN—Enormous pure white variety.
FORMOSA—Deep Cerulean blue. Gem for cut flowers.
THUNDERBOLT—Very large rich bronze colored flower.
LOUISE—Lovely shade of sky blue.
Price of any of the foregoing varieties—Per dozen 25c, per hundred $1.75.

IF

you have a sunny bed in your garden be sure and plant some bulbs of the Early and Winter flowering Gladiolus. We have just received a delayed Holland shipment of these bulbs. They are the daintiest of all Gladioli. They grow about eighteen inches to two feet in height and come into bloom in advance of the variety America or other Spring flowering sorts. Exquisite as a cut flower. They last over a week in water.

THREE GOOD ONES

BRIDE—Pure white. BLUSHING BRIDE—White flaked with carmine. PEACH BLOSSOM—Lovely rosy red flaked with white. Special price for today and next week—Per dozen 35c; per hundred $2.75.

TWO SPLENDID NOVELTIES IN SWEET PEAS

KING WHITE—The last word in a Giant White of the late Spencer class. Enormous waved blooms, petals frilled and undulated. It has four flowers to the stem, with the stems on well grown plants attaining a length of fifteen inches.

MARGARET MADISON—An improvement in size over any other Pea of its color. A lovely azure blue, slightly tinted with Mauve. When fully developed the blooms change to clear light lavender.

PRICE OF ANY OF THE FOREGOING, 25c PER PACKET.

Last week we called your attention to the fact that now is the time to make a first planting of Giant Spencer Sweet Peas. In addition to the two splendid novelties above, we repeat our special offer of last week. It is time to act. By planting them now you will have a successional crop of bloom following the time when the winter sorts go out of flower. A better quality of seed than that which we offer cannot be obtained.

AMERICA SPENCER—Handsome variegated variety. Three to four flowers to the stem. Color ivory white striped and pencilled with bright crimson. Price per packet 15c.

COUNTESS OF SPENCER—(Re-selected stock.) Deep rich rose pink of an exquisite shade. Price per packet 15c.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE SPENCER—Soft lavender bloom. Flowers heavily waved and undulated. Price per packet 15c.

GLADYS UNWIN SPENCER—A lovely shade of deep pink with crinkled and waved standards. Price per packet 15c.

GAIETY (SPENCER)—White, heavily blotched and flaked crimson. One of the best fancy sweet peas. Price per packet 15c.

ELFRIDA PEARSON (SPENCER)—A magnificent English novelty. Enormous size flowers, usually four to a stem. Color a lovely shade of soft pink. Price per packet 25c.

GEO. HERBERT SPENCER—A glorious shade of deep carmine toned with rose. Magnificent under artificial light. Price per packet 15c.

HELEN LEWIS SPENCER—A striking shade of deep orange-rose. A gem in color. Price per packet 15c.

IRISH BELLE SPENCER—Deep lilac color with heavily frilled standards and wings. Price per packet 15c.

KING EDWARD SPENCER—Superb crimson scarlet with mammoth size blooms. Price per packet 15c.

MRS. A. IRELAND SPENCER—Bright rose pink with blush shadings. Wings large and broadly expanded. Price per packet 15c.

MRS. HUGH DICKSON SPENCER—Gigantic pink flower shaded with apricot. Price per packet 15c.

MARIE CORELLI SPENCER—Cherry red and rosy crimson beautifully displayed in its giant waved flowers. Price per packet 15c.

MIRIAM BEAVER SPENCER—It has been impossible to fix the color of this magnificent variety. The flowers occur in various shades of pink, salmon, rose, orange-pink, etc. Flowers enormous in size, beautifully frilled. Price per packet 15c.

OTHELLO SPENCER—Dark glossy maroon of an intense shade. Standards and wings beautifully crimped. Price per packet 15c.

STERLING STENT SPENCER—Rich orange salmon. Equal to Elfrida Pearson in size. Nothing finer in existence. Per packet 25c.

WHITE SPENCER—(Extra selected stock.) The best white sweet pea generally grown. Snowy white in color and prettily waved. Price per packet 15c.

SPECIAL OFFER

We will mail free, to any address on receipt of price, one package of each of the above nineteen varieties for $2.25. Or, you may select any seven of the above, (except Elfrida Pearson, Sterling Stent, King White and Margaret Madison,) and we will include one of these latter novelties gratis, making eight in all, for $1.00.

NOTE—When in need of cut flowers, wedding decorations, or funeral designs, artistically arranged at strictly reasonable prices, call on our flower department.

A NEVADA CYCLONE.

The Democratic Senator of Nevada who undertook to thrash seven men and eat six dinners at Reno on the same night should have used some of his energy in an assault upon the war tax at Washington. The trouble with the fire of the Democrats is that it is nearly always misdirected.

AN ABSURD ARGUMENT.

This talk about grapes being used for grape juice in the future is a very sad and empty sort of joke. The grape-juice industry is good enough as far as it goes, but it wouldn't make a drop in the bucket. The manufacture of denatured alcohol from grapes is more unprofitable still. The fact remains that the grape-growing industry in this State represents over $150,000,000, not ripe for destruction.

A FINE EDITION OF THE BIBLE.

Our attention has been given to an exceptionally fine edition de luxe of the Bible, in ten volumes, which has been issued by a New York publishing house. The edition, with comments of interest to Bible students and those generally interested in literature, is fully reviewed on the Literary Page (Part IIIa) of this issue.

The workmanship on these books is not only exceptional, but the books contain 1000 illustrations, each of which is a picture of some notable painting on a biblical subject. A short but illuminating description accompanies each picture and fully explains its significance. Practically every painter of note who drew his theme from the Bible since the days of the Renaissance is represented.

WHAT SAY YOU, WORKERS?

Working men and working women, don't you know that the Republican party is the best, and truest and wisest friend that you ever had? Don't you know that it gave you the homestead law? that it enacted in every State mechanics lien laws to secure you payment of your wages? that in the bankrupt law it is provided that you must be paid in full before banks or merchants or high-salaried superintendents can receive a dollar? that its great doctrine of protection was framed in your interest to guard you from competition with the pauper labor of Europe? Don't you know that it recognizes labor as the creator of all values and the source of the nation's growth and prosperity?

You have the power which the Republican party has always recognized to dictate the politics and rule the destinies of this nation. Will you suffer yourselves to be deluded by a lot of Progressive blatherskites into abandoning your friend?

Answer at the polls on Tuesday next and tell Hiram Johnson and his thieving plunderbund to go away back and sit down.

SUPPORT THE STATE UNIVERSITY.

Proposition No. 11 on the ballot authorizes a $1,800,000 bond issue to construct new buildings on the campus of the University of California. The payments on this bond issue will be distributed over a period of forty years, so the coming generation will help pay for the privileges and advantages it will enjoy.

The University of California, with an attendance of 5200 students, is the largest State university in America. It has grown, under efficient and scholarly management, faster than the desirable facilities and buildings have been constructed to take care of the classes.

Many old buildings, some of which are horse sheds remodeled and basements renovated, are being used for classrooms because the State has not appropriated the money necessary to provide better buildings.

Los Angeles citizens especially should assist in carrying Proposition No. 11, since more than 600 students from this county are now in attendance at the University—more than from any other county in the State, excepting Alameda in which the university is located. In fact, no objections at all have been brought forward against this proposition. It should be carried.

SING, MIRIAM, SING!

If the sons and grandsons of the men who placed the Republican party in control of this nation half a century ago shall, on Tuesday next, abide by the principles and teachings of their fathers, California will enter upon a renewed career of prosperity and progress that will make "all the summer of her fate seem fruitless beside its autumn."

And why should they not "stand fast and stand sure"? The opponents of the Grand Old Party were never so well dressed as when they wore Republican coats, never so well fed as when they dined at the Republican table, and never so well warmed as when they stood by Republican camp fires.

The nation was never so prosperous as under Republican rule, and, in so far as California has thrived during the last three years, it has not been because of the antics of Gov. Johnson, but in despite of them.

With Fredericks in the gubernatorial chair, and Knowland in the Senate, and Osborne and Roberts in the House of Representatives, our beautiful California, with her wealth of mine, and forest, and field, will be sought as never before. The adventurous, the energetic, the skillful, the men of brain, and brawn and capital will flock here.

As the waters of the Red Sea shall close over Johnson, and Eshleman, and Heney, and Stephens, and Bell, our Miriams will sound their timbrels and say: "Let us sing unto the Lord, for He hath triumphed gloriously, the horse and his rider hath he cast into the sea."

EXPENSE FOR CAPITOL AND GROUNDS MORE THAN DOUBLED UNDER JOHNSON'S PERSONAL SUPERVISION
OVER $33,000,000 APPROPRIATED FOR JOHNSON'S ADMINISTRATION
ALMOST A HALF MILLION SPENT BY ONE AUDITING BOARD
POLITICAL COMMISSIONS ALONE HAVE COST THE STATE ALMOST $2,000,000 MORE THAN DURING ANY PREVIOUS ADMINISTRATION
WHAT ABOUT THAT SECRET SERVICE FUND ?
GOV. JOHNSON

FREDERICKS AND SNYDER.

The peculiar feature of the pending election contest in California is that the Progressive candidates have progressed out of progressivism into personalism. Gov. Johnson was a roaring Progressive when he first announced himself as a candidate for re-election. He was red hot for the recall of judicial decisions. He advocated appeals to the voters from the decision of the Supreme Court on constitutional questions, and if there was any other phase of revolutionary measles to be found anywhere he made haste to place himself where he could catch them.

Then the returns came in from primary elections in various States. One commonwealth after another dropped the profitless folly of Progressivism and returned to the Republican ranks. The Governor sang lustily: "I love you, California," and California responded at the primary election, saying: "I don't love you, Governor. I think you are a blatant, egotistical, vainglorious humbug."

Then the Governor changed his tactics with celerity. He dropped the word Progressive and said instead: "I am a non-partisan. A partisan has some definite political principles. I have none whatever. A partisan is in favor of something or somebody besides himself. I am not in favor of anybody except Hiram W. Johnson, or of anything except his re-election to office." Every loyal, intelligent citizen of California who has not eaten of the Johnson rattleweed will feel it to be his duty to so vote as to defeat this pretentious and undesirable demagogue. He has expended the public money like a drunken sailor and he has used his power to fill the public service with his relatives and retainers, most of whom are incompetent and all of whom are rapacious.

Republicans believe in honest partisanship and not in tricky non-partisanship, but even on a non-partisan basis there is no element in character or capacity wherein John D. Fredericks does not tower as far above Hiram W. Johnson as Mt. Shasta towers above a hole in the ground.

Patriotic Democrats who desire to serve their State will not help Johnson by wasting their votes on Curtin, who has not a remote chance of being elected, but will give their ballots to Fredericks in order to put an end politically to Hiram W. Johnson.

What The Times asks of and recommends to Democrats with respect to their votes for Governor it asks of and recommends to Republicans with respect to their votes for Lieutenant-Governor.

Mr. Snyder is a Democrat, but he is an honest, able gentleman who has the courage and the consistency of his convictions, while of Eshleman it may be said:

"Look as I blow this feather from my face
And as the air blows it to me again,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow
And yielding to another when it blows,
Commanded always by the greater gust."

Eshleman is not a Democrat, although he pretended to be one, and secured Democratic votes at the primary. He is not a Republican, though he posed as one at the primary, and after the primary refused to enter a Republican caucus and insulted the Republicans who voted for him. He is not even a loyal Progressive, for if he were he would scorn to obtain non-Progressive votes on false pretenses.

Let Republicans and Democrats vote as they will on other State offices and on county and judicial offices. But in voting on Governor and Lieutenant-Governor let them unite on FREDERICKS AND SNYDER.

NOT PROHIBITION NOW.

If it is absolutely necessary for Californians to signalize their moral uplift by ruining the grape growers of this State, why not give the culprits a suspended sentence? Surely they are as much entitled to probation as the murderers and embezzlers and rape fiends who have received the tender pity and executive clemency of Gov. Johnson.

Even if prohibition is really necessary in order to preserve the youth of California it can be adopted four or eight years from now as well as now, and not involve the destruction of tens of thousands of homes. In four years peaches, and apples, and pears, and walnuts, and oranges and lemons can be brought into profitable bearing. Two-year-old trees can be planted and cultivated and irrigated between the vineyard rows and the wicked vines can be torn up at the rate of 25 per cent. a year instead of all at once. That will give tens of thousands of vineyardists a chance to adjust themselves to prohibition conditions, instead of driving them from the State or prodding them pell-mell into the bankruptcy courts.

And the grape growers are not really such an awfully bad lot as some of the more zealous prohibitionists would make them out to be. Probably as large a percentage of them obey the Commandments, and the Golden Rule, and live by the precepts of the Sermon on the Mount, and do not beat their wives, and do pay their debts, as the alfalfa farmers, or as those ardent prohibitionists who would force men into sobriety by law rather than persuade them into it by entreaty.

Come, brethren, be fair, be reasonable. Whitfield with his masterly persuasive eloquence brought more sinners to the anxious bench than did the robust and unrelenting revivalist whom he described as standing on the bank of a stream, threshing water with a pole and crying to the fish: "Come now, bite or be damned."

More men can be redeemed from love of God than can be reached through fear of the devil. The great temperance orators, Father Matthew, John B. Gough, and Francis Murphy, were all opposed to prohibition, and it is safe to say that if they were alive today their voices would be heard urging the voters of California to reclaim drunkards by persuading them to themselves dash away the cup, rather than threatening to lock them up in the County Jail in order to keep the cup from their lips.

Can you cure a forger of a disposition to forge by cutting off the fingers of his right hand? Can you reform a highwayman by hobbling him? Is not enforced sobriety as useless to society as enforced morality or enforced piety?

If it is really necessary to uproot the vineyards, and tear down the breweries, and forbid the cultivation of barley and hops, and load the cost of all this devastation upon the backs of the already overburdened taxpayers, it is not a pressing necessity. The work of destruction can be accomplished as well at the next as at the pending election.

Surely, it is only fair to give the vineyardists a little time before destroying their property.

No victim of alcoholism was ever cured of his disease by a prohibition law. The consensus of opinion in every community where prohibition has been tried is that it does not prohibit.

IF IN DOUBT, VOTE NO.

There are forty-eight propositions on the ballot.

Few people have had the opportunity to give attention to all or even to any number of them.

A great many people perhaps do not intend to vote on those propositions they do not understand; but it is wiser and shows better judgment to vote No on all propositions that are not thoroughly understood by the voter.

Some of the propositions are purposely vague. They are intended to conceal vicious and undesirable features from the voter. The originators of these propositions hope that citizens who do not understand them will refuse to vote either way.

If only those vote No who thoroughly understand the propositions, then it will require comparatively fewer "Yeses" to carry them. Vote No and defeat all such tricksters.

Another thing to be remembered is that any proposition which is not thoroughly understood by each voter does not offer vital benefit to the State. If it did, pains and trouble would be taken to see that each and every voter understood the proposition, because then every voter would certainly support it.

To be safe and to show good judgment vote No on each and every proposition that is not understood. That is the only way to help prevent dangerous measures from going through. It is not enough to merely refrain from voting.

A WORD TO DEMOCRATS.

There is really no good reason why any California Democrat should vote for Curtin or Phelan or Randall or the Democratic nominee for Congress in the Tenth District, and there are good reasons why Democrats as well as Republicans should vote for Fredericks, and Knowland, and Osborne, and Roberts. Nearly all the issues which divided the Republican and the Democratic parties fifty, forty, thirty, twenty years ago have been settled, and Democrats have acquiesced in the settlement which locked Republican principles in the strong box of the Federal Constitution.

The action of eastern Democrats with respect to the tariff places the Democrats of Louisiana, of Colorado, of California and of Oregon in a peculiar and to a certain extent in an embarrassing position. Their interests are against free sugar, free wool, free lumber, free agricultural products, and reduced duties on citrus and dried fruits. In California there is not an intelligent Democrat who does not know that our business interests will be better promoted by Republican than by Progressive success.

And one or the other will be decreed at the polls on Tuesday next. Is it not as much to the interest of Democrats as it is to the interest of Republicans to put an end politically to Johnson and Eshleman and their Progressive Janus-faced plunderbund? The Times believes that it is, and in order to effect it it asks Republicans to vote for the Democratic nominee for Lieutenant-Governor. It asks Democrats to vote for Fredericks. It calls the attention of all to the fact that the material interests of Southern California will be best subserved by the election of Knowland and Osborne and Roberts.

Come, friends—for we are friends when the interests of our beautiful and prosperous State are involved—let us pull together for this election, however we may agree to disagree in future, and let us bury the blatherskite Progressives so deep that Gabriel with a megaphone could not be heard by them, for they will be occupying

DRY TOAST.

It is fitting that each great epoch should have its bard, to celebrate immortally the fading glories and the dawning effulgences. In our own Southland, it appears, a momentous change is taking place, a departure from the traditions of centuries. It is the end of an old epoch, the beginning of a new. Doubtless there will eventually appear the bard celebrant, who will make famous his native land, his age and himself. But until he come, we must turn to lesser lights. The Times of Cuba favors one hot-weather poet, anonymous, whose effusion depicts with feeling the pathos and promise in the situation in the South:

Lay the jest about the julep in the camphor balls at last,
For the miracle has happened, and the olden days are past!
That which made Milwaukee famous does not foam in Tennessee,
And the lid in old Missouri is as tight-locked as can be;
And the comic-paper colonel and his cronies well may sigh,
For the mint is waving gaily, and the South is going dry!

By the still-side on the hillside in Kentucky all is still,
And the only damp refreshment must be dipt up from the rill.
Nawth Ca'lina's stately ruler gives his soda glass a shove,
And discusses local option with the So'th Ca'lina guv,
It is useless at the fountain to be winkful of the eye,
For the cocktail glass is dusty, and the South is going dry!

It is "water, water, everywhere, and not a drop to drink!"
We no longer hear the music of the mellow crystal clink;
When the Colonel, and the Major, and the Gen'ral, and the Jedge
Meet to have a little nip, to give their appetites an edge;
For the egg-nogg now is nogless, and the rye has gone awry,
And the punch-bowl holds carnations, for the South is going dry!

All the nightcaps now have tassles, and are worn upon the head!
Not the nightcaps that were taken when nobody went to bed;
And the breeze above the blue-grass is as solemn as is death,
For it bears no pungent clove-tang on its odorific breath;
And each man can walk the chalk-line when the stars are in the sky,
For the fizz-glass now is fizzless and the South is going dry!

Lay the jest about the julep 'neath the chestnut tree at last,
For there's but one kind of moonshine, and the older days are past,
The water-wagon rumbles through the Southland on its trip,
And it helps no one to drop off to pick up the driver's whip;
For the mint-beds now are pastures, and the corkscrew hangeth high;
All is still along the still-side, and the South is going dry!

THE RIGHTS OF MAN.

BY EUGENE BROWN.

You mustn't do this and you mustn't do that—
For such is the law of the land;
For work and for play take eight hours each day;
Your back must be burned with the brand.

The law stalks into the humblest home;
Its shadow blackens each door—
"You mustn't eat this, and you mustn't drink that,"
Is the cry of its lips evermore.

The rights of man may be epitomized in one terse and poignant paragraph: There ain't no such critter. The thoughtless but persistent work of a pack of God-defying, persistent legislators has left us stripped in the presence of our enemies.

What is the matter with me, anyhow, that I need so much regulating? I must be like a bum watch, that requires winding every night, setting every morning and hands and face done over every noon. And at that they won't let me oil my own works.

When I came out to that dear California I fancied that my lot was to be cast amid a splendid and liberal people, tolerant and hospitable. I thought that the very ozone which coursed over mountain and sea was the rustle of Freedom's wings and that personal surveillance existed only in the mildest possible degree.

But what do I find?

I discover that nothing but the aforesaid air is free. This air is invigorating. It is great stuff. A man will put up with a whole lot for the privilege of taking deep breaths of it every morning. But, after all, it is not the whole thing. It is the great essential, but to sustain wholesome life there must be also food, drink, apparel and sundry creature comforts.

And here is where the dodo-domed regulator comes in with his little two-foot rule by which he would measure all men and things. And the worst is yet to come. We are invited to inflict fresh burdens and regulations upon ourselves.

When I look over that massive ballot and the bunch of amendments and propositions offered for popular vote, I am strangely tempted to grab a rubber stamp and register a brutal and emphatic "No" to everything in sight. I am satisfied that a good many men will do this very thing. The legislator seems to be worse than the average highwayman. About half the propositions offered to the voter ask his money. The rest want his life. The ordinary strong-arm man would be satisfied with either one. In any event, the solons after taking your purse will leave you blindfolded and tied to the fence. They want to regulate everything—your liver, your morals and your acts.

I was never crazy about working, and some sarcastic friends who have watched me monkeying amid the onions and kale say that it takes me twenty-four hours to do a day's work. If I can't work but eight hours I'll be in a dickens of a fix. I'd be doing my Friday chores on Sunday morning. And here again I'd be in trouble, because the regulators say I mustn't do anything on Sunday. On that day I must either sleep or go to the Methobaptarian Church.

I can have prunes and buttermilk on my table, but wild duck and claret are to be forbidden. They are taking the brandy sauce away from my pudding, and no matter if I am as weak as a tadpole, I can't have a drop of sherry with my egg. If I carry a bouquet of hops I am to be stood up against the wall at sunrise and shot—or half-shot at the very least.

This is regulation after the heart of my affectionate neighbor, Mrs. Pansy Hickmore, who thinks that every man who looks twice at a brewery wagon is a souse. Pansy drinks about fourteen cups of strong tea every day and her nerves are so shattered that if I come into her presence smelling of peppermint she faints all over the place. Yet I suppose that until the regulators turn their attention that way the steamers will continue to bring their stores of the insidious leaf from China and Japan.

But everybody is after me. If I am a corporation they come at me with a franchise tax and a license tax, besides taxes up and down and crossways on every bit of property owned. If I am an individual I am pinched for a poll tax and am assessed up to my eyebrows on my dog house, oat field, and hen roost. Now they want to decide how long I shall work, what pay I shall get and what manner of refreshment may trickle in my face. At night they want to wrap my dinky frame in a ninety-inch sheet, forgetting that I am one of those careless persons who like to poke their feet through the foot of the bed and wiggle their toes at the cat.

Believe me, there is too much shoestring regulation. Some folks are not willing to leave anything to a man's conscience or sense of perspective. They would dictate his morals, his manners, his table, his apparel, his service, his pay and his creed. Wouldn't it be better, instead of having so many "shalt nots," we had a few "come on, boys"—that instead of so many prohibitory acts we tried a general measure which in so many words should require man to regulate his life according to wholesome public policy. Let a jury of his peers decide when he has violated this and let him be punished accordingly. Let us prefer to reward people for being good rather than to punish for being bad.

RIPPLING RHYMES.

PRAYERS FOR 5HELP.

"God bless our army and our navy, and help us knock the blooming gravy from Graustark, o'er the way." Thus prays the King of Zenda, nightly, then takes his gory ax politely, and mingles in the fray. The King of Graustark, worn and bloody, kneels gravely in his royal study, and prays for aid divine; "Jehovah, hear a monarch pleading, and send the bullets we are needing, along our battle line. Send us a raft of swords and lances, if you would multiply our chances to whip that sinful crew; Oh, send us guns and smokeless powder, and send my starving soldiers chowder, and send them P.D.Q." The God of Battles must be weary; through all the ages, long and dreary, He's heard that tale of woe; and He is surely sick of seeing the riven souls of soldiers fleeing from blood-red fields below. He must be sick of king and colonel, of ruin, wreck and waste infernal, of charge and shock and thud; of Butcher Caesars and of Neros, of praying kings and braying heroes, and captains drunk with blood. Oh, not on crimson fields distressing will God bestow His sovereign blessing, and not on gory arms; but it will come when soldiers wander back from the strife and horror yonder, back to their homes and farms.

[POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.]

For SIXTEEN Years

It has been 16 years since a Southern California citizen has been elected Governor of the State. Sixteen years in which this vast commonwealth has not had a representative at the helm of State affairs.

JOHN D. FREDERICKS,
A Citizen of Southern California.

Is Not This The Time—Now?

With Southern California paying more than one-third of the taxes of the State, with Southern California dominating in wealth and population, is it not time that a Southern Californian be put on guard at Sacramento?

This is the opportunity—in 1915 California's year of years—to place a man of sterling ability, of unquestioned integrity in the Governor's chair.

Start 1915—California's Year—with a Southern Californian for Governor —John D. Fredericks

Public Service: City Hall, Courts.

At the City Hall.

DAY OF MOVING SOON AT HAND.

WORKS BOARD TELLS COUNCIL HOW TO SHIFT.

Subject is Now in Hands of Supply Committee, but Other Departments of Public Service are Asked to Co-operate in Working Out Satisfactory Solution.

It will soon be "moving day" at the City Hall, and various departments of the public service are anxiously awaiting the final decision as to where they are to be located when the additional room acquired through a lease of four floors on the new Hosfield building is available. The general shift of quarters will be made about the middle of November.

The City Council, becoming considerably irritated over the length of time taken by the Board of Public Works in presenting a complete plan for the reassignment of locations, a few days ago decided to go ahead on its own account, and placed the entire matter in the hands of the Council Supply Committee.

Yesterday President Handley of the Board of Public Works appeared before the Council and poured oil on the troubled waters, declaring the intent of the board to work in full harmony with the Council, and submitting a tentative plan.

In substance, this provides for the fifth floor of the Hosfield building being given over entirely to the City Engineer's department. The fourth floor will be given to the City Engineer and the street department, the work being closely allied. The front of the third floor is set aside for the building department and in the back of this floor will be the city electrician, boiler inspector and elevator inspector. On the second floor, front section, it is proposed to locate the Bureau of Assessments and the back is to be occupied by the Board of Public Works.

The tentative plan for the reassignment of rooms in the City Hall proper provides quarters for the City Council in room 24, now occupied by the building department; the Housing Commission is to have room 22, now in possession of the Bureau of Assessments, and the quarters now used by the Board of Public Works would be turned over to the Civil Service Commission, now located in the Exchange building.

The third floor, now occupied by the City Engineer's offices, will be available for the Harbor Commission and other commissions that do not have adequate quarters. On the second floor, rooms 209 and 210, and adjoining rooms, if needed, will be at the service of the Municipal Efficiency Commission. This will still leave some rooms unassigned, and outside departments will be brought in to occupy these quarters.

The change of quarters of departments that have been greatly overcrowded will greatly increase the efficiency of the public service.

A resolution was adopted, upon motion of Councilman Conwell, asking the Board of Public Works and other departments of the public service to co-operate with the Supply Committee in working out a speedy decision as to the relocation of all the departments subject to shift under the new arrangement of rooms.

LUCKY MOHLER. STILL HAS FAT JOB.

Charles K. Mohler's lucky star is still in the ascendency—he continues to hold onto his $300-a-month job as chief engineer of the railroad department of the Board of Public Utilities, although that board has clearly indicated that it doesn't want him and that it cannot work in harmany with him.

The board's letter, explaining that it sees no reason to change its attitude in declaring the office vacant, although the work of the department will be continued as usual, was presented to the City Council yesterday. The Council previously had adopted the request of the Municipal League that the league be permitted to make a general investigation of the board and its departments, and that meanwhile Mr. Mohler be continued in the service.

President Wright was called before the Council, and maintained that the board was acting under its charter perogatives in removing the railroad engineer. Some members of the Council maintained that the action of the Council is adopting the request of the Municipal League, virtually ordered the board to continue Mr. Mohler in service, and that this comes under the charter provisions wherein the Council may order any department or board to do certain things, and in case of refusal, this shall be cause for removal.

Councilman Roberts was impetuous in his attempt to force Mr. Mohler on the board, and proposed that a half hour's recess be taken so that an ordinance might be prepared to serve notice on the board that it must retain the engineer pending the league's investigation.

Councilman Betkouski served notice on the Council that he would oppose such an ordinance, and therefore it would have to go over one week, according to Council rules.

"I find by actual investigation that Mr. Mohler is a useless appendage to the city's service, and I will not be a party to any attempt to railroad through such an ordinance," declared Councilman Betkouski.

Councilman Conwell counselled that a full investigation by an outside organization should be courted by the city officials, and it was finally decided that President Wright should be allowed to withdraw the board's statement and have it presented for reconsideration at the regular meeting of the board next Wednesday. Meanwhile Mr. Mohler is to be kept on the job.

If the board finally refuses to rescind its action in vacating the position held by Mr. Mohler, Councilman Roberts gave notice that he will then present an ordinance instructing the boared to proceed in accordance with the Council's action.

ACTION WANTED. FOR FIRE PROTECTION.

The Fire Commission decided yesterday that it will again appeal to the City Council to take immediate action for the providing of more adequate protection from fires in the harbor district. The commission desires provision made for a fire tug, fully equipped.

Acting Fire Chief O'Donnell presented to the commission a full report on the recent fire at the harbor, wherein millions of dollars' worth of property was endangered. In this report he says:

"This fire further emphasizes the great need of a fire boat and more apparatus to protect the valuable ships, cargoes, lumber, etc., on the miles of wharves at the harbor.

"Had there been the usual strong wind, the damage would have been much greater, and had the fire reached the oil tanks and spread the burning oil over the harbor nothing could have saved the whole water front, with its millions of dollars' worth of property; and it would have given steamship companies such a scare as to ruin our commerce."

The commission will transmit the report to the Council and ask it to again consider the commission's previous recommendations that provision be made for a more adequate fire-fighting equipment for the harbor.

WILL STUDY HERE. FIRE-FIGHTING METHODS.

South Pasadena would loan to the Los Angeles fire department its fire chief, Martin Wolf—not as a favor to this city, but for the direct benefit of South Pasadena itself. Chief Wolf comes to put in a month in studying fire-fighting methods here, so that they may be applied in the sister city.

The request for this accommodation was made by the South Pasadena City Trustees to the Fire Commission yesterday. That city has purchased a Seagrave pumping engine, motor-driven, and it wants its fire chief to become familiar with the handling of this sort of apparatus before the equipment is put into commission.

The commission decided that if proper waivers of liability for accidents be given, the South Pasadena fire chief can give his labors to Los Angeles for a month in exchange for the privilege of absorbing its fire-fighting lore.

Lumber for Transit Shed.

In addition to the almost half-million feet of cedar flooring required for the transit shed No. 1 at the Municipal Dock No. 1, Outer Harbor, for which bids were received by the Harbor Commission during the past week, there will be required about 400,000 feet of lumber for the general structural work. The Harbor Commission decided yesterday to advertise for bids for this lumber, and open offers at 10 o'clock a.m., on November 11.

The commission awarded to the Ponett Company the contract for supplying a concrete mixer for wharf work for $895.

Fire Loss for Week.

The fire loss for the past week is estimated by the fire department at $96,240. There were seventy fire alarms, of which nine were false. In twenty-four cases there was merely nominal loss, and there were fifteen grass fires.

Wires go Underground.

Councilman Betkouski yesterday called the attention of the City Council to the fact that the new Arcade Depot is now 50 per cent. completed and steps should be taken to clear the streets of overhead wires in that vicinity. He offered a resolution which was adopted, providing that an ordinance be immediately prepared requiring the public utility corporations to place in conduits their overhead wires on Central avenue, between First and Sixth streets, by April 15, 1915.

Safeguard from Storm Waters.

William N. Selig, who has invested thousands of dollars in the animal farm adjoining Eastlake Park, filed a communication to the City Council yesterday, calling attention to the fact that in the reconstruction of the dam at the old reservoir above the park, provision has been made for only one outlet, thirty inches in diameter. He declares that this will be entirely inadequate when heavy storms occur, and asks that in order to prevent damages to his property a large outlet be provided on the east of the reservoir. The old dam was washed away last winter and caused much damage.

At the Courthouse.

MYSTERY IN ODD TRIANGLE SUIT.

MAN WHO PROFITED IN DEAL NOT A LITIGANT.

All Parties Involved in Sale of Ranch and a Mortgage Seem Befuddled as to Just What's What, While Old Rancher Seems to be the "Goat."

A triangular suit over the sale of a ranch, a mortgage and the apparent befuddlement of all parties occupied Judge Hewitt's court yesterday. One of the alleged victims is a Gardena ranchman, of 74, who was paid $100 for the use of his name, and was made an unknowing and unwilling victim.

Mrs. Isabella Huber Moore sold a 221-acre ranch in the San Gabriel Valley for $16,000 to R. L. Foster, the rancher, and received $6000 cash and took a mortgage for $10,000. Mrs. Moore got the money, but where it came from is one of the mysteries of the case. Mr. Foster did not put it up. In fact, he told Judge Hewett he did not put up anything.

The mysterious Mr. Brown, it appears, acted as agent for all parties, and although he appears to have been the only one who profited by the series of complications, he is neither plaintiff nor defendant, and does not actually appear in the case. He was not called as a witness, but was frequently referred to by the litigants.

Mr. Foster said Mr. Brown told him he wanted him to act as the go-between on a trade—to use his name in order to make it go. Then, it is alleged, Mr. Foster received a deed to Mrs. Moore's property and gave her back a mortgage for $10,000. Then Mr. Foster deeded the property to Mrs. Katharine Harpstrite.

Mr. Brown, it is alleged, attended to all details, and he was the only person, it appeared, who went to the escrow office, where deeds from Mrs. Moore to Mr. Foster and Mr. Foster to Mrs. Harpstrite were arranged for, and mortgages from Mrs. Harpstrite to Mrs. Foster to Mrs. Moore ordered.

Nothing unusual was discovered until Mrs. Harpstrite failed to pay the interest on the mortgage, and Mrs. Moore brought suit against Mr. Foster and Mrs. Harpstrite to foreclose. Then it was found that a clause had been inserted in the deeds by Mr. Brown that the purchaser in each instance was to pay off the mortgage.

Mr. Foster testified Mr. Brown told him he would protect him as far as the mortgage was concerned, and Mrs. Harpstrite said she had no understanding she was to pay the mortgage—that she took the property subject to that incumbrance.

The problem was too complex to be decided off-hand, and Judge Hewitt took the case under submission. Although Mr. Foster got a deed to 221 acres, Mrs. Harpstrite got a deed to only 160 acres. What has become of the other sixty acres is not explained. It is asserted that the property is not worth the face value of the mortgage, as the floods of last January and February damaged it to the extent of several thousand dollars.

PROPERTY EXCHANGE. SHE ASKS ANNULMENT.

After exchanging her ranch at Riverside for the Geneva and Portland apartment-houses, Mrs. Carrie Schliem filed suit against the Conservative Investment Company of Los Angeles and the Title Guarantee and Trust Company yesterday, asking for a recission, alleging that false representations had been made, which induced her to make the exchange.

Mrs. Schliem and her husband, Albert Schliem, gave two promissory notes aggregating $39,000, secured by two trust deeds. The equity in the ranch was $36,000. It is alleged that it was represented that the corporation received a net income of $12,500 from the apartment-houses. Investigation showed that the net income was only $9150, it is asserted.

The court is asked to restrain a sale of the Riverside property and have it reconveyed to the plaintiffs, Mrs. Schliem having rescinded the exchange and offered to re-exchange the properties.

CHICKEN RANCH BREAKS UP FAMILY.

Reluctantly Mrs. Maria Schilling showed to her husband, at his request, a letter from her father, denying an application for money to be put in Mr. Schilling's chicken ranch in Cuba.

In Judge McDaniel's court yesterday she testified in her divorce suit against P. C. Schilling, that he said:

"Your father wrote that expecting me to see it?"

She admitted it and commented to the court:

"It was the harshest thing my father ever said to me. My husband said:

"'That settles it.' He told me he was going away. Later he did go. For more than a year he has not supported me or my child."

The decree was granted. The letter conveyed Mrs. Schilling's father's determination "not to furnish any more money for Paul to put into the poultry business or any other business. If his staying with you depends on my sending money to start him in business, it does not seem to me that I should be furthering your happiness by doing what he asks. The only thing I can see to do is to let matters take their course."

ALWAYS READY. TALES FOR RELEASE.

Tom Comb, colored, was before Judge Monroe yesterday on a charge of failing to provide for his children.

"Your Honor," he said, "I was paid $50 for my work in the oil fields and I put the money in a wallet, except $1 which I stuck in my vest. I was going to buy a suit of clothes. I put the wallet in my room and when I got back, it was gone."

"The last time you were here," said Deputy District Attorney Joos, "you said you had been held up and robbed."

Tom's tale evidently limped. The court put him on probation for one year.

COURT PARAGRAPHS. PROCEEDINGS IN BRIEF.

RANCH FOR CHURCH. The Fir Baptist Church of Lindsay receiv under the will of Andrew E. Thomason, who died in Tulare county October 2, last, the Berg place, a ten-acre orange ranch, which is to be sold and the proceeds used as a building fund. The residue of the estate is given in equal shares to the children, Ira Le Roy, 19; Julia R., Clarence and Mary I., the latter 5, all of Redlands. The personal property is listed at $48,718.96. The property is located in Los Angeles, Tulare and Kern counties, value not stated. The sons are to be paid their shares when they reach the age of 28; the girls at 21.

DAMAGES AWARDED. Hoxie & Goodloe were awarded judgment for $2500 against the Standard Motor Car Company by a jury in Judge McCormick's court yesterday, in a suit for $17,000 damages growing out of a deal in four trucks. The plaintiffs claimed they were induced to buy the trucks through alleged fraudulent representations as to their capacity. Otherwise, it was alleged, the deal would not have been made. The award of the jury indicates that the only damage was the value of a storage battery to bring the trucks up to the capacity claimed by the defendant.

ON PROBATION. Because the testimony of Miss Pearl Handy showed that she was a willing party, Henry Stanley, an elderly Long Beach photographer, was placed on probation for two years by Judge Taft yesterday, for contributing to the girl's delinquency. Stanley met the girl in the street and took her to his home, the testimony showed. Later he photographed her in the nude.

Swindler Finally Pleads Guilty to Obtaining Money by Representing Self as Government Officer.

United States Secret Service Operative Hazen returned yesterday from Phoenix, where he was looking after the trial of the charge against Fra A. Mason, formerly connected with the Maryland Casualty Company, in this city, who secured $40 from John Gondolfo, a business man of Phoenix, by representing that he was connected with the Secret Service department of the government. Mason pleaded not guilty, and then changed his mind and pleaded guilty, being sentenced to one year and a day in the penitentiary at Santa Fe, N. M.

Mason, a year or more ago, was engineer on the Camaguin, plying between Long Beach and San Pedro, and left a trail of bad checks from as far south as Yuma to as far north as Stockton. A number of Los Angeles persons, including Deputy Game Warden McKee, contributed various amounts, McKee losing $150. Some of his checks have been presented at the city banks here for payment. After Mason serves his sentence in New Mexico he will be brought here for hearing on a similar charge.

FILES PAUPER AFFIDAVIT.

A pauper affidavit, signed by W. Stevens, who, with Charles S. Mc vey, was convicted of blackmail in United States District Court on charge of blackmail, was filed yesterday, petitioning Judge Wellborn for copy of the transcript in the case closed, to be used in carrying the issues up to the Circuit Court of Appeals. While the affidavit is made by Stevens alone, the information will of course be used in behalf of both defendants. In the appeal especial stress will be laid on the ruling of Judge Wellborn admitting the evidence of Octa Morgan and Wat Moreland, it is alleged they should have been kept out.

WAR IS ENDED; VOTES TO COME.

Contest of Words is Closed in Los Angeles.

Johnson at Trinity Talks to Big Audience.

Curtin Speaks to Democrats at Venice.

Capt. Fredericks, Republican; Senator Curtin, Democrat, and Gov. Johnson, "Progressive," all candidates for Governor, closed their campaigns for office last night in and around Los Angeles. The battle of words was over at 10 o'clock last night and the three candidates are now waiting for the returns.

Gov. Johnson spoke to a large audience of "Progressives" at Trinity Auditorium, in which he continued to assail the opposition upon the stereotyped lines he laid out months ago. At the conclusion he caught a train for San Francisco.

Capt. Fredericks, Senator Curtin and Gov. Johnson had crossed paths earlier in the day, when the Republican candidates skirted a small Johnson crowd at Tropico and nearly ran into Senator Curtin as he was on his way from Burbank to Venice.

At Venice last night Curtin closed his campaign, and he also took a night train for San Francisco. At the Jefferson Club yesterday he was the honored guest at luncheon. George Patton presided. He said:

"If the President looks to California after next Tuesday and sees only 125,000 Democratic votes for Governor and so on down the line, what will we say to him? How will we explain that the State which came within 175 votes of electing a full Democratic electoral ticket two years ago has gone back so far?

"I am entitled to the full Democratic vote. I have gone into every convention since 1884 and abided by the result of the majority. I have gone into every caucus of my party and have abided the result.

"At times I could have advanced myself individually by disregarding the party, but I said to myself that in the long run that wouldn't count anything for me.

"I have always striven for Democratic success, as I have striven in this campaign. Now, if it should be defeat, let us not be disheartened, let us stay in the party and those of us who have wandered away let them come back into the party, for there is much that is good in Democracy.

"But, I tell you, success is ours. In four counties the Republican county chairmen have come to me and said:

"'The salvation of the Republican party depends on us going over to the Democratic party.'

"The Republicans realize that they face the most remarkable situation in political history—the attempt of the man whom they have elevated to the high office of Governor attempting to wipe out the party that so honored him.

"The Republicans are coming over to us every day. They realize that the Democratic party is a party that remembers its pledges and is true to its promises and that through Democratic success this year the Republican party will be preserved and not wiped out by a man who, now that his party has been found to be third in the registration, seems to be ashamed of that party and is raising the cry of non-partisanship."

IN DEFENSE.

GRAND JURY SPEAKS.

The County grand jury yesterday issued a statement, called forth by the publication in an Earl paper that Capt. Fredericks, as District Attorney, has $4300 for which he has made no account. To show the silliness of the apparently deliberate falsehood, the grand jury issued this statement:

"When the present grand jury was impanelled the following memorandum of minutes of the previous grand jury was exhibited:

"'Capt. J. D. Fredericks, District Attorney, appeared before the jury and exhibited the sum of four thousand three hundred ($4300) dollars in currency, which he stated was bribe money taken at the time of the Darrow investigation, stating that the same is to be deposited by him in bank to be used for secret service of the District Attorney's office, the same being unclaimed bribe money. Capt. Fredericks also requested that the disposition of this money be brought to the attention of the next grand jury for auditing.'

"In accordance with the above suggestion, the Finance Committee of the present grand jury made an investigation of this fund and found that a portion of the fund had been expended in the secret service of the county and that all of the expenditures were proper and approved and sustained by vouchers and receipts and that the balance is now on hand in a special fund deposited in bank to the account of J. D. Fredericks, trustee.

AT CITY CLUB.

FREDERICKS WILL SPEAK.

Capt. Fredericks has been invited by the Women's City Club to address that organization Monday at 1 o'clock. The meeting will be held in Blanchard Hall, and the general public is invited to attend. An especial invitation is extended the women.

Capt. Fredericks will speak on some of the laws in which the women are interested, and will no doubt be given a fine reception. The club already has heard from Gov. Johnson.

Another speaker at the meeting will be W. J. Ford, candidate for District Attorney, who is winding up a most effective campaign for that office.

AUTOS FOR ELECTION.

Loyal Republicans who wish to contribute the use of their autos on election day toward the election of Capt. Fredericks are requested to communicate with Fredericks Headquarters in the Stowell Hotel, Main 6474 or Home 60777, in care of the Automobile Committee.

AN EVASIVE AND LYING EXCUSE.

On October 25 inst. The Times published an editorial from which we extract the following:

> The president of the California Prison Commission, Rev. Charles Montgomery, publishes an open letter to Gov. Johnson in which he cites the following facts of the Governor's action in paroling prisoners:
> Prisoner 24405 was sentenced to thirteen years for rape. A married man with several young children, he had four times ravished a 13-year-old imbecile child of whom he had made a mother—a child so feeble-minded that she scarcely knew her sex. In three years and four months the Governor paroled him in the face of violent protests by the county officials.
> Prisoner 23707, serving sixty years for the infamous crime against nature, was paroled after four years and seven months.
> Prisoner 24883, serving ten years on one of a large number of charges of the same infamous crime against nature, was released in one year and six months.
> Prisoner 23974, serving twenty years for rape, was paroled December, 1913, after serving four years.
> Prisoner 25045, serving ten years for rape, received July, 1911, paroled October 2, 1912, one year and three months.
> Prisoner 24731 arrived in San Quentin in January, 1911, on a five-year sentence for rape. His crime was on a 7-year-old stepchild. There was no possible palliation. He was released December, 1912, in one year and ten months.
> Prisoner 26059 arrived October 16, 1912, on a two-year sentence for pimping; he only placed a young girl in a house of ill-fame. Released on parole November 3, 1913; one year and seventeen days.
> Prisoner 24906, received March 6, 1911, a sentence to serve five years for rape. Released September 2, 1912; one year and six months.
> Our Progressive one-scent contemporary asserts that just before election, when it will be too late to make reply, The Times will teem with false accusations against Gov. Johnson. Well, there is plenty of time to explain the records that the Rev. Charles Montgomery publishes.

Yesterday, after a silence of a week, the Los Angeles Tribune in its editorial column published this rejoinder:

> Like its other baseless attacks, this miserable story is devoid of a semblance of truth. It is merely another lie in a campaign of lies without parallel in California's history.
> In substance, the charge is that Gov. Johnson has paroled a large number of men imprisoned for infamous crimes against women. Cases are cited of fiends who have been turned loose upon society through parole issued by Gov. Johnson.
> The Governor has nothing to do with the issuance of paroles. That power is vested by the Constitution in a State board of prison directors consisting of five men, who hold office for ten years.
> Every one of the parole cases cited by The Times came up while the Gillett appointees were in control of the board. Every man paroled was paroled by the Gillett appointees. Johnson's two appointees were in the minority and were powerless to prevent the paroles being granted.

Gov. Johnson is a member of the board of prison directors and as such has a voice potential in granting, refusing and revoking paroles. Not one of the rape fiends could have been paroled without his concurrence. The prison board is his board.

In addition to the Governor's powers as a member of the board of prison directors, he is given by the Act. of June 16, 1913 (Statues, page 1048,) the right to revoke paroles without the action of and without consulting the prison directors.

Under this power he might have revoked the parole of Prisoner 26059, sentenced for placing a young girl in a house of ill-fame, or of Prisoner 23974, who was serving a twenty-year sentence for rape and was paroled after serving four years, or indeed he might have revoked or might now revoke the paroles of any or all of the rape fiends who are at large in consequence of his acquiescence as a member of the board of prison directors in their release.

The Rev. Mr. Montgomery says with reference to a convict who was under the ban of the Governor's displeasure, that the Governor announced that, should the board admit the prisoner in question to parole, he (the Governor) would revoke such parole.

Mr. Montgomery calls attention to the record, which shows that in December, 1906, three young men came to San Quentin on life sentences. The records show that they committed several highway robberies, which finally culminated in murder while committing the last. In 1913, after they had served six years, the Governor commuted their sentences to twenty years, and ordered that they be paroled at once. As official ground of his action, in one case, he stated in writing that the commutation was granted because the man's prison record was without flaw. The record openly shows almost every violation, from fighting to sodomy.

It is a wonder that the Tribune did not make its defense of Johnson a little more comprehensive and aver that he was out of the State or was not Governor of California when the six rape fiends were paroled.

Stephen A. Byrne of San Francisco makes a bitter attack on Gov. Johnson because the Governor, after granting to Jim Louie, a Chinaman, twenty-one reprieves before his execution, and to Wilkins—a non-Catholic—eleven reprieves, insisted upon hanging Jerry Allen, a Catholic, on Good Friday, although 100,000 Catholic laymen and clergy prayed for one week's reprieve for the unfortunate man.

UNFAIR ATTACK.

ON REGISTRAR OF VOTERS.

The Earl sunrise scentlet bitterly assailed County Registrar of Voters McAleer yesterday, stating that, owing to his inefficiency and negligence, the sample ballots and copies of the pamphlet giving the amendments to the constitution were not delivered to the voters in sufficient time to thoroughly digest the forty-eight propositions.

The truth of the matter is, that Registrar McAleer strictly obeyed the law of California and started mailing the ballots and pamphlets on October 24, the date fixed by section 1195 of the Political Code. The law specifically states that the registrar of voters shall commence mailing the ballots and pamphlets on October 24 and must finish by October 28.

Registrar McAleer declared yesterday that the last sample ballot and pamphlet was personally mailed by him on the afternoon of October 26, two days before the limit fixed by law. Registrar McAleer personally took it upon himself to distribute hundreds of the pamphlets to various clubs, organizations and libraries so that the people might have a chance to peruse the varied and sundry measures to be voted upon next Tuesday.

The registrar personally handed the boss of the "Progressive" party in Southern California a dozen copies of the pamphlet several days before the date of the distribution fixed by the law.

The famous Johnson Legislature is responsible for the freaky law and not Registrar McAleer.

Political Notes.

A public meeting to consider the moral claims of the various political parties will be held in Blanchard Hall this evening. Each party will be represented by a speaker who will talk for fifteen minutes on the moral planks of its platform. The speakers will be Capt. H. Z. Osborne, Republican candidate for Congress; Nathan T. Newby, Democratic candidate for Congress; Frank G. Tyrrell, Ralph Criswell, Socialist Congressional candidate, and Henry Clay Needham, author of the Kansas Prohibition law, candidate for Congress. Reynold E. Blight will preside.

A committee of 1000, organized in the Third District, to further the candidacy of Sidney L. Briggs for Supervisor, is winding up a remarkable campaign made in behalf of this candidate. This committee is composed of prominent business men and women who are interested in the development of one of the largest sections of the county, the Third District, comprising practically all of the downtown business section and all of the Westlake, Wilshire and Hollywood territories.

Street meetings, accompanied with a fife and drum corps and red fire, were held last night throughout the Seventy-second Assembly District in behalf of Harry A. Chamberlin, the Republican nominee for State Assembly in that district. Besides Mr. Chamberlin, George P. Adams, Seward A. Simons, William J. Hanlon, H. L. Geisssler and Joseph Keough were the speakers.

Skilled workers in the oil fields, the highest paid mechanics in California, have taken their stand against the proposed universal eight-hour law which will appear upon next Tuesday's ballots as proposition 3, and as a consequence the oil districts are counted upon to return a good-sized majority against the measure.

Police Judge White, who is a candidate for re-election, addressed the engineers and firemen of the Southern Pacific railroad Friday night at their meeting, North Broadway and Workman street. Judge White talked upon the proposed amendments and was well received by the engineers and firemen, many of whom he has known for some years because of his long residence in East Los Angeles and his affiliation with the trainmen and enginemen while he was working in the trainmaster's office at Needles, Cal., some few years ago.

Two hundred farmers, headed by J. V. Enright of Pomona and C. L. Wilson of El Monte, have formed committees to further the candidacy of J. Vincent Hannon of Los Angeles in his contest for one of the ten judgeships of the Superior Court.

San Bernardino attorneys are circulating petitions asking Gov. Johnson to appoint Byron Waters, one of the most prominent lawyers in the county, as judge of the Superior Court to fill the unexpired term of Judge B. F. Bledsoe, who has been elevated to the Federal bench in Los Angeles. Mr. Waters declined to enter the judicial race to succeed Judge F. F. Oster, who retires at the end of this year, and his friends are said to have persuaded him to allow his name to be sent north for the appointment as Judge Bledsoe's successor.

Elmer R. McDowell, nominee for judge of the Superior Court, was guest of honor at the Shakespeare Club of Pasadena yesterday afternoon. He addressed the students of the Los Angeles High School last evening. This practically closed Mr. McDowell's campaign with the exception of a number of ten-minute speeches on Monday.

A Caddie of Experience.

[Boston Transcript:] A young man and young woman on the links were combating the games of golf and wooing.

"Here's a quarter, caddie," said the young man, as he started off with his arm around his fair companion's waist; "you want to forget this."

"Don't worry, sir," replied the caddie. "I've forgot more about that kind of business than you ever knew."

Hon. William P. James,
Present judge of the Appellate Court and a candidate for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Worthy.

FRIENDS RALLY TO JUDGE JAMES.

POPULAR CANDIDATE RUNS WELL FOR HIGH OFFICE.

Service on Bench and Favor with Which Candidacy has Met Generally Over State Give Rise to the Belief that He will be Elected to Supreme Bench.

Judge William P. James, now serving on the District Court of Appeals, is a candidate for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, and the ready manner in which his friends all over California, and particularly in Southern California, have come to his assistance with voluntary offers of support justifies the belief that he will be one of the two candidates elected to this high office.

Judge James, formerly a newspaper man, then a justice of the peace and later Superior and Appellate judge, has had a creditable career on the bench. He seems temperamentally suited for the judiciary and in all positions he has held, from the time he upset traditions in the justice court by making it a court of law, until now when he is concluding four years of service on the Appellate bench, he has demonstrated his personal fitness and the happy possession of the qualities that make a good judge.

In 1905 Judge James was appointed Superior judge and was elected for six years in 1906. In 1910 he defeated Judge Conrey for the Appellate bench.

It was in 1908 that the many friends of Judge James sought to have him nominated, as a Republican, for the office of Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. Southern California at that time had two members of the Supreme Court—Justices Shaw and VanDyke. After the regular State convention Judge VanDyke died, and a convention was called at Oakland to name a candidate to fill the vacancy.

The southern counties went to Oakland solidly supporting Judge James, but he was induced to withdraw his name on the ground that Judge Melvin was wanted by the bay cunty delegations and other counties of the north. It was said to Judge James at that time that if he would consent to the withdrawal of his name, at any other time when he might seek preferment the northern counties, and particularly Oakland, would stand with him. Judge James withdrew.

The voters in Oakland have not been thrilled over Judge James by Alameda county leaders; no streets have been set ablaze by local sentiment, and although Judge James will poll a big vote, there the obligation that rests upon the northern counties may or may not have been lost in the shuffle of the ever-changing system of our elections.

At any rate, Judge James will get a big vote in the north, as evidenced by his primary vote. In Southern California he will run well. He is supported by men and women of all parties, has been generally and generously indorsed, and should be elected. Southern California has a chance to assert itself upon this question.

DOING POLITICS.

STATE BUSINESS STOPPED.

The "Nobody Home" sign is out on the lawn at the State Capitol. The State's business has suffered a severe slump while the small-town stuff is being played by the State-paid employees. Four months ago, as an illustration of the paralysis of departmental business, the weights and measures of every city in California, excepting two, were sent to the State Sealer for certification.

Four months these instruments have been in Sacramento. Four months the State Sealer and his assistants have been so busy with other things—the chief thing being the attempt to re-elect Hiram Johnson—that they have not had a chance to send the weights and measures back, regularly certified.

The result has been that every city in California except Los Angeles and Santa Ana have been without the proper equipment to conduct their departments of inspection of weights and measures. The inspection has been halted. The State Sealer told City Sealer Harshman recently that he was holding all of the weights and measures up until after election because some city inspectors grew too active and might make enemies of some of the grocers or butchers for Gov. Johnson.

"The equipment of Los Angeles and Santa Ana is the only equipment not now in Sacramento," said the State Sealer. Harshman was asked to send his in, but declined, saying the weights and measures had been certified within the year and he would send them when there is a lull in the business.

Vote NO, on No. 26 on the Ballot

No. 26 on the election ballot is a proposed Constitutional Amendment, which, if carried, will take out of the hands of the Boards of Supervisors, Trustees of Irrigation, Drainage and Reclamation Districts all matters relating to those Districts and will place them under the control of a State commission.

In the event of the adoption of this measure all citizens living in Irrigation, Drainage and Reclamation Districts will have no voice in the management and direction of the affairs of these districts. Taxes will be levied on them and the affairs of these districts will be vested in a State Commission. We believe in home rule in local affairs and we desire the defeat of No. 26 on the ballot, as a pernicious measure against the interests of the whole people.

exists solely because of my own mistakes, there would be no sea deep enough for me in which to drown myself.

"The Governor of this State, during the last four years, had his eyes fixed on something else and prosperity slipped away. He had dreams and was just wrong—wrong. I have been to many mills in my sojourn over the State and everywhere they are running on half or two-thirds time. Managers told me they were working shifts of five and six hours a day, using the married men and giving the single men a chance to go elsewhere and do the best they could for themselves. I am no prophet of evil and I cannot put the sole blame upon the Democratic party, but it surely rests to a great extent upon this party or movement, which has been responsible for the defeat of the Republican party.

"If we have no party at all in the majority or in strong minority, we find bad conditions. If we elected a bunch of individuals as individuals only, we would never know what they are going to do. As a party, however, the elected officers have a cohesive power to adhere to.

"When Johnson ran for Governor, and after I had made some speeches suggesting railroad and rate regulation by commission, long before the modern Railroad Commission was heard of, these same men who are now at the head of the 'Progressive' faction sought me out and wanted me to break from the Republican party and be a candidate for Governor. I refused to be a party to any such deal and I have had my lambasting from these men ever since."

At Glendale Capt. Fredericks referred to the prosperity under a Republican administration that was reflected in the improvements in that pretty city, in the foothill homes that had been built, and he asked the real estate men present how much business they were doing.

"Not a nickel's worth," shouted one.

C. F. Parker and Mrs. Ella F. Meeker headed a big delegation of automobiles that greeted Capt. Fredericks just outside of Glendale yesterday, and John R. White, Jr., was chairman at the street-corner meeting.

Last night Capt. Fredericks visited the Elks' ball at the Shrine Auditorium and except for an address before the Women's City Club and the Manual Arts High School Monday, his campaigning work is over.

In his tour of the county yesterday he was accompanied by Frank C. Roberts and Capt. Osborne, Congressional candidates; County Chairman Bowen, Mrs. O. P. Clark, head of the Women's Fredericks "Flying Squadron;" Leo V. Youngworth, and many others.

SNYDER MAKES HIT.

Joseph V. Snyder, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, who has been indorsed by thousands of Republicans all over California as a protest against the theft of the Republican nomination by John Eshleman, is winding up an effective Statewide campaign along the "mother lode," where he was born and raised, and where he will get all the Democratic vote and most of the Republican.

Reports from the north are that El Dorado will give him 1000 plurality; Yolo, 500; Solano, 700; 80 per cent. of the Republican vote in Napa, and 1000 plurality in Sonoma. The betting in San Francisco is that he will carry that city and county and predictions have been made that his plurality will be 15,000. He will carry Los Angeles county as well, according to local prognosticators.

SUPREME COURT.

A Chief Justice and two Associate Justices of the Supreme Court are to be elected next Tuesday.

Judge Angelotti is the Republican candidate for Chief Justice, and Judges Lucien Shaw and William P. James are the Republican candidates for Associate Justices.

Southern California Republicans, desirous that Southern California be represented on the Supreme bench, should vote for Judges Shaw and James. Vote for both.

Judge Shaw's term expires this year and he is a candidate for re-election. He does not hold over.

Vote for Judges James and Shaw for Associate Justices.

Lyon's Platform.

Charles W. Lyon, candidate for Assemblyman from the Sixty-second Assembly District, has waged a vigorous campaign and his supporters are predicting that he will be elected. He is a lawyer residing in Venice and has a host of friends in his district. Mr. Lyon is a native of Los Angeles, 27 years old. He is associated in the practice of his profession with the law firm of Hanna, Musgrove and Lyon. He is a member of several fraternal organizations and also of the board of directors of the Venice Chamber of Commerce.. He has pledged himself to work for an amendment of the State auto tax upon the theory that the tonnage of automobiles should be made the basis of taxation rather than the size of the cylinder and the taxes so collected be pro rata in accordance with the number of automobiles in each county.

REMINDERS FOR STATE BUILDING.

HORNS AND WHISTLES TO BLOW IN UNISON TUESDAY.

Mayor Issues Request that Auto Owners and Others Join in the Noise with Blasts at 10 O'clock. Work for Amendments Progresses Well at North.

The honks of 60,000 automobile horns will join with a chorus of factory whistles and fog horns at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning as an oral reminder to the electors of Los Angeles that the State buildings propositions, known as Nos. 35, 36 and 38, must not be overlooked on the ballot.

A proclamation to that effect will be issued by the Mayor tomorrow, requesting all citizens owning whistles and auto horns of any and all descriptions to watch the clock on Tuesday morning and then, promptly at 10 o'clock, toot away to beat the band, three blasts each time and libitum. Each of the three blasts will mean one of the amendments; or in other words, "blow your horn three times for the three amendments" and repeat the operation as often as you please.

Here is the proclamation of the Mayor:

"Fellow-Citizens: It has come to my knowledge that the cities of Sacramento and San Francisco, by proclamation of their respective Mayors, have prevailed upon their citizens to make use of factory whistles, steamship whistles and automobile horns at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, to remind the voters of the desirability and necessity to indorse the State buildings amendments, Nos. 35, 36 and 38, at the polls.

"As Mayor of the city of Los Angeles, I believe it to be my duty to reciprocate the action of the northern cities, which are promoting our interests as well as their own.

"I, therefore, urge upon every factory owner, every automobilist or other possessor of noise-making devices to give, or cause to be given, three loud and distinctive blasts in rapid succession at 10 o'lock on the morning of election day, the demonstation to last ten minutes."

This arrangement of co-operation between the three cities was reached yesterday after a conference between the Mayors of Sacramento and San Francisco and Phillip D. Wilson, secretary of the Los Angeles Joint Civic Committee, in regard to the best means of reminding the electors of the State of the importance to them of the non-partisan issues involved in the State buildings amendments.

On his flying trip north Secretary Wilson found that the people of Sacramento and San Francisco have been working hard to foster the passage of the three amendments. The following telegram was received yesterday from Secretary Wilson, who is in Sacramento, at the headquarters of the Joint Civic Committee, No. 631 South Spring street:

"Northern cities doing noble work for Los Angeles in urging ratification of amendments 35, 36 and 38 for State buildings. It should be a matter of pride, typical of Southern California, to return the compliment by impressing all voters with urgency of favorable action on all three amendments, thereby furthering the cause of good relationship and promoting the thing that will directly serve the people."

A telegram showing the scope of the campaign waged in behalf of the State building amendments in the northern cities was received yesterday by President Mines of the Los Angeles Realty Board from George W. Peltier, vice-president of the National Bank of California at Sacramento, and S. Glen Andrus, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Sacramento. It follows:

We are creating great enthusiasm for all of the bond issues. We are working just as hard for yours as for ours. All signs point to a big favorable vote. We are covering all points of vantage through press, theaters and movies. Have four men on the road doing all principal towns in both San Joaquin and Sacramento Valleys. Keep up the good work in the south and we will win all the issues.

Misrepresentations Corrected.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 31.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In the paid advertisement of the "drys" appearing in your issue of today, the correctness of the amount collected for liquor licenses in this city as stated in our circular is disputed; and with a view of deceiving the voters of this city it is attempted to show that the liquor licenses, instead of being $694,200 per year, only amount to $224,040. The Prohibitionists prove how insincere and dishonest they are in their statements to the voters. To substantiate their misleading and false accusations they quoted from the Auditor's record of 1913, page 58, when they know that all licenses have since been increased and that the total amount of liquor licenses paid in this city is $694,200, as proven in our circular.

I have carefully refrained from answering the misleading, dishonest and insincere statements of the "dry" campaigners in their attempt to refute the figures sent out by our association, but the above falsification put before the voters, knowing it to be malicious, is one of the many infamous attempts that have been made to bolster ly a bad case.

The Dying Bull Moose Party.

PASADENA, Oct. 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] It may be of interest to the younger generation of our American citizens who are about to cast their votes at the election, November 3, to be reminded of the fact that within the past forty years of our nation's history there have been "born, nurtured and died" some ten or more political parties—all of them like the so-called "Progressives"—started by ambitious, disappointed politicians who failed in their efforts to control, for their own selfish interests, one of the two great political parties of the country. In nearly all cases the old Republican party was made the object of attack, with the boast that it and the Democratic party would soon cease to exist as such, while their own "band" of politics would save the country from disaster if they were permitted to administer its affairs.

We had the "Know Nothings" or "American" party; then came the "Greenbackers" party; then the "Populists" party; then the "People's" party; then the "Grangers'" party and the "Middle-of-the-road" Populists; then the "Dolly Varden" party and the "Mugwumps." All of those parties have had their day, and all of them have been decently buried, while the old Republican party of the nation has withstood every assault, and is now as full of vigor as it was in the old and stormy days of its birth, now more than half a century ago.

It is remarkable that when those "parties of disappointed political ambition" were formed the leaders of them loudly proclaimed the speedy dissolution of both the old parties of the nation, but particularly of the Republican, just as the founders of the so-called "Progressive" party of today have predicted is to happen to it.

When the Bull Moose party came into existence in 1912, the Old Guard Republican party was given by them just ten years more of life! Since that time, however, political events throughout the country, showing the vast number of "Progressives" who have returned to the Republican fold, prove that the Republican party is still in a very healthy condition and is stronger than ever for the continuance of the work which its great, patriotic founders laid out for it to do. And it is fulfilling the great trust laid upon it by them, for the good of all our people. ADAM T. GREEN.

DOUBLE HONOR FOR "FIRSTS."

Passengers Coming Here Through Canal Reserve Rooms at New Hotel Before Anyone Else.

The first visitors coming to Los Angeles by way of Panama to reserve a room in advance are also the first who have asked for reservation in the new $1,000,000 Rosslyn Hotel, which throws open its doors on November 10.

The reservation was made by Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Lockwood, who are sailing on the Luckenbach of the line of that name next week. The letter came to Dwight Hart and the travelers, because of the distinction of their trip, will be given special attention, also because of the fact that they are the initial travelers asking for a room in the new hotel.

The Most Harmful of the Job Lot of Forty-eight.

Of all the vicious propositions on the ballot, the most hurtful and most deserving of defeat are: No. 2 (confiscation and prohibition;) No. 3 (eight hour law;) No. 7 (local taxation exemption—single tax on land;) and No. 45 (Sunday rest law so-called, really another eight-hour law.) It is to the advantage of every thrifty citizen to vote NO on these propositions, as well as on many others. And the best way is to vote NO on any proposition you do not understand. When in doubt, VOTE NO—that is the only safe course.

The Way to Vote.

THE TIMES' ANALYSIS OF PROPOSITIONS ON BALLOT.

Many Measures Artfully Worded to Hide Their Real Purpose will Work a Hardship on the People if Passed. All of the Propositions for Bond Issues are Just and Should be Supported.

IN ITS issue of Sunday, October 25, The Times analyzed at some length the forty-eight propositions upon which the voters will pass judgment. The Times recommended the adoption of twenty-two of the propositions, the rejection of twenty-four, and because of the valid reasons for honest disagreement of opinion, declined to give a definite verdict on the remaining two.

The Times believes that the best interests of the State will be served by following the recommendations which are made after a long and careful study of the various propositions; and which, briefly stated, are as follows:

Proposition No. 1. Vote No. If carried, it authorizes a convention for the purpose of revising the State Constitution. The expense will be about $1,000,000. The present Constitution has some defects, but they may be endured and remedied from time to time without the dangerous method of submitting a whole, complicated and perhaps faddish Constitution to the people at one time. Vote No on Proposition No. 1.

Proposition No. 2. Vote No. Its purpose is to establish prohibition in California. But as there is no Federal prohibition law, it could not be enforced because alcoholic liquors could be imported by parcel post from adjoining States, and the manufacturers and vendors of intoxicating liquors in adjoining States would be benefitted by the destruction of home industry in California. Vote No on Proposition No. 2.

Vote No on Proposition No. 3. If carried, it will establish a stringent eight-hour working day for all employees throughout the State, and punish by fine or imprisonment those who permit any person to work more than eight hours, though overtime is paid for the service. This proposition is especially opposed by the farmers, who will sustain heavy losses on their crops and vineyards if an hour limit is set on the time that shall be allowed to gather harvests. The amendment would ruin small employers, prevent the employment of domestics by people of ordinary means and deprive thousands of men and women of their jobs. Vote No on Proposition No. 3.

Proposition No. 4. Vote No. Its purpose in seeking to abolish prostitution is commendable, but the method is not only ineffectual, but opens a wide avenue for graft and abuse. The owner of property—who may be entirely innocent—will be punished if any persons use the property for immoral purposes. There are now laws and municipal ordinances covering almost every phase of the evil. It would be better for the citizens to see that the existing laws are enforced than to experiment with so dangerous and unjust a measure as is proposed. Vote No on Proposition No. 4.

Proposition No. 5. Vote No. It proposes to create a State corporation department, and will allow the commissioner appointed by the Governor to draw a salary of $5000 and sit in judgment over every investment company and investment broker in the State, and may regulate their business to suit himself. It offers a fine arrangement for political purposes, but is dangerous and unnecessary in honest government. Vote No on Proposition No. 5.

Proposition No. 6. Vote No. It proposes to give the control of all the water in the State, surface and underground, into the hands of a political commission, whose members will be paid salaries of $5000 each per year, and who will only hold office at the pleasure of the Governor. This commission will involve unlimited expense and will hold a political club over every man or firm dependent upon water for power or irrigation. Vote No on Proposition No. 6.

Proposition No. 7. Vote No. The purpose of this proposition is hidden, but its effect will be to allow any county to adopt the single tax theory, and put the whole of the public burden on property owners. This would lead to two forms of taxation in the State. A similar proposition was defeated by the people two years ago because it was realized how discriminating and burdensome the theory would be in effect. It has lost none of its evil features in the meantime. Vote No on Proposition No. 7.

Proposition No. 8. Vote Yes. It exempts from taxation until 1935 all vessels except those used for State purposes and weighing less than fifty tons, registered at any port in the State and engaged in the transportation of freight or passengers. This exemption will give needed benefit and encouragement to our commerce. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 8.

Proposition No. 9. Vote No. It is a measure similar to Proposition No. 5. Vote No on Proposition No. 9.

Proposition No. 10. Vote No. If carried, the poll tax will be abolished. The revenue from this tax amounts to $1,100,000, and is used for the support of the common schools and for road and hospital purposes. It is a tax paid by rich and poor alike—and the only tax that many people receiving protection and service from the government do pay. Vote No on Proposition No. 10.

Proposition No. 11. Vote Yes. It provides for the issuance and sale of $1,800,000 of State bonds for the completion and construction of buildings at the University of California. This institution should never be hampered for funds, and at present many of its buildings are old and unfit for the use to which they are put. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 11.

Proposition No. 12. Vote Yes. It provides for a new method of electing delegates to constitution conventions, and will be necessary if Proposition No. 1 is carried. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 12.

Proposition No. 13. Vote Yes. This is an equitable measure providing that only property owners may vote on questions of incurring bonded indebtedness which will be paid by taxes against their property. Only those who have to pay the principle and interest of the debt will be allowed to say whether or not the debt shall be incurred. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 13.

Proposition No. 14. This measure provides that a voter who is unavoidably absent from the State may be allowed to vote by mail. There is much to be said on both sides, and at present The Times has no advice to offer.

Proposition No. 15. Vote No. The veiled purpose of this proposition is to put "surety companies," whose business is to furnish criminal bonds, attachment bonds and other bonds, in a financial classification with the State of California, or the city and county of Los Angeles. It proposes to make "surety bonds" as valuable as the gilt-edge securities of the best businesses—as government bonds. It is a tricky and dangerous measure. Vote No on Proposition No. 15.

Proposition No. 16. Vote Yes. It provides that State, city or county may condemn and acquire property needed for proposed improvements without the consent of other county or municipality. At present, property can only be acquired that is actually needed for present use, and thus comprehensive development on the part of many counties and cities is hindered. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 16.

Proposition No. 17. Vote Yes. It will allow Alameda county to incur, providing the consent of two-thirds of the voters in the county is given, $1,000,000 bonded indebtedness to aid the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 17.

Proposition No. 18. Vote No. The effect of this non-sale-of-game law will be to prevent any man from eating game unless he is a hunter and kills the game himself. It will allow the gun club members to kill and give the game away to friends, but prevents the man without such friends from purchasing game. Vote No on Proposition No. 18.

Proposition No. 19. Vote Yes. It will allow cities of 50,000 population ernment, as has been done by San Francisco. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 19.

Proposition No. 20. Vote No. The purpose of this measure is to keep those who enjoy prize fighting from witnessing anything but "moral boxing." The present law against prize fighting is stringent enough to keep the sport clean and allow it to be enjoyed by the best class of citizens. The day when bar-room toughs controlled the prize ring is passed. Vote No on Proposition No. 20.

Proposition No. 21. Vote No. This proposition proposes to limit the right to consolidate to cities of 175,000 people. It has nothing to recommend it. Vote No on Proposition No. 21.

Proposition No. 22. This is an initiative act amending the Torrens Act for the certification of land titles. At present The Times has no comment to make on this proposition.

Proposition No. 23. Vote No. It provides that the ballots for the primary election shall be printed so that a voter may designate a second and a third choice for any office. This would complicate the direct-primary mode of election, which is now an expensive and undesirable process, and should be wiped out instead of being made more intricate and complicated. Vote No on Proposition No. 23.

Proposition No. 24. Vote No. Without any justification whatever, it would increase the amount allowed for employees of the Assembly from $500 to $600 per day while the Legislature is in session. It is only an attempt to increase the patronage graft. Vote No on Proposition No. 24.

Proposition No. 25. Vote Yes. This will allow cities of more than 3500 population to adopt charters and prescribes the methods thereof. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 25.

Proposition No. 26. Vote Yes. This measure, if carried, will remove all doubt as to the right of the State to supervise and regulate and conduct the work in reclamation and irrigation districts. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 26.

Proposition No. 27. Vote Yes. It makes provisions for county charters that will be beneficial for counties composed of a mixed urban and rural population. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 27.

Proposition No. 28. Vote No. It proposes to take away from municipalities all powers except those which relate to local police and sanitation regulations, and give over the entire control to the Railroad Commission and politicians thereon. Vote No on Proposition No. 28.

Proposition No. 29. Vote Yes. It provides that county officers may perform municipal functions in those municipalities where the citizens so determine. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 29.

Proposition No. 30. Vote No. This proposition is inimical to the interests of the people of Imperial Valley, as it authorizes irrigation districts situated partly in the United States and partly in Mexico to purchase stock of any foreign corporation holding title to the part situated in a foreign country. Vote No on Proposition No. 30.

Proposition No. 31. Vote No. This would authorize the Railroad Commission to exercise such power as the Legislature may confer on it to fix the compensation paid property of public utility condemned by State, county, municipality or municipality district. Further power on the part of this commission is unnecessary and unwarranted. Vote No on Proposition No. 31.

Proposition No. 32. Vote Yes. This will remove the restriction which does not allow the Governor to be elected to the United States Senate during his term of office. There is nothing unjust in removing this restriction. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 32.

Proposition No. 33. Vote No. If carried, this will allow a municipality to confiscate public utility property. At present the municipality can fix the rate of public utilities and that is all the power that it is equitable for municipalities to have. Vote No on Proposition No. 33.

Proposition No. 34. Vote Yes. This proposition will make taxable all lands and improvements thereon owned by a county or municipality beyond its own limits. Los Angeles, at present, pays taxes on its acreage in the Owens River Valley and San Francisco refuses to pay taxes on the $1,000,000 worth of property it owns in Tuolumne county. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 34.

Proposition Nos. 35, 36, 37 and 38. Vote Yes. All of these involve the issuance of State bonds for the erection of State buildings at Sacramento, San Francisco and Los Angeles. The appropriations are not excessive and the buildings are needed. Vote Yes on Propositions Nos. 35, 36, 37 and 38.

Proposition No. 39. Vote Yes. This provides if the prohibition amendment (No. 2) is adopted, that its enforcement shall be suspended within the State until February 15, 1915, and as to manufacture and transportation to points outside of the State until January 1, 1916. This will give a brief time for the manufacturers to dispose of their products and prevent their loss from being complete. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 39.

Proposition No. 40. Vote No. This is a proposition with another political kink in it, and gives the Governor the right to call an extra session of the District Court of Appeals of any district, which session shall be held by three judges, one of whom shall be selected by the Governor. It is a bad measure. Vote No on Proposition No. 40.

Proposition No. 41. Vote Yes. This proposition will prevent the appeal of cases in court on mere technicalities. It is one of the measures deserving support. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 41.

Proposition No. 42. Vote Yes. This will allow municipalities or other public corporations issuing bonds to make them payable any place within or without the United States. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 42.

Proposition No. 43. Vote Yes. Every State in the Union except California exempts college property from taxation. This measure will exempt it in California. Vote Yes on Proposition No. 43.

Proposition No. 44. Vote No. This provides for a minimum wage for women and children, allows the incompetent to earn as much as the competent and destroys the employee's incentive to do better work. Vote No on Proposition No. 44.

Proposition No. 45. Vote No. One purpose of this measure is to make everybody observe Sunday, and prohibits the keeping open of places of business on that day. It is discriminating, unjust, and a violation of the personal liberty of citizenship. Furthermore it is an eight-hour law in another form, making it a penal offense to employ a person more than eight hours a day or forty-eight hours a week. Vote No on Proposition No. 45.

Proposition No. 46. Vote Yes. This provides for the creation of a State board for drugless physicians, and admits them to practice the same as any other doctor, but they will not be licensed as an M.D. (medical doctor,) but as a D.P. (drugless physician.) Vote Yes on Proposition No. 46.

Proposition No. 47. Vote No. It prohibits the question of liquor prohibition from being presented to the voters of the State in any form for a period of eight years, and is palpably an infringement of popular rights. Vote No on Proposition No. 47.

Proposition No. 48. Vote Yes. This provides for the improvement of the San Francisco harbor and for the payment of all costs out of the San Francisco harbor funds. The State loans its credit to San Francisco by issuing harbor bonds for which San Francisco must pay. Vote Yes.

SANTA FE MAY BUY?

Believed Here that it will Bid in New Mexico Central at Receiver's Sale.

Acquisition of the New Mexico Central Railroad by the Santa Fe and its extension from Torrance to Roswell, where it will connect with the Pecos branch and open up a virgin agricultural territory along Salt Creek and other branches of the Pecos River, is considered probable in railroad circles. The road, which is owned by Pittsburgh men, was to have been sold under receivership this month, but the date of the sale has been set forward. The New Mexico Central runs from Santa Fe to Torrance, 116 miles.

Roswell, incidentally, is the goal of a number of roads now building, including the Quanah, Acme and Pacific Railroad, which is being extended from Roaring Springs, Tex., 200 miles, and the Van Horn Valley Land and Railroad Company, which is building a line through the Van Horn Valley of Texas.

Both Vicious.

VOTE AGAINST THE TWO EIGHT-HOUR PROPOSITIONS.

It is a part of the punishment of a convict in a penitentiary that he cannot choose his own time for work and rest. By the proposed eight-hour law on the ballot (proposition No. 3,) and the Sunday law, (proposition No. 45,) it is designed to rank the working men and women of this State with thieves and assassins in that it prescribes the number of hours in which they will be permitted to work and fixes one day in the week in which they must absolutely abstain from work. A Jew or Seventh Day Adventist may or may not honor his Sabbath, which falls on Saturday, but he must abstain from labor on the Christian Sabbath.

Is that the freedom to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience which the Constitution assumes to guarantee to every man?

The wrong and outrage of the eight-hour law and the eight-hour clause in the Sunday law is that it takes away the liberty of men and women. It makes of them slaves and the slavery is not any the more tolerable because a law instead of a man is the master.

The eight-hour law is hypocritical as well as tyrannical. It is assumed by its inconsiderate and unthinking advocates to be a measure for the benefit of working men and women, but its operations could not fail to work them great injury. It would lessen their compensation and limit their opportunities of obtaining and retaining employment. An employer who hires eight men who work nine hours a day, would be compelled under the proposed law to hire an additional man in order to obtain the same amount of work. Will he suffer the loss of the ninth man's wages himself or will be deduct it from the wages of the other eight? To ask the question is to answer it.

Large employers of labor would adjust their business to the new law by paying less for eight hours' work than they now pay for nine hours. Would that benefit the workers?

How would it be with the employer of two men who work nine hours per day? He pays these men $3 per day each. His business requires eighteen hours' work and no more. It cannot be transacted with less. The proposed law will compel him to hire a third man and the eighteen hours' work will be divided between them so that each worker will receive $2 per day instead of $3. How would the workers benefit?

Must the chauffeur run his auto into the garage when the eighth hour expires, and leave his passenger to walk home or become a strap-hanger on a trolley car?

Must the cook abandon the kitchen when the eighth hour expires and leave the family to make a meal of cold victuals?

Must the trained nurse seize her bonnet and depart when the eighth hour expires and leave her patient to measure his own medicine and prop himself up when he takes it—if he can?

Must the farm hand, when the eighth hour is up, leave the plow in the furrow, the loaded wagon in the road, the team unfed, and the cow unmilked?

Must the telegraph operator, when the eighth hour strikes, refuse to receive or transmit, and the messenger boy to deliver, a message?

Must there be no newspapers delivered on Sunday, and none printed on that day for delivery on Monday, and none issued on any day except those whose proprietors can afford to pay two men for the work now done by one man?

There is not an industrial occupation in which both the employer and the employed would not be disastrously affected by this proposed tyrannical eight-hour law. Is there any man, whether employer or employee, who would be benefited by it?

In most of the trades, work is now done upon an eight-hour basis. Where it is not so done, it is because it would be unprofitable to both worker and employer to be so limited.

To force men by law to adopt any rule which they have not found to their advantage to prescribe and follow without a law would be a folly productive of loss and inconvenience to many and benefit to none.

No victim of Procrustes ever benefited by having his feet cut off if they exceeded eight hours in length.

The proposed eight-hour and the proposed "Sunday rest law" (also an eight-hour law,) taken together or separately, are invasions of individual freedom and would establish a slavery as unendurable to free men as that which the nation abolished fifty years ago. The introducers of these measures were probably not really so vicious as they were meddlesome. But if these laws should be adopted, their promoters will earn the place in California history that Balaam's four-legged companion occupies in scriptural annals.

PURITY SQUAD MAY BE PURER NOW.

ITS HEAD SENT TO FOG BELT FOLLOWING RAID; HOME NOW IN CHARGE.

Sergt. William Hackett, formerly in charge of the "purity squad" of the police department, was summarily withdrawn from command of that squad yesterday and placed in a minor position at the University Station. He is succeeded by Inspector George Home.

The transfer is in the nature of a scandal, following a series of raids made Friday night without the knowledge of Sergt. Hackett. Complaints had come to the office of the Chief of Police through the systematic avenues of information that lead to that office, relating that gambling was in progress in many places, and that houses of a disorderly nature were permitted to operate with little difficulty from the hands of the police.

So current were the reports that word was given to arrange for a series of raids without the knowledge of the police officer in charge. The result was the arrest of twenty-eight men and two women, four gambling rooms being raided. One lodging-house was raided, and two women taken from there.

The results of the raid were considered sufficient proof that a change was needed in the administration of the "purity squad" and the transfer of Sergt. Hackett to the University division was made yesterday.

Inspector Home, who assumes charge of the squad, is considered one of the most efficient officers in the department. He recently accomplished the arrest of Percy Tugwell, after other members of the department had pronounced the boy unimplicated in the death of Mrs. Kennedy. Last year, as leader of the flying squadron, Inspector Home made a record for the number of important arrests made by his men. Several notable criminals were identified by him and driven from the city before they had an opportunity to begin criminal work here.

Because of his unusual executive ability, Inspector Home was taken from the detective bureau, and placed in a confidential position in the office of the Chief. Hhe position of head of the "purity squad" is considered one of the most trying and difficult positions in the department.

The pumpkin is twenty inches in diameter and weighs eighty pounds. The girl is Miss Bess Bromley of Los Angeles. HOW GOVERNOR JOHNSON HAS SOAKED THE STATE.

Amazing Official Record of Extravagance and Boss Politics that Have Cost the People of California Millions of Dollars—Indictments that Have Stood the Test of Challenge—Not Mere Accusations, but Facts.

GOV. HIRAM JOHNSON stands convicted by his own silence of being afraid of even attempting to answer questions addressed to him by the people of California. So long ago as last February, The Times presented almost a half-hundred specific and pertinent indictments against Gov. Johnson. Those indictments and others that came to light afterwards have been reiterated from time to time. But Gov. Johnson has remained silent; his apologists have remained silent; his press agents have remained silent.

The facts and figures which The Times is now presenting have been printed and reprinted over and over again. They are so damaging that many people have been surprised that Earl's papers or Johnson's press agents, or Johnson himself, have not attempted in any way to answer them. The explanation is simple. The truth is unanswerable. Practically every statement that The Times has made is a matter of public record and cannot be denied—cannot be disputed.

THE QUESTION OF EXTRAVAGANCE.

The Johnson administration has cost the people of California $33,317,599.

Under the previous State administration the total appropriations amounted to but $25,927,263, notwithstanding the fact that great sums were required for rehabilitating and reconstructing State property destroyed and damaged in the earthquake and fire of 1906.

A more reasonable comparison may be made with the Pardee administration—as neither Johnson's nor Pardee's was called upon to restore or reconstruct any State property destroyed by unavoidable causes.

The Pardee administration cost the State $18,093,805. THE JOHNSON ADMINISTRATION HAS COST $15,223,420 MORE, or an increase of 84¾ per cent. No sane person will maintain for a single instant that the increase in the business of the State has been 84 per cent. during the past ten years—but the expenditures in the administration of the State have increased that amount.

SPECIFIC INSTANCES OF EXTRAVAGANCE.

Let no one have the opinion that it is necessary to deal in generalities—as Johnson and his apologists do—in discussing these evils.

Under the Johnson administration is has cost the State $3,673,340 to support the various commissions and boards; under the previous administration it cost the State $1,318,690. Johnson created fifteen new commissions. But it has cost the State under Johnson just $1,955,470 to run the same old commissions that existed under the previous administration, and which cost some $600,000 less under that administration.

In 1909 there was no State Board of Control, but a State Board of Examiners effectively did the work necessary and required an appropriation of $44,760. Under the Johnson administration the appropriation for the State Board of Control for the year 1913 alone was $182,700; and the total cost of the Board of Control under the Johnson administration has been $389,800. Deduct $44,760 from $389,800 and you will have evidence why your tax bills are higher.

STATE CAPITOL AND GROUNDS.

In 1909 an appropriation of $56,760 was sufficient to cover the needs and expenditures of the State Capitol and Grounds Department. At that time the control of the State Cpaitol and grounds was under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of State. Johnson had the Legislature transfer the control of this department to his own office; he now appoints the superintendent, and the superintendent only holds office at the pleasure of the Governor. Yet, under Johnson's personal supervision an appropriation of $211,695 was required. The State Capitol and grounds have not grown; there has been no perceptible increase in the needs and business of the department, but under the "efficient" supervision of the Governor himself it has required almost four times as much of an appropriation.

THE RAILROAD COMMISSION.

When Johnson went into office the members of the Railroad Commission were elected by the people. Johnson had this prerogative taken away by the Legislature and the power of appointment was transferred to him. Under the previous administration it cost the State just $96,900 for the support of the Railroad Commission. Under the Johnson administration it has cost the State $533,600—or more than a half-million dollars. AND THE RAILROAD COMMISSION IS ALSO ALLOWED TO KEEP AND USE SUCH MONEY AS MAY ACCRUE THROUGH FINES IMPOSED BY ITSELF.

OTHER COMMISSIONS AND BOARDS.

The increased expenditures of the Johnson administration are not confined to one or two commissions. We can go right down the list and show that the cost has doubled and trebled, and it is preposterous to say that the increase in the State's business has warranted such an increase in expenditures.

But Johnson has made places for his friends, and the friends of his friends—and all of those jobs cost money. Look at your tax bills and see.

Under Johnson's administration the Forestry Board has cost $123,300. Under the previous administration it cost just $52,400.

Under the Johnson administration the Horticultural Commission cost $210,800. Under the previous administration it cost but $96,000. We admit that the horticultural interests of the State are great and should be assisted; but they are not being assisted when money is squandered for the employment of politicians and loafers against the day when they will be called to the polls to vote for the party that has given them jobs.

The fifteen new commissions which Johnson created have cost the State $1,720,870.

THE POLITICS IN THE COMMISSIONS.

The purpose of having so many commissions is PURELY POLITICAL. Johnson appoints most of the commissioners; they only hold office at the "pleasure of the Governor." Johnson has taken great pains to have the commissions arranged so that he appoints all the members and has the right to "fire" them when they don't play politics to suit him. Most of the commissions are allowed to employ as much help as they "see fit" and to pay whatever salaries they "see fit." In this way it is easy to put all of the friends of the friends of the Governor on the pay roll and to keep them there. These friends and friends of friends are expected to vote as the Governor pleases—and they do vote that way. Thus under the very noses of the citizens of California one of the most perfect and complete political machines ever known has been built up. That is why the new commissions have been created; that is why the old commissions have cost more; that is why Johnson is now endeavoring to have new commissions created.

JOHNSON'S PUBLIC RECORD.

Johnson rejoices in referring to himself as a "friend of the people"—and in telling how much he loves them and all of that sort of demagogic bunk.

Very well. It is known that Johnson defended one of the most notorious scoundrels that ever appeared in California—Dalzell Brown, the San Francisco banker who looted his bank. In the distress that followed there were more suicides occasioned among poor people over the loss of funds than by any bank failure in the history of California. It was a bank that had made a special effort to secure deposits from the poor, and its failure caused widespread distress among those who had lost their savings.

Hiram Johnson defended this fellow and secured a light sentence for him. And Johnson defended himself for defending the scoundrel with the laconic sentence: "Man must eat."

SOME OTHER FACTS ON HIS RECORD.

During the times that Gov. Johnson was out of the State campaigning to have himself elected as Vice-President he made heavier demands against the secret service fund than at any time previous. The inference is obvious. Yet he has never offered to explain what occasion there was for using more secret service fund money when out of the State on a purely personal campaign than when in the State attending to the State's business. Just before he started East on his trip the records show he drew $1556.50 from the secret service fund. Gov. Gillett only spent $1685 during the last two years of his administration—Johnson has already drawn over $14,000 from that fund.

It is well known that Johnson was hard pressed for money to finance his campaign for the Vice-Presidency. In fact, the situation was so desperate that Senator Edward Bryant, whom Johnson appointed to a position on the San Francisco water front, compelled State employees to purchase "Roosevelt Progressive League Certificates" at prices ranging from $10 to $50 and the money was devoted to financing Johnson's campaign. It was a plain case of extortion—the employees had to pay or lose their jobs. These facts were published at the time—they have been published time and again since. Johnson has never attempted to explain or to answer.

JOHNSON'S PERSONAL EXPENSES.

Johnson gets more money out of the State for himself than many people think. His $10,000 per year salary doesn't begin to cover it. The salary for the four years is $40,000; in addition there is $35,000 given him for the support of the Governor's mansion; and there is also the sum of $20,000 (secret service fund.) Both of these later sums were made exempt by the Legislature under Johnson, so that the Governor can get warrants for the money without having the same audited. But it is all the people's money—the people have a right to know how it is spent.

The money received by the Governor and by his personal attaches amounts to $163,200—or some $30,000 more than was received by the Governor and personal attaches under the previous administration.

At one time, Johnson allowed his executive secretary to draw a salary as secretary of the Capitol Grounds Commissioners when the commissioners held no meetings and had no duties. We understand that after The Times called attention to this fact, the Governor's secretary lost this plum.

EFFICIENT OR "DEFICIENT" GOVERNMENT?

Gov. Johnson has had much to say about the "efficiency" of his administration. Evidently he relies upon the general ignorance of the public, which, being busy with its own affairs, cannot always give keen attention to the plays of politics.

One of the most striking examples of Johnson "efficiency" is seen in the fact that Johnson had Alden Anderson legislated out of the office as Bank Commissioner. Mr. Anderson was an experienced banker, and also was experienced in the office of Bank Commissioner. What is more, he was a gentleman and respected as such by those who knew him. But Johnson did not like Anderson, and had the Legislature take the office away from him, so that he—Gov. Johnson—might make the appointment to it. The Governor appointed a personal friend of his own—W. R. Williams—who never had any experience in a bank or banking, and whose lack of knowledge was the source of amusement to many attorneys. Williams was given a salary of $10,000 per year.

The State records show that Williams spent almost twice as much money closing up the affairs of banks as was spent by Anderson. One specific example will serve. Alden Anderson, after he had been removed from office, offered to take over the Bank of Shasta, which was in difficulty—and liquidate at 95 per cent. Williams refused, closed the bank, and liquidated at 87½ per cent. The depositors and stockholders sustained a loss of over $50,000 by this Johnsonian maneuver. A large part of that $50,000 loss went to pay "special counsel" and other hangers-on in the State banking department, of whom Hiram Johnson, Jr. (son of the Governor) was one, and has been for some three years.

NEPOTISM AND FAVORITISM.

The State banking department afforded Johnson opportunity to take care, not only of his son, but also of A. A. de Ligne, formerly connected with Johnson's law office, who was appointed superintendent of banks. Dennis Duffy, also formerly connected with Johnson's law office, was made president of the Prison Board; and Carl Westerfield, formerly in Johnson's law office, was appointed to the Fish and Game Commission; and Robert Duke, formerly of Johnson's law office, was appointed attorney for the Fish and Game Commission.

Personal friends of the Governor—those friends who could be relied upon to play politics—have fared well under the Progressive regime.

Yes, and those fellows who served Johnson faithfully in his petty fights against other office-holders, against whom the Governor had a grudge, seemed to have received their rewards promptly. For instance: Johnson has tried ever since he went into office to have Secretary of State Jordan thrown out of office.

THE FIGHT ON JORDAN.

The trouble began when Jordan refused to leave the Republican party and become a Progressive, as Johnson wished. Johnson, as is well remembered, turned traitor over night, and most of the other office-holders under him. But Jordan refused. He said he had been elected by the Republicans of the State and a Republican he would remain.

Johnson's press bureau, superintended by one "Mike" French, conducted in an office in the Capitol Building, sent out false charges against Jordan to all of the Progressive papers, who could be counted on to publish the same.

The State Board of Control, with "Hangman" Neylan in charge—Neylan was formerly a reporter on the San Francisco Bulletin and wrote such flattering reports of the Governor that Johnson gave him the chairmanship of this board and a salary of $5000 per year— began harassing Jordan. The Secretary of State had his appropriations cut down; his supplies were delayed; his bills were held up, and everything was done by the Board of Control to make trouble for Jordan. But Jordan stood pat and fought back.

INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE.

The climax came at the last session of the Legislature when Johnson had a legislative committee appointed to investigate and find fault with the office of the Secretary of State. Howard A. Peairs, an Assemblyman, was a member of the committee and returned a report unfavorable to Jordan. Peairs was appointed to a Superior judgeship in Kern county. Leslie R. Hewitt, a Senator, also served on the committee and returned a report unfavorable to Jordan. Hewitt was appointed to the Superior judgeship in Los Angeles county.

The case against Jordan was dropped when it was found that he was ready to go before the people and tell the whole truth, and bare in detail the malicious attacks made on him by the Governor and the Governor's henchmen, of whom Francis Neylan is the chief—and who is significantly called "the Governor's Hangman," by the State employees.

H. A. French, generally known as "Mike," operated his press bureau so well that the Governor allowed him to have the office of "purchasing agent" for the Department of Engineering. French's experience with machinery was limited to the knowledge of mechanics he had picked up in operating a mimeograph machine.

SOME REAL EFFICIENCY.

And in speaking of the Secretary of State it is well to call attention to the great plea that Johnson has made in justification for the increased expenditures in the State, by saying that the business of the State has increased tremendously. The office of the Secretary of State is the quickest to feel any increase in the State's business, and to need additional help. Yet the office of the Secretary of State under Jordan is being run with a less appropriation than under the previous administration. A Republican and not a Progressive is in charge of that office; men are employed for their ability and efficiency, and not for their politics or their friendship with politicians.

"HANGMAN" NEYLAN'S WORK.

One of the first jobs that Neylan put over for the Governor after taking office was to bring charges against State Printer Shannon and induce a servile Legislature to force his resignation.

Johnson at once appointed Friend Richardson, who had been a candidate for the office and had been defeated by Shannon, to the job. The procedure has all the ear marks of a conspiracy to oust Shannon to get the job for Richardson. Especially does it look like a conspiracy when it is remembered that Shannon was accused of conniving with a San Francisco paper house to furnish an inferior grade of paper and in greater quantities than the business of the State warranted. Yet, Friend Richardson ordered from the same paper company—and the orders were approved by "Hangman" Neylan—practically every sheet of the same paper that was sent back because Shannon was accused of "grafting." Also Richardson has been compelled to order a great deal more paper than Shannon had, which is conclusive evidence that the amount Shannon ordered was not excessive. In fact, some of the paper that was ordered sent back never left Sacramento, but was received almost at once by Richardson and used.

JOHNSON ON SUFFRAGE.

Johnson has recently been speaking before women's clubs, inviting the women to give him praise because he enabled them to secure suffrage in this State. Johnson never at any time, before the women won their suffrage, spoke or wrote one word for their cause. He never sent a line to the Legislature or spoke a word in public on behalf of suffrage. He flatly refused when urged to do so, and told Irving Martin (owner and editor of the Stockton Record, a Progressive paper,) that "it would not be advisable" for him (Johnson) to advocate suffrage for women.

Now we have the Governor thrusting out his chest in women's clubs and giving them to understand that the women became citizens simply because he promised them suffrage and couldn't break his word. He has been challenged time and again to show where and when he ever spoke a word on behalf of the women before the suffrage amendment was enacted—and he has remained silent.

THE BROKEN PROMISE.

And in making and breaking promises it is well to recall that one of the principal arguments Johnson made during his campaign for election four years ago was founded on the promise to establish a State Reformatory for first offenders. He wept crocodile tears over the horrors of confining offenders with hardened criminals.

But Johnson refused to allow the Legislature to pass it.

KEPT BUSINESS OUT OF STATE.

Johnson's administration has been conducted largely on the supposition that successful business men are criminals. The attacks made on business in California have been of such a nature that (as the records show) the State, during Johnson's administration, has sustained the astounding loss of $800,000,000 in corporation business alone. Men with money have been afraid to invest. The Johnson commissions have been given so much bludgeoning power, and play politics so desperately, that men with money have been cautious about making investments.

At the last Legislature it is remembered that some 5000 bills were introduced, and most of them freakish bills, and a great quantity of them were passed. The lack of stability in the legislative department has upset financial conditions, for no man can tell one year what sort of a programme will be adopted the next.

IN CONCLUSION.

The whole case against Gov. Johnson has not been here presented. There are innumerable other instances and facts that might be produced. But this is a brief summary of the public record and the official work of the Governor, who is seeking re-election in California.

CLASSIFYING RESERVE.

J. O. Morrow, chief of the land-classification department at the San Francisco office of the forest reserve; W. H. Heilman, soil expert, and L. H. Anderson, member of the land-classification force connected with the Angeles National Forest, left last night for their future operations, beginning in the Santa Ana watershed. L. F. Dorr, an expert, is now engaged in classifying the desert land lying within the Angeles National Forest reserve. The great bulk of the work of classification in the local reserve is yet to be done. About 250,000 acres has been classified, and in round numbers 850,100 acres is yet to be disposed of.

GRAIN PRICES DUE TO SOAR.

Dealer Says Flour to go up After Wheat.

Embroilment of Turkey Puts Market on Edge.

Western Producers Stand to Reap Profits.

Friday's advance in Chicago of 2½ cents a bushel on wheat, caused by the embroilment of Turkey in the European catastrophe of arms, likewise has affected the Pacific Coast markets for wheat and other grain and is a forerunner of another advance in the price of flour, as soon as the surplus of wheat in the United States is exhausted. This is the statement of W. E. Howard, president of the Los Angeles Grain Exchange.

"The effect of Turkey's action has been an advance in milling wheat of 2½ cents a bushel in Portland, which is the center of the wheat exportation on the Coast," he said. "This brings Portland wheat to $1.11½ a hundred, or somewhat lower than the Chicago quotation, owing to the freight being higher from Pacific Coast shipping points.

"Although there is no actual advance in the price of flour, the significance of Turkey getting into the war is that the wheat surplus of 290,000,000 bushels in this country now will be more rapidly exhausted by the greater demands which will be made upon it. Up to the present moment we have already exported nearly half of this surplus and the remaining half is bound to go even more quickly, as the shortage in Europe increases. If Italy and the Balkans are dragged into the fighting, it is certain wheat will sell for as high as $1.50 in Chicago and flour all over the land will jump 40 cents above its present price.

"Although Russia is an enormous producer of wheat and will have sufficient for her own use for the next twelve months, England and Germany hitherto have drawn heavily upon her for their supplies. Forced to make up this deficiency in the United States these two nations are bound sooner or later to take all that we can spare, with the result that prices will soar tremendously.

"Barley and oats have responded probably more noticeably on the Coast than wheat, as a result of the latest turn of the war, because the West is a larger producer of these cereals. The result has been to make the barley market extremely firm and to promote much trading.

"California had the largest barley crop in its history this year, or 44,000,000 bushels, which is in great demand in England as feed for army horses. In September of this year there were exported 2,250,000 bushels of barley from California, as against only 350,000 bushels during the same month last year. Barley is holding at $1.15 and $1.20 where it has sold under $1 in other years. Oats also are being exported heavily for feeding horses abroad, at prices between $1.45 and $1.50 per 100."

Mr. Howard added that necessarily the prices now prevailing on wheat, barley and corn were to some extent speculative, and fluctuations will occur, but he believes the ultimate condition, if the war continues until January, will find the shortage of grain so pronounced as to bring the highest prices ever experienced. The farmers of the United States will prosper as they have never prospered before because, one and all, they are holding their crops to benefit by the eventually much higher prices. The dealers are turning over every bushel they can get their hands on in the East and intense excitement prevails in the grain pits as the demands from across the Atlantic increase in volume and number.

Prosperity.

FORESEES GREAT EXPANSION HERE.

SOUND CONDITIONS IN THIS CITY, SAYS JESS.

Crops are Backbone for Financial Stability and State has Advantage Over Purely Manufacturing Sections in that Regard, Declares a Well-known Banker.

Declaring that the rapid and unretarded moving of practically every California crop this season has produced an extremely sound financial condition throughout the State, Stoddard Jess, vice-president of the First National Bank, foresees a great expansion in all industrial lines next year.

"California, being dominantly an agricultural State, has somewhat of an advantage over purely manufacturing sections in such a condition as prevails because the strongest demand of the people is for foodstuffs which they absolutely cannot do without," said Mr. Jess. "The national demand for California products is displaying itself as unusually firm this year. The exportation of canned goods already is in excess of last year, and with a tremendous barley crop beginning to reach every English port where it is in large demand, the returns to California growers this season are more than satisfactory.

"Imperial's cotton crop has not as yet experienced any decided move, but I look for something definite to occur in the middle of November. The Imperial Valley cotton growers will not suffer any loss but should prosper this year. Between the national demand for long staple and the Japanese need of large amounts of cotton the valley should unload its entire crop at substantial prices."

"Regarding foreign trade, especially with South America, no efforts have been made to establish branch California banks in the southern trade centers as has been done by the National City Bank of New York. In that matter our policy is one of watchful waiting. However, we feel that in due time and with splendid success California will avail itself of its trade possibilities with South America."

SAYS JAPANESE WANT RELIGION.

American Episcopal Bishop Describes Their Needs.

Government Wants Plan to Increase Loyalty.

Grasp Idea of Christianity and are Believers.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

KARUIZAWA (Japan) Sept. 30.—The Right Rev. H. St. George Tucker, bishop of Kyoto, and missionary of the American Episcopal Church, delivered an interesting address to the American missionaries during their recent retreat in the mountains here.

Japan wants religion, the bishop said, but only as a means to an end, and not because of its intrinsic truth or reality. Surveying religious conditions among the non-Christians of Japan, Dr. Tucker found everywhere a decided increase of interest in religion. Japanese officials were talking about religion, he said, and advising their subordinates to pay respect to it. Ever since the war with Russia the people had felt the need of something beyond human power.

The liberal attitude taken by government officials had had a wonderful effect on the people, especially in the smaller places. The national fear of Socialism, he said, had impressed the people with the fact that loyalty cannot stand without idealism, and idealism was impossible without religion.

"Does this interest signify a move towards Christianity?" he asked. On the one side there was an attempt to revive Confucianism as a basis of morality—an attempt that had been unsuccessful. On the other hand there was an effort to interest the masses in reverence for shrines and sacred places, as was seen in the addresses of government officials, and in the moral trend of Buddhist sermons.

Bishop Tucker endeavored to find out the themes on which Buddhist preachers addressed their audiences in the Kyoto district, and was told that the subject of one preacher was the very practical matter of "How to Behave in Railway Trains."

On the whole, Bishop Tucker was convinced that the main attitude towards religion was utilitarian. Religion was wanted not for the sake of truth, but because it would be good for Japan. Expediency rather than truth was the quest. They did not ask what religion was true, but what religion would best fit in with Japanese ideals and civilization. The chief use of religion was to promote loyalty. The religion that would do that best was best independently of its reality. And so the missionary found too often that his convert came to the church not for the sake of salvation, but for the sake of his country.

Bishop Tucker concluded:

"The Japanese idea of God is not the Christian idea, but it is nearer the Christian idea than before. There is a growing conception of one supreme God of universal power, the idea being undoubtedly due to the influence of western thought.

"When the Japanese sincerely become Christian, they are as firm believers and as good people as the Christians of other lands. But for this they have to be taught to grasp the Christian idea of God and welcome truth because it is truth in itself, independently of what the human mind may think of it."

MOTOR BUS BACK IN PARIS.

RETURNS FROM FRONT AFTER PROVIDING FOOD FOR THE SOLDIERS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, Oct. 4.—A battle-scarred motor bus, its identity hidden under a thick coat of mud, thundered through Paris the other day. Though unrecognizable to the eye, it was unmistakable to the ear. It was the first reappearance since the outbreak of the war of the Paris motor bus, and the cheers that broke from the sidewalk when piles of army bread were perceived through its broken windows showed that the war had raised the institution in public esteem. It has never been looked upon as a thing of beauty, but now that it is carrying bread and meat to the trenches along the R—— pedestrians and light sleepers view it in a new light.

There are 1100 of these motor buses in the service—900 carrying food and 200 conveying soldiers to the front. Only four of them have been lost in two months' hard and risky service, and only five have needed repairs.

Besides these motor buses, it is estimated that there are between 20,000 and 30,000 motor cars of other types in the service of the army. A certain number of heavy vehicles specially built from army specifications have been purchased each year after their efficiency had been demonstrated in competitive tours. One of these tours was in progress at the time the war began and every one of the fifty odd motor trucks engaged in the competition was immediately requisitioned, as well as all those that were building in the shops of different automobile concerns. The service they render is inestimable.

TO CAPTURE GERMAN TRADE.

BRITISH MANUFACTURERS' MOVE IS GAINING GROUND.

Efforts Being Made Throughout the United Kingdom to Duplicate All Articles Manufactured in Kaiser's Dominions and Promote Their Sale in Other Countries.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Commercial leagues and associations throughout England are making much ado about capturing German trade. Manufacturers declare that the banking situation is so unfavorable that English firms cannot be expected to attempt an aggressive export business.

At a recent meeting called to discuss extension of foreign trade one manufacturer produced letters from his banker which are said to be typical of the position of London banking houses. The manufacturer had asked for a cash advance on a shipment to a foreign customer with whom the manufacturer had dealt for years. The bill of exchange, the goods and the good name of the manufacturer were all offered as security, yet the banker replied that his institution did not care for that sort of business.

If British manufacturers cannot discount their bills they say a curtailment rather than an expansion of foreign business will be imparative, and the London Board of Trade has been so advised by scores of manufacturers. Still the manufacturers have not been discouraged by the unfavorable financial conditions and are endeavoring to duplicate articles which have hitherto been supplied by the Germans and Austrians.

At present a glass and pottery exhibition is in progress under auspices of the Commercial Intelligence Branch of the Board of Trade. Samples of all sorts of pottery and glassware formerly sent to England from the two countries now at war with Great Britain are on exhibition. This exhibition is primarily for the benefit of English manufacturers who are supplied with full information as to the quantities of such ware Germany and Austria have been selling to English subjects.

A similar exhibition was held at which toys and games formerly supplied to England by its enemies were shown. But the pottery and glass field is a more inviting one and the English factories are already trying to duplicate many of the wares Austria and Germany have produced in great quantities for foreign trade.

The shortage of potash is a serious handicap to the production of test tubes, flasks and other glass equipment for use in laboratories. Strangely enough, England has relied almost exclusively on Germany for such materials and has never tried to produce them.

English manufacturers of glassware have specialized in the production of expensive cut glass and have allowed Germany to monopolize the production of cheaper grades. As a consequence, there is a shortage of skilled labor in England for glass-working.

Several English firms have already entered upon the manufacture of dolls' heads with considerable success and are said to have produced samples far superior to those manufactured in Austria. Before Christmas England will doubtless have a good supply of dolls free from the stamp" made in Austria," now so distasteful to English children and adults alike. Sir Richard Winfrey heads the committee which is organizing the British Toy Association for the purpose of displacing Austrian and German toys permanently in English territory.

The British Empire Industrial League, with the Duke of Sutherland as president, is devoting its efforts largely to a study of trade conditions in Russia, Canada and Italy, with a view to replacing German supplies with British-made goods. This league believes the field for British manufacturers is especially good in Russia, as it is unlikely that Russians will resume trade relations with Germany for another generation.

Lord Desborough is president of the Entente Trade League, which is urging the public to deal only with friends. The Anti-German Trading League and a score of other associations designed to prevent Germany from ever regaining a commercial foothold in English territory, are also at work.

BRITISH SEIZE RACING STABLES.

FAMOUS THOROUGHBREDS OF THE GERMANS ARE SOLD AT AUCTION.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Next to the German ships seized by the government since the outbreak of the war probably the most valuable prizes of war are the racing stables in England formerly belonging to Germans and Austrians, but now the property of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries. Shortly after the war broke out a London paper published a list of horses owned by Germans and Austians and racing under their colors on English tracks. Acting on this hint and profiting by an old act which allows private informers to claim a share of the sale proceeds, a number of citizens brought actions and horses valued at half a million dollars were seized.

Among the horses seized were the stable belonging to Baron Springer and managed by the veteran trainer, Butters, at Newmarket. In this stable are Adular and Aides, bred by the Hungarian government stud and lent to Baron Springer for racing purposes only. Adular, valued at a hundred thousand dollars, has not yet been advertised for sale, but Aides and Bolond, another member of the same stable, will soon be sold at auction at Newmarket.

TAILORS COMPLAIN.

Say the English Army is Being Clothed in Garments Made by Cheap Sweatshop Labor.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Charges that the army is being clothed by sweatshop labor have been lodged with the War Department by the Amalgamated Society of Tailors and Tailoresses.

In one factory in Woolwich, women are paid less than two shillings a dozen for army vests. At Plymouth the workers get only 18 pence—36 cents—for making a complete uniform.

In contrast to these private sweatships handling government contracts are the workships maintained by the American Women's War Relief and other societies, designed to give employment to women sufferin through the war. These pay union wages with a minimum of 3 pence an hour.

"It's a Long, Long Way."

"TIPPERARY" WAR TUNE.

TOMMY ATKINS POPULARIZES THE FAMOUS OLD BALLAD.

Piece is Now Whistled by All Recruits and Played on Church Organs, Much to the Chagrin of the Strait-laced Communicants. Ministers Indorse It.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Oct. 17.—"It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary" is upsetting staid old England quite as completely as "Hot Time" outraged the sensibilities of aesthetic Americans at the time of the Spanish-American War.

"Rule Britannia" and "God Save the King" do very well for non-combatants who don evening clothes and pass a patriotic evening watching Sir Beerbohm Tree's "Drake." But the hundreds of thousands of recruits and Territorials have little taste for the solemn hymns and have popularized "Tipperary" by whistling it and singing it in the city streets, along country roads and in the big concentration camps.

Recently a war service was held at Tyler's Green Church in London and many strait-laced communicants were shocked because the organist played "Tipperary" as a closing voluntary. But hundreds of communicants were moved to tears by the swinging march tune which Tommy Atkins has adopted in spite of squeamish persons who would force more decorous airs upon him.

The organist at Tyler's Green established a precedent which is far-reaching and the favorite air of the recruits is finding a place in the hearts of composers who are giving it dignified variations and offering it the honor place in medleys of patriotic airs arranged for sacred concerts.

A prominent clergyman discussing the protests against "Tipperary" as a tune to be used in churches said: "Really, these superior people might drop their nonsense at such a time of national peril. I would like to point out to them that a tune which is good enough on a dark, damp night to cheer our brave men on to almost certain death in their heroic endeavors to save their country and the honor of their women folk is surely good enough with which to end a church service. Persons who possess imaginations and hearts must be moved by such a human sort of tune, a tune which means so much to the young Englishmen who are really defending the nation's honor."

Most of the camps where recruits are in training lack organized bands. The rapidity of the recruiting and the great tax upon the resources of the War Office have not admitted of band organizations. However, nearly every company has a few musicians who play fifes or harmonicas and "Tipperary" is the one tune invariably heard as the youngsters move along on practice marches. If instruments are lacking the men whistle the rousing tune, for it has been demonstrated that it is a good "whistler." Even the least musical can sing or whistle the air.

Berlin.

GERMAN LOAN FAR OVERPAID.

Alleged Atrocities by Troops are Proven Untrue.

Rumor of Proposed Invasion of Italy Meets Denial.

General News Budget Issued by the Prussians.

[BY WIRELESS AND A. P.]

BERLIN, Oct. 27.—Information given out in official quarters in Berlin today is as follows:

"A total of 3,200,000,000 marks ($800,000,000) has been paid in on the German war loan, although the loan itself was for only 2,600,000,000 marks ($650,000,000.) The latest returns of the Imperial Bank show specie to the amount of 1,828,000,000 marks ($457,000,000,) an increase of 27,000,000 marks ($6,760,000.) Notes in circulation show a decrease of 94,000,000 marks ($23,500,000) up to October 26.

"An English governess named Kate Hume made the allegation that German soldiers had attacked and mutilated her sister Grace, and produced the signatures of two Belgian clergyman and of certain British officials to support her claim. According to the London Times, an English court declared that Kate Hume had forged these signatures and invented the entire story. She was sentenced to three months in prison.

"Reports from Constantinople declare there have been sanguinary encounters between the British garrison and Indian troops at Alexandria, Egypt. Thirty men were sentenced to death by a court-martial held in Alexandria.

"The Havas News Agency of Paris reports officially from London that the English torpedo-boat destroyer Badger rammed and sank a German submarine off the coast of Holland, German official reports of this same incident are to the effect that while the ramming is a fact, the German submarine returned to the harbor safe and without the loss of her crew.

"The military correspondent of the London Times declares the heavy German artillery has destroyed all the campaign plans of the English and French commanders.

"A member of the Young Turks Committee opened negotiations with the Ameer of Afghanistan and then sent a delegate to the new Ameer from Constantinople. The Frankfurter Zeitung now publishes a dispatch from Constantinople saying that Turkey and Afghanistan have signed an alliance.

"The Neuer Zuricher of Zurich, Switzerland, commenting on the recent disclosures of the North German Gazette concerning the Anglo-Belgian convention of 1906, says that a real conspiracy against Germany has been established, and that the fact of Belgium's participation means a breach of neutrality.

"An Austrian official report says that Eastern Bosnia to the Drina River has been cleared of Servians. The Austrians attacked the Servians at a point west of Nishnegrad on October 24, driving them back to Nishnegrad. They reached the river at several points and captured large quantities of artillery and rifle ammunition. The Montenegrins are retreating independently to the southwest.

"The Austrian troops in the Drina district shelled and stormed two of the enemy's positions near Ravnja and Ardenkovic and captured four machine guns.

"Swedish newspapers report that Belgians and the French have suffered enormous losses in West Flanders and that the Germans have advanced daily.

"Gen. Von Moltke, chief of the German General Staff, is suffering from a liver complaint. His illness, however, gives no cause for anxiety. Gen. Von Falkenhayn, Minister of War, has temporarily taken the place of Gen. Vol Moltke. Lieut. Weddigen, the famous commander of the German submarine U-9, which sank the British cruisers Aboukir, Hogue, Cressy and Hawke, has been decorated with the Order Pour le Merite.

"Statements published in Italian newspapers to the effect that officers of the German General Staff have visited the Trent district in Austria, with the view of arranging for the movement of troops and war material from Germany to attack Italy on account of her neutrality, have been officially denied in Berlin and characterized as absolute inventions.

"Reports from Madrid say that the French have had over 400,000 men wounded and incapacitated on account of illness.

"Russia is planning the compulsory expropriation of the property of Germans and Austrians, who reside in great numbers in the twenty-four provinces."

WARSHIP HIT.

Reports received here today from Rotterdam set forth that a British warship struck by Germany artillery fire off the coast of Belgium broke into flames.

CLAIMS AGAINST ENGLAND.

According to reports received here from Antwerp, fifty firms of that city will present to the British government claims for compensation for the destruction of goods after the evacuation of that city was determined upon. These claims amount to f.230,000,000 ($46,000,000,) and will be presented through Brand Whitlock, the American Minister to Belgium.

Wrinkles Big and Wrinkles Little Go Quickly—Some Startling Beauty Secrets

Gems of Secret Information on Beauty, by Valeska Suratt, Whose Fame as America's Self-Made Beauty-Queen, Is World-Wide.

BY MISS VALESKA SURATT.

NOT so much the big wrinkles, but the little ones, are what rob the face of its youthful appearance. No matter how faithfully and vigorously you may engage in massaging the face, there will be no perceptible result unless the proper article is used. Nearly all creams sold for this purpose in the stores have the same base and ingredients. This is why perhaps you have experienced but little improvement with one cream over another. Every woman should as well know now as later that the cost of prepared creams is too high to allow their use being liberal and unstinted, as it should be to produce results. Furthermore, their ingredients are usually lacking in effect, because these ingredients must be cheap, otherwise there is no profit in their sale. If you will make up your mind to make up your own cream, which you can do in a few moments as follows, you will have a remarkable wrinkle eradicator, one that works quickly and surely, and it will cost you far less than any prepared cream you can buy. Furthermore, you will get the result desired. Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of glycerine and two ounces of eptol in half a pint of water. This cream used every day will produce a startling change in a short time, making the face plump and youthful to a marked degree.

MELICENT R.—Yes, you can stop falling of hair very quickly. Here is a formula which produces marked changes in the hair roots and scalp tissues. The result is that dandruff is absolutely stopped, the hair roots regain their youthful vigor, hair grows quickly and luxuriantly, often several inches a month, and it takes on a very silky and healthy gloss. There is nothing so satisfactory as this splendid formula. Mix one ounce of beta-quinol in water and alcohol, half a pint each, or use a full pint of bay rum instead. This makes a very economical hair treatment; is mixed in a few moments, and cannot be surpassed. Use liberally. Any drug store can supply you with the beta-quinol.

MISS G. M. B.—Use the following and see how quickly and beautifully your complexion will change to one of exquisite beauty. It is difficult to explain the marked change which this cream produces. All freckles, muddiness and blemishes promptly disappear. Nothing can surpass it for this. Get at the drug store one ounce of zintone and mix with one tablespoonful of glycerine in a pint of hot water. This makes many times more cream than you would have to pay for by buying prepared creams which are much weaker in results.

SORROWFUL.—The bust can very often be developed. The following mixture is the best thing known for this, and it is safe, though of course no one can ever be sure of success in this regard. Mix two ounces of ruetone, obtainable at any drug store, with half a cup of sugar and dissolve in a pint of cold water. Take two teaspoonfuls after meals and at bedtime.

EVA G. R.—You have probably never heard of the remarkable properties of eggol as a head-wash and dandruff remover. This dissolves away all fatty accumulations and dandruff, which nothing else, not even soap and hard scrubbing can do. A teaspoonful of eggol in half a cup of hot water makes the most exquisite shampoo you can ever get. It cleans out all the pores wonderfully, and lets the hair "breathe," thus assisting very materially in making the hair healthy and vigorous. I would never use soap on hair. Eggol, besides, leaves the hair easy to do up. It is very economical, as for a moderate price you can obtain enough eggol for over a dozen of these extraordinary head-washes.

MRS. T. L. M.—Simple sulfo solution is the only thing that will remove superfluous hair successfully. This is because it is the only thing which dissolves the hair instead of burning it off as other depilatories do. As a result it never leaves a mark or red spot or injures the skin, but leaves it clear, soft and smooth. Use it on any part of the body, no matter how delicate the skin. It never fails and works in a few moments. The simple sulfo solution can be secured at any drug store.

MISS X. O.—It is remarkable but true that you can get rid of blackheads in a few minutes. Sprinkle some neroxin on a sponge which you have wet with hot water, and rub this on the blackheads. In a few minutes they will all be gone. This holds true for even the tiniest blackheads which it is impossible to pinch out. Never pinch out blackheads.

• • •

MRS. T. N. P.—The liquids and powders sold for excessive perspiration are usually but momentary in effect. Applying hydrolized talc to the arm-pits keeps these fresh and dry all the time and you will not have your arm-pits wet and your dress-shields curl up like ropes. It will save the damage to your garments through fading and rotting of the fabric. Hydrolized talc can be secured at any drug store. It destroys all odors at once. It is also the best thing known for perspiring feet.—[Advertisement.]

LIES HELPLESS ON BATTLEFIELD

Wounded Frenchman Tells of His Experience.

Captured by Germans and is Well Treated.

Commissary Arrangements of Allies Praised.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, Oct. 4.—These extracts from the letter of an unnamed French soldier to his father in Paris are published by the Figaro:

"Wounded in the stomach about 6 o'clock in the morning, I am left in the rain and in mud so deep that I am obliged to lean on my elbows to keep my head out of it.

"The battle continues to rage. I am between the two camps, and, without exaggeration, more than 150,000 bullets pass over me. Some struck at my sides and I expect each moment to receive one which will cut short the spectacle. I remain thus helpless from 6 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock the next afternoon and the rain does not stop. It is then that I appreciate the need of an umbrella, I who never carried one. I unbutton my coat, but I am unable to determine the gravity of my wound for there is as much mud as blood.

"Toward 2 o'clock there is a lull in the firing. I await the stretcher bearers, but like sister Anne, they do not come. The hours seem atrociously long, although I no longer pay any attention to the rain, which continues. Finally, toward 4 o'clock in the afternoon I see coming in place of the looked-for stretcher bearers—the Germans.

"This time it is for good," I say to myself. "I am done for. A blow from a rifle butt or a thrust of the bayonet and they would finish me. A last thought of my family and I try to take my own rifle and end it. It is useless. The gun is no more than a lump of mud, of sticky clay.

"There are five long minutes which I exist with a calmness that surprises me. A German asks me in French: 'How are you?'

"I showed him the place where I am wounded.

"'Reassure yourself,' he says, 'That will perhaps amount to nothing. In any case you will get well.'

"I learn that they are from Lorraine, which is lucky. They are clad in grey which makes them almost invisible in war. I speak of this to them. They answer:

"'Indeed, with your red trousers we can see you a long distance. You make superb targets.'

"The Germans went on their way, promising to return to look for me as well as others who like myself lay on the battle field, I take hope. It seems good to be alive, although I am in a sorry plight.

"The hours pass; night arrives. It still rains. Day breaks. No one; neither stretcher-bearer nor my Lorraines of the day before. It is not until 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the second day that the Germans come back. I have passed thirty-four hours in reflection in the rain, with a wound which caused me much suffering.

"The Germans put me on a canvas with two pieces of wood at either end. They carry me to a hamlet, about a kilometer and a half distant, and stretch we out there in the open air, still in the rain, but on firmer ground. Then they go back to search for others. They bring back thus 700 or 800 wounded, of whom 400 are French.

"I am soaked. I am famished. I munch with joy a bit of army biscuit which I find delicious. Upon my urgent entreaty, a German consents to give me a glass of wine from his flask which he has just filled. I thank him. That warms me. The German is going away, when he changes his mind and demands payment for his glass of wine. I jabber a little German. I understand and give him a 10-sou piece, the only money I have left. He takes himself off content.

"Some German officers come to talk to us. One of them says to me:

"'It is your government's fault that you are here.'

"They all speak French. I note the remarks of this officer, because it appears to me to indicate a curious mentality.

"The third day of this Calvary they put us in a barn on the hay. We have yet received no care. I beg the Germans to take off my clothes. I have been able to snare a blanket which happened to be there. I don't know to whom it belongs, but necessity stifles scruples. They are quite willing to do what I have asked. My coat, water-soaked trousers, which were little less than packages of mud, are removed. My falling shoes, my underdrawers and socks follow the same route. My feet and my wound make me suffer. I take out my little pocket scissors. I cut my shirt and flannel belt free of my wound, which I have not seen. It is distressingly long, but nothing astonishes me any longer, after what I have seen. I make, as good as it is bad, a dressing out of the first-aid things in my pouch. Then I roll myself up in my blanket. I have no longer anything military except my cap, and I am almost naked. Fortunately, my jersey keeps me warm. This operation completed, I feel a great relief.

"They sort the German wounded from the French. Some hours after they bring in the sanitary service of the Two hundred and third, which has been taken prisoner. The French doctors get to work with first dressings. They make one for me with tincture of iodine. But the the moment they are going to put on the bandage, the Germans take away the French doctors and the wounded Germans. We, in our turn, are transferred to Libecourt.

"We are now at the end of the fourth day of this exercise. They have warned us that we are prisoners. Tonight we learn that the Prussians are retreating. What is going to happen? Will they take us along or leave us to ourselves? For there are not Lorraines only in the German army. All night the troops march under our window. One hears the noise of tramping feet and guttural commands. . . .

"Outside of this dream of infernal horror which I have had for eight days, I am highly hopeful for the final results of the war, because I am able to prove one thing, which has greatly surprised me, I confess. That is that the replenishing of supplies and ammunition is marvelous. We have never lacked bread, nor meat nor cartridges a single day. The service is marvelously organized. It is one of the great successes of this war. It is not as in 1870.

"I have at last slept, and in a bed. I have no fever. Only in my sleep do I dream that they are transferring me and that it rains. But this little hallucination is disappearing.

"I embrace you with all my heart."

GERMANS FEED FRENCH SOLDIERS.

GOOD-NATURED INVADER GIVES ENEMIES DINNER FROM FIELD KITCHEN.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—A unique dinner party is reported in a soldier's letter from the front.

At a point where the German and French lines approached to within a few hundred yards from each other, apparently to the west of Rheims, the fighting stopped at about nightfall, and the Germans were just going to their warm meal at the near-by field kitchen, when an officer was seen to mount the French intrenchment waving a flag of truce. A German officer went out to meet him. The Frenchman, who turned out to be the captain of a company, explained that his men were very hungry, having had nothing to eat for several days, and asked whether the Germans would not give them something.

"How many men have you," he was asked. "About a hundred," was the answer. "All right; call out your men," said the German. The company thereupon laid aside their arms and came over to the Germans, where they sat down and ate their supper with their enemies. The captain is reported to have said that his men were so famished that they would not be able to continue fighting without something to eat."

RENDERED VALUABLE SERVICE, SAYS ADMIRAL BEATTY.

British Commander Declares Situation was Critical When Three German Cruisers Were Sunk Last August and that Enemy Fought with Great Energy.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Graphic descriptions of the battle off Heligoland in which the British fleet sunk the German cruisers Mainz, Koeln and the Ariadne and two torpedo-boat destroyers are contained in the official reports issued tonight by Admiral Sir David Beatty, Rear-Admiral Arthur Henry Christian and other officers who took part in the action on August 28.

The reports show that while the Germans did not succeed in destroying any British ships, they fought with great determination and before the arrival of the cruisers the situation, in the words of Vice-Admiral Beatty, "appeared critical."

The British fleet when it went into action was only twenty-five miles from two German naval bases and the ships were maneuvered in the hope of bringing out the main German fleet, but without success. The British were attacked, however, by submarines, destroyers and light cruisers. One British cruiser, the Arethusa, which had been out of the builders hands only forty-eight hours, was so severely handled she had to be taken in tow, after the action was over.

Vice-Admiral Beatty commanded the first battle cruiser squadron and first light cruiser squadron, while Rear-Admiral Christian commanded the destroyers and the Arethusa.

A special report was also issued tonight on the work of the submarines since the beginning of the war. It says that three hours after war broke out two submarines unaccompanied, carried out a reconnaissance in Heligoland Bight and returned with useful information.

Submarines also stood guard night and day while the expeditionary force was being transported to the continent and have been incessantly employed on the enemy's coast in Heligoland Bight and elsewhere. The report continues:

"They have obtained much valuable information regarding the composition and movements of his patrols. They have occupied his waters and reconnoitered his anchorages, and while so engaged have been subjected to skillful and well executed anti-submarine tactics, hunted for hours at a time by torpedo craft and attacked by gun fire and torpedoes."

Submarines took part in the Heligoland battle, but conditions were not favorable, the invisibility being low and the sea calm. There was no opportunity of closing with the German cruisers to within torpedo range.

Reference is made to the E-9's sinking of the German cruiser Hela and the destroyer S-126. Dealing generally with the use of these craft, the reports says:

"Against an enemy whose capital ships have never, and whose light cruisers have seldom, emerged from their fortified harbors, the opportunities of delivering submarine attacks have necessarily been few, and on one occasion only—prior to September 13—has one of our submarines been within torpedo range of a cruiser during daylight hours."

A large number of officers are recommended for orders and promotion, Commander Max Horton of the E-9 for both.

Is Really a Spy.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The alleged German spy, who was believed to be an American citizen and whose case came up today, for hearing at the Wellington barracks in London, is in reality a German subject by the name of Lody. This man assumed the name of Inglis and pretended to be an American.

Supplies.

FOOD PLENTY IN GERMANY.

Nutrition Expert Proves the Existence of Surplus.

Eleven Million Cows Owned in the Empire.

Sees Little Chance for a Scarcity in Milk.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

THE HAGUE, Oct. 4.—Confidential Councillor Ruebner, founder of what is known as the physiology of nutrition, and a German economist of wide reputation, publishes in the current issue of the Medicinische Wochenschrift a survey of food conditions in Germany. The writer deals with the claim of the foreign hostile press that Germany, due to its partial isolation in the present war, would in very little time be without sufficient food. Among the items which he speaks of is milk.

Germany has at present, claims Councillor Ruebner, about 11,000,000 milch cows, producing about 1150 cubic centimeters of milk per capita each day, while the average consumption per person is only 341 cubic centimeters in Germany, in addition to eighteen grams of cheese and 7.8 grams of butter.

"It is plain," says the writer, "that we have a superfluity in this class of food. In case the consumption of butter is reduced by one gram per person the saving would amount to about 25,000 tons of butter per day, equal to about 750,000 tons of milk. In view of the fact that each milch cow produces annually about 2500 liters of milk, or about two and a half tons, about 300,000 animals could be killed for food purposes without interfering seriously with the milk supply of Germany."

After asserting that the Germans are the biggest meat eaters in Europe, Dr. Ruebner gives the following table of meat consumption per capita per annum for Europe:

	Kilograms.
Germany	52.3
England	47.6
France	33.6
Holland and Belgium	34.3
Austria-Hungary	29.0
Russia	21.8
Italy	10.4

Germany's demand, the writer asserts, is covered fully for the period of the war, and, while forage is none too plentiful ordinarily, he believes that there will be no difficulty feeding the stock, especially if a late winter makes it possible to pasture the animals longer than is usually the case.

A long, detailed inspection of Germany's grain supply brings Dr. Ruebner to the conclusion that in this respect also Germany is far better off than has been hoped by her enemies. There is enough wheat and rye to meet Germany's demand during the war, and, instead of present conditions indicating, as has been claimed, a shortage, there is every reason to believe that the supply on hand is great enough to leave a surplus.

INCREASE BRITISH RATIONS.

More Food Needed to Keep Soldiers in Good Trim, Say Experts of the War Department.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Oct. 17.—Thomas Atkins eats 5000 calories a day. Formerly he had only 4000 but the Army Medical Board said it was not enough and had the War Department raise the ration by 1000 calories.

A calory is not in itself a food or a measure of food in the ordinary sense. A calory is a unit invented not by cooks but by scientists. It is a heat unit, considered as fuel for the human machine. Its equivalent in mechanical energy is 3077 foot-pounds. A soldier's ration for one day should, if fully utilized, yield 15,000,000 foot-pounds a day or ten times the muscular energy displayed by the average man in a hard day's work. The other nine-tenths goes into waste, since the human body converts only a sixth of its fuel into muscular energy, the unused energy turning into superfluous heat. This is doing better than a steam engine, which converts only an eighth of its fuel power into mechanical energy.

PARIS ASSUMES NATURAL ASPECT.

RETREAT OF GERMANS IS FOLLOWED BY OPENING OF SCHOOLS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, Oct. 17.—Since the retreat of the Germans from the vicinity of Paris, the city has to a great extent recovered its natural aspect, except for numerous closed shops, some of which are still boarded up and carry on their fronts a varied collection of official posters, emanating from the military government, announcing mobilization, details from the Department of Public Instruction relating to the reopening of the schools, from the Prefect of the Seine advising housewives to see that their fruits and vegetables are washed in water previously boiled, and other hygienic and administrative measures.

The reopening of the primary schools has brought out the usual number of pupils. In accordance with instructions from the Department of Public Instruction the session was opened by the teachers with a patriotic address to the pupils reviewing in simple words the causes of the war and the necessity for fathers and brothers to be absent fighting for their country.

The Department of Public Instruction is arranging for the organization of examinations so as to avoid, as far as possible, the loss of a year to students who are unable to present themselves this year on account of absence at the front. It is understood that medical students will be permitted next year to take two years examinations in one.

PARK FILLED WITH GERMANS.

ALL ARE ACCUSED OF INCITING THE NATIVES.

More Than a Thousand of the Kaiser's Subjects are Interned Near Johannesburg—Much Uneasiness Felt at Cape Town and Durban Over the Situation.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—More than 1000 Germans of all classes, from merchants to waiters, have been interned in a public park near Johannesburg, South Africa, by British authorities, as the result of reported activities of German agents among natives, according to C. Eaton of Tacoma, Wash., who recently left South Africa and arrived here today on the steamship Adriatic from Liverpool.

"The war has created a situation in South Africa that can be described as alarming," said Mr. Eaton. "The native population out-numbers the whites by about four to one. Early in the war England began withdrawing the regular troops, which were replaced by recruited bodies termed Home Guards. In the vicinity of Cape Town and Durban much uneasiness is felt and Germans are openly charged with inciting the natives to revolt. Part of the defense force as fast as it is recruited, is being sent to German East and German South Africa, where it is reported that the Germans have a force of about 10,000 troops."

Hongkong.

EXODUS OF CHINESE FROM BRITISH COLONY.

[BY A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

CANTON (China) Oct. 21.—A notable exodus of Chinese has taken place from the British colony of Hongkong and since the end of July there has been a steady influx here. During the first week in August, when the news of war reached Hongkong, the thorough preparations for the defense of the colony, that were made, the proclamation of martial law, the mobilization of volunteers and the swearing in of special police, with a simultaneous rise in the prices of commodities, convinced the Chinese that trouble was coming and the exodus began.

Canton and particularly the eastern suburbs, the great residential section of the city, are overcrowded and rents have risen 20 and 30 per cent.

The most extraordinary rumors were current early this month of German attacks and pillagings of Hongkong and of all sorts of impossible victories and reverses. These have now toned down, though the news in the native papers is almost without exception pro-German, and public opinion has thorough belief in German present and ultimate success.

This may be due to the fact that probably 90 per cent. of the Chinese who know or care anything about what is going on are hoping ardently for German success, the idea being that a decided setback to the British and French would make China's future that much more secure.

Business is nearly at a standstill. The river and coast steamers are in many cases running at a loss. The price of silk has dropped approximately $150 gold a bale with few buyers and this with an unusually fine year for the silk crop—a bumper fifth crop having been secured and a record sixth crop being expected. The other exports, including matting, tea and ginger, are faring similarly.

Foreign banks are open only half the day as they have no business and the money market is nearly paralyzed.

The entrance of Japan in the war seems to be taken with cynical distrust by many and even coolies and boat people are asking if China will have to fight Japan eventually.

Suffering.

DISTRESS IN JERUSALEM; THOUSANDS STARVING.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—One hundred thousand inhabitants of Jerusalem are facing starvation, according to Samuel Edelman, American Vice-Consul in that city, who reached here today on the steamer Ancona. Two-thirds of the residents of Jerusalem are Jews, Mr. Edelman said. For many years they have depended upon their earnings from tourists and upon charity for support, and the war has cut off all their sources of subsistence.

There are no industries in the city and little cultivation of the surrounding territory. The cold and rainy season is now approaching and indications are that the suffering soon will be intense, Mr. Edelman said.

eight years ago, and ever since that time have remained here. Their pretty home is at Third and Mill streets.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Fraser entertained early in the week, Mrs. Joseph Craig, of San Francisco, formerly Mrs. Chloe Routzahn of this place. Mrs. Craig is a Past Grand Matron of the Eastern Star. Another like official who is also visiting at the Fraser home on Ocean Strand avenue, is Mrs. Anna Johnson of San Francisco. Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Bert Ellis of Los Angeles were dinner guests at this popular home.

Miss Helen King left Thursday morning for a lengthy trip through the East, leaving her Fourth-street home with the well wishes of a host of friends. She will go directly to Chicago, where she will be the guest of friends there for a few weeks. Cleveland will be the next point, and then other eastern cities will be included in the itinerary. Christmas will be here before Miss King returns, and in the intervening time she will have traveled considerably.

Mrs. Hannah Anderson was the fortunate high scorer at the Tuesday afternoon session of the Breakers' Club on the pier. There were five tables of players who were the guests of Miss Jean Magee, hostess for this month.

IN THE many brilliant functions which diverted society here this week, the Halloween motif predominated. The popular goblin, black cat and pumpkin head were used with yellow blossoms and cornstalks in the decorations, which in some cases were elaborate.

One such affair was the auction bridge party given by Mrs. J. W. Anderson Wednesday afternoon, the Halloween idea being given full sway in the decorations. The amusement hall of the Palace Apartments, the home of the Andersons, was a vista of yellow and white, and, in addition to the usual eerie figures, huge pompom chrysanthemums of golden hue were used. The score cards were hand-painted, the same motif being used, Miss Mildred Spannagel being the artist. Hand-painted trophies were the work of Miss Edith Holton.

Another Halloween event was that presided over by Mr. and Mrs. J. C. McIntyre of East Sixth street. Carnations and ferns interspersed the yellow goblin heads. An impromptu musicale was followed by a midnight auto ride by moonlight. Many out-of-town guests were among those who enjoyed the hospitality of the McIntyres.

A Halloween frolic was enjoyed Saturday evening at the home of Miss Frances Wells of West Twelfth street, Miss Mary Eleanor Simpson assisting in entertaining. A marshmallow roast closed an evening of enjoyment, in which games and music predominated. The decorations were in yellow and black, with Jack o' lanterns.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Hargis entertained delightfully Tuesday evening, members of the First Christian Church enjoying a good-fellowship banquet. The Hargis home was bright with deep-red bloom, relieved by luxuriant ferns. In the living-room and den pink roses were used. The banquet, in four courses, was served at 6 o'clock. Clarence Krinbill was toastmaster. Many responded with speeches.

Miss Lucy Russell was hostess Tuesday evening to a small group of guests, an evening of diversified pleasure ending in a midnight supper which several of the hostess's friends assisted in serving. The guests participated in a review of the photographs taken by them during the summer.

Mrs. Beulah E. Kinley and W. E. Merrill of the Merrill apartments were united in marriage in Hollywood Monday afternoon, the Rev. Lloyd Dorsie, pastor of the Christian Church, officiating. They are enjoying a honeymoon at Catalina. On their return they will live here. The bride, a visitor from the East, sought apartments at the Merrill, met the proprietor, and soon their vows were pledged.

Members of the Bellevue Club enjoyed an afternoon of story telling at the pretty new home of Mrs. L. L. Charles, Tuesday. Roll call brought forth amusing anecdotes. The hostess rendered several pleasing piano solos. Mrs. Rose of Coronado street will entertain the club members next.

Miss Dorothy Kellogg of Altadena, who is to become the bride of Dr. J. H. McKellar of this city, is being feted extravagantly here and in her home city. Tuesday Miss Frances Wright entertained for her. Dr. McKellar is also receiving many congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Hoar were among the Long Beach guests who participated in the monthly dinner given by the Southern California Woman's Press Club at Christopher's. Miss Marie Elliott was guest of honor.

OLD memories were recalled and old times reviewed on the occasion of a dinner presided over by Hon. P. A. Stanton at his bachelor home here last Sunday evening. Around the table, which was set for twelve, were gathered members of the family and friends of long standing. Mrs. Lewis Stanton, mother of the host, was the honored guest, and other special guests included Mrs. Michael Hurley and son, Ormuth, of Cleveland, O., who are passing the winter here; also Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Stanton of San Francisco, who were house guests at the Stanton home. The table was decorated in scarlet geraniums and an elaborate repast enjoyed.

Richard Barry and mother, with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Barry and their two children, all of Los Angeles, motored down on Sunday and enjoyed a picnic on the beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Russel, with their daughter, Eleanor Jean, passed the week-end in town, guests at the home of relatives.

MR. AND MRS. O. W. TABOR left Friday for Templeton, Cal., where Mr. Tabor expects to engage in apple-growing. Templeton is about twelve miles from San Luis Obispo. Mr. and Mrs. Tabor have many friends here who wish them well in their northern home.

Mrs. L. P. Goddard has returned to Huntington Beach from Pasadena where she has been visiting for a month.

Mr. and Mrs. George Gunn left today for Colton where they will remain for several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Turner had as their guest this week Mr. L. J. Bentley of San Jacinto, brother of Mrs. Turner. Mrs. Turner and Mr. Ralph C. Turner accompanied Mr. Bentley on his return to San Jacinto Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Criley have as their guests Joseph and Ira Will of East St. Louis, Ill., brothers of Mrs. Criley. The visitors arrived in Huntington Beach Saturday and will remain about a month.

Mrs. Dora L. Mellette of Los Angeles and Mrs. Alice Buckingham of Santa Ana were guests of Mrs. Mary V. Bushard and Miss Marie Bushard this week.

The farewell party given in honor of Mr. Claude Leatherman at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Otto D. Lee Wednesday evening was a pleasant and successful affair. Mr. Leatherman left Friday morning for Yuma, Ariz. He has resided here for about four years. The evening was passed at music and games and refreshments were served to the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. Pyrl W. Elliott, Miss Francis Douthit, Miss Zulu Elkins, Miss Amy Helme, Miss Lillian Stahl, Miss Vernie Worthy, Miss Frances Porter, Miss Perl Porter, Mr. Paul Helme, Mr. Frank Catchings, Mr. Chester B. Helme, Mr. Don Yeary, Mr. Clarence Hunt and Mr. Harlan Boardman.

THE home of Mr. and Mrs. William Falkinstein was the scene of a pleasant event on Sunday, the occasion being the 76th birthday anniversary of Mrs. J. Harris, mother of the hostess, and the announcement of the engagement of Miss Elsie Asher of El Monte and Mr. J. L. Rogers of San Diego. Miss Asher is a niece of Mrs. Falkinstein. Those in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. R. Ancher, Mr. Herman Harris, Arthur Harris of San Bernardino, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Harris, Redlands; Mr. and Mrs. I. Asher, Misses Gertrude and Elsie Asher, Master Alvin Asher, El Monte; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schmidt, Alhambra; Leo Harris and Miss Helen Harris, Lancaster; J. L. Rogers, San Diego; Mrs. J. Harris and Mr. and Mrs. William Falkinstein, Anaheim.

In honor of Mrs. Harris, Miss Asher and Mr. Rogers, a six-course dinner was served. Miss Asher was formerly a resident of this city, a graduate of the Anaheim High School, and a general favorite with the younger set.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Muckenthaler celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary at their home, No. 305 Resh street, Sunday. Fifty guests were entertained in a delightful manner during the afternoon and evening. Many pieces of silver were bestowed upon the popular couple by their many friends. Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. L. Eagan, Mrs. G. Glotzbach, Mrs. W. Muckenthaler and daughter, Miss Gertrude of Los Angeles; Misses Kathryn and Elizabeth Oehlke, Orange.

The Eastern Star gave one of the most interesting Halloween events at the Masonic Temple on Monday night. Suggestive decorations of witches, jack-o'-lanterns and black cats presented a weird scene. There was a violin selection by Miss Eileen Adams, readings, Misses Fay Kern, Callie Calloway and Dorothy Rockwell; vocal solo, Miss Inez Elliott; refreshments were served at a late hour, after which the ghosts departed for their homes.

A party of young people, all members of the local High School, enjoyed a most pleasant night Monday at the home of Miss Alice Pannier, the occasion being a surprise party in honor of Miss Callie Calloway, who had reached another milestone in her life's journey. The event was given by the Jolly Octo Club, of which Miss Calloway is a member. Those present included Misses Alice Pannier, Callie Calloway, Violet Gervias, Martha Whipperman, Goldie Matthews, Augusta Lensing, Bess Cox, Carrie Evans, Messrs. Fred Owen, Ashleigh Chamberlain, Norman Majonnier, Coe Wellman, Milton Pannier, Charlie Brisco, Dale Quarton, Harold Douglas.

MR. AND MRS. A. N. KUMLER returned Tuesday from a week's visit with friends in Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Colton and family of Corova Rancho were Riverside visitors the first of the week.

Mrs. J. E. Stuart of La Habra, who has been the guest of Mrs. Mary Fowler the past week, is visiting with Winchester friends before returning to her home.

Mrs. Charles B. Woodhead entertained the ladies of the P.E.O. Saturday afternoon with a delicious four-course luncheon. The dining-room was decorated with masses of red carnations. Miss Florence Parmalee of Los Angeles was among the young ladies who assisted in serving.

Word was received here of the marriage this week of Miss Edna Ryan of Claremont and Martin Aguirre of this place. Miss Ryan formerly lived here. Mr. Aguirre is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Miguel Aguirre, one of the oldest Spanish families of this section. The young people will make their home at the Aguirre grain ranch in the lower part of the valley.

The P.E.O. Society has issued 100 invitations for Saturday afternoon, when at the home of Mrs. Hattie M. Thomas a reception will be given in honor of the teachers of the public schools.

Mrs. N. Burgess and family have arrived from Oklahoma and are occupying the Keil bungalow on East Main street.

Mrs. H. R. Wilson is enjoying a visit from her brother, C. E. Leffingwell, who has recently returned from an extended absence in Alaska.

A masque ball was given at the Sunbeam Theater Halloween, at which a large number of young people from San Jacinto and Hemet were present.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Snyder returned the first of the week from an extended visit with Mr. Snyder's parents at Oxnard.

GRAY HAIR MADE LUSTROUS, NATURAL

Radiant Youthful Color Comes Back Quickly. Nature Does It.

"Here's something that will make you ten years younger in ten days," said a well-known druggist in town as he handed a bottle of Hay's Hair Health to a woman who was prematurely gray.

You can't get away from it—gray hair does make one look old. Science has come to the rescue and makes it possible to do as the druggist says—restore gray hair and look ten years younger.

Hay's Hair Health does it—you simply apply this dainty, refined toilet preparation to your hair and it causes the oxygen in the air to so act upon each gray or faded strand that it actually comes back to the dark, lustrous color of youth. It doesn't stain, for it isn't a dye—simply causes nature to restore the natural color you so much desire. The good old-fashioned ingredients contained in Hay's Hair Health strengthen, revitalize and beautify the hair.

It makes the color so even, and leaves a gloss so natural that no one will know you are using anything on your hair. Any person who has thin, gray or scraggy hair and wishes to restore it to its fulness of color and luxuriance should go at once to his druggist and get a 25c, 50c or $1.00 bottle of Hay's Hair Health. The Philo Hay Specialties Company, manufacturers, of Newark, N. J., authorize him to refund full price to any dissatisfied purchaser.

Last week Thursday afternoon Mrs. Ernest Bedford Rivers and Mrs. Herbert Miller were joint hostesses at a musicale given at Los Rios Rancho, the home of Mrs. Rivers. A large number of guests were welcomed at an informal reception, and later the delightful programme was presented. Miss Aileen Northup of Duarte contributed her musical talents to the evident pleasure of all. After the programme a collation was served in tempting fashion.

Thursday evening marked the October meeting of the ladies and gentlemen of the Buena Vista Whist Club. The host and hostess for the evening were Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Hulme, whose cordial hospitality was thoroughly enjoyed by the twenty-four members. The house was decorated with autumn flowers and foliage, and the evening's pleasures were concluded around the supper tables.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Ryder and Mr. and Mrs. Freeland H. Hunter were guests on Monday evening of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Wardall in Pasadena, at a company given in celebration of Mr. Wardall's birthday anniversary.

The thirty-five ladies who make up the personnel of the Duarte Reading Circle were pleasantly entertained by Mrs. Samuel Maxwell at her home on Mountain View avenue, Tuesday afternoon between the hours of 3 and 5 o'clock. Mrs. Carrol Fowler and Mrs. B. W. Gerhart presented readings, while the ladies employed their hands with needlework. During the concluding social hour tea was served by the hostess, who was assisted by Miss Rose Maxwell in entertaining.

Mrs. E. A. Moore opened her home Thursday to the ladies of the Methodist Church for an all-day quilting party. At noon a buffet luncheon was served and in the afternoon the ladies gathered about the quilting frames.

Mrs. William Beardslee gave a card party Tuesday in compliment to her house guests, Mrs. Young and Miss Young, of Denver. The guests were the members of the Fortnightly Auction Bridge Club, and the gathering proved a delightful though informal affair.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Sarwine, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Radabaugh, Mr. and Mrs. Walter K. Shaw and Miss Caroline Blaine were members of a party which motored to Long Beach Monday evening to be guests at a banquet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hargis.

Mrs. Smizer gave a noonday dinner Thursday in compliment to the seventeen ladies from Monrovia who motored to her home on Mountain View avenue. After the delicious chicken dinner, visiting and needlework were enjoyed.

Mrs. Joseph Fowler and Mrs. C. H. Sarwine entertained with two large companies on Friday afternoon and evening at the home of the latter, Oakleigh, on Fallingleaf avenue.

Mrs. Thomas McKinley and Mrs. Anna Grant entertained the members of the Pomona Women's Club at the home of the former on Monday afternoon. An interesting programme was given and during the afternoon much Halloween fun was enjoyed.

Mrs. L. R. Howell and Mrs. LeMaster were hostesses to the members of the Goldenrod Embroidery Club on Thursday afternoon at the home of the former, No. 160 West Eleventh street.

Oxnard.

MISS MAUDE LATHROP was hostess at a small dancing party at her home Monday night, and a second was given by her Friday night. On both occasions the Lathrop home was prettily decorated with flowers, and refreshments were served to a merry group of members of the younger set of Oxnard and vicinity.

A pleasant Halloween party was given at the Restroom Friday evening by the Dorcas Society of the Presbytertian Church, at which black cats, witches and pumpkins disported in true Halloween style. Fortune telling, witchcraft and games were features of the evening.

The grammar school glee clubs entertained parents of the pupils and invited guests with an enjoyable evening Friday, in the High School auditorium. Miss Hazel Virden and Miss Isabel Edmunds were accompanists for the various numbers, and Miss Fluvia Hunstock the director.

Conspicuous among a number of brilliant affairs given in Ventura county, as well as in Los Angeles, for Miss Rosa Camarillo since announcement was made by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Camarillo of Camarillo, of her approaching marriage to Alfred Petit, was that given by Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Arneill of Camarillo, at Athene Clubhouse, which was elaborately decorated with festoons of pink tulle and asparagus fern and in the center of the dancing auditorium, a floral wedding bell. Late in the evening refreshments were served buffet fashion. The serving table was exquisitely arranged depicting a wedding in miniature, every detail, from flower girl to officiating clergyman being complete. Pink Cecil Brunner roses completed the decorative scheme, and arch Kewpies about the table witnessed the ceremony. Assisting the host and hostess in entertaining were Mmes. F. J. Sifford and Myron H. Gabbert of Ventura, Mrs. Ernest R. Hill of Oxford. Guests from every section of the county were bidden to this delightful affair.

Culminating a romance began four years ago in Santa Paula High School, Miss Ella Wileman and John Pinkerton Munger were married Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wileman, in Bardsdale, the Rev. L. D. Lloyd performing the ceremony. Pink and white roses and fern were used in profusion throughout the home, the bridal party standing under a canopy of the same flowers mingled with wedding bells. The bride wore white crepe de chine and lace and carried a shower bouquet of roses and ferns. She was attended by Miss Nellie Whitmer of Los Angeles, a cousin of the groom, wearing pink hand-embroidered mull over crepe de chine. She carried a shower bouquet of American Beauty buds. Burt Munger, brother of the bridegroom acted as best man. Miss Olive Pierson played the Lohengrin wedding march preceding the ceremony. Following the wedding supper amid a profusion of pink and white roses, Mr. and Mrs. Munger departed for a motor trip through the southern part of the State. They will later return to the pretty new bungalow home in Bardsdale, which is in readiness for them. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Munger.

Tustin.

WEDNESDAY afternoon Miss Mabel Logan entertained a number of her club sisters, beautifying the parlors with ferns and magnificent snow-white chrysanthemums. Music, embroidery and sprightly conversation was followed by an invitation to the dining-room late in the afternoon. A gorgeous Halloween scene presented itself to the guests as the doors were opened. Lacy greenery mingled with fluffy yellow chrysanthemums in the envelopment of the chandelier, and over the lights were fantastic black faces of witches, electric gleams shining out only from the interstices forming the yellow eyes and mouths. The feathery greenery trailed over the snowy cloth like emerald cobwebs with gorgeous autumn leaves flashing their colors through the tendrils of green. Tiny pumpkins were hand-painted on the cards that marked places, and hollowed oranges filled with glace walnuts completed the glow of yellow coloring that pervaded the pretty room. Those at the table besides the hostess were Miss Louise Cotant, Miss Mabel Riehl, Miss Gertrude Utt, Miss Clara Thorman and Mrs. Charles Freeman, the latter hailing from Heber, Cal., and being a club guest.

As the autumn opens it makes itself noticed even in this land of sunshine, for the splendid chrysanthemum, the flower of the fall, is then in its glory, while the cool nights paint the leaves to color perfection. Mrs. J. D. Howes employed "mums" of yellow and white at a recent affair, where she was hostess to the Coreopsis Club. This coterie of congenial friends lost all idea of time as they exchanged experiences in household matters, ranging from recipes for the kitchen and the garnishing of the table to the dainty stitches of the embroidery over which they chatted. The intimate chat was halted occasionally as the younger members of the club entertained with melodies of voice or piano. Ices and a variety of delicious cake were served with fruit punch before the guests said their good-bys. The guests of Mrs. Howes were Mrs. Fenlon Matthews, Mrs. Frank Stearns, Mrs. Elsworth Mount, Mrs. J. H. Stearns, Mrs. Edward Smith, Mrs. Hart, Miss Eva Stearns and Miss Ethel Alderman.

Rialto.

MOST perfect in all of the dainty appointments was the auction bridge luncheon with which Mrs. H. L. MacRae entertained Thursday last as a farewell courtesy to her sister, Mrs. R. M. Laird, who departed Sunday for her home in Minneapolis. A color scheme of yellow and white was used in the pretty decorations. Autumn leaves and yellow lantana banked the fireplace, beautifully tinted chrysanthemums in a large brown basket formed the centerpiece for the round dining table around which were placed the small tables where the guests were seated. In addition to those of the hostess and the honored guest, places were marked for Mmes. J. D. McGregor, A. L. Utz, Thomas McHugh, T. H. Van Frank, F. D. Lockwood, Ben Buxton, Maude Montgomery, Harry Brimmer, G. R. Owen of San Bernardino, and house guest, Miss Annie Ward of Canada, Miss Helen Driscoll and Mrs. Vera Carter of Los Angeles. The trophy of the pleasant games which followed the luncheon fell to Mrs. McHugh.

Colton.

AMONG the social festivities of the week was the reception at which Mr. and Mrs. DeVillo Robinson entertained in honor of their golden wedding anniversary, held at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Ada R. Pettijohn. No formal invitations had been issued, but all wishing to do so were welcome to call, so that from 2 until 9 in the evening there was a continuous throng of guests within the spacious residence. Golden-colored blossoms were used in the decorations. The refreshments served of the day. Mr. and Mrs. Robinson were married at Greene, Chenango county, New York, November 1, 1864. One of the most delightful incidents of the reception was the presence of the best man who had attended the young groom, Albert B. Canniff of Pasadena. Twenty-eight of the fifty years of married life of the Robinsons have been passed in Colton. The immediate family circle was complete with the arrival of the only son, Ray D. Robinson, his wife and four children from Fresno. Many handsome gifts were presented to the guests of honor.

Apropos of Halloween was the progressive dinner party, which was participated in by a large coterie of the younger set Saturday night. It was a four-course affair, with the hostesses Misses Thelma Isbell and Elizabeth Ebert, Irma and Alta Rowsey, Ellen Corlett and Edna Gorall, and Evelyn and Helen Harper. All appointments were characteristic of the day.

Gala in decorations of the carnival colors of purple and gold was Masonic Hall Saturday evening on the occasion of the ball tendered Queen Gertrude and the members of the court. BITS OF VERSE.

Dreams.

Say that we dream! Our dreams have woven
Truths that out-face the burning sun;
The lightnings, that we dreamed, have cloven
Time space, and linked all lands in one!
Dreams! But their swift celestial fingers
Have knit the world with threads of steel,
Till no remotest island lingers
Outside the world's great commonweal.

Dreams are they? But ye can not stay them,
Or thrust the dawn back for one hour!
Truth, Love and Justice, if ye slay them,
Return with more than earthly power;
Strive, if ye will, to seal the fountains
That send the spring thro' leaf and spray;
Drive back the sun from the eastern mountains,
Then—bid this mightier movement stay.

It is the Dawn! The Dawn! The nations
From east to west have heard a cry—
Through all earth's blood-red generations
By hate and slaughter climbed thus high,
Here—on this height—still to aspire,
One only path remains untrod,
One path of love and peace climbs higher.
Make straight that highway for our God!

—[Alfred Noyes.

Help Lighten the Load!

"Help lighten the load!
Humanity stumbles ahead on its road,
Urged o'er the deserts, beset by the goad;
Men bend under burdens of hunger and care
And women must suffer and toil and despair;
Yet, even the children astray in the strife,
Are bowed by the weight till they weary of life.
Hark! unto each soul that is hero, not slave,
How clear sounds the call to arise and be brave,
Help lighten the load!"

"Help lighten the load!
With all of the strength that the heart can command,
With all of the power of brain and of hand,
With wills set to sacrifice, struggle and dare,
With love that seeks ever each burden to share,
With unflagging endeavor that stops not to ask
The length of the journey, the cost of the task,
Come, sons of the kingdom! Come, children of God!
And along the dark path by the world's anguish trod,
Help lighten the load!"

MEN AND EVENTS.

The congregation of the John Mann Memorial Methodist Church has found it necessary to make extensive improvements in its parsonage, principally raising the ceilings on the second story, because the pastor, the Rev. A. P. Shaw, is too tall to stand upright in the sleeping-rooms. He stands more than seven feet without his shoes. He came to the church four years ago, and when he undertook to occupy the parsonage found it altogether out of the question, so he has been living anywhere that the ceilings were high enough to permit.

Rev. Harry E. Robbins, rector of the St. James Episcopal Church, of West Hartford, Ct., has leased a moving picture theater in order to provide clean recreation for the people. In addition to the pictures, private dancing parties will be held in an adjoining room and exhibitions in modern and fancy dances will be given.

After living thirteen years with a bullet in his brain, Alex Church, a member of the Huntington (W. Va.) fire department, under a successful operation for its removal at the Kessler Hospital. An X-ray picture showed the bullet to be one inch below the skull between the layers of the brain. Church was shot in 1901 by Lee Boggs, a negro, following a quarrel. Boggs served two years in the penitentiary. The bullet had not bothered Church until a few weeks ago when he lost the sight of one eye and the other became affected. It was then decided to operate to save his sight.

President Wilson recently congratulated J. E. Duckworth, a North Carolina mountaineer, on having been the father of twenty-five children and having voted the Democratic ticket for sixty-five years. Mr. Duckworth, who had never seen a President before, was introduced by Senator Overman. He told the President he had eighteen sons, and nineteen Democratic votes in his family.

ACTIVE JUVENILES.

Sixteen-year-old Hazel Thompson captured the prizes for baking, canning and sewing at the Ohio State fair this year.

At the Greene (Me.) fair William Haley, aged eight, exhibited a pair of young steers which he had brought up and broken.

Little Phillis May Huff, aged 7, of Old Orchard, Me., has acquired the name of the "Child Whistler" of New England. It is said that there is no musical sound that she has not been able to imitate.

Eighteen-year-old Ruth Mercer is the only woman motor-truck driver in Cleveland, where she has been the mainstay of her mother, in carrying on the florist business since her father's death.

In a prize competion in milking cows at the Vermont State Fair, a 15-year-old girl, Ruth E. Caldwell, of East Thetford, won the prize against nineteen other girls between 11 and 19. She milked 2.4 pounds a minute.

THE UNCHLOROFORMED.

Despite the fact that he is 101 years old, George Miller of Woodstock, Mich., has hired out to husk corn.

William Wallace Spence of Baltimore celebrated his 99th birthday last week, in better health than a year ago, and feels confident of passing the century mark.

Joseph de Long of Brooklyn, N. Y., observed his 101st birthday last week with a family reunion. Though his sight and hearing are somewhat impaired, he is still mentally alert and interested in passing events.

Jonathan S. Young, a Casco Bay (Me.) fisherman, celebrated his 92nd birthday recently by putting together an unusually large number of lobster traps. He has been a sailor since he was 14 years old and is still quite active.

"Get a Board."

[Boston Advertiser:] Now, of course, there is no reason under the sun why a woman who persists in wearing such a tight skirt that she cannot board an electric car should be aided and abetted in the same by a conductor, but that is the height of kindness to which Conductor Edward Brunnen of the Bay State Street Railway went.

When his car, on its way from Peabody to Lynn, was going through Broadway in this city a woman came out to board it, only to find that without remodeling the skirt by violence or otherwise on the spot she could not well achieve the exalted height of the car step.

"Get a board," advised a passenger. Whether he meant this as an ironical pun or not, Conductor brunnen evidently took it literally, for he not only got a board about ten feet long from a near-by trench, but placed it against the car as a gangplank and with a couple of passengers helped the woman to get aboard.

The incident was worth an extra car fare for the passengers aboard.

--the children's hospital must close its doors

Seven hundred sick and crippled children (the number cared for each year) will be left maimed and suffering or forced to slow death unless there is immediate financial assistance.

More than twenty newly-born babes; a whole porch filled with little folks with tubercular joints; wards and sun rooms where tiny tots are being brought back to health and the ability to walk and talk and play—little ones by scores must NOW ask—

The Cost of a Pair of Theater Tickets or the Price of a Box of Cigars

—or those who have directed the destiny of the hospital that President Wilson opened and the whole medical world has praised, will be forced to abandon a noteworthy charity institution.

—it is not adequately financed. It needs money for current and running expenses. It needs annual subscriptions of $5 from four thousand men and women, or outright gifts that will meet this present deficit.

This Little Baby Girl

Will be cured if YOU give $5 every year. Otherwise she is destined to a life of infirmity and torture. She is one of a great number of similar cases. Will you help her—and the others? Will you, at any event, come to the hospital (Sunset and Vermont) and see how it is managed and look these tads over?

MRS. ROBERT LATHAM OWEN.

Wife of the Senator from Oklahoma is Attractive and Well Versed in Social Lore—Mrs. Owen Comes of a Distinguished Southern Family and was Before Her Marriage Daisy Deane Hester, Daughter of Capt. and Mrs. George B. Hester of North Carolina.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—"Fancy names, abbreviations, or pet names do not claim much favor, in these times," remarked Mrs. Owen, wife of the Oklahoma statesman. "I am frequently asked why I do not call myself Margaret and I reply promptly, because I have no right to the name. I was born when the fields of my native heath, then Indian Territory, now the growing State of Oklahoma, were abloom with the starry flowers we call the daisies. My mother had gone to the new land with my father from among her kindred and beloved friends in North Carolina and naturally she was homesick. The daisies reminded her of the old place back in Carolina, for there too, thousands of snowy blossoms dot the fields, and she called me Daisy Deane. The latter is a family name and also the words of the plaintive old song, "Daisy Deane," very popular in the times of romantic ballads and before the era of rag time and the coon songs. I never see one of the lovely little flowers without thinking of my mother and I cling to the rather infantile name without the least desire to make it more dignified or sedate. I like names with meaning so we called our only daughter Dorothea, gift of God, for she was the only grandchild on both sides of the house and her coming meant so much to us all."

Senator and Mrs. Owen are among the adaptable members of official society and have affiliated with many active organizations. They belong to the Chevy Chase Club and have enlivened the tedium of the summer by alfresco dinners there and by teas and afternoon dances. They are both members of the Columbia Golf Club, and may be seen constantly during the heated term following the elusive ball over the hills and dales of the course. Mrs. Owen and her daughter are among the fearless horsewomen of the city and they follow the hounds enthusiastically. But, according to her friends, Mrs. Owen's conspicuous and priceless talent consists in her ability to campaign. Not to take the stump and harangue the multitude but to accompany her husband, to sit beside him and look cool, comfortable and happy no matter what the temperature, the hardships of the trip or the number of times that she has heard the speeches. Her friends say she has a positive genius for looking interested and convinced during the speeches made in the campaign. This is not her husband's cause alone for there is always quite an element in them to keep up her interest. No matter how the Senator may plan to deliver his remarks or how he may have written out his views, when he gets into the thick of the argument, he invariably breaks loose from the schedule and enlarges, rearranges and always renders stronger his views. Mrs. Owen often looks over the prepared manuscript and then she finds much entertainment to see how little of what he has written out so carefully really makes up the speech.

"I have not kept a complete record of the many times I have stumped the State, as the term goes, during my husband's various campaigns. People here ask me, do you not suffer all sort of privations and are you not tired to death dragging all over the country and listening to the same thing over and over again. Well, it is not the same thing by any means, and then we of the strenuous Southwest are not so easily fatigued. It seemed to me a part of the contract to accompany my husband and see that he did not work himself to death, that he snatched time for the proper meals and for rest and that his wardrobe is in order. These duties would fall to my lot had we stayed at home and when his public affairs take him all over the State I went along, glad to go and enjoying it after a time quite as much, if not more, as I would remaining quietly at home. It is quite a joke among my friends, that I can look so interested and pleased when campaigning is going on: Why not look pleased? What woman does not relish hearing her husband praised? Then I have always believed in the philosophy of good clothes. They say it is an asset for a public man to have a happy, contented-looking wife. I think to have her well gowned is just as much of an asset. Campaigning gives an opportunity to see all parts of your State. That is something worth while for nearly all of us know much more about other States than of our own. I have found many residents of New York who have never seen Niagara Falls and I know Kentuckians who have but a hazy idea of the magnitude of Mammoth Cave. Now my native State is an open book. We do not boast of so many wonders as some of the commonwealths, but all we have I can give some account of. My daughter is devoted to the home in Oklahoma though we both spend less time there than we would wish, owing to the prolonged sessions of Congress."

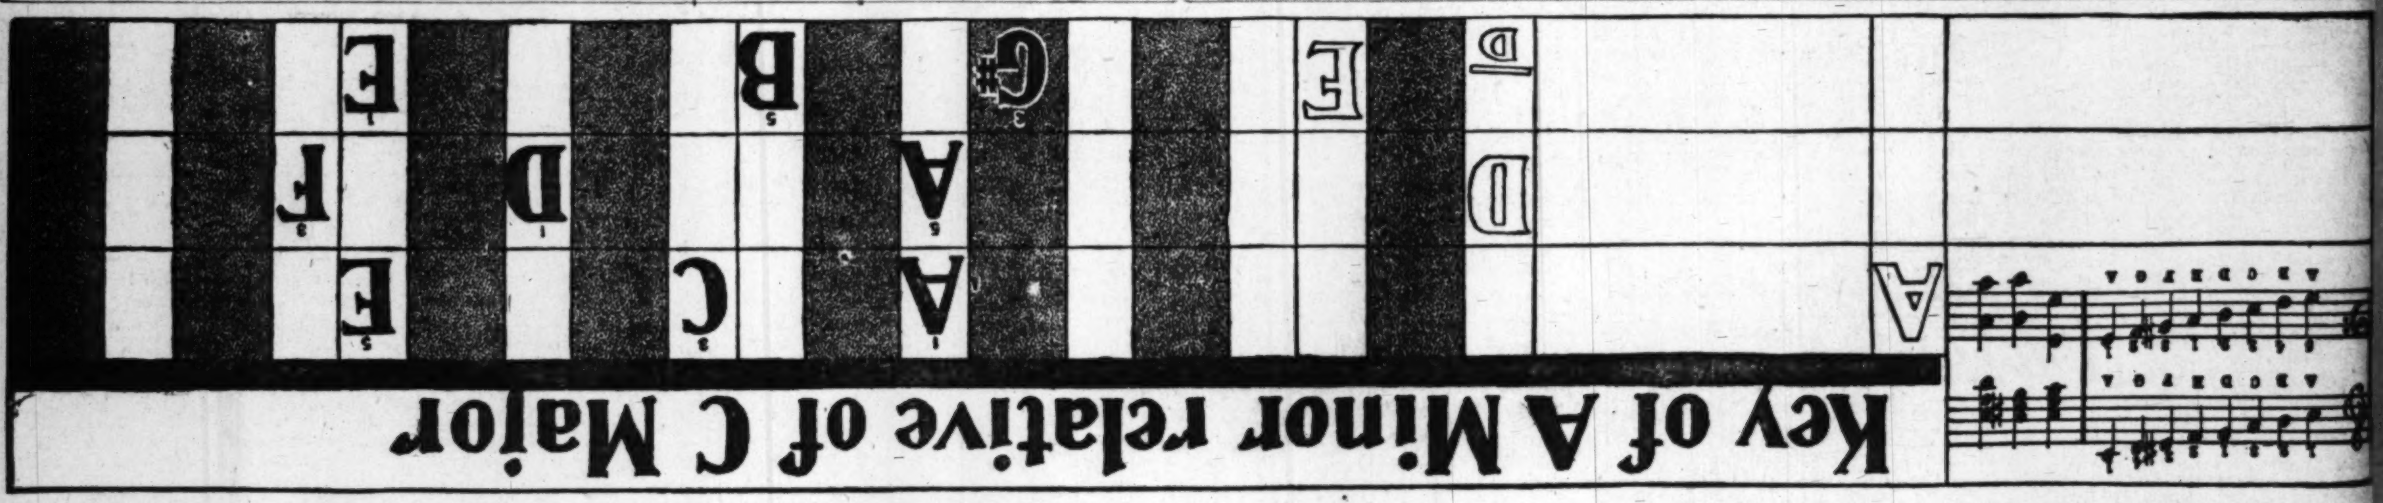
Quite a halo of romance surrounds the vigorous clean-cut Senator from the former Indian land. He is the son of Narcissa Owen, daughter of one of the last chiefs of the Cherokee tribe and for many years a resident of Washington. Senator Owen and his daughter glory in their descent from heroic Indian stock and the beginning of the Senator's political fortunes were laid when he was appointed United States agent for the five civilized tribes in 1885. Mrs. Narcissa Owen wrote her memoirs before her death about three years ago and the pages are dotted with affectionate allusions to her son, Robert Latham Owen, who bore the full name of his father. He was educated in Washington and Lee University and spent his early years among his kindred of Virginia, but when he had graduated he joined his mother in Indian Territory. She had been left a widow, with her resources greatly improverished because of her husband's espousal of the Confederate cause. The future Senator took anything which came to hand which meant aid to his mother. She was teaching and was also supervising a government school so he took up the same work and became in time principal teacher and head of the Territorial Board of Education. When he was appointed agent of the five tribes he removed to Muskogee, his present home, and there he met his wife, the daughter of another well-known citizen, Capt. Hester.

A more interesting family connection cannot be traced than that of Senator Owen and his wife. The Senator through his father is akin to the most distinguished families of Virginia and the South. His paternal grandmother was Otwayanna Carter, daughter of Charles Carter of Shirley, that famous estate on the James River still in the possession of the lineal descendants of the gallant Charles. His wife was Betty Lewis and Betty Lewis and the daughter of Fielding Lewis and Betty Washington, sister of Gen. Washington. His paternal grandfather came of equally celebrated stock. He was Thomas Chisholm, son of John D. Chisholm, a Scotchman, who because of failing health sought the New World. He married a woman of the Cherokee tribe and his son, Thomas, Senator Owen's grandfather, was in reality the last hereditary chief of the Cherokee nation. Those who recall the history of Washington's development as a city will remember that a graveyard once occupied the valley which dipped down from the edge of Jackson Park to what is now the broad boulevard, Connecticut avenue. The first improvement here was the Arlington Hotel, erected by William W. Corcoras and the philanthropist gave hundreds of dollars to have the graves reverently removed to Rock Creek Cemetery. Among those disinterred were John D. Chisholm and his wife. In addition to Thomas Chisholm, the first member of this family had two daughters and a son, Ignatius. The descendants of this son figure in history, in that he married Martha Rogers, sister of the Cherokee wife of Sam Houston. The heroic Texan after his painful experience in Nashville, Tenn., sought comfort from his friend, Charles Rogers, then living in Indian Territory. Charles Rogers also came from Nashville and the two had been early chums. He was also an early friend of Senator Owen's grandfather, Thomas Owen, and his friendship was cemented through the marriage of Ignatius Chisholm to his daughter, Martha.

Senator Owen's wife, Oklahoma.

Miss Dorothea Owen, who will be a conspicuous figure in society this winter, can show an illustrious lineage and can join more patriotic societies than the average American maiden. She can claim title to being princess through her grandmother, last of the Cherokee princesses, and then what a long list of other famous kinship is hers through the various windings of her father's relatives back to the early history of Virginia. But she is a modest girl, graceful and rather reserved with a queenly dignity which is her heritage. Her mother has trained her carefully for the needs of the present and she will no doubt take a high place in the younger set. Mrs. Robert Owen was educated more extensively than was common in her community. Her preliminary education was obtained in the synodic academy in Fulton, Mo. Later she studied at Vanderbilt University in Nashville and she afterward took up music, the languages and painting. Her chief talent, however, is in her capable management of home. For several years she maintained a charming apartment at the Stoneleigh and here she dispensed a typical southwestern hospitality. Last winter the family had a spacious and well appointed home in K street just above Seventeenth, and it is here Miss Dorothea will be presented in the early winter, probably in November. Miss Owen was taught at home in her Oklahoma days and has attended a private school here in Washington. For several years past she was at Miss Finch's in New York City and the last year she passed part of the season in Europe perfecting herself in the modern languages. Miss Owen will add to the athletic contingent of the social set of whom Miss Lu Burleson, Miss Ruth Hitchcock, Miss Callie Hoke Smith and Miss Sal Williams are conspicuous members. She delights in early morning canters, and one of her father's gifts on her graduation was a thoroughbred Virginia mare. It is a favorite diversion for these young ladies to meet just about dawn and have a brisk ride through Rock Creek Park or over the hills on the Virginia side of the river and then to take turns at entertaining the party at breakfast in their various homes. Mrs. Owen delights in having such parties, as these and her breakfasts are something to remember. She combines all the dainties of the South, hot biscuit and egg bread and crisp brown bacon, with toothsome relishes of the Southwest, eaten with chili or hot spiced sauces for the bacon or fried chicken.

Mrs. Owen belongs to the Episcopalian faith and has been active in all charities here and in Muskogee. She is fond of attending service in that charming sylvan shrine, Saint Alban's, a tiny church adjoining the National Cathedral Foundation beyond Woodley Lane. Many of the riding parties which she chaperones draw rein at the stately white Peace Cross which overlooks the valley of the Potomac. Mrs. Owen presents the happy combination of giving minute attention to every social consideration and to her wardrobe without neglecting the more serious duties of her position. Senator Owen has been one of the consistent advocates of suffrage. Spurred by the example which his distinguished mother gave, he has labored tirelessly for the success of the cause. His wife and daughter naturally sympathize in his endeavor and though they are not conspicuous in the workings of the suffrage council they are none the less enthusiastic for its triumph. Miss Owen will make another link in the long and strong chain of pretty talented girls from the South who will be leaders in the movement for universal suffrage for women. Lectures and afternoon fetes are a favorite method of the local suffragists to draw the attention of the indifferent to their propaganda. Last winter the most charming young girls of the official set attended these entertainments as pages or ushers, and their presence was not the least of the reasons why the cause gained in popular esteem. Mrs. Owen, a fine conversationalist, amiable and adaptable, is a favorite dinner guest in Washington. The Senator is keen and brilliant in private intercourse as in the forum, but few of the lawmakers are now as frequently seen in the banquet halls as in times gone by. Indeed it is the opinion of many that political gastronomy is as moribund as the Hague Tribunal and the diners-out are only those with abundant leisure and their work in the world accomplished.



GROVE'S MUSIC SIMPLIFIER — THIRD LESSON — FOURTH LESSON NEXT SUNDAY

Entered According to the Act of Parliament of Canada at the Department of Agriculture in the Year 1906.

SECOND EDITION, Copyright, 1905, International Copyright Secured. Copyright 1903-4 by W. SCOTT GROVE, Scranton, Pa.

The key of C is the natural key. It requires no sharps nor flats to make the simple chords, and in this lesson, the third of the series, the charts show how to play accompaniments in the key of C and its corresponding key of A minor.

IF YOU have difficulty in reading musical compositions you will find that by a thorough study of the chords in their inversions, and the triads in their different positions of all the keys, this difficulty will be overcome.

Do you wish to play fine accompaniments to melodies you know or sing?

If so, "Grove's Music Simplifier" will show you so thoroughly that you can play them with satisfaction to yourself and friends without much time used in study.

INSTRUCTION—Place one of the charts at right angles with the keyboard, so that the small white letter D at bottom of chart, with the dash above it, is directly over D on the keyboard. Then th white spaces on the chart will be over the white keys and the black spaces over the black keys.

The top, middle and lower sections on the lower chart represent the three chords, a mastery of which will enable anyone to accompany on the piano or organ any song or melody in the key o C, and the top chart represents the cords of the key A minor.

The white letters are to be played with the left hand and the black letters with the right hand.

Now having placed the chart on the piano or organ, play the white letter on the top section with the left hand, and then the three black letters in unison with the right hand.

Next play the middle section in the same way, then the lower section, and then return to the top section.

The small white letter D at bottom of chart, with the dash above it, which gives the chart position must not be played.

After practice these chords should be memorized so that you can play without the use of the chart. But with the chart a person who never struck a note on the piano or organ before may in a few minutes play the harmonious chords correctly, and then accompany his or her own songs or the songs of friends.

Proficiency requires practice, but no previous knowledge of music.

If you desire to delve deeply into the mysteries of music, the charts give you the best possible foundation on which to base a musical education. A knowledge of the keys and their chords underlies all the triumphs of the accomplished musician.

Every triad in black letters is marked 1. 3. 5. Always read triads 1, 3, 5, no matter what position. Triad $\overset{1\ 3\ 5}{C\ E\ G}$ —marked—third position, 5, the highest; always read it so. $\overset{3\ 5\ 1}{E\ G\ C}$ first position, 1, the highest; read $\overset{1\ 3\ 5\ 5\ 1\ 3}{C\ E\ G\ G\ C\ E}$ second position, 3, the highest; read $\overset{1\ 3\ 5}{C\ E\ G}$, and so with every triad major or minor.

WIT AND PATHOS IN LONDON ADS.

Columns of Daily Papers Tell Stories of War.

Gain in Liners Far Offsets the Loss in Display.

Many Suggestions Made to Help Out the Troops.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The advertising columns of the London daily papers tell their own story of the war. If the censor went so far as to block out every other line of information, so long as he left the "ads" intact the reader would still not lack instruction as to what war means to England. He would still find a great deal of pathos and grim humor.

Fears at first entertained by the newspapers and periodicals that advertising might be abandoned on account of the war's effect on business now appear to have been groundless. There have been losses, indeed, in one line, and gains in another, with the net result that there is today, after two full months of the war, seemingly no serious diminution of the amount of space sold at the usual rates for advertising.

The most notable change has been in the character of the advertising. It is distinctly war advertising. Of that sort it is more extensive than has ever been known in the history of British journalism. The greater space gain is probably in the "small ad" line. Two or more pages, usually the first and last, of the leading morning papers are, as from time immemorial, crowded with fine-print announcements with only a bold initial letter to relieve the monotony.

KILLED IN ACTION.

The conspicuous new feature is the "Killed in Action" or the "Roll of Honor" section. Alongside the familiar string of births, deaths and marriages, it has now become a daily occurrence to find in many of the papers a good part of a column taken up with such announcements as this:

"READ: Killed in action in the battle of the Aisne; about the 19th Sept., Arthur Beddome Read, Sec. Lieut. Somerset Light Infantry, the dearly-loved son of the late Robert R. Read and Mrs. Read, Avalon, Sutton, Surrey, and grandson of the late Col. R. H. Beddome and Mrs. Beddome, Sispira, Putney."

There is not a column, and hardly an advertisement among the hundreds on the page, but that directly or indirectly suggests some phase of the war. The "Personal" columns, as ever, are enigmas except to those who have shared the secret of communication by this means, but they often flavor of patriotism. When one reads: "Dearest: Am praying for you. Always loyal, Love," he may easily imagine it to be some sweetheart's possibly vain attempt to get a word to her soldier lover, she knows not just where.

But one needs to exercise no imagination to see the effect of the war in other instances. Taking a personal column haphazard one finds near the top such an appeal as this:

"I want to buy a German helmet. What offers?"

There are many suggestions of how one may help the troops in training such as this:

"Will anybody lend a pack of harriers or beagles to a regimental mess to be hunted by the officers until ordered abroad?"

TO LOCATE RELATIVES.

There are those who want to locate wounded relatives, such as this:

"If anybody has news of Maj. A. F. Harg, the King's Own Scottish Borderers, wounded at Le Chateau, August 26, will they please communicate with ——."

"Gentlemen idle through the war" appear frequently in the appeals for employment. One such addressing his card particularly to Americans, says he would like to take party of three touring anywhere through Great Britain.

An "advertiser holding post under military authority," asks if "a kindly disposed lady or gentleman will lend him £15 for a special family provision. Will repay by installments of 10s. a week."

There is such a one as this to reflect the busy days of the War Office: "Officer at War Office long hours desires to let or exchange his house one hour from London."

Many young men sign themselves to such appeals as this:

"Will anyone provide motor bicycle, with pound weekly for camp expenses and for wife, to enable me to join the motor corps?"

No matter where one may be going abroad, it seems, he believes his departure presents rare opportunities to extend British trade. There are several announcements like this:

"Englishman going to America, would introduce or sell English goods of merit on reasonable terms."

The reader is struck by the number of advertisements in French and Dutch, and now and then one in the strange Russian characters. There is no evidence of German. "In view of the large number of French and Belgian subjects in England," says one newspaper announcement, "we will undertake translation of advertisements from foreign words to English or English to foreign, free of charge."

SITUATION REQUIRED.

The "Situation Required" section is always filled to overflowing these days. It contains many pathetic instances of distress. There is no knowing how many of them are geunine. One reads:

"Bright English girl in great distress owing to war. Absolutely at end of resources and disheartened trying to obtain mere existence. Musical, artistic, well educated, fluent French. Will any lady help?"

There is an unusual number of women desiring to dispose of jewelry and other luxuries—suggesting they are in need of funds. "A lady," reads one such advertisement, "wishes to dispose of her fox stole and muff (black.) Quite new. This season's style. Cost £10. Accept 50 shillings." And there is a "dog lover" who will part with some prize dogs "for the benefit of the Belgian refugees."

There are firms which advertise as a specialty the business of "finding lost luggage on the continent." There is the random case of a chemist who wants a chance "to work out processes for the manufacture of products hitherto made only in Germany." There is an agency which makes this appeal to the clergy:

"Sermons supplied every week; new, fresh, simple, and drawing lessons from the war."

"A university man" appeals for a chance to render "patriotic service," and wants "a living wage only." The Anti-Vaccination League stirs up an old controversy by advertising to men joining the territorials that Lord Haldane, when Minister of War, ruled that vaccination was not compulsory. The column of "Legal Notices" is usually full of formal announcements of changes of names, persons with German-sounding names abandoning them permanently for English ones, to the confusion of future genealogists.

SPECIAL PUBLICATIONS.

Special publications such as illustrated histories of the war, coming out by sections for a few pence each, pamphlets on countless subjects such as "How to Help Lord Kitchener," and books on both the serious and lighter phases of international relations are widely advertised. It is a surprise to learn how much matter that was written years ago is brought out today as having a bearing on the war.

The big "ads"—many of them covering a whole page, have a particular news element in the fact that they generally flaunt in big type the "all-British goods" idea. "Mr. Lloyd George truly said," says one of these advertisements, "that this war would be decided by 'silver bullets.' Every German, or Austrian article bought in this country means so many silver bullets against us. Every British article purchased so many more of the all-powerful 'silver bullets' for us."

Charges circulating in one way or another to the effect that certain firms are of German origin have led to several libel suits. Many firms stigmatized as German-owned have cleared themselves of the charge by court action, with the result that retractions with profuse apologies are not uncommon at advertising rates.

There is no corner of the advertising pages without its martial spirit or its grim bearing upon it. At the foot of one column of "Situations Vacant" there appears:

"Wanted—A coffin maker, used to East End work."

One wonders if this, too, is not prompted by the demands of the war.

Contrast.

GERMAN ARMY MOVING CITY.

CARRY PROVISIONS AND EVEN GAS LIGHTING SYSTEM.

Gray-Green Uniforms Form Striking Contrast to Colorful Paraphernalia of the French, Who Were Royally Welcomed by Hysterical Populace of Belgium.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

BEAUMONT (Belgium) Aug. 28.—When French regiments paraded through Gembloux, a ripple of admiration ran through the almost hysterical Belgian populace, who had waited so long for the promised support of France. With their bright blue and red uniforms, their gaiety, glitter and song, they made a colorful entry which quite fulfilled one's conception of the romantic spirit of war.

But it was noticeable that they did not march in particularly good order and the doors of the wagons in their baggage train flapped and banged.

When the Germans appeared on the outskirts of Brussels they might have been mistaken for a cloud of low-lying mist, their gray-green uniforms melting against a neutral background. The entry was not theatric, but it throbbed with power and efficiency.

In place of the romantic French god of war there was a silent, gray-colored machine which was complete to the last detail. Wagon doors, instead of flapping, had patented locks and bars. For three days the gray-green soldiers marched through Brussels, part of an army of more than 1,500,000 that pushed its way through Belgium. In completeness of equipment it was like a traveling city. It had its postal service, its telegraph corps and its provision train miles in length, which provided for the soldiers a menu as satisfactory as that which they could have obtained in a first-class restaurant.

Six caissons with ammunition, each dawn by six horses, followed each field gun and there were processions of them, two miles long. There were in addition many truck and traction engines for the heavy siege guns and in all this colossal train not a wheel squeaked, not an accident delayed the forward progress. The efficiency of the Red Cross departments is best indicated by the fact that in following the German army for 100 miles, at times only a few hours behind the fighting, none of the small group of correspondents discovered a wounded soldier uncared for, nor any dead.

Daily marches of fifty kilometers were the usual thing and at times they greatly exceeded that distance. At the end of one of these exhausting marches I spent the evening in a barrack-room with German soldiers. For three hours they sang and danced without a sign of fatigue. An officer said he had marched night and day for three days, but he seemed fresh and anxious to go on. The physical stamina of the men is extraordinary. At Beaumont a gas-lighting system as effective as electricity was established twelve hours after the German entry into the town and not long after their own trains were running on the tracks to Charleroi.

Minor evidences of their thoroughness were seen in the equipment of each soldier, who carried with him not only every necessity of war, but food enough to sustain him if he were separated from the provision trains. It was interesting to note that even his trousers carried an extra set of buttons in case one set gave way. No detail was small enough to have escaped German study and preparation. At Zone Etat, on the way from Charleroi to Aix-la-Chapelle, a man lying at full length in the station yard suddenly extracted a telephone instrument from a flower bed and began a conversation with headquarters. There is no hint of the fulfillment of the prophecies uttered by French writers that the German soldiers were victims of an inflexible system of rules which were not adaptable to emergencies—that their success was predicated on a given set of conditions. These German rules, in the words of a German officer, "go into the brain" of the soldier, and he is not merely the unthinking reflex.

"The German soldier cannot retreat or turn back," said an orderly during a barrack-room discussion at Beaumont. "If he goes forward and is killed, then there are others who will take his place, but in the vocabulary of the German soldier there is no such word as retreat."

An Open Question.

LESS MEAT IF KIDNEYS HURT OR YOU'RE BACKACHY AND RHEUMATIC.

Meat forms uric acid which clogs Kidneys; causes Rheumatism and irritates Bladder.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

CALIFORNIA WILL FEED THE STARVING BELGIANS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Oct. 22, 12:35 a.m.—An American commission headed by Herbert C. Hoover of California will feed 700,000 Belgians who are on the verge of starvation as a result of the war in Europe.

An agreement to this effect has just been reached after weeks of diplomatic negotiations, in which Walter Hines Page, the American Ambassador, acted as intermediary between Belgium, England and Germany. Mr. Hoover has been acting as chairman of the American relief committee in London. More than $1,250,000 will be placed at his disposal for the relief of the stricken nation.

Early in the negotiations regarding means to relieve these people, Germany declared her willingness to assist, but she declined to give the guarantee requested by the British Foreign Office until the latter lifted the embargo on foodstuffs.

The situation was becoming desperate when Ambassador Page proposed that Mr. Hoover undertake the work. Germany immediately acceded to this plan, saying they would extend every possible aid to such a commission, and England as promptly removed the restrictions on food exports.

Formal organization of the commission will not be completed until a meeting is held today, but Mr. Hoover already has purchased with funds supplied by the Belgian relief committee $150,000 worth of food, which will be sent to Belgium Saturday on a specially-chartered ship by way of Rotterdam.

FORMING BREAD LINES.

The food situation in Belgium is becoming absolutely critical, already over 500,000 persons are being assisted by means of bread lines, according to the committee's reports, there being over 300,000 of these persons in Brussels alone. The supply of food for these bread stations, it is estimated, will not last more than a week longer. It is expected that the number of persons requiring relief will increase to a million within a month.

A stream of specially-chartered steamships will soon start for Holland with their cargoes consigned to officers of the commission at various places in Belgium. These officers will be under direct control of the commission and will be located in London, Rotterdam, Antwerp, Brussels, Ghent, Liege and other points. When necessary the commission will co-operate with the Belgian national relief committee, which has headquarters in Brussels. To insure effective working of this co-operation, the members of the American commission in Belgium will be made members of the Belgian organization. But care will be taken to see that this co-operation does not affect the neutrality of the commission, which is to work under the approval of both the English and German governments.

Half a million dollars were placed at the disposal of Mr. Hoover yesterday from the various Belgian funds, and through Ambassador Page $750,000 more will be turned over to the commission today.

SITUATION CRITICAL.

Speaking of the work of the commission, Mr. Hoover said:

"We are advised by Brand Whitlock, American Minister to Belgium, that the position of the Belgians with regard to the food supply is becoming absolutely critical, inasmuch as there are seven million people in Belgium and the country imports 60 per cent. of its food. Imports have entirely ceased and as the country has been denuded of its accumulated crops virtually the whole population is faced with famine. The problem therefore, is infinitely greater than the care of the refugees who have left Belgium.

"The restrictions put upon imports into The Netherlands by England have made it virtually impossible for the Belgians to secure supplies of foodstuffs from neutral countries and the creation of machinery which can secure such imports to their country has become a vital necessity.

"Baron Lambert and Emil Franqui of the Belgian Relief Committee are now in London co-operating with us, and they assure us that $1,000,000 worth of foodstuffs will be required monthly during the coming winter to feed the Belgians.

WHAT IS NEEDED.

"The chief supplies required will be wheat, rice, beans and peas. The commission expects to conduct innumerable soup kitchens.

"Beans and peas are specially needed. We have been unable to purchase more than 200 tons of these cereals in the London markets and we urgently need 5000 tons. We can arrange for the handling of any amount of food to Belgium by way of Holland on account of the facilities extended by the Dutch and the Germans. Australia, which is sending 7000 frozen sheep to Belgium already has arranged for us to distribute them.

"The commission hopes that the situation may be brought urgently before the American people, that the charity of a liberty-loving people may take the practical form of food supplies and that the American organization already soliciting help for the Belgians will co-operate with the commission in the application of their resources."

The commission is constituted as follows: Walter Hines Page, the American Ambassador; Brand Whitlock, American Minister to Belgium, and Henry Van Dyke, American Minister to The Netherlands, honorary chairman; Herbert C. Hoover, chairman; William Heinman, Brussels, vice-chairman, and Willard Shaler, Brussels, secretary.

The members of the commission are John White, Clarence Graff, Millard Hunsiker, Edgar Rickard and T. F. Lucy, all Americans resident in London; Hugh Gibson, secretary of the American Legation at Brussels, and E. A. Hulze, an American resident in Brussels, and the American Consuls in London, Rotterdam, Antwerp, Brussels and Ghent.

Many of the routine workers will be Belgians. Military aides will be attached to the various offices of the commission.

RECRUITING IN AUSTRALIA.

EXPEDITIONARY FORCE ABOUT READY TO START.

Equipment of Army from Antipodes will be of the Finest and Many of the Officers have had Military Experience—Cadets Going to Front.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

MELBOURNE (Australia) Aug. 29.—Recruiting for the Australian imperial expeditionary force, which is the official title of the army of 20,000 which the commonwealth is devoting to the aid of the empire, is already finished in some of the States.

While in some districts a special effort was made to get the bushmen from the country, the cities have furnished the greater part of the material. Owing to the system of compulsory military training which the commonwealth put in force a year or two ago, Australia is much better qualified to raise a volunteer army than was the case at the outbreak of the Boer War when no such comprehensive system existed.

The force will be made up of a light horse brigade and a division of infantry, 2315 horses and ten guns, and the division of 17,553 men including officers, 5162 horses and seventy guns or a grand total of 19,779 men and officers, 7477 horses and seventy guns to which are to be added 221 other officers and men who are to be employed in various capacities. The volunteers have been taken from the States on a territorial basis and therefore New South Wales and Victoria have contributed the most men.

The commander is Brig.-Gen. W. T. Bridges. In the force will be members of the graduating class of the Commonwealth's Military College at Duntroon, New South Wales, pronounced by Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton, the finest institution of its kind in the British empire. It is intended to give these cadets a taste of actual warfare with an idea of its proving of service to them in future years. A son of Joseph Cook, Prime Minister of Australia, is among those composing the force.

Upwards of twenty-five steamers including the Aorangi, which has been running to San Francisco for the Union Steamship Company of New Zealand, and the Medic and Cevic of the White Star line, are under requisition by the government and are being converted into transports as rapidly as possible. Practically all the other leading British lines have been drawn upon for vessels.

Owing to the large number of horses needed for the force the Minister for Defense, Senator Millen, has appealed for voluntary contributions of those animals, and many ranchmen and ranching companies have responded. Among these has been Sydney Kidman, one of the cattle and sheep "kings" of the antipodes, who gave 200 military remounts.

OPENS UP NOSTRILS, CLEARS HEAD, ENDS COLDS OR CATARRH AT ONCE.

Instantly Relieves Swollen, Inflamed Nose, Head, Throat —You Breathe Freely— Dull Headache Goes— Nasty Discharge Stops.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed, nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

Controversy.

BELGIANS DENY BRITISH PACT.

Quote Gray Book to Dispute Charges of Germans.

Appeal to the Powers Made on Day of Invasion.

Preferred Ruin to Perjury, Legation Declares.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The Belgian legation made public today a statement giving extracts from the Belgian Gray Book, in order to controvert official German statements that documents had recently been discovered at Brussels showing an alleged military agreement between England and Belgium since 1906. The statement says:

"The Belgian legation has just received the copies of the Gray Book. It is evident from these documents that there has never existed any military agreement between Belgium and England, either defensive or offensive, such as the German government asserts to have been in existence since 1906. The following extracts from the Gray Book speak for themselves:

" 'No. 28—Offer of intervention by England—Note handed by Sir Francis H. Villiers, British Minister, to the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Belgium:

" 'Brussels, Aug. 4, 1914.

" 'I am instructed to inform the Belgian government that if Germany exercise pressure for the purpose of compelling Belgium to abandon her position of a neutral country, the government of His Britannic Majesty expects Belgium to resist by every possible means. The government of His Birtannic Majesty is ready in the event to join with Russia and France, if desired by Belgium, to offer to the Belgian government at once common action for the purpose of resisting the use of force by Germany against Belgium and at the same time to offer a guarantee to maintain the independence and integrity of Belgium in the future.'

"No. 37—Offer of England of an alliance with object of assuring the neutrality of Belgium against the pressure of Germany.

" 'London, Aug. 4, 1914.

" 'The Minister of Foreign Affairs has informed the British Ministers in Norway, Holland and Belgium, that Great Britain expects that these three kingdoms will resist the pressure of Germany and maintain neutrality. They will be supported in their resistance by England, who in such a case is ready to co-operate with France and Russia if such is the desire of these three governments in offering an alliance to the said governments to repel the employment of force against them by Germany and a guarantee for the future maintenance of the independence and the integrity of the three kingdoms.

" 'I pointed out that Belgium is neutral in perpetuity. The Minister of Foreign Affairs replied: "It is for the event of neutrality being violated."

" 'COUNT DE LA LAING,

' 'Belgian Minister in London.'

"No. 40—Belgium appeals to the powers after the invasion of Belgium, letter addressed to the Ministers of England, Russia and France in Belgium.

" 'Bruxelles, Aug. 4, 1914.

" 'Monsieur Le Ministre:

" 'The Belgian government regrets to have to announce to you that this morning the armed forces of Germany penetrated into Belgian territory, violating the engagements which they have taken by treaty. The Belgian government are firmly decided to resist by all means in their power.

' 'Belgium appeals to England, to France and to Russia to co-operate as guarantors in the defense of her territory. There should be a concerted and common action having as its object to resist the measures of force employed by Germany against Belgium and at the same time to guarantee the maintenance of the independence and of the integrity of Belgium for the future. Belgium is happy to be able to declare that she will undertake the defense of the fortified places.

" 'DAVIGNON,

" 'Minister of Foreign Affairs.'

"Where is to be found the alleged military convention said to have been concluded in 1906 with England? Where is any trace of the alleged agreement said to have existed since 1906, between the allies and Belgium to force war on Germany? These documents clearly prove that such compacts never existed.

"The Belgian nation preferred ruin and death to the shameful perjury proposed to her by Germany. For this reason alone Germany has devastated and immersed in blood a peaceful little country. Today she seeks to rob her of honor, her only remaining treasure.

"The official documents, the confessions of the German statement, the ruins of Louvain, Malines, Aershot, Termonde and of so many villages burned and razed to the ground, the blood of her children, unjustly massacred, are the testimonials which the Belgian people cites before the tribunal of public conscience. To this tribunal, without fear, the Belgian nation ..."

NORWAY INSISTS ON NEUTRALIT

People Afraid of Offendin Any Parties to War.

Supplies in Large Amoun Shipped to Germany.

Undercurrent of Sentime Favorable to Allies.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

CHRISTIANIA (Norway) Sept. 1 —The word "neutrality" has acquir a flexible and variable quality u dreamed of by the founders of di tionaries. There is the violated a therefore unavailing neutrality of Be gium; the grim, almost belliger neutrality of Holland, and the frigh ened neutrality of Norway.

The result of sharp attacks on t Norwegian press, both by the Ge mans and the English, has been frighten Norway out of any individ opinions of her own. Recently she h been charged with having sold h press to England. She had hard time to defend herself against this cusation before there appeared in t correspondence of the London pap a severe arraignment of the No wegian press for having accep bribes from Germany. In an earn desire to give no color to either these charges, Norway has sedulo ly cultivated a neutrality that is b yond reproach. Of all neutraliti is, outwardly at least, the most p fect and unquestionable.

As a well-known citizen of Ch tiania remarked today, Norway is the position of the man brought t a police station on suspicion; "a thing she says will be used aga her." This delicacy of Norway's p sition is patent to any observer w has been on the streets of the cap for two hours. Men, before expr ing an opinion of any sort, reas themselves of the identity of t questioner and then look guardedly both directions to see that they not being overheard.

PRESS IS CAREFUL.

Press reports have become con with statements of purely uncon versial matter, and the official c muniques of the English. Fre and Germans. In the Christia Morgenbladet there are studiously vided columns with exactly half G man and half English statements preponderance of one over the ot would immediately cause trouble, cording to the statements of the tor. In the Verdens Gang, a gre proportion of English correspond gives the paper at first glance an E lish tone, but any inference of sort is contradicted in the edit columns.

The statements of government cials are in the same way guard and non-commital. It is almost a a law had been passed forbidding expression of anything except pl tudes. This fear of offending eit the allies or Germany inhibits the pression of Norway's real attitu ward the war.

For this reason, it is unusually teresting to find beneath this un peachable exterior undercurrent genuine feeling. The most nounced of these is favorable to allies. It is quite evident that n of the Scandinavian countries have covered from the sense of injury Denmark's treatment by Germany the time of the Franco-Prussian W With this as a nucleus, sentim against Germany is strong enough be called characteristic of the p ent attitude of the average Norweg civilian.

HATRED OF RUSSIA.

Among the military classes the a leaning in the other direction w has developed out of a fear of da from Russia, and a natural S dinavian hatred of that nation. were possible to obtain the net r of these two influences, it migh said that the present Norwegian ment is friendly toward England modified by resentment at her co ing with Russia.

A crisis of supreme importan Norway and Germany now seems pending. This is the question of use of Norway as a route the introduction of food and traband into Germany. Since declarations of war, the Norwe exports to Germany have notic increased, and a visit to the st ship lines plying between Christi and Stettin shows the importance Germany of this channel. Gov ment officials in Christiania st that no ammunition had been ried to Germany by this route, that the Norwegian governm would not allow it, but at pr Norway is under no injunction f England not to supply Germany w any material she may desire.

An observer in Christiania w say that at present enough he was being shipped from Norway Germany to supply the whole G man army. While citizens of this would not directly state that they pected trouble from this source, t were indications everywhere Norway is now apprehensive of English challenge of her right to port and transmit products to many.

PARTIAL MOBILIZATION.

A partial mobilization has ta place in Norway, but most of fortifications which have acted centers are so distant from Ch tiania that the capital itself bet no sign of a European war. streets are quiet, there is non the feverish anxiety in front of ne paper offices that is common in other capitals and towns of Eu and Christiania seems to be ho herself from the war, with what not helping striking the observ a conscious aloofness, which is o point of giving way to som more genuine.

The most serious damage Norway has suffered from the w that which concerns her financial dition. Just as she was in the of developing her railways, her power and her agriculture, the suddenly cut off the capital she borrowing from France. This left with her development arrested with a public debt of 600,00 kroner, or about $150,000,000. half-completed railways in No show how her development w tarded before it could pay retu the borrowed capital invested. effect of this financial burde been felt by every business a dustry of Norway. "THE BOOK OF BOOKS."

THE BIBLE: Its Story Taught by One Thousand Picture Lessons. (10 Vols.) Edited by Prof. Charles F. Horne, assisted by Rev. Prof. Julius A. Bewer. Press of Francis R. Niglutsch, New York.*

One of the most beautiful and unusual editions of the Bible—that Book of Books, still the most widely sold and read of all the countless thousands of volumes that have been published—comes in ten volumes from the press of Francis R. Niglutsch, New York.

It is edited by Prof. Charles F. Horne, M.S., Ph.D., of the College of the City of New York, assisted by the Rev. Prof. Julius A. Bewer, Ph.D., of Union Theological Seminary.

As an editor and author Prof. Horne is eminently qualified for supervising the publication of this splendid edition de luxe. He edited the eight volumes of "Great Men and Famous Women," the ten-volume "Story of the Greatest Nations," the twenty-volume "Great Events by Famous Historians;" and in addition has written some ten volumes of history and literary criticism of his own.

The binding is full black seal grained leather, padded cover, full gilt edge on red. The gold stamping is artistic, and the workmanship perfect.

The paper is of a fine, heavy grade; the type of a fine face, large, easily read, and the lines cross the entire page; notes appear at the bottom of the page to explain the variations in text that may be found in certain other editions. The workmanship is excellent in every respect, and the edition is one that book-lovers who have true appreciation for the publisher's art will prize.

Perhaps the most distinctive and interesting feature is the illustrations, of which there are 1000. Each is a copy of a painting or sketch from the work of the most famous masters from Raphael and Angelo down to that of contemporaries in America, England, Germany and France. Each picture is accompanied by a brief account of the event or story it illustrates.

The galleries and museums of the world have been visited and the most suitable selections made. Many copies of the pictures have been secured through negotiations with copyright holders. It is doubtful if any other picture collection of Biblical subjects is so complete, or even begins to present the productions of so wide a range of artists.

Among the better-known illustrations is included Leonardo da Vinci's "The Last Supper." This famous picture is now practically ruined. Da Vinci experimented with a new process of painting, and, though during his lifetime it seemed successful, for many years the paint has been coming off in flakes, although the distracted custodians have done everything conceivable to preserve it. The reproduction of "The Last Supper" included in the Niglutsch edition shows none of the marks of time which are evident in the more recent photographs.

"The Tribute of Caesar," by Gustave Dore—the most dramatic artist France has ever produced, who is well known for his illustrations of Dante's "Inferno"—is one of the most striking illustrations among the thousand.

Some of the other subjects and artists are "Lazarus Raised from the Dead," by Rubens; "Parable of the Rich Man's Son," from an Italian print of the Middle Ages; "James and John Seek Honor," by Anton Van Dyck; as well as pictures by Albrecht Durer, Paul Veronese, Titian, Perugino. Among the more modern artists are included: Sir C. L. Eastlake, formerly president of the British Royal Academy; A. D. Rahn, American, who chose for his subject "The Widow's Mite;" Leonce de Joncieres, a living artist of France; Henry Hofmann, the modern German master. It may be said that there is scarcely an artist of ability, from the Renaissance to the present, who painted Biblical subjects, but has one or more pictures among the thousand illustrations.

No book is so worthy of the edition de luxe as the Bible. And we can maintain our argument to that effect on the skeptic's own ground.

We can allow him to deny its divinity, and even allow him to be foolish enough to deny its religious and philosophical value, and we can still show, by all the traditional and recognized measurements by which merit is valued, that no book is so worthy of the distinctive honor of the edition de luxe as the Bible.

Whether inspired or not, the Bible as it has come down to us today is unquestionably the corner-stone of English literature. We speak of it not as a theologian, but as a reader of books, as one interested in the influences of literature. And in saying that no author who aspires to rise above the mediocre, who hopes to reach the heights of excellence or the hearts of the people, can afford to be without a thorough knowledge of the Bible—its literary style, its imagery, its parables and its chronicles—we are merely repeating the conclusions of such admirable critics as Macaulay, Matthew Arnold and others, including James Huneker, who is perhaps the peer of living American critics.

The influence of the Bible—and we are here still speaking entirely of its literary, not of its religious, influence—may be specifically pointed out in almost every work of high quality in our language, and in practically all other modern languages, possibly excepting the Russian, and one or two of the brilliant atheistic writers of France.

The most honored of skeptic philosophers, Herbert Spencer, pays unqualified tribute to the power and entire desirability of the Anglo-Saxon simplicity in our language. This tribute may be found in his essay on "Style;" yet the language has only preserved its rugged, direct Anglo-Saxon simplicity, because the King James version of the Bible has been known, read and studied during the past 300 years in every English-speaking community as has no other book that ever existed.

Shortly before the entire Bible was first translated into the common people's tongue, or early English, by Wycliffe, and afterward until the Book began to make its influence felt on the language, the poets and chroniclers, the dramatists and courtiers, spoke and wrote in the most extravagantly affected and bombastic style imaginable; every sentence was pregnant with some unique conceit, and directness was as foreign to the language as it seemed to be to the thought.

Caedmon (who anticipated Milton's conception of "Paradise Lost" by some 600 years;) Bede and Elfric had made translations of the Bible into English. But not until the time of Wycliffe was the book very translated and widely circulated; and not until King James instructed certain of the learned men of his kingdom to render into English the "authorized edition" was it in general circulation.

The court followers despised the common tongue. They affected—as the intellectual fops have done even to this day—the foreign manner and the foreign language. It is believed that the wide reading of the Bible among the many classes of the kingdom caused Chaucer—first of all the poets of quality—to adopt the common tongue for his poems.

In time the florid persiflage began to disappear from general speech and writings, and though again and again (and within our own memory) schools of florid and flowery writers, toying with Parisian phrases and schoolboy Latin, continued to rise, they have been short-lived, but even in their wildest extravagances never approximated the fustian elegance of the pre-Biblical practice.

But even exclusive of the general effect in shaping and preserving the solidarity and purity of the language itself, the characters of the Bible, the incidents recorded, the narrative episodes and parables—everything in it of a lesser value than the universally-cherished spiritual philosophy—have by allusion, casual and direct reference, adorned our literature from the days of Bunyan. To be more specific, we may say that there has not been a great author, from Geoffrey Chaucer to Joseph Conrad, who has not drawn freely from the Bible for allusion and symbolism, and in whose work may not be traced, to some extent, the concise, forceful and simple style of the Book of Books.

Edmund Spenser, known even yet as "the poet's poet," built the wondrous "Faerie Queen" on a trellis of imagery—the most remarkable imagery that may be found in our literature. Yet the entire theme of the poem is Biblical—virtues and vices are personified, and the whole poem is a sort of ethereal and poetical "Pilgrim's Progress."

Dryden's greatest poems were of a religious nature; and though some of them were written in a partisan spirit, each bears the unmistakable impress of the Biblical influence in both thought and style.

It was only during the period of the Restoration, when the reaction against Puritanism led to utter immorality and obscenity in literature, that the Bible lost for a time its perceptible influence on the leading men of letters. But there was precious little written during the Restoration days that has retained any value, other than that which curiosity may give it, for subsequent generations.

Pope's most splendid serious work is his "Essay on Man." And while it avowedly is an attempt "to justify the ways of God to man," it shows the influence of Biblical study—for those treaties on the Bible which appeared before the English translation had made its influence felt were ponderous with verbiage, vague and tiresome, as the writings of Duns "Scotus," now extant, show.

Byron himself drew frequently on the Bible for allusion, and while both he and Shelley were "heretics at heart," they at least knew the value of Biblical imagery. Wordsworth, Tennyson and even the rebellious Swinburne—the master of verbal music and scorner of things theological—admired and read and were influenced by the stately passages of the old prophets and the psalms. Browning's "Saul" gives some evidence of the impression that the Bible had upon his work.

Few of these men were deeply religious. Some of them did not consider the Bible "inspired" or even holy. But they knew its value as a literary influence, and profited by its knowledge.

At one time the impression was upon many people who had more faith than knowledge that the Bible was the "word of God," written manifestly under His direct and personal supervision. It is now generally known that the Bible embodies the records and chronicles of various men between some 700 years before Jesus until many years after his birth.

Jesus, as some of the other great teachers, among whom are Buddha, Socrates and Epictetus, wrote nothing himself; but that which he said and did was put down by his disciples. Long after the death of Jesus there was much discussion, some of which was exceedingly acrimonious and led to schisms, as to who was the author of certain passages in the Bible, and whether or not certain other passages should be accepted as a part of the Bible. The early Christians, so it now appears, were not of the opinion that these writings were actually inspired or holy—they knew something of their origin. But by the time the Renaissance was passed the Bible, in practically the same form it stands today, was accepted as the holy and the inspired work of God.

But whether the Bible is held to be the work of God or merely the teachings of great men, there is no questioning the influence it has had, not only upon the lives and philosophy of the masses, but upon the work of the great poets and masters of prose in our literature—and it does not matter whether these masters were infidels or Christians, they knew the Bible's value as a book—a book to be read and studied.

*This valuable work is represented in Los Angeles and on the Coast by J. F. Hastings from Boston, and is is sold either in parts or in complete volumes. There are three different bindings. The editor of The Times has purchased a complete set of the edition de luxe.

FICTION.

THE SECRET DRUNKARD.

THE HOUSE IN DEMETRIUS ROAD. By J. D. Beresford. George H. Doran Company, New York.

DRUNKENNESS has been the theme of many writers during the past few months, though Samuel Blythe, Jack London and Will Levington Comfort asked us to believe they forswore fiction at the time. This is not the place to discuss the relative merit of fact and fancy, but no one of that prominent trio approached their subject with the literary workmanship of Mr. Beresford, whose novel, "The House in Demetrius Road," has recently been published.

It is lamentable and exasperating to acknowledge that America has no class of writers who may begin to equal the English in contemporary literature; and among the younger writers of England Mr. Beresford stands to the front. He has art, he has technic, patience and, therefore, strength.

Unquestionably, the first part of this book is the best. Though the character of Martin, refined, almost finicky, who comes as a secretary to Robin Greg, is carried without an incongruity to the end; and though Greg himself is the blundering, brilliant, untidy politician throughout, it is the masterly way in which the author unfolds the situation that arouses admiration for his work.

Long before we know Greg is a secret drinker, we are affected by the perturbing atmosphere of the house; we feel there is an ominous mystery somewhere—something that is not clean.

Margaret alone understands—she alone forgives. Her admiration for the cunning drunkard—the man hid behind the bottle—and the sacrifice she offers for his sake is the thread of interest to which the incidents of the story are attached.

Even when the worst is known, even when Greg crawls like a helpless beast along the stairs, with his sneering, hooting laugh ringing to the ceiling, there is something pathetically admirable about the man who might be great if he could leave whisky alone. And at last, when he defends himself for his relapse and scoffs at Martin—who has truly and honestly imagined himself in the role of a sacrificing benefactor—we are almost deceived into believing there is much justice in Greg's mocking vindication of himself.

Mr. Beresford knows well the value of detail. Unlike some authors, Arnold Bennett among them and Hugh Walpole as well, he does not clutter his story with inconsequential detail—but every incident and every paragraph has a direct and significant bearing on the plot.

ARSENE LUPIN COMES BACK.

ONE plunges into "The Teeth of the Tiger" and finds a bewildering labyrinth of mystery with but one little thread—the thread of the narrative—to lead the way through a maze of murders, fights, complications, loves, glittering wealth and desperate situations in Paris, to the little suburban cottage where Arsene Lupin and Florence establish themselves for the proverbial eternity of romance—"to live happy ever after," as if anything so ungrammatical could be possible.

But M. Leblanc doesn't expressly relegate his hero and heroine to any such prosaic fate. We fancy he will again have occasion to make use of the daring crook who is not averse to aiding the law when it is profitable to do so. Even now we find that Arsene has been snatched by the romancer's wand from the grave to solve the murderous mysteries originating around the will of Cosmo Mornington.

Under the name of Luis Perenna (an anagram of Arsene Lupin) he finds himself heir to a vast fortune providing the hereditary heirs may not be located. One after another these heirs are stricken down—a hypodermic needle leaving its mark on each victim, and the imprint of sharp teeth being found on some object near the scene of the murder.

Arsene is himself suspected of bringing the hereditary beneficiaries to their death, since, in the event of their extermination, he is to come into the whole of the stupendous fortune.

Now anyone who knows Arsene Lupin is aware that he doesn't butcher his victims. He may rob them and baffle them, but he never murders. And since we last met him he has been doing astounding things in Egypt—serving as a private in the Foreign Legion, mounting to the dignity of a potentate among certain of the tribesmen—all of which are woven into the story in a manner calculated to augment our admiration of this remarkable hero.

In the course of events Arsene is compelled to suspect the girl he loves, he is compelled to submit to the indignity of arrest, to make use of an aeroplane, and to scramble from a well where he is supposed to be dead. Even to give an intimation of the solution of the story is to spoil the reader's enjoyment—for this is perhaps the most complicated and puzzling mystery that even the unique imagination of M. Leblanc has ever spun.

He has written a novel about Los Angeles.

Percival J. Cooney, a teacher in the local public schools, has incorporated much of the early, romantic history of Los Angeles in "The Dons of the Old Pueblo" (Rand, McNally Company,) which is his first novel. It will be reviewed on this page next Sunday.

FAMILY EXPERIENCES.

PRIVATE AFFAIRS. By Charles McEvoy. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

GENERALLY speaking there are two types of novels; one in which the plot predominates, and the other in which the plot is subordinated to the author's style. "Private Affairs" is almost without a plot—it doesn't need one, or at least no more of one than it has.

Mr. McEvoy has taken an English family consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Barnard, three daughters, a son and a servant and written a charming volume about them.

Mr. Barnard is strictly the head of the family, he allows no one to be mistaken on that point, and it is a hard blow to find his eldest daughter (who has arrived at the discreet age of 28) actually corresponding with a man upon whom parental disapproval has been placed. Another blow comes when he finds his son apparently much interested in the office stenographer, and this situation is handled with rather crude, but effective, diplomacy.

The occasion for real indignant outburst on Mr. Barnard's part arrives when his youngest daughter, Myrtle, achieves such success at an amateur theatrical that Sir Anthony, theatrical magnate of London, suggests that she go on the stage.

Myrtle go on the stage! Never. Preposterous! Preposterous, indeed, when Mr. Barnard finds that Sir Anthony is willing to pay her the astounding salary of forty pounds per week, which is an income considerably larger than Mr. Barnard derives from his own business.

But Myrtle refuses to go on the stage, and all of the father's stern parental authority is invoked to alter the decision of his youngest child. She does go, and does make a hit, much to the astonishment of the family and friends.

Eventually Lord Weybridge puts in an appearance, and Mr. Barnard forgets his proud dislike of lords and dukes in the glorious privilege of treating his lordship as a friend, and even goes so far as to consider that the Lord may be rather desirable for son-in-law.

When Cecil Knightly opens a theater in opposition to Sir Anthony and offers Myrtle seventy pounds per week, slight complications arise that are, however, straightened out with a touch of humor and something more serious as well, for Myrtle is left to settle the question of fame and love as she sees fit.

IMMATURE REALISM.

THE THREE FURLONGERS. By Sheila Kaye-Smith. J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia.

"THE THREE FURLONGERS" is a very good instance of an author's attempt to write a book too big for the ability behind the effort. The novel has no signal defects—it is simply ineffectual, immature, lacking in force. And there is nothing in the whole range of literature so disappointing as an immature effort at realism.

The plot, laid in England, is acceptable; but the book is much too short to adequately handle the diversified interests that are presented. Nigel Furlonger returns from prison, where he had gone for complicity in a bogus-stock scheme, to live with his brother and sister at Sparrow Hall. The family fortunes have decreased until only a small patch of ground is left them; but they have courage and are willing to face the world together.

Janet, the sister, is loved by a rich neighbor's son and gives her "innocence and ignorance" into his keeping. Nigel, under the name of Smith, develops and sustains for some time the acquaintance of Tony, whose family watch over her with aristocratic and jealous care.

Nigel loves her and is wretched to find that she ignores him after learning that he is a paroled convict. Chance meetings are exasperatingly frequent—Nigel continually meets her by "chance," which is an infallible sign of the amateur (no matter how many books the author may have to his or her credit) in fiction.

Nigel's imprisonment, for some unaccountable reason, has not impaired his ability to play the violin, which he does so well that a great musician offers to make his fortune in London. Considerable padding at this point brings the development of the story to the point where we find Quentin abandoning Janet to marry Tony. Nigel returns home, his brother dies, Janet "confesses," and we leave the two preparing to face the world together.

Miss Kaye-Smith is not without a certain literary ability, but she has not shown evidence of the strength, virility, psychological penetration and mastery, necessary to acceptibly handle a theme based on strong passion, wrecked hopes, futile efforts and heroic defiance.

HYPOCRISY AND SUCCESS.

THE HOUSE OF DECEIT. By ——? Henry Holt & Co., New York.

WE STRONGLY suspect that there is much between the lines in "The House of Deceit" which one not thoroughly conversant with English politics and politicians will miss. However, there is plenty obvious and unescapable to attract and hold the attention.

The author presumably desires to remain anonymous because, in the best of English and with great leisure, he exposes the hypocrisy of Maurice Sangster—the champion of humanity who narrowly missed being a big man; and shows the inner workings of political parties, the religious quarrels in politics and the new, insidious influence of women.

The author, whoever he may be, is no novice. There are no "tricks" and sensations, but solid, careful workmanship in the book. The one feature that will be uninteresting to American readers is the attention devoted to the religious politics—that phase of politics is practically ignored on this side of the Atlantic.

But Maurice Sangster goes into London with the avowed purpose of putting an end to the influence of the Roman Catholics; he succeeds in marrying the daughter of Champness—a millionaire with views much like those of Sangster, but who, however, heartily dislikes his son-in-law. Sangster allies himself with Grisel, a radical Jew who seems to find Socialistic propaganda profitable and has few illusions about humanity.

Sangster goes to Parliament, and tries in vain to break away from Grisel; makes an alliance with the aristocracy; becomes a Cabinet Minister; makes love to a Catholic girl, and is finally humiliated and bullied into good behavior by his peculiar father-in-law.

Phoebe, Sangster's wife, is the one true and admirable character. Her pristine faith in him is sadly mistreated, but she makes allowance and remains loyal. The pride and devotion of Sangster's parents—charming old people—is almost pathetic, especially that all unknown to them their son lives in the house of deceit.

The plot is evolved slowly, solidly. Gradually, almost imperceptibly, we see the change coming over Sangster. Now and then he rebels—gets ready to fight for his youthful ideals—but always he is beaten down. Circumstances shackle his weak will and he goes almost the whole of way through life a pitiful spectacle even when most honored.

"BLACK HAND" AND LOVE.

"PERSONS UNKNOWN." By Virginia Tracy. The Century Company, New York.

"PERSONS UNKNOWN" is the ideal novel for a sensational serial—the end of almost every chapter is a climax calculated to make the reader feverish with anxiety and eager to turn the page, where—as is usual with stories that have a third-act climax every chapter or so—it is explained that the situation is not nearly so desperate as was thought.

Herrick, looking out of his window across the court, sees the shadow of a woman against the blind and hears a shot. The police are called, an investigation is started and a murder mystery uncovered.

The dead man, a young publisher of prominence, is engaged to an actress and suspicion is fastened on Christina, the fiancee. The reader is tricked into excitement over a score of suppositions and clues; the coroner's inquest drags out a large amount of testimony from innumerable witnesses.

A few days later anonymous letters from "The Arm of Justice" begin to add complications to the plot, and Ten Euyck comes on the scene to disclose his rather unsuspected role toward the end of the book. Eventually a "black hand" society discloses itself; it is discovered that Christina's parents have a mystery of their own involving her, and the puzzling Nancy Cornish has a part in the plot from the first sentence to almost the last chapter without divulging her identity, she being chief among the "persons unknown."

Those who read it for anything other than the thrills it offers will have reason to feel exasperated; it is an intricate tale, more baffling than the ordinary murder mystery, and naturally hinges its solutions on larger improbabilities.

A CASE OF DOUBLE IDENTITY.

WHITAKER'S DUKEDOM. By Edgar Jepson. Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis.

"WHITAKER'S DUKEDOM" is another case of double identity. James Whitaker, a struggling shopkeeper of Hammersmith, is knocked by a flash of lightning into the dukedom of Lancaster and finds himself "heir" to numerous love affairs with suspicious and exacting ladies.

Whitaker expects to enjoy his fortune but a few days, but enjoys it so much that he keeps extending the date when he shall slip away and return to the listless wife who has the prior legal claim to his affection. He mingles among the aristocracy of England and the more grumpy and boorish he is the more nearly he resembles the hereditary duke, and the more easily he passes for the high gentleman.

But Whitaker's heart is tender—not only for Elizabeth, who shares his secret—but for the Lanchester tenants, and the country is rather astounded by the sanitary and architectural innovations he orders put through.

It is a grand fairy tale, and should be read by all grouchy dukes, just to show them what may happen if they are not good. The Bogie man of Fate may come and carry them away and leave a pleasant and kind furniture broker to help the good tenants and sweet maidens.

The book is published in dark cloth, well bound, good print, and attractive in every way—and is put on the market at about one-third the price of the usual new novel.

LOCAL PUBLICATIONS.

"The Lyric Land of California," by Mabel Urmy Seares, who has woven into her monograph much verse by Clarence Urmy, comes from the Colonial Art Press, Pasadena, as an artistic brochure illustrated by two etchings of Benjamin C. Brown and a half tone of "The Gateway" at the Redwood reservation. Mrs. Seares has written with enthusiasm, but without extravagance; her prose is splendid, musical, and she does not pour out the libation of praise alone to climate or scenery, but rather to the more subtle enchantment of the well-beloved State.

Martin J. Boutelle of Pasadena has brought out through the Boutelle Publishing Company a pamphlet of legal poetry under the title of "Community and Separate in California." It is something more than a curiosity—it is lucid, which is rather unusual for anything that deals with law. The laws of property of California are expounded in verse and—perhaps it is our fancy—there seems just a trace of sarcasm in the stanzas showing that woman is not always the legal equal of man. Mr. Boutelle has, at least for the layman, made the laws much plainer and considerably more interesting than the statutes books do.

"Stung," which was issued irregularly for some time, has become a real magazine with a publication date on the first of each month. R. H. Mouser of this city, under the title of "Bill Stinger," is editor-in-chief and complete staff of contributors. He flings out jingles rather better than the usual and slangy prose—old, common-sense advice—that will probably offend the literary taste of almost as many readers as it pleases. However, "Stung" radiates vitality and the advice, perhaps somewhat platitudinous at times, is wholesome and to the point.

THE AUTHORS' PEOPLE.

HEROES AND HEROINES OF FICTION: Modern Prose and Poetry. By William S. Walsh. J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia.

THIS is one of the books that would scarcely be over-praised if decked in flowery language a column long: "Heroes and Heroines of Fiction," the famous characters and famous names in novels, romances, poems and dramas, classified, analyzed and sometimes criticised with supplementary citations from recognized authorities.

But it is a book for the exclusive enjoyment of the lover of other books; it is a biographical dictionary of old friends we met with years ago in Scott and Lytton and Richardson—yes, and some of the ladies, gentlemen and rogues to whom Dickens and Balzac and Shakespeare devoted attention. Indeed, and there are many of these heroes and heroines of whom we never heard, but sometimes the glimpse of their record given us is so interesting that we expect to read all about them as soon as this deluge of fall fiction is over.

It is a book of value as well as one of interest. Having the name of "David Grieve" buzzing about in our head and being unable to remember where he belonged, we turned to Mr. Walsh's "Heroes and Heroines" and found "David Grieve" to be the hero of a novel written by Mrs. Humphry Ward; also a brief sketch of the novel is given.

Now when we suspect a new author of plagiarizing an old plot it will not be necessary to scurry around to locate a copy of the book from which a theft is suspected, and then sit up half the night reading it, only to find the new author entirely guiltless. The midnight oil which Mr. Walsh has consumed in getting his book together will prove a great saving for book reviewers throughout the country.

But Mr. Walsh long ago established himself as the book-lover's friend. His "Handy Book of Literary Curiosities" is also well worth having. "Heroes and Heroines of Fiction" is admirable. Of course, it is not complete—the bulk of the Encyclopedia Britannica would scarcely be great enough to include all of the heroes and heroines of fiction—but the selections have been made with discrimination, and we estimate that there are almost 20,000 characters included in the book.

A STUDY OF CHILDHOOD.

JEAN GILLES: Schoolboy. By Andre Lafon. (Translated by Lady Theodora Davidson.) G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

IN 1912 "Jean Gilles, Schoolboy," was awarded the prize of $2000 by the Academie Francaise as the "most imaginative work of an elevated character" that had appeared during the year. Such men as Paul Hervieu, Paul Bourget, Pierre Loti, Rene Bazin and Maurice Barres were among the judges. Therefore we can only conclude that much of the charm has been lost—as is inevitable—in the translation. That does not necessarily mean that the translator is at fault. It simply means that the delicacy, music and subtler qualities of literature in one language may not be transmitted through translation.

As a study of the psychology of childhood, "Jean Gilles, Schoolboy," does not impress us as being the equal of "The House," by Henry Bordeaux. In English, "Jean Gilles, Schoolboy," does not appear at all remarkable. But we know full well that Pierre Loti and Paul Bourget would not have given their vote to the support of a book for so distinctive a prize as that offered by the Academie unless it had high merit.

The story back of the novel is, as Arnold Bennett has said of something similar, a plagiarism on romance. M. Lafon was born to middle-class parents, and at the age of 15, owing to business misfortune, was forced into a business house as a clerk. Later he managed to go through a university and was appointed as a teacher. At the age of 27 he wrote his first book—"Jean Gilles, Schoolboy." And without his being aware of it, the illustrious committee considered the book and awarded it the prize—making him famous immediately throughout France.

The book is very simple, much of it admitted to be autobiographical, and deals with the life and thoughts of a child at home, with relatives and at school. The discussion of his companions are naive, and a delicate, charming part is in the few pages that tell of his play with the little girl, Zoe. There is no plot to the book; it is merely the chronicle of a child's thoughts and a few experiences, very common and typical experiences of childhood.

"KITTY MACKAY" AT MAJESTIC.

Ellen Beach Yaw to Make Bow in Drama.

Henry Kolker Repeats in "His Son."

"Wives of the Rich," a New Orpheum Play.

Ellen Beach Yaw, the world-famous lyric soprano, is to make her debut in the role of actress as Ophelia in Shakespeare's "Hamlet," at the Mason Operahouse tomorrow night and for the remainder of the week.

Miss Yaw, in addition to her acting role, will sing Ophelia's mad scene from Ambrose Thomas's grand opera, "Hamlet;" also the book scene, thus giving her audience an opportunity to hear again the beauty of her voice.

Ernest Crawford, experienced in playing Shakespearean roles, will be Hamlet.

George Arliss, in the greatest of his roles, "Disraeli," will be seen at the Mason during the week beginning November 9.

Mr. Arliss's "Disraeli" is said to be one of the most wonderful impersonations, both as to physical aspect and temperamental rendition, ever seen on the stage. The great actor has been playing the role for the past two seasons.

Majestic.

"Kitty MacKay," the brilliant three-act comedy from the pen of Catherine Chisholm Cushing, will begin an engagement of one week at the Majestic Theater tomorrow evening, under the direction of William Elliott. Tn extra performance will be given Sunday evening, November 8. The New York company, which played for a year on Broadway, is to give the play here, including Marjorie Murray, Paget Hunter, Eleanor Daniels and others.

"Kitty" has to do with the adventures of a quick-witted, winsome Scottish Cinderella in London and her rise from the condition of slavery to that of a belle of London.

"The Bird of Paradise" will be given its last production tonight.

Morosco.

"The Red Widow," the fascinating musical comedy being presented by the new Gaiety company, including Grace Edmund and other New York stars, will be given for another week at the Morosco.

The brilliant book and music of the comic opera made famous by Raymond Hitchcock, together with the manner of its presentation, not to mention gorgeous staging and costuming, are making the opera as successful as its predecessor, "Let's Get Married."

Grace Edmund, Bessie De Voie, Harry Gribbon and Mae Emory are continuing to be the bright particular stars of the production.

Burbank.

"His Son," Louis Anspacher's drama, as played by Henry Kolker, was so great a success at its recent production in this city that it will be shown again for a limited engagement of a week, beginning with this afternoon's matinee.

As soon as the play leaves the Burbank it is to be taken East.

Mr. Kolker created the role, and his sincere characterization at once made the play a success, and he has returned to play the part during the coming week.

Orpheum.

Claude Gillingwater, noted actor and dramatist, and Edith Lyle, who made a hit with her playing in "The Winning of Barbara Worth," the Klaw & Erlanger production, headline the Orpheum bill next week in Mr. Gillingwater's own play, "Wives of the Rich," said to be not merely a sketch, but a real dramatic production, marking a new era in vaudeville entertainment.

Herbert Ashley and Al Canfield are song makers and singers who are said to especially excel in parody. The Five Metsettis are acrobats of unusual worth. Joe and Lew Cooper are responsible for a number of the song hits of the day and bring some new ones next week. Harry De Coe balances himself on pyramids of tables and chairs. The hold-overs are Stan-Stanley, "the bouncing fellow," in his droll and clever act; Wilbur Mack and Nella Walker, in patter, and Charlie Ahearn's comedy bicycle act.

Loew's Empress.

Roland West's comedy sketch, "Through the Skylight," tops the Empress bill for next week.

Other acts, said to be excellent, are as follows: Neil McKinley, the "raving nut," in eccentric songs and dances; the Gasch Sisters, called "The Leading Lady Acrobats;" Johnny Murphy and Johnny Foley, minstrels; Manuel Romain and Charles Orr, songsters, presenting "The Cockney and the Con;" William Shriner

NEW YORK STAGE AWHIRL.

Temper of Gotham's Theaters Uncertain as Season Begins, But There is Nothing Depressing About it, and the Offerings Cover a Wide Range.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK

NEW YORK'S dramatic season opens with a multitude of question marks. The managers, the actors and the people all seem a little wobbly with regard to what the year may bring, but through long-distance glasses the situation does not appear to hold anything genuinely disconcerting.

Perhaps first in the mind of everybody connected with the stage is a recent sharp reduction in vaudeville salaries. The decrease averages about 15 per cent., and all but five of the big-time acts have accepted it. The booking agents appointed a committee to decide what the modification should amount to and most of the circuits agreed to accept the schedule thus arranged. The large salaried acts were cut the most. Those worth $1000 a week were cut to $800, while those running from $300 to $400 were each cut only from $25 to $75 a week.

The Marcus Loew circuit was not in on the reduction. Loew's agent argued that it is easier to fill bills today than it ever was before, and that they have a larger supply to draw from at lower prices than has been the case previously. He felt that the big amount of foreign talent in the country at this time would have a tendency to reduce salaries without the managers taking any concerted action in that direction.

Other managers expressed regret at the necessity for their action and promised to restore wages to the old standard as quickly as possible.

Vaudeville has been able to get some of the greatest actors in the world because it paid the highest prices.

By the way, Eva Tanguay will this week relegate Miss Tabasco to the storehouse at Pittsburgh to go back to vaudeville. She is not yet booked and rather hopes to head her own company after the fashion of Anna Held, Alice Lloyd and Harry Lauder. It appears that Miss Tabasco did not have enough whirlwind in her system to make a cyclonic success for this little spitefire comedienne.

Second in the concern of the New York theatergoer has been the talk about commercialized criticism which grew out of the retirement of Alan Dale (Alfred J. Cohen) and a change or two in the dramatic staff in some of the other newspapers. Flippant criticism can be very well spared from New York or any city, but the time never will come when the fair and thoughtful critic will not have a big following and when his opinions will not be published alongside of anything the theaters may care to say additionally for themselves.

Even should the New York dailies attempt to abandon criticism, the fiercely competitive field of theatric weeklies in New York would remain independent, and these would be certain to bring forward stalwart critics of brains and power. Columns have been published on why Mr. Dale gave up his work, but he himself has insisted that it was because he found himself hampered by a purely commercial spirit. It looks, however, as if there has been nothing more back of all this than a quarrel between Mr. Dale and the managing editor under whom he worked. It is true that some of the theatrical managers had lately protested the sharpness and flippancy of some of Dale's comments, but this must have been happening for the last fifteen years, and it isn't likely that it would be effective at this late day unless there was more to it.

It is generally understood and accepted the world over that the critics of a newspaper should say exactly what they think and feel about a play and the theater should pay for and Music.

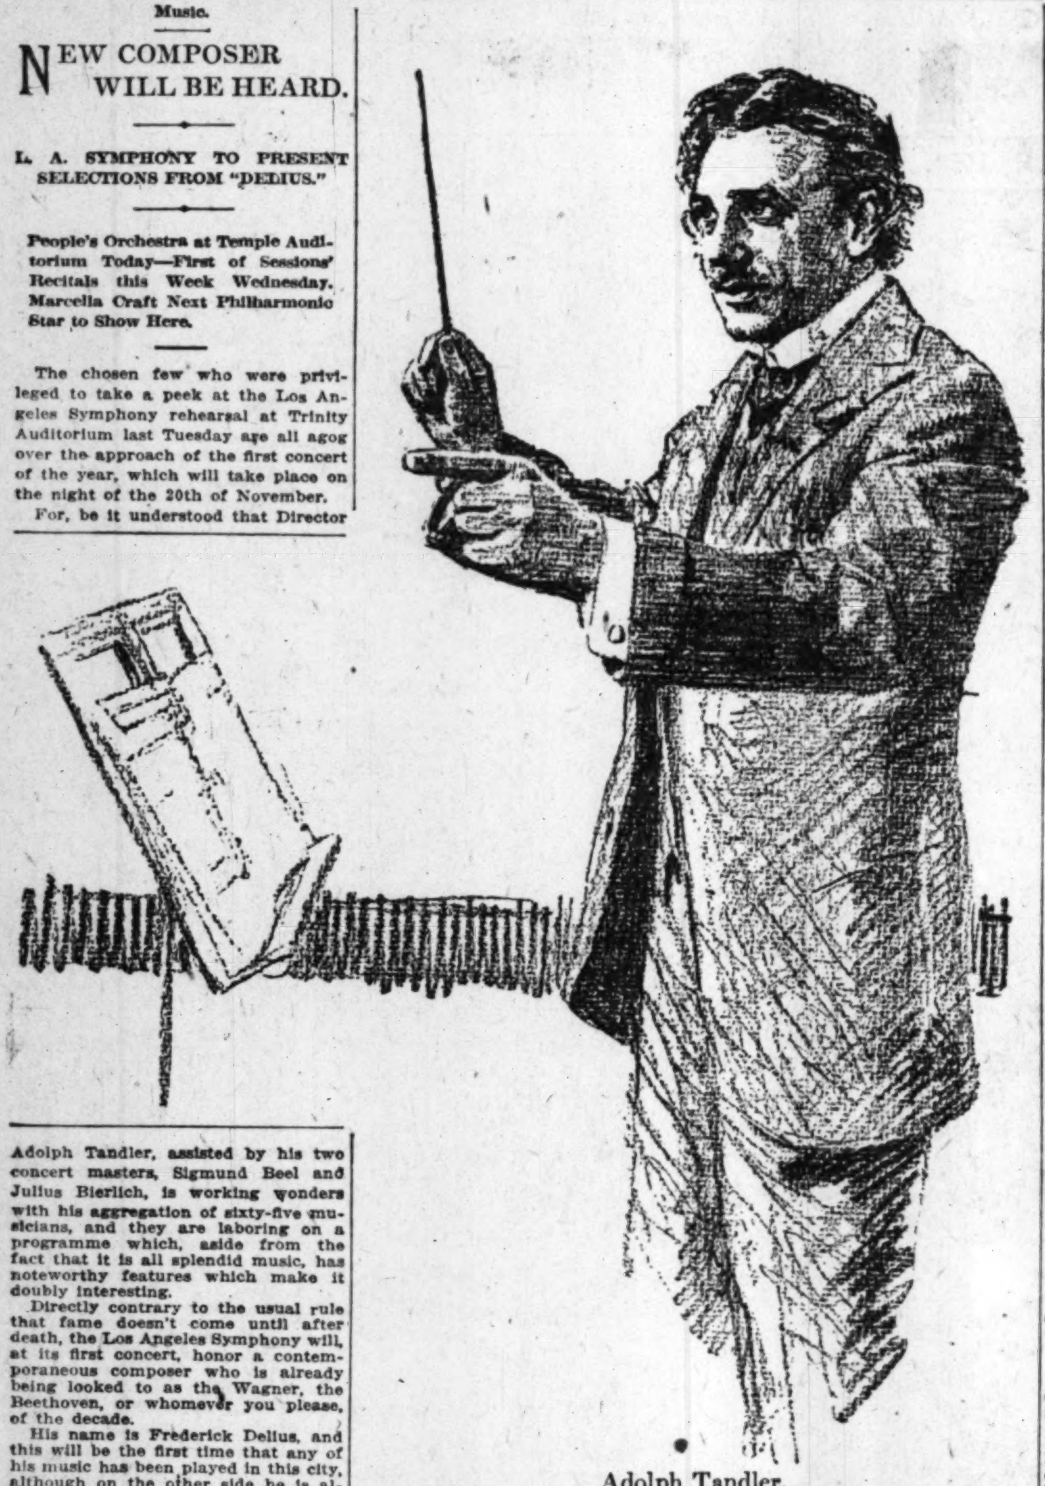
NEW COMPOSER WILL BE HEARD.

L. A. SYMPHONY TO PRESENT SELECTIONS FROM "DELIUS."

People's Orchestra at Temple Auditorium Today—First of Sessions' Recitals this Week Wednesday. Marcella Craft Next Philharmonic Star to Show Here.

The chosen few who were privileged to take a peek at the Los Angeles Symphony rehearsal at Trinity Auditorium last Tuesday are all agog over the approach of the first concert of the year, which will take place on the night of the 20th of November.



Adolph Tandler,

Directing the rehearsal of the Los Angeles Symphony concert, which will take place at Trinity Auditorium November 20.

For, be it understood that Director Adolph Tandler, assisted by his two concert masters, Sigmund Beel and Julius Bierlich, is working wonders with his aggregation of sixty-five musicians, and they are laboring on a programme which, aside from the fact that it is all splendid music, has noteworthy features which make it doubly interesting.

Directly contrary to the usual rule that fame doesn't come until after death, the Los Angeles Symphony will, at its first concert, honor a contemporaneous composer who is already being looked to as the Wagner, the Beethoven, or whomever you please, of the decade.

His name is Frederick Delius, and this will be the first time that any of his music has been played in this city, although on the other side he is already established as a real and lasting genius.

Tandler has selected two characteristic numbers, "Summer Night on the River" and "On Hearing the First Cuckoo in Spring," and, as Delius promises to be quite the fashion this year, these first offerings are eagerly anticipated.

The balance of the programme, subject to change, of course, is delightfully varied, one of its most promising features being "Sakuntala," by Goldmark, founded on a Sanskrit legend, while the remaining two numbers, as announced, are the Tschaikowsky Symphony No. 5 and the Liszt Preludes.

Sessions Recital.

And it is this week, Wednesday is the day, that marks the first of the eighth season of the Archibald Sessions organ recitals. They are held in Christ Church, but are not a church affair, though free to all on account of the financial arrangements made by the distinguished list of patrons.

And, by the way, for the first time they are to be held in the afternoon instead of evening as heretofore, being scheduled to commence at 4:30. For the first concert, on Wednesday, Mrs. Willis N. Tiffany, soprano, will be soloist. Mr. Sessions announces the following programme:

Variations de Concert (Bonnet,) Andante Cantabile (Tschaikowsky,) from a string quartette; Prelude and Fugue in E Minor (Bach;) soprano, "La Procession" (Franck;) requested numbers, Intermezzo (Callaerts,) "Meditation," "Thais" (Massenet,) "Gavotte" (Martini;) soprano, "Le Nil" (Leroux,) "Now Sleeps the Crimson Petal" (Quilter,) aria, "Dans ce Decor," "Manon" (Puccini;) "Piece Heroique" (Franck;) Pilgrim's Chorus, "Tannhauser" (Wagner.)

The next recital will be December 2, with Clifford Lott, baritone, as soloist.

Red Cross.

The other "affair" of the week is the benefit which the ladies of France and Belgium are giving on the night of the 7th at Blanchard Hall. The programme is replete with unique features, and if one may judge by the number of well-known people who have put their shoulders to the wheel the occasion is going to be well worthy of public support.

The presidents of honor are Mr. L. Sentous, French Consul, and Mr. J. Moorkeno, president of the Belgian Red Cross; the patronesses, Mmes. J. Amestoy, H. Alliot, M. Blondeau, C. Christiaens, L. J. Christopher, D. Cave, G. Fusenot, J. Jaussaud, J. Kauffman, P. Garnier, A. Guerson, J. Gless, A. May and G. Pellissier; Committee on Arrangements, Mmes. L. Sentous, L. L. Naud, E. Grimaud, E. Mazy, M. Labaig, J. Fallandy and J. Viole.

The Music Committee, composed of Mmes. A. Ballade, M. Bleau, M. Blaes and J. Lifur, has obtained the assistance of many prominent musicians of this city. The following are a few who will contribute: Mmes. Lebegott, Edmond Shanks, Myrtle Prybit Colby, Misses Lalla Fagge, May Legrand and Alice Logan, Mr. and Mrs. Marc and Mr. Edwin House.

"The Brabanconne," the Belgian national hymn, will be sung by Mme. Blaes, and around her will be grouped nine young girls representing the nine provinces of Belgium.

A special feature of the evening will be fifty pretty maids dressed in the French Red Cross uniforms, who will serve the refreshments during the intermission.

The following will take part: Mlles. G. Amestoy, J. Amestoy, M. Blanchard, C. Barrere, C. Burnbeitz, L. Bergon, M. Batz, A. Batz, A. Cazaux, B. Cazaux, J. Court, M. Court, E. Daguerre, H. Darnell, M. Foix, E. Fleur, A. Fleur, A. Grimaud, L. Grimaud, J. Gonaillardhou, L. Grumback, H. Grabet, N. Gless, R. Kerby, M. Loge, J. Loge, A. Larquier, E. Labaig, A. Leroux, B. Leroux, L. Mazy, F. May, S. Masselin, F. Normandin, R. Normandin, M. Ordoqui, H. Prechacg, R. Rougny, M. Shulman, H. Saulque, R. Saulque, T. Saulque, M. Shaw, Z. Sentous, M. Sansinella, C. Trebaol, A. Taix, A. Viole, J. Weysse, L. Wynsel.

Looking Ahead.

And with the coming week's events cared for, one is permitted to look ahead a bit, to mid-November, which, musically, is to be busy indeed. From the 8th to the 15th, indications are that we can save up our change, and thus be loaded to the muzzle for the week which follows, and during which all sorts of interesting events are scheduled. With one exception, the Marcella Craft visit on the 12th.

Marcella Craft.

Miss Craft will appear at Trinity Auditorium on the 12th, and the occasion promises to be auspicious. She is a local girl, you know, who has taken the East, and Europe, too, by storm, and she recently clambered to the pinnacle of fame by her splendid eleventh-hour substitution for Emma Eames at the music festival at Bangor.

Her rise has been rapid, paralleled only by the career of Geraldine Farrar, both girls, one from the Atlantic and the other from the Pacific, possessing that spirit of youth and energy which is so typically American and which is only now coming into its own as a factor in our music.

She is first number in the second series of this season's Philharmonic course.

Double B Benefit.

First off the bat, the week of the 15th, will be the double B benefit, that is, for the British and the Belgians, the genius of which is Mme. Esther Palliser. An interesting coterie of artists has been secured, including, as was announced last week, the interesting Swiss pianist, Rudolph Ganz.

The programme of the Monday-night concert is not yet available, but those that follow music closely can well imagine it through a glance at the list of contributors which includes, in addition to Mme. Palliser, such artists as Mr. Ganz, Mrs. Thilo Becker, violin; Alex Simonson, 'cello; Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Lott, Mrs. Lenora Pier, Will Garroway, pianist, and E. H. Mead, at the organ. This will be at Trinity Auditorium, by the way.

Mrs. Willis N. Tiffany,

Who will be the soloist at the first of the Sessions recitals at Christ Church Wednesday afternoon.

Ganz Recital.

And the very next night, also at Trinity, Mr. Ganz will appear in recital as another fragment, and a mighty important one, of the Philharmonic course. Closer onto the time of his recital the programme will be announced, but it is not amiss to set down the date of his appearance now, especially in the light of his appearance the preceding evening at the benefit, a fact which is as unusual as is generous on the part of any artist.

Music Notes.

An interesting recital in which twenty of her pupils assisted, was given last Wednesday morning at the Cumnock School by Music Instructor Mrs. Katherine Shank. Mrs. Shank and Mrs. L. H. Johnson gave the famous duet from "Mme. Butterfly" in addition to solo numbers, while other soloists were the Misses Lucille Atwater and Florence Mead, the latter contributing, "Lo, the Gentle Lark," with a flute obligato by William Mead. Fifteen of the younger students contributed excellent chorus numbers.

On Friday evening at the Western avenue residence of Miss Eva Pike, a large number of children enjoyed a musical history lecture given by Gertrude Groos and Helen Kent.

The second artist concert of a series of seven arranged by the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music was given last Monday night in the assembly-room. The programme of chamber music was given by the Fuhrer-Zielinski Trio, which played Goldmark's Trio, op. 33, and two excerpts from Bargiel's op. 6. 'Cello solos by Lucy Fuhrer and vocal numbers by Miss Ciesielska completed the programme.

For its concert today, the Beverly Hills Hotel announces Estelle Dreyfus, assisted by the Beverly Trio, including Glenn Knight, pianist; Vernon Grey, violinist, and Emery McCargar, 'cellist, in Scotch, Irish, English, American, Gypsy, Russian, Moorish, Basque and Spanish folk songs.

As another echo from the seat of war, unconfirmed, however, comes the report of the death, in battle, of Vanni Marcoux, the noted baritone. It is only a few months since he was married to Madeline Morlay, the dancer.

The latest music departure, inaugurated successfully in New York last week, is headed by Andreas Dippel, who comes to the front as comique opera impresario heading the Dippel Opera Comique Company, at the Forty-fourth-Street Theater, presenting for the first time in America, "The Lilac Domino," an operetta by Charles Cuvillier, a French composer. It is stated that the aim of the new organization is to offer operetta of the highest type, sung by principals recruited from America and Europe. The title role will be sung alternately by Eleanor Painter, an American, who has been successful in Berlin, and Mabel Reigelman, another American, who has been associated with the Chicago Opera Company. An English baritone, Wilfrid Douthitt, and a Boston opera baritone, George Everett, will alternate in an important part. Mme. Jeanne Maubourg, recently of the Metropolitan; Einar Linden, Danish tenor, and a chorus of real singers are features of this production.

It required almost a special train to move the family and belongings of Manuel Nunes from Mayfield to Dixon, Cal. Besides a passenger car for his wife and seventeen children, there were ten carloads of cattle and two of personal property.

New York Stage Awhirl.

publish exactly what they wish in the line of advertising. Nobody is hurt by this plan. If the critics are able to kill a bad play on a first presentation, its manager saves money by using his fresh scenery for another production and by not taking to the road something that can only fail after a big investment in royalties and salaries.

The real worry of New York is that it has no bright musical comedy this year and that the musical shows which have found favor enough for production are most uncertain in their tone. Somebody lays this to the war, but the chances are that Austria has more musicians in New York right now than in Vienna. Besides it is hardly fair to suggest that there are no good musical shows that do not come from Vienna.

At the Winter Garden, "Dancing Around" seems to be taking the public, but this would be expected regardless of the quality of the show in view of the fact that the cast contains Al Jolson and Bernard Granville. Los Angeles gets these fellows only once a year in the Passing Show and they are always topnotchers. "The Girl from Utah" and "The Pretty Mrs. Smith" are the only other musical attractions on Broadway at this time.

One thing the beginning of the season makes certain as regards the legitimate stage. The people are through with sex plays, with the white slave stuff and with most kinds of problems. Mr. Bennett is still struggling ahead with his "Damaged Goods" at the Grand, and the "Princess" has opened with five one-act plays which attempt to be too utterly utter, but most of the houses are running to a strong reaction.

I confess some surprise in Walker Whiteside's play at Maxine Elliott's Theater under Mr. Savage. The thing is called "Mr. Wu," and is in three acts and two tableaux.

Somehow most Chinese and Japanese plays are constructed in a way to leave an exceedingly bad taste in a man's mouth.

Whiteside himself takes the part of Wu, a Chinese Mandarin whose daughter has been wronged by the son of a rich American merchant and steamship man.

Wu first tries to destroy the young man's father in business and then decoys the mother into his rooms that he may have his vengeance upon her. The lady's maid throws poison into the chamber and she puts this into the Chinaman's tea, which he drinks and after which he dies rather picturesquely. Mr. Whiteside loves the splendor of this oriental setting, but they say the part of Wu has to be played with deadly monotony and morally I think this kind of a play smells. I hate everything of the kind cordially.

The biggest thing in New York to start with this year seems to be a new play by Knoblauch called "My Lady's Dress," and staged at the Playhouse. Like "Kismet and the Faun," "My Lady's Dress" runs to color and is curiously disconnected in its richness. The first act and the last one are rather brief and have to do with a genuinely flesh and blood woman who has quarreled with her husband about her extravagance in buying a certain fanciful gown.

The three acts in between are separate plays which the lady dreams, and which show the material, the trimming and the making. These are dainty sketches, their success depending upon the delicacy with which they are staged. Of course, the principals are allowed to double in these separate plays. The leading roles are taken by Leon Quartermaine and Mary Boland, and Miss Boland's work in each episode is said to be of a fine quality. Footlights have been eliminated, as well as the usual walls in the room scenes in the staging of this strange piece.

Some of the critics see in this kind of play a patterning after the Princess Theater and its one-act plays, but I am sure they are wrong for two reasons. In the first place these episodes are connected by a first and a last act, and in the second place they tell a beautiful story in a beautiful way and do not aim at mere sensationalism.

Bernard Shaw has a new play, or, rather, a season-old play which is new to America, called "Pygmalion," a romance in five acts produced at the Park Theater with Mrs. Patrick Campbell as the leading woman.

I have been told that Mrs. Campbell is rather artificial in this part, but we know she is a woman who would do anything well, and she must have thought it worth while to have brought it to America at all.

The story is that of a little flower girl who is elevated from the streets to the estate of a grand lady.

It has given Shaw an opportunity to be as much of a sociological secessionist as he wants to be, and of course he had to have his annual joke about not coming to America to see the play open. He always spends a good part of his royalties telegraphing his American agent that he won't come and that the newspapers here can't make him. Sometimes I think unless he behaved himself better we wouldn't want him.

A play called the "Phantom Rival," a title that is contested, I believe, is David Belasco's best offering this year, and is being produced at the Belasco Theater with Leo Dietrichstein, the man who made the American version, in the leading role of five parts.

Dietrichstein, like J. M. Barrie and John Galsworthy, always deals with subjects worth while. He never does a cheap thing and never descends for light popularity.

Indeed, we have too few playwrights and managers who are willing to trust the intelligence and good taste of the American public. A big part of their poor business may thus be charged to their own blindness and lack of good faith.

"The Phantom Rival" is in three acts and was written in the original by Florenc Molnar. The plot is based on the sentiment that every woman supposedly has somewhere in her heart a lingering fondness for the first man who ever avowed his love for her. To a large extent the thing is a dream play and its production along with Knoblauch's new piece gives rise to the idea that the drama is running to dreams this year. The play is unique because its leading man takes five different characters.

One critique I have noticed suggests that the axiom about a woman's first love is refuted in the play, but that the piece does show how women sometimes cherish old letters from admirers who had become heroes and turn out beggars and that when women awake from their dream to the reality they return with renewed devotion to their second choice.

Paul Armstrong has a new four-act play at the Hudson Theater under Charles Frohman. It is called "The Heart of a Thief" and I understand that Armstrong is lucky in having quite a wonderful leading woman in Martha Headman. From what I can judge of the plot the thing is rather low in its tone, lacking in beauty and in idealism, with its situations sadly forced. This is the only new crook play in New York this season, and perhaps it will be the last. The public has been pretty well educated by recent plays in the gentle art of being a crook.

A play of one prologue and four acts called "Evidence" is produced by the Messrs. Shubert at the Lyric Theater, and has an exceedingly old-fashioned theme, that of a husband who thinks he is being wronged by his wife, and who, of course, is not. The lady is supposed to be a sort of feminine Disraeli. The whole thing sounds like a sort of less successful "East Lynn."

Of course, Kitty Gordon and her back have returned to New York to take up much space in that city's dramatic journals. She is at the Palace in a sketch called "Alma's Return," written by Jack Lait.

The lovely Adele Blood, a San Francisco girl by birth, and one of the prettiest women on the American stage, opened Thursday night at the Garrick Theater as the star of a new play called "My Lady's Boudoir," by J. C. Drum.

The Biddlestone family of Youngstown and Niles, O., probably has more brain and brawn engaged in the iron and steel industry than any other one family in that vicinity. Seven brothers hold responsible positions in that industry in those two cities.

"LITTLE MARY" AT TALLY'S.

Ethel Barrymore Makes Her Debut in Pictures.

"Cabiria" Returns to Trinity Auditorium.

"The Wolf" Shown at Mozart Theater.

Mary Pickford, best beloved of film stars, returns to Tally's Broadway Theater next week in "Behind the Scenes," by Margaret Mayo. The piece is said to be one of the best which Mary Pickford has ever done. In it she portrays the ups and downs of an actress's life.

C. Percival Garratt, the celebrated English organist, now has charge of the music at Tally's, and has prepared an exceptional programme for next week.

Symphony.

Jack London's "The Odyssey," as done by Hobart Bosworth, is the photoplay to be shown at the Symphony during the first part of the week. During the latter part, beginning Thursday, the capital and labor play, "The Lost Paradise," with H. B. Warner in the leading role, will be the attraction.

Trinity Auditorium.

"Cabiria" is to return to the Trinity Auditorium for one week, beginning tomorrow afternoon.

In this greatest of motion picture dramas, created by the genius of ancient cities and peoples come to life, and ancient temples and palaces, customs and rites, are reproduced as if by magic.

The Boosters' Club of Los Angeles has charge of the coming week of "Cabiria." They propose to raise $2000 for the express purpose of paying the prize to the composer to be selected from over 900 contestants who have written scores to surround the Humphrey California poem.

There are to be daily matinees besides the evening performances.

Clune's Auditorium.

Ethel Barrymore in the exceptional motion picture play, "The Nightengale," written expressly for Miss Barrymore by Augustus Thomas, is the attraction at Clune's Auditorium for the coming week.

The story is that of a beautiful young Italian street singer, her rise to success on the Paris stage, and the complications of an unhappy love affair, and is said to be enacted for the screen with Miss Barrymore's usual fire and dramatic strength.

Clune's Broadway.

"Rosemary," a Selig society drama in two reels, featuring Adda Gleason and Edith Johnson, heads the Clune's Broadway programme for the coming week.

Another Selig film will be "Doc Yak," a series of cartoon drawings by Sidney Smith. There will also be two Biograph dramas, "Hearts of Gold" and "All for Business."

A new feature will be the appearance of Bessie L. Chapin, violinist, student of Henri Marteau, and Hugo Birkigt, of Berlin.

For the latter part of the week Tom Mix in one of his western dramas will be the leading feature, and "Slippery Slim" will also be among those present.

And there are still others.

Mozart.

"The Wolf," Eugene Walter's splendid drama of the Canadian Northwest, is to be shown in film form at the Mozart during the coming week. This picture is said to take its place as one of the most beautiful of the Lubin productions. Its story is full of heart interest and thrill, and the scenic beauty portrayed is that of the frozen wilds of the North.

Miller's.

Miller's Theater offers for the week beginning tomorrow, George Broadhurst's drama of love and politics, "The Dollar Mark," which is said to lose nothing in effectiveness in its film version.

The climax of the play, when the dam goes out and the flood waters are tearing on their destructive way, is said to have been filmed magnificently.

Robert Warwick and the beautiful Barbara Tennant play the leading roles.

The Woodley.

"When Broadway Was a Trail," the delightful story of Puritan life which has been running at The Woodley during the past week, is to be continued during the first three days of next week, with a change of bill on Thursday, which will be announced later.

The quaint story is beautifully played, reviving as it does the olden days when the nation was young.

Theater de Luxe.

The Theater de Luxe has an interesting programme for Sunday and Monday, November 1 and 2. It includes "The Poisoned Pit," featuring Edwin, Billy Quirk and Lee Beggs in "Eats;" a George Ade fable, and a Kalem comedy, "The Slavery of Foxicus."

Tuesday and Wednesday, November 3 and 4, "The Girl from the West," Arthur Johnson; Selig's Pictorial and "The Iron Master," by George Morgan and Louise Vale; Thursday and Friday, November 5 and 6, "Call of the North," Robert Edeson; "Jimmy the Porter;" Saturday, November 7, "The Girl and the Stowaway," Alice Joyce; "Mid Woodland Shadows," by Earl Williams and Anita Stewart, and a George Ade fable.

Jardin de Danse.

The Jardin de Danse will continue with its pleasing demonstrations of the up-to-date dances, showing the latest New York steps.

The Time of Joy.

Joy is the world's heart when Love comes along—
Love who still sings us Life's beautiful song;
Ever he bringeth God's heaven in sight;
Out of the shadows he weaveth the light.

Joy in the world's heart where Love doth abide—
A loved guest in sorrow who sits by our side;
And still we are singing in earth's darkest night;
"Out of the shadows he weaveth the light!"

and Blossom Richards, in singing and comedy, and motion pictures.

Pantages.

Lolo, a Sioux Indian girl, in a mystical mind-reading act, also in an expert bow-and-arrow exhibition, heads the Pantages programme. Her remarkable psychic powers are said to have been discovered by Maj. J. L. Cotton, formerly United States government Indian agent. Lolo is only 20 years old.

Grey and Peters, famous cycling experts; Kelly and Catlin, the comedy couple, who specialize in negro and Chinese characters, and the Acme Four, in harmonized popular melodies, are other numbers on the bill. Harry Cornell, Ethel Corley and company, who gave us "Smithy and the Eel," now bring "The Crooks."

A Keystone comedy opens the show.

Hippodrome.

An all-new, seven-act bill, with the latest war films and a brace of comedies, make up the new bill at the Hippodrome.

Heading it will be Ruth Gibson, who brings her own company in a dramatic offering, "The Governor," a heart-interest playlet.

Others on the bill are the Troubador Trio, singers and instrumentalists; Charlie Reilly and his company in "Irish Hearts;" Nadolny, juggler, in clever stunts; George Hughes, comedian, and Kelly and Catlin, also funfans.

Motion pictures complete the bill.

Republic.

Andrew Mack, noted Irish character actor, will be seen for the first time on a local screen in his greatest success, "The Ragged Earl," at Bert Levey's Republic next week. The piece is said to be full of real Irish atmosphere, Irish romance and stirring scenes.

A vaudeville bill said to be of unusually high caliber accompanies the pictures.

The Musical Kuhns furnish a violin and singing act; Frawley and Rath have an act they term "A Man, a Piano, a Nut;" Twirling Talbots are European gymnasts, Roman-ring and revolving-teeth experts; Toby Block, singing comedienne; Cash Darrell and company in "A Sporting Chance," and Lillian Kirksmith, flute artist, complete the bill.

"HOW'S YOUR SCENARIO?"

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

"HOW'S your scenario coming on?"

That's the up-to-the-minute paraphrase of the wit's question, "How's the second act of your play coming on?" which he said was absolutely appropriate in any lull of conversation between friends.

Everybody in the world is doing it, I judge, except, maybe, Villa and a few busy German soldiers.

Truck drivers and stenos, Doc Cook and your milliner, bank presidents and Sarah Bernhardt, burglars and the rag-and-bottle man, actors and Bill Desmond, soda-fountain experts and otherwise self-respecting telephone operators, all have the disorder.

Who knows the poetic thoughts chasing through your barber's brain, as he gives you a mild shampoo and dreams of the last scene of "Flora the Beautiful Blind Heiress, or Who put Mush in the Baby's Eyes?" Who imagines that the gentle manicurist as she pinkies your nails is plotting darkly on "The Doings of the Dirty Dozen, or the Poisoned Monkey-wrench?" And the traveling man doesn't play poker any more to while away the weary hours on the train. Instead he puts the finishing touches to a film play entitled, "The Burglar's Hotel Honeymoon, or Combining Business with Pleasure." And the cook forgets the floating island while she fashions the climax to a six-reel thriller, known as "Lead in the Canned Peach Pie, or Who Shot a Defenceless Peach Out of Season?"

Whence come the myriad photoplays that are running all day and half the night in the numberless picture-houses of the land?

Most of the picture-producing plants retain from one to fifty scenario writers, whose business it is to write a scenario at a moment's notice (James Dayton, of the Universal, once literally wrote a scenario a day for four consecutive weeks, doing one of them at the request of Mr. Bernstein, in half an hour!) to rewrite scenarios accepted from outsiders; and to write film versions of stories and plays, the rights for which have been secured from the authors.

At the Reliance M. and M., Frank E. Woods, formerly editor of the New York Dramatic Mirror, is manager of the scenario department, and writes most of the scenarios of noted plays and stories, the rights of which have been secured from the authors or their representatives, among whom are John Kendrick Bangs, Thomas Nelson Page, Montague Glass, O. Henry and Marion Harland. This company also accepts work from about a hundred experienced scenario writers, besides maintaining a bureau for the receipt of original manuscripts from outsiders.

"The main objection to the filmplays we receive from amateurs," said Mr. Wood, "is their absolute inaneness and lack of originality. Our bureau receives from 500 to a 1000 scenarios a week. Out of these about ten are available. We keep up the bureau for the sake of the possible ten.

"Scenarios come from all over the world. We even got one from China, not long ago, but nobody was around to interpret the tatting pattern, so it remains a mystery to this day whether the story it told was of the crushing of the monarchy or a storm at sea!

"Then sometimes the authors require us to do incredible things. One required that the actor fly in an airship to the moon, and asked, 'but did we care?' Another wanted us to put on a story like the Jungle Books, with the animals doing all the thinking and acting! And I remember in particular a little lady who brought in a scenario involving the flitting of a bird from tree to tree, to lead the hero home. She got very indignant when I told her that the flittings of a bird were numbered among the circumstances over which we had no control!"

One learns technique best by seeing it on the screen, says Mr. Woods. Nearly all scenarios have to be rewritten as they are produced, just as most plays are severely revised in rehearsal.

The Vitagraph and Edison keep a corps of scenario writers, who write out or revise the scenarios to be produced very carefully and in detail, and the directors abide by every instruction.

The Essenay company for their scenarios have bought up all the stories that have been published by the Munsey company for the past ten years. They have a room full of old magazines which they picturize whenever they're short of other photoplays.

There's a big corps of writers out at the Universal, who write the film plays produced by the many companies of that organization. Newspaper articles, magazine articles, original plots, as well as the filming of a lot of old stories such as those of Marie Corelli, Dickens, Mary J. Holmes and even Bertha M. Clay, are all their meat. Besides this, the directors often have ideas for stories suggested by happenings in the studio or out on locations during the taking of pictures, and these, too, are utilized by the writers.

"Many and many a night," says Mr. Bernstein, "directors and writers sit up all night, fixing up the scenarios which are to be played next day."

There's a kind of criminal at large who is in great part responsible for the picture companies' troubles, says Mr. Bernstein. That's the scenario school pest, who claim to be able to teach the young idea how to write scenarios, but who knows absolutely nothing about it himself. One firm offers to buy the first scenario from the pupil who studies with him, provided he cannot dispose of it himself. This is bait, indeed. The teacher does buy it (perhaps,) but leaves a big margin for himself, and manages to get something besides for extras, such as typewriting, postage, etc. The Mutual has staged a piece like that, showing a soda fountain clerk who spent all his spare coin in taking lessons in scenario writing. By the time he got through he was glad to have his old job back, and when another scenario sharp came along, he hit him over the head with a bung-starter!

At the Favorite Players' studio, in Glendale, Mrs. Phyllis Daniels, secretary, receives and reads the scenarios, though few are available. Nearly all film stories produced by the Favorite Players are ordered direct from some well-known writer, as Richard Harding Davis.

But the films she receives from amateurs are most amusing. One which she got last week told of a burglar who hid in an apiary. "The actor," solemnly stated the author, "must be willing to be stung by a bee!"

Another man brought in a scenario full of thrills. He said he knew he was qualified to write it because all the things had happened to himself. He'd been in a cyclone and an auto wreck, had fallen down a chasm, and been struck by lightning and tried to drive a rude, strange broncho on a cow range, had disagreed with a sewing society on the wet-and-dry question, and had other dire adventures, from all of which he had escaped unscathed.

"What you want, my friend," Mrs. Daniels advised, "is not a scenario but an accident insurance policy!"

The Selig retains its own scenario writer, Lanier Bartlett, who makes into film plays all the stories for which producing rights have been secured, and who also writes many original photo plays.

Of course, noted authors receive high prices for the rights to produce their work in pictures.

"Maeterlinck wanted $8000 for his 'Sister Beatrice,'" said Mr. Colin Campbell of the Selig, "but we decided to worry along without any Maeterlinck in the house for a while."

Miss Kathlyn Williams, leading woman of the Selig, tells of the receipt of a scenario from a man who insisted that his villain should really be hanged; said it could be done by a method which he knew. That he himself was willing to come and be hanged.

Miss Williams told him to come around for rehearsal!

Tomorrow we present for the first time a most pleasing line of the newest type suits at $19.50, $22.50, $25.00, $27.50

Sizes for misses and women.

Good Silk Petticoats

There is true economy in choosing silk petticoats from this new assortment—economy of a substantial nature. For instance:

At $5.00—Petticoats of the best quality Jersey silk—and that means a wearable Jersey silk — finished with plaited ruffle of the same; all leading colors. A wonderfully good value, $5.00.

At $4.50—Petticoats of silk jersey with a deep accordion plaited flounce of Roman striped silk in beautiful color combinations. A very special value $4.50.

At $3.75—Black Jersey silk petticoats finished with a deep flounce of knife plaiting; this in black only, $3.75.

Petticoats for Large Women

We are making a specialty of out-size petticoats this season. We are going to see that women above normal stature are hereafter fitted properly.

Out-size Petticoats of silk jersey with plaited ruffle; colors and black. Extra value $5.75.

Out-size Petticoats of cotton messaline with flounce at $2.00.

Another of the same material with plaited flounce at $2.25.

40-inch Charmeuse, $2.50 to $4.00.
40-inch Cashmere, $3.50 to $4.50.
40-inch Satin Tailleur, $3.75.
40-inch Satin Zibeline, $4.00.
And many other novel weaves.

Albatross Negligees $5.00

These pretty, dainty negligees came just in time to get mention in today's papers. All in all they are the best styles and values we have ever seen. See them tomorrow and tell us what you think!

They are of all wool albatross with full accordion plaited skirt, the front and shoulders are embroidered in silk with a spray of foliage; hemstitched organdie collar and cuffs, elastic belt.

Pink, blue, wistaria, rose and Copenhagen blue. Really they are charming, and but $5.00.

WOMEN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S CLUBS.

BY AGNES THURNAU.

IS POLITICAL maneuvering becoming the ne plus ultra of the California State Federation of Women's Clubs? Is the civic study department of clubs becoming a political battleground? Is this department of federated clubs a place to study theory and practice of government, civic ideals and betterment, or an arena for politicians who are merely trying to figure out how to "corral the she-vote," as a Progressive politician in San Francisco stated it?

It is a fact that the State Federation is maneuvered and man-handled at times in a medieval fashion by a bunch of women who are mighty clever politicians. It is believed by many club women that the federation proposes to become more and more active politically. Things look as if this might be so. The federation openly indorses measures and campaigns vigorously for them. It is a very short step to the indorsement of men, and vigorous campaigns for them. And then good night, federation.

The State Federation of Women's Clubs can easily become the most powerful political machine in the State. A man-made political machine is a curse, but a woman-made political machine, God deliver us, that is a scourge!

It is mighty hard for women to be impersonal. But they will never be great as individuals until they can reach the impersonal view point. Neither can men for that matter. The impersonal vision is a matter of being trained to think in big terms. But those terms are not the terms of political maneuverings.

Why not reorganize the State Federation and take politics out of it? That is, if it has to be reorganized in order to get politics out.

The great General Federation of Women's Clubs, the biggest and most powerful organization of women on the earth, the organized expression of the womanhood of the world, of which the State Federation of California is a part, aims at the development of woman as an ideal human being, not as a consummate politician, such as is being bred in the State Federation today.

Political activity and experience are like measles, whooping cough and mumps, evils which we may not escape. As long as they dominate man's thought they must color woman's. But there are some places where women are serving which should be closed, double-barred and locked to the politician, and one of these is the California State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Organize political clubs and run them red-hot if need be, but keep politics and politicians, female or otherwise, out of the State Federation.

HIRAM'S HIDE-AND-SEEK.

Hiram Johnson did nothing for woman suffrage in this State, and he has never been able to point to one single instance where he did, in all his ranting up and down from Siskiyou to San Diego. The woman's vote of the State is more than 45 per cent. of the entire electorate. He couldn't afford not to make himself solid with this, could he? He couldn't do it except by trickery and subterfuge, for women remember that the Governor sat back and grinned when asked to declare for woman suffrage. Their time to grin has come. There was just one thing Hiram could do to get their vote. Banking on the fact that women are emotional, the demagogues could heave a stupendous hunk of emotionalism into the politics of the State by tipping off the wet and dry fight. And they did it. As one "Progressive" politician in San Francisco said, "How can the she-vote best be corralled?" By waving the bloody shirt of crime to arouse the women and make them forget that they do not owe their suffrage to Hiram, of course. By shouting up and down the State how bad we were until Hiram came along and reformed us and made us be good. By tipping a wet and dry fight and upsetting the tear-bucket. By scattering the dust of emotionalism in the eyes of women voters and blinding them to the machinations of the "Progressive" party. By emptying large and putrid volumes of invective out on all those who dared to opine that Hiram is not the cleaner-up of the cosmos, the one and only enlightened, the great voice crying in the wilderness. What a sickening subterfuge! What an insult to the keen, clean intelligence of women voters who think! What a nefarious and criminal outrage to perpetrate on uninformed, honestly mistaken, or misguided, right-desiring men and women.

The watery editorials in the local "Progressive" papers lauding Hiram and praising the nobility of the dry cause are so many straws showing which way the political wind is blowing. Hold your nose while reading these same editorials. They smell bad.

But I am betting that there are enough women in this State who do see through the nauseating politics of the "Progressive" party to land their little wallops with sane men at the polls next Tuesday and put Hiram and his ilk so deep in the hole of oblivion that they can't telegraph out. And this is no personal disparagement of the "dry" philosophy as a social ideal. It's all right, but not when administered in horse doses by Hiram and his henchmen, in order to gag us and make us follow where he leadeth.

Ebell of Los Angeles.

Ebell members have a rare treat in their November programme. The first meeting of the month takes place Monday, November 2, and will be a lecture in the main auditorium by Rev. Dr. David Beaton on "The Genius and Poetry of Robert Burns." Dr. Beaton is a native of Scotland, was educated at Edinburgh University, and has long been recognized as the ablest and most characteristic interpreter of Scotch life and character in America. The Browning section also meets November 2. Reading and discussion of "Pippa Passes," Elizabeth Barrett's life to 1841, and a song, "My Star," lyric by Browning, to be sung by Mrs. Carrie Stone Freeman, make up the programme of this section's meeting. On November 3, the expression section, of which Mrs. Fred Potts is curator, will meet. The time will be devoted to an analytical reading of the essay, "Success," found in Emerson's "Society and Solitude," and a discussion of self-trust, the first principle of success. The drama section, of which Mrs. Ada Henry van Pelt, Mrs. Frank King and Mrs. Eugene T. Pettigrew are curators, will meet to hear read and to discuss Stanley Houghton's "The Younger Generation," and Lord Dunsany's "The Golden Doom." Mrs. Ralph Lewis Byron will read the Houghton play, and Mrs. Helen Steckel will read Lord Dunsany's play. Thursday, November 5, there will be a meeting of the books and conversation section, of which Mrs. John Stearns Thayer is curator. The intimate side of the French court in the early part of the seventeenth century will be the programme matter. Miss Marian Moffatt will contribute a paper on the memoirs of Marguerite of Navarre, dealing with the Henry IV period; Mrs. Adolph Wislizenus will read a paper on memoirs of Mme. De Motteville, dealing with the Anne of Austria period; Harold Bell Wright's "The Eyes of the World" will be reviewed by Mrs. W. S. Bartlett. Luncheon in charge of Mrs. W. C. Reyburn will be served at 12 o'clock. On this date the social science section has a meeting at which Dr. Beaton will speak on "Foundations of Society. Constitutionally Expressed: Life, Liberty, the Pursuit of Happiness." The French section meets November 6 to study the "Histoire de St. Louis." All section meetings scheduled to open at 10 a.m.

Ebell's Music.

At the meeting of the music section Wednesday morning Mrs. Harmon Ryus, the able and accomplished curator of Ebell's music, said in introducing Herr Tandler to the section: "It is my ambition for Ebell's music section that it should become a strong potent factor in the musical life of the city; that we should create such an amount of enthusiasm and send out our musical vibrations so strongly that our influence should be felt in all that pertains to the musical advancement of the city. The Symphony Orchestra is the hub around which all other musical interests rotate, and from which radiate the vibrations that reach farthest in the musical life of any city. So with our ambition to further the great musical interests of our city we have reached the heart of the matter when we show our appreciation and interest in Herr Tandler and his symphony orchestra. Our distinguished concert meister, Mr. Sigmund Beale, said recently that Los Angeles Symphony now ranks fourth with the great orchestras of the United States. Let us get in and, to use the California motto, 'Boost!' Let us help Herr Tandler realize dreams for our musical future."

Drama League Meeting.

At the Drama League meeting Music Hall, Trinity Auditorium buil ing, Thursday evening, Prof. Forre Bailey addressed the assembly on th philosophy and plays of Aug Strindberg. Prof. Bailey prefaced lecture with Matthew Arnold's defi tion of criticism, saying that in pr senting the thought of Strindberg hoped to follow this grand criteri of viewing the author dispassionat ly and giving the salient points of philosophy. The main theme of lecture was that Strindberg, aft Nietzsche, is the great Dionysian spi of the age, and that such a spirit revolt must not be judged by the co ventional standards of the past, b by the ideals of modernity.

Ebell of Los Angeles.

Ebell members have a rare treat in their November programme. The first meeting of the month takes place Monday, November 2, and will be a lecture in the main auditorium by Rev. Dr. David Beaton on "The Genius and Poetry of Robert Burns." Dr. Beaton is a native of Scotland, was educated at Edinburgh University, and has long been recognized as the ablest and most characteristic interpreter of Scotch life and character in America. The Browning section also meets November 2. Reading and discussion of "Pippa Passes," Elizabeth Barrett's life to 1841, and a song, "My Star," lyric by Browning, to be sung by Mrs. Carrie Stone Freeman, make up the programme of this section's meeting. On November 3, the expression section, of which Mrs. Fred Potts is curator, will meet. The time will be devoted to an analytical reading of the essay, "Success," found in Emerson's "Society and Solitude," and a discussion of self-trust, the first principle of success. The drama section, of which Mrs. Ada Henry van Pelt, Mrs. Frank King and Mrs. Eugene T. Pettigrew are curators, will meet to hear read and to discuss Stanley Houghton's "The Younger Generation," and Lord Dunsany's "The Golden Doom." Mrs. Ralph Lewis Byron will read the Houghton play, and Mrs. Helen Steckel will read Lord Dunsany's play. Thursday, November 5, there will be a meeting of the books and conversation section, of which Mrs. John Stearns Thayer is curator. The intimate side of the French court in the early part of the seventeenth century will be the programme matter. Miss Marian Moffatt will contribute a paper on the memoirs of Marguerite of Navarre, dealing with the Henry IV period; Mrs. Adolph Wislizenus will read a paper on memoirs of Mme. De Motteville, dealing with the Anne of Austria period; Harold Bell Wright's "The Eyes of the World" will be reviewed by Mrs. W. S. Bartlett. Luncheon in charge of Mrs. W. C. Reyburn will be served at 12 o'clock. On this date the social science section has a meeting at which Dr. Beaton will speak on "Foundations of Society, Constitutionally Expressed: Life, Liberty, the Pursuit of Happiness." The French section meets November 6 to study the "Histoire de St. Louis." All section meetings scheduled to open at 10 a.m.

Ebell's Music.

At the meeting of the music section Wednesday morning Mrs. Harmon Ryus, the able and accomplished curator of Ebell's music, said in introducing Herr Tandler to the section: "It is my ambition for Ebell's music section that it should become a strong potent factor in the musical life of the city; that we should create such an amount of enthusiasm and send out our musical vibrations so strongly that our influence should be felt in all that pertains to the musical advancement of the city. The Symphony Orchestra is the hub around which all other musical interests rotate, and from which radiate the vibrations that reach farthest in the musical life of any city. So with our ambition to further the great musical interests of our city we have reached the heart of the matter when we show our appreciation and interest in Herr Tandler and his symphony orchestra. Our distinguished concert meister, Mr. Sigmund Beale, said recently that Los Angeles Symphony now ranks fourth with the great orchestras of the United States. Let us get in and, to use the California motto, 'Boost!' Let us help Herr Tandler realiz dreams for our musical future."

Drama League Meeting.

At the Drama League meeting Music Hall, Trinity Auditorium buil ing, Thursday evening, Prof. Forre Bailey addressed the assembly on th philosophy and plays of Aug Strindberg. Prof. Bailey prefaced lecture with Matthew Arnold's defi tion of criticism, saying that in pr senting the thought of Strindberg hoped to follow this grand criteri of viewing the author dispassionat ly and giving the salient points of philosophy. The main theme of lecture was that Strindberg, aft Nietzsche, is the great Dionysian sp of the age, and that such a spirit revolt must not be judged by the co ventional standards of the past, by the ideals of modernity.

Women passengers, including Mrs. J. P. Morgan, on the White Star liner Celtic, which arrived in New York last week from Liverpool, spent many hours on the voyage across knitting socks, jackets and mufflers for the soldiers, who will endure hardships in the winter's campaigns of the European war. Mrs. Morgan completed five pairs of socks, one jacket and two mufflers, and turned them over to the Celtic's purser upon the ship's arrival here.

The wool was sold to her and the others who knitted, after they went aboard the Celtic in England, and the patterns were supplied by the British government. Mrs. Morgan is a member of the Needlework Guild organized by Queen Mary.

Texas has promised 1,000,000 quarter-pound bags of peanuts and pecans to the Christmas ship. And Texas is keeping its word.

One million quarter-pound bags—125 tons—enough to cram at least ten big freight cars!

A whole trainload of Christmas happiness for the little children abroad! The amount is so big that it almost seems as though Texas must fail in its efforts. But Texas is not going to fail. Here are some of the things its people are doing; Newspapers in almost every city and village in the State are working; important business and commercial associations have promised to help children in the schools and sunday-schools are working like Trojans. Here is a letter that reveals the spirit with which the people are working. It was written by the secretary of the Gonzales Commercial Club to the Houston Post, the newspaper which has made itself personally responsible for the success of the project in Texas: "Gonzales Commercial Club is with you. How many bags of pecans do you want from us? You shall have them if there are enough pecans grown to fill your requirements."

LAURA JEAN LIBBEY TALKS HEART TOPICS.

If a Man Pities a Girl.

"Do right, tho' pain and anguish be thy lot,
Thy heart will cheer thee when the pain's forgot.
Do wrong for pleasure's sake—then count thy gains,
The pleasure soon departs, the sin remains."

While girls are young and the world is before them their expectations high, and the future rosy, what a pity it is that they cannot have their innocent little fling. A girl may have a good home, the best of parents, good clothes, and an easy time of it. Yet, if she is refused girl companions and the opportunity of bringing them to her home, she is not happy.

There are other homes where a girl grows into young womanhood, accorded the friendship of one chum, but young men are barred. I have heard mothers say: "I know what is best for my daughter. I will not allow her to have young men callers. She shall not have a beau until she is 25. I was that age when I first met her father. Those who wait the longest seem to do the best."

Such mothers should remember that their days and their daughter's days are different. In her time 25 years was considered the correct age for girls to wed. Now the girl of 20 believes she is old enough to step to the altar.

It is neither wise, nor best oftimes, to accept the first young man who comes along as a suitor. She should be brought into contact with many in order to know the kind of a man who appeals to her, and with whom she would be happy.

If a man believes in making a careful selection, why should not a girl have the same privilege?

This she cannot do unless she is permitted to go out in company and to allow young men to call upon her at her home. Not to have their visits is a handicap to her. If a youth should have the temerity to make a call and was not made "at home" by the old folks, but was hesitatingly told, if he asked permission to repeat the visit, that she was not allowed the privilege of young men's company, he is either amused, surprised, or annoyed, or, sincerely, he pities the maiden who is hedged in by home rules that are far more strict than occasion necessitates.

Pity is akin to love. Straightway the young folks are desperately infatuated with each other, or think they are. All the chivalry in the man's nature is aroused. If he is very young, he is apt to be very romantic and considers that it would be an act of justice to remove the girl from such cast-iron prejudices. If, perchance, he encounters her outside of her home, on the spur of the moment, he asks the girl to marry him and let him protect her ever after. Bewildered, and without taking time to consider, the girl consents.

The upshot is they both return home for parental blessing. These marriages without courtship's try-out may turn out happily, and again, they may not. It is far wiser for parents to be in sympathy with a daughter and at least give her a chance to make the acquaintance of the man she is to fall in love with. Given long enough time, sweethearts not intended for each other, part of their own accord. On the contrary, true hearts grow more attached. It should not be pity that moves a man to wed, but love, well tempered.

OVER THE SEA.

Gen. Zupelli, the new Italian Minister of War, was born an Austrian subject. His ability is unquestioned, and as a man of practical affairs he takes high rank in Europe. His selection is due to the confidence reposed in him by Lieut.-Gen. Cadorna, chief of the Italian staff.

Maj.-Gen. Von Voights-Rhetz, recently reported as the successor to Field Marshall von Moltke, as chief of staff, though confirmation is lacking, is not generally known in Germany, but he possesses an enviable army record, and is a strategist of much ability.

Rear-Admiral Sir David Beatty, on whom the King recently conferred a knighthood and invested with the insignia of the Order of the Bath, was a commanding officer during the British action against the Germans in the Heligoland fight. He is one of the youngest British admirals, having attained flag rank at the age of 39 in 1910. He served with distinction with the Nile gunboats in 1898, and two years later won further notice in China. Later he became naval secretary to the First Lord of the Admiralty.

Prince Buelow would be seriously inconvenienced in more ways than one if Italy determined to side with the Triple Entente, for during the greater part of the years he resides in Rome. The ex-Chancellor is in high favor at the Italian court. He married a stepdaughter of Minghetti, the Premier, who brought Italy into the Triple Alliance, and his appointment in 1893 to the German Embassy at Rome was made as the result of a personal request on the part of King Humbert. The Prince visits Berlin as little as possible, and when in Germany, spends most of his time at Norderney.

Arthur Lynch, an Irish member of the House of Commons, who warmly advocated the government's stand on the war question, has had one of the most romantic careers of any member in the House. On the outbreak of the Boer War he organized the Second Irish Brigade, which he operated under Gen. Botha, and fought in Natal against the British troops. After the war he went to Paris, and while there, in 1901, he was elected by a large majority as Nationalist member of Parliament for Galway. On going to England to take his seat, however, he was arrested, and on January 23, 1903, was convicted of high treason and sentenced to death. The sentence was commuted to penal servitude for life. A year later he was released on license, and he received a free pardon on Jun 10, 1907. He is one of the most versatile and erudite men in the House, being a journalist, a civil engineer, a poet, and a physician. He has also written a novel in French.

MADAME ISE'BELL.

Most Growing Girls Need Special Exercise Rather Than Class Work.

"Dear Mme. Ise'bell: I want your advice in regard to my daughter's figure. She is just 16 and has gained twenty pounds this year, weighing now 120 pounds. Her bust is too large and there is a big lump of flesh just below the nape of the neck. Would a diet reduce that and the overlarge bust? She has gymnasium work three times a week."

I have picked out this letter as a subject of a lesson for the reason that it shows the futility of the average general work done at a gymnasium. A figure that is developing too rapidly or out of the normal needs some special work. Unless class work is arranged on these lines it is not going to benefit but a small proportion of the girls attending.

My correspondent neglects to give her daughter's height; if it is the average height, the girl is only a few pounds over weight. I should not advise a reducing diet unless the girl is eating an undue amount of starch and sugar; if so, cut that down in the interest of her general health.

This is a case not of obesity but of wrong distribution of flesh. It should be taken in hand at once and the following exercises, if practiced morning and night for fifteen minutes, will correct the trouble.

Impress on your daughter that, if she wants to have a good figure when she is a woman, the ugly roll of flesh in the back must be overcome; also that there is little good in doing the exercises one day and omitting them the next. They are not violent and the good comes only from their constant repetition.

(1.) Extend the arms at the side, palms out and close the fists tightly. Now revolve the arms in a circle, front and back as far as they will go, but raising and dropping them only a few inches above and below the level of the shoulders.

(2.) Drop the hands at the side and close the fists; raise them over the head back and down making big circles.

Both these exercises act directly on the muscles between the shoulders. Undoubtedly the girl hunches her figure when walking. Watch that she keeps her head well poised. For the third exercise have her walk about the room for five minutes balancing a book on the head, and holding the hands with the palms turned parallel with the floor and pushing down towards the floor.

These exercises will also tend to diminish the size of the bust by hardening the flesh under the arms and in the back. When her figure gets better proportioned the bust will appear only normal.

Home Recipe For The Liquor Habit

Well Known Physician Who Has Treated Thousands of Cases Gives Out Simple Home Recipe to Be Given Secretly.

A well-known physician, located in the Middle West, who has treated thousands of cases of liquor habit, in a recent interview, made the following statement: "The cost of the drugs used to treat the liquor habit in the high-priced sanatoriums is very little. Here is a simple, inexpensive prescription that can be given secretly in coffee, milk, water or in the food, as it has no taste, color or smell: To 3 oz. of water add 20 grains of muriate of ammonia, a small box of Varlex Compound and 10 grains of pepsin. Put into coffee or food a teaspoonful three times a day. This prescription is perfectly harmless, can be filled at any drug store, and will be found very effective in the treatment of the liquor habit."

Do wrong for pleasure's sake—then count thy gains,
The pleasure soon departs, the sin remains."

While girls are young and the world is before them their expectations high, and the future rosy, what a pity it is that they cannot have their innocent little fling. A girl may have a good home, the best of parents, good clothes, and an easy time of it. Yet, if she is refused girl companions and the opportunity of bringing them to her home, she is not happy.

There are other homes where a girl grows into young womanhood, accorded the friendship of one chum, but young men are barred. I have heard mothers say: "I know what is best for my daughter. I will not allow her to have young men callers. She shall not have a beau until she is 25. I was that age when I first met her father. Those who wait the longest seem to do the best."

Such mothers should remember that their days and their daughter's days are different. In her time 25 years was considered the correct age for girls to wed. Now the girl of 20 believes she is old enough to step to the altar.

It is neither wise, nor best oftimes, to accept the first young man who comes along as a suitor. She should be brought into contact with many in order to know the kind of a man who appeals to her, and with whom she would be happy.

If a man believes in making a careful selection, why should not a girl have the same privilege?

This she cannot do unless she is permitted to go out in company and to allow young men to call upon her at her home. Not to have their visits is a handicap to her. If a youth should have the temerity to make a call and was not made "at home" by the old folks, but was hesitatingly told, if he asked permission to repeat the visit, that she was not allowed the privilege of young men's company, he is either amused, surprised, or annoyed, or, sincerely, he pities the maiden who is hedged in by home rules that are far more strict than occasion necessitates.

Pity is akin to love. Straightway the young folks are desperately infatuated with each other, or think they are. All the chivalry in the man's nature is aroused. If he is very young, he is apt to be very romantic and considers that it would be an act of justice to remove the girl from such cast-iron prejudices. If, perchance, he encounters her outside of her home, on the spur of the moment, he asks the girl to marry him and let him protect her ever after. Bewildered, and without taking time to consider, the girl consents.

The upshot is they both return home for parental blessing. These marriages without courtship's try-out may turn out happily, and again, they may not. It is far wiser for parents to be in sympathy with a daughter and at least give her a chance to make the acquaintance of the man she is to fall in love with. Given long enough time, sweethearts not intended for each other, part of their own accord. On the contrary, true hearts grow more attached. It should not be pity that moves a man to wed, but love, well tempered.

OVER THE SEA.

Gen. Zupelli, the new Italian Minister of War, was born an Austrian subject. His ability is unquestioned, and as a man of practical affairs he takes high rank in Europe. His selection is due to the confidence reposed in him by Lieut.-Gen. Cadorna, chief of the Italian staff.

Maj.-Gen. Von Voights-Rhetz, recently reported as the successor to Field Marshall von Moltke, as chief of staff, though confirmation is lacking, is not generally known in Germany, but he possesses an enviable army record, and is a strategist of much ability.

Rear-Admiral Sir David Beatty, on whom the King recently conferred a knighthood and invested with the insignia of the Order of the Bath, was a commanding officer during the British action against the Germans in the Heligoland fight. He is one of the youngest British admirals, having attained flag rank at the age of 39 in 1910. He served with distinction with the Nile gunboats in 1898, and two years later won further notice in China. Later he became naval secretary to the First Lord of the Admiralty.

Prince Buelow would be seriously inconvenienced in more ways than one if Italy determined to side with the Triple Entente, for during the greater part of the years he resides in Rome. The ex-Chancellor is in high favor at the Italian court. He married a stepdaughter of Minghetti, the Premier, who brought Italy into the Triple Alliance, and his appointment in 1893 to the German Embassy at Rome was made as the result of a personal request on the part of King Humbert. The Prince visits Berlin as little as possible, and when in Germany, spends most of his time at Norderney.

Arthur Lynch, an Irish member of the House of Commons, who warmly advocated the government's stand on the war question, has had one of the most romantic careers of any member in the House. On the outbreak of the Boer War he organized the Second Irish Brigade, which he operated under Gen. Botha, and fought in Natal against the British troops. After the war he went to Paris, and while there, in 1901, he was elected by a large majority as Nationalist member of Parliament for Galway. On going to England to take his seat, however, he was arrested, and on January 23, 1903, was convicted of high treason and sentenced to death. The sentence was commuted to penal servitude for life. A year later he was released on license, and he received a free pardon on Jun 10, 1907. He is one of the most versatile and erudite men in the House, being a journalist, a civil engineer, a poet, and a physician. He has also written a novel in French.

MADAME ISE'BELL.

Most Growing Girls Need Special Exercise Rather Than Class Work.

"Dear Mme. Ise'bell: I want your advice in regard to my daughter's figure. She is just 16 and has gained twenty pounds this year, weighing now 120 pounds. Her bust is too large and there is a big lump of flesh just below the nape of the neck. Would a diet reduce that and the overlarge bust? She has gymnasium work three times a week."

I have picked out this letter as a subject of a lesson for the reason that it shows the futility of the average general work done at a gymnasium. A figure that is developing too rapidly or out of the normal needs some special work. Unless class work is arranged on these lines it is not going to benefit but a small proportion of the girls attending.

My correspondent neglects to give her daughter's height; if it is the average height, the girl is only a few pounds over weight. I should not advise a reducing diet unless the girl is eating an undue amount of starch and sugar; if so, cut that down in the interest of her general health.

This is a case not of obesity but of wrong distribution of flesh. It should be taken in hand at once and the following exercises, if practiced morning and night for fifteen minutes, will correct the trouble.

Impress on your daughter that, if she wants to have a good figure when she is a woman, the ugly roll of flesh in the back must be overcome; also that there is little good in doing the exercises one day and omitting them the next. They are not violent and the good comes only from their constant repetition.

(1.) Extend the arms at the side, palms out and close the fists tightly. Now revolve the arms in a circle, front and back as far as they will go, but raising and dropping them only a few inches above and below the level of the shoulders.

(2.) Drop the hands at the side and close the fists; raise them over the head back and down making big circles.

Both these exercises act directly on the muscles between the shoulders. Undoubtedly the girl hunches her figure when walking. Watch that she keeps her head well poised. For the third exercise have her walk about the room for five minutes balancing a book on the head, and holding the hands with the palms turned parallel with the floor and pushing down towards the floor.

These exercises will also tend to diminish the size of the bust by hardening the flesh under the arms and in the back. When her figure gets better proportioned the bust will appear only normal.

Home Recipe For The Liquor Habit

Well Known Physician Who Has Treated Thousands of Cases Gives Out Simple Home Recipe to Be Given Secretly.

A well-known physician, located in the Middle West, who has treated thousands of cases of liquor habit, in a recent interview, made the following statement: "The cost of the drugs used to treat the liquor habit in the high-priced sanatoriums is very little. Here is a simple, inexpensive prescription that can be given secretly in coffee, milk, water or in the food, as it has no taste, color or smell: To 3 oz. of water add 20 grains of muriate of ammonia, a small box of Varlex Compound and 10 grains of pepsin. Put into coffee or food a teaspoonful three times a day. This prescription is perfectly harmless, can be filled at any drug store, and will be found very effective in the treatment of the liquor habit."

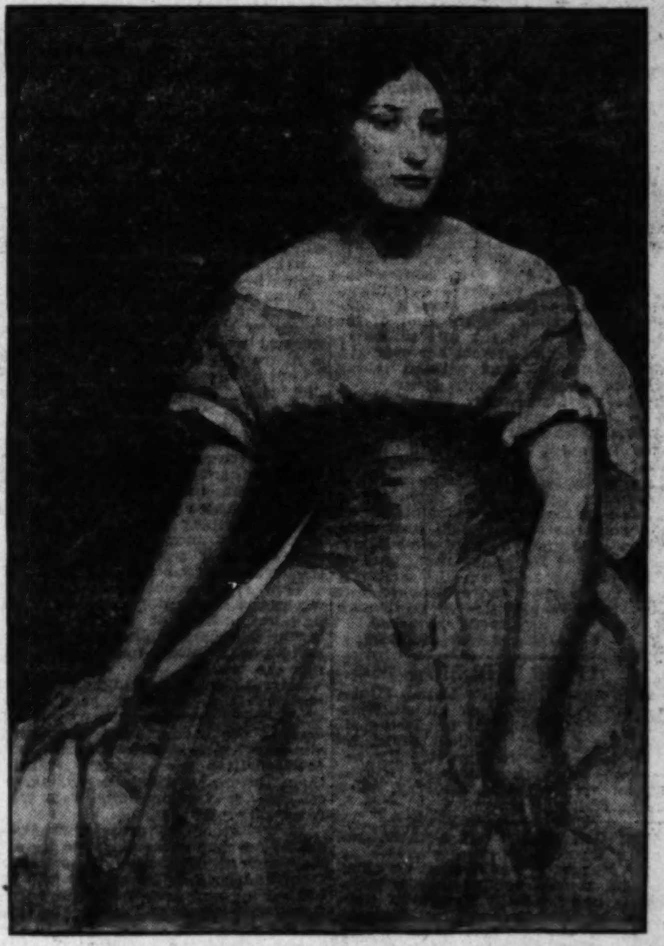
ANTONY ANDERSON.



"Miss R.," by A. B. Titus.

Medusa (For a Picture.)

A face in whose voluptuous bloom there lies
Olympian faultlessness of mold and hue;
Lips that a god were worthy alone to woo;
Round chin, and nostrils curved in the old Greek wise.
But there is no clear pallor of Arctic skies,
Fathom on crystal fathom of livid blue,
So bleakly cold that one might liken it to
The pitiless icy splendors of her eyes!

Her bound hair, colored lovelier than the sweet
Rich halcyon yellow of tall harvest wheat,
Over chaste brows a glimmering tumult sheds;
But through the abundance of its warm, soft gold,
Coils of lean horror peer from many a fold,
With sharp tongues flickering in flat clammy heads!

Donovan, Deep-sea Painter.

Most people—most artists, even—do not appreciate the tremendous difficulties that confront the man who attempts to paint the sea.

The cock-sure painter of landscape gathers the tools of his trade together, boards a trolley car and takes a trip to the beach, returning at night with perhaps two or three studies of what he fondly believes to be the ocean. But are they? Let us consider the question from the point of view of the true marine painter.

To him, the sea is not a vast stretch of still life that may be approached too confidently. He knows that it—he calls is "she"—is the most unstable, the most changeable, the most resistless and the most terrible thing in the whole world. He knows that it is also the biggest thing in the world, that it makes, indeed, three-fourths of the visible world. Knowing all this, he seeks the sea with awe and trembling—and perhaps with prayer. For I am sure that if ever a painter works with a prayer in his heart it must be the painter of the sea.

It was not through mere accident that the man who is universally acknowledged to be the greatest artist America has so far produced was a marine painter. The evolution of Winslow Homer's art leads us to the irresistible conclusion that the sea offers titanic problems that only the biggest men dare undertake, and that even they keep away from them till the day of their full strength. Winslow Homer painted southern street scenes—and attained a reputation with them—before he turned his eyes toward the open sea. Napier Hemy won fame as a consummate painter of still-life interiors; Wylie exhibited figures and interiors in the Royal Academy; Julius Olson was also expert at figures and interiors, and John M. Donovan, who will open an exhibition of marines in the Steckel gallery tomorrow, has been painting the sea only four years, or since the time he came to Southern California. Before that, Donovan painted everything that came his way.

Of course, the call of the sea has always been heard by Donovan, just as it must have always been sounding in the ears of Homer and Waugh and Daugherty and Woodbury and all the other intrepid Americans who have responded to it so gallantly. Faintly at first, but ever with a more elemental power, as they themselves grew in virility as men and artists, till they were impelled to set out, almost literally, for mid-ocean in an open boat. The opals on the shore satisfied no longer, lovely though they are.

These men sought and found the two immensities—the sky and the sea—and their conquest of them is one of the wonderful triumphs of modern art, a victory that was not even conjectural fifty years ago. Needless to add that it was a triumph of impressionism, for the sea cannot be felt and expressed in any other way but by a broad and free interpretation.

The sea is an immense mirror, occasionally so calm that it returns a perfect reflection, but generally so broken that its million moving facets give us a confused jumble of colors mixed with its own blue or green. To give this weltering mass its due weight and forward movement is a task to stagger the most courageous and optimistic painter that ever wielded a brush. Homer solved the difficulty by sacrificing those prettinesses that would have made his wave as fixed and immovable as a piece of sculpture, turning all his genius and intuition toward accomplishing the one supreme thing. Woodberry and Waugh have done the same.

John Donovan is doing it. He is essaying to place on canvas, with ever-increasing success, as the coming exhibition at Steckel's will prove, the power of the sea, the awesomeness of it and the mystery, and his aim is to describe in paint his own exaltation of spirit when he sees the storm and stress, the eternal conflict and striving, of the ocean and the sky far removed from the influence of the peace-loving land.

Donovan has no quarrel with the man who prefers to paint the sea lying at rest in the warm embrace of the shore—the sea of lipping waves and murmuring voice—the sea of soft colors and pliant contours. Such a painter may paint beautiful and admirable pictures, and, indeed, often does. But Donovan prefers the lonely wastes of open water, denying himself even the solace of a distant sail, that he may show us the soul of the sea as it speaks to the soul of men. His ambition is not a small one—in truth, it is stupendously big—but I think he will carry it through.

He will exhibit thirty of his recent pictures for the coming two weeks. Not all of them are pictures of the deep sea, but many of them are. Some of them give us bits of shore line, and there are even a few studies of fisher folk painted in San Pedro.

St. Clair's Landscapes.

An exhibition of water-color landscapes of the late Norman St. Clair began last Monday in the Royar Gallery, No. 744 South Hill street, and will be open to the public to the end of the present week.

Twenty-seven pictures by this poetic interpreter of the landscape beauties of Southern California are shown, among them being the very last painting from his brush, full of strength and vigor, done with that perfect mastery of his medium which characterized the work of the artist during the last few years of his life. There is also a charming early morning effect in the Arroyo Seco—a small stream, with wonderful cloud shadows on it, and the touch of fresh green that follows the first rain—a happy survey, a hopeful bit of painting, in spite of the physical weakness of the artist when he painted it.

One of these notable water colors was exhibited in the New York Water Color Club in July, 1913, and appeared as an illustration in the International Studio. Another was illustrated in the catalogue of the San Francisco Art Association.

It is not generally known that St. Clair was an able painter in oils, and his admirers will be charmed and surprised with the beauty of the few oil studies hung in the present exhibition, among them being a sweep of sand dunes painted at Hermosa Beach when the town by the sea was known as Potentia.

This is the last time that Norman St. Clair's paintings will be shown in a public place, and lovers of his work, as well as those who are not already familiar with it, should not miss the opportunity of seeing these fine and sincere studies of nature.

Plans at the Park.

The exhibition of paintings and sculptures by the California Art Club, which has been occupying the gallery in Exposition Park for almost a month, will close this afternoon. Tomorrow the general exhibition which formerly held the walls will be returned, with many new pictures.

Toward the end of the week, however, the west wall of the gallery will contain a collection of Granville Redmond's latest landscapes, forming the first of the one-man shows to be held continuously. Already there are enough names on the list to keep the exhibitions going up to June, 1915. Robert Henri is making arrangements with George Bellowes and other famous New York painters, and their pictures will appear soon.

Fourteen paintings selected from the fine collection of John W. Mitchell will be hung very soon, the generous loan of Mr. Mitchell, who brought them all recently from Europe. They were wanted at he exposition in San Francisco, but the owner decided to let Los Angeles have them during exposition year, thus giving our own gallery a proper importance for visitors to Southern California, who will be almost as numerous as those of the northern city. It has been said that two of the best modern pictures now in America belong to Mr. Mitchell's collection, and these two will be shown at Exposition Park.

The collection of old miniatures owned by Mrs. Louis Hovey Sharp of Pasadena, one of the most notable in the world, will be brought down from the small upper gallery and shown in the main gallery. The Culver collection of landscapes by famous American painters will also come back to their usual place on the wall.

Relief Fund.

The members of the Societe des Artistes Francais, the Societe Nationale and other art bodies in Paris have formed a brotherhood, under the presidency of M. Leon Bonnat, to give relief to the families—mothers, wives, children, little brothers and sisters—of French painters, sculptors, architects and other art workers who have gone to the war. A letter has been written to M. Bonnat, sayin many American artists, pup French masters and others wh studied in France or profited by many facilities freely offered, are sirous of co-operating in the wor the brotherhood by contributing t funds.

The art of every country owes m to France, and every artist is pe ally indebted to it for what i done for centuries to foster the and to preserve its treasures—ma works in architecture, sculpture painting, which have been an ins tion to all lovers of the bea throughout the world. It seems t say the committee, composed of of the finest artists in America, this is a most sympathetic op tunity and a time when we can some material return in a way insures that our contributions wi applied to the work of relief with crimination and with delicacy. cially in the case of the younger and those who have not yet ach a reputation is the task of the breadwinner a difficult one, eve time of peace. And many of t soldier-artists will never return.

The committee appeals for co eration and support. Subscrip no matter how small, will be g fully received and duly acknowle When the funds collected are rem to the French brotherhood, the na of the contributors will be forwa without the amounts subscribed each. It is especially requested in case where a contributor subs is a pupil of a French master, or been a student in any atelier France, he or she will kindly ind the fact. Contributions from o who may desire to assist in this lief of destitution among a cla noncombatants who are pecu stricken will be gratefully rece and forwarded in the same ma as those of the artists.

The following resolution, William M. Hyde, has been forw to Los Angeles:

"On motion duly made and onded, it was voted that Ha Achille Wolf be authorized to co funds for the committee and same to treasurer."

Mr. Wolf will forward all subs tions to New York as soon as ceived by him. His address is 860 Lake street, Los Angeles.

Photographs by Miss Wilson.

An exhibition of over 300 bromide photographs by Maude Wilson of Palo Alto will open to row in the Merick Reynolds ga No. 841 South Broadway, to co to the middle of the month.

Miss Wilson has won an inte tional reputation through these derful studies of hers, and has subtleties and effects that seem al beyond the art of photography, croaching on the domain of the p painter. Many of the pictures the beautiful simplicity and de refinement of Japanese prints in

To use her own statement, Wilson has primarily interested self in the depiction or represent of fog, mist, atmosphere, light, light, luminous shadow. She form and composition by sugge avoiding, as much as possible, all lines. She carefully refrains fro manipulation in her work beyon use of a silk screen in making h rangements, and at times "fa in" or holding back a portion o plate.

She firmly believes that photo is a medium peculiarly suited to from nature the subtler phases moods, and, though she has expr a fear that her prints may seem similar, it must be remembered it has been her aim to keep the tire exhibition uniform, with no ring or obtrusive elements.

Los Angeles' Pioneer Shopping Center

—It looks Pioneer-like to us now—this picture of the "People's Store" which you knew 'way back in the 80's.

—When we began on Main Street in the early days 'twas the custom to display merchandise outside the door on the sidewalk. Soon outgrowing this small beginning we moved to the site on Spring Street pictured above. We like to remember how loyal were the friends and patrons of the "People's Store" during the busy years that followed.

18-in. $1.50 Black Velvet Lyons Silk; Erect Pile, at $1.00

—Enough for one day's selling, about 500 yards assembled from our $1.50 lines.

—Lyons silk velvet—for which the demand is notably strong this season. Buy now for the blouse or coatee you have planned to make this week—save in this "33 Years" Sale.

(Hamburger's—Main Floor—On Sale Monday)

Women's $1.50 Real French Kid Gloves $1.00

—First, think of buying a real French kid glove for a dollar; then think of buying a 2-clasp style, overseam sewn, with three rows of two-strand, three-strand or Paris-point stitching on the back, at this low price—another triumph of the Hamburger buying power. Choose, black, white, mode or tan; all sizes in the lot; fitted, too, if you wish.

(Hamburger's—Main Floor—On Sale Monday)

Boys' 25c Stockings, 19c

—About 500 pairs, another purchase that pays tribute to the Hamburger Anniversary Sale.

—They have the wear-resisting double knees, these sturdy black cotton stockings for boys. In the medium weight, too, which is most desirable and dressy for school wear; all sizes up to 11.

(Hamburger's—Boys' Dept.—Second Floor—Sale Monday)

$1.25 Scarfs and Squares, 75c

—Can you think of an item on which a saving would more appeal to you, Mrs. Housekeeper, than this? —Quaint and artistic scarfs and squares of all-over Swiss embroidery, finished with insertion and a 3-inch plain lawn border; scarfs size 19x56 inches; squares, 32x32 inches.

(Hamburger's—Main Floor—On Sale Monday)

$12 Colonial Rag Rugs, (Room Size) $7.45

—Only enough of these for a day's selling—there'll be an early throng in the Rug section, Monday. Be among them and share in this extraordinary economy event.

—Ye Olde Tyme Rag Rugs, sizes 9x12 feet and 8x10 feet, reversible and in beautiful blendings of tan, brown, blue or pink, with harmonizing borders.

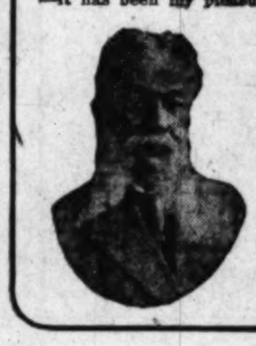
Dr. H. Nadeau



—It has been my pleasure in past years to professionally serve the members of the Hamburger firm. I have watched their efforts from the advent of the little store on Main street near Requena until the era of their present success. Today they stand a pillar of progress in the city they have helped to build.

Moving November Up to January Selling Records— $20.00 Overcoats $14.50

—Wonder values when you can buy them at $14.50 at the very outset of the season.

—But a modern store must be ahead in values, that's why we made such extra effort to get these fine overcoats for this Anniversary event.

—The style is the strictly up-to-date Balmacaan, with their new combination collars.

—Made of worsteds, tweeds, homespuns and cheviots; some are showerproof. Yokes and sleeves are lined with Skinner satin—$14.50.

The Price of These Suits is so Remarkably Low That it is Impossible to Judge the Quality by the Price.

$15.00, $16.50 Suits, $11.00

—Another feature in the Anniversary Sale. Suits of all-wool fabrics, Scotch tweeds, cashmeres, homespuns and worsteds. Some of the vital points of these suits are that the coats are hand-tailored and the fronts are unbreakable—not so noticeably important at the time of buying, but mightily so, later—$11.00.

Men's $3.50 Trousers $2.50

—Worsteds, cashmeres, etc., and well tailored. They will give great service at little cost—a dollar saved is a dollar earned.

(Hamburger's—Men's Store—On Sale Monday)

Kayser's $3 Silk Knickerbockers $1.85

—The famous Kayser's Italian silk knickerbockers, that sell regularly at $3.00 a garment, priced at $1.85 for a day of rousing activity tomorrow. A limited quantity, so choose early from assortments, while the size range is at its best.

—In white and pink; crotch reinforcements; all sizes when the sale begins.

(Hamburger's—Main Floor—On Sale Monday)

$5 Hair Switches, $2.65

—The popular 3-separate-stem or 3-stems-under-one-head switches that fashion demands in the newest hair dressing models.

—Fine, natural, wavy hair, in all shades except gray—another instance of our efforts to procure greater-than-ever values for this Anniversary Event.

(Hamburger's—Second Floor—On Sale Monday)

$22.50 Baby Carriages, $18.75

—And our only regret is that the quantity is somewhat limited—wonder values for those who come early. Wood body carriages with rubber-tired wheels and wheel guards, comfortably upholstered and finished in brown or dark green color. My! how they'll go at $18.75 each, tomorrow.

(Hamburger's—Fourth Floor—On Sale Monday)

$1.75 Roller Skates at $1.45

—Good news for the boys and girls tomorrow in our great "33 Years" Anniversary Sale. Union Hardware ball-bearing skates with adjustable foot plate and toe clamps that hold them securely to the soles of the shoes. And all sizes, too, for both boys and girls—$1.45 a pair.

(Hamburger's—Fourth Floor—On Sale Monday)

$1.25 to $1.50 Books 50c

—Patent leather, vici kid and calf, in the very smartest lasts, and including nearly all sizes among them—a wonder value that will pay for the search for your size.

(Hamburger's—Main Floor—On Sale Monday)

$2.50 Art Bronzes $1.45

—Direct from Italy to the Great White Store—Another special purchase—that's why we have priced them so far below their usual value. Art bronzes of plaster paris, replicas of such famous bronzes as Napoli, Wagner, Beethoven, Dante, Apollo, etc., about 14 inches in height, together with wood carvings in bronze effects. They're new, artistic and true to the original—an ideal Xmas gift, if you choose.

(Hamburger's—Third Floor—On Sale Monday)

—From the personal and unpublished memoirs of

Mr. Harris Newmark

—In 1881, S. A. and M. A. Hamburger, who were engaged in business in Sacramento, concluded that they would do better if they could secure the right opening in the Southland; and, having persuaded their father, Asher Hamburger, to join them in the new enterprise, they came to Los Angeles and established, in November, their present business, starting under the firm name of A. Hamburger & Sons. For several years the elder Hamburger participated actively in all the affairs of the concern, until his death, on December 2nd, 1897.

—They started their first store, which for many years was known as the Peoples' Store, on Main street near Requena, occupying one-story in a room covering not more than twenty-five hundred square feet. Having outgrown this location, they moved to the Bumiller Block and soon were again obliged to seek more room, when the Phillips Block, on the corner of Spring and Franklin was projected, on the site of the City and County Building. In 1908 they moved to Eighth and Broadway, where they are destined to participate in the success of this community.

Men's 25c Garters at 19c

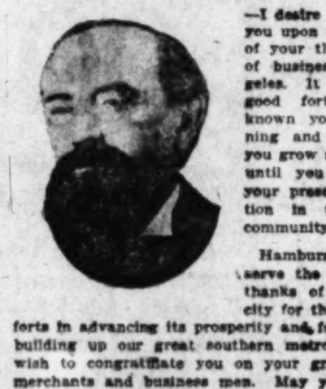
Mr. I. W. Hellman



—I desire to congratulate you upon the termination of your thirty-third year of business in Los Angeles. It has been my good fortune to have known you from beginning and to have seen you grow steadily onward until you have reached your present proud position in the mercantile community.

Hamburger & Sons deserve the credit and the thanks of Los Angeles city for their untiring efforts in advancing its prosperity and for their help in building up our great southern metropolis. I again wish to congratulate you on your great success as merchants and business men. May you continue in your laudable enterprises, and may prosperity, good health and happiness be with you for many more years to come. Adding my personal regards to each and every member of your good firm.

Capt. George R. Clark, recently on duty as commandant at the naval training station at North Chicago, has become aid for education in the Navy Department, the new position established on board ship for the benefit of the enlisted men. Capt. Clark, a native of Ohio, was graduated from Annapolis in 1878. While in command of the Minnesota in 1911, in collaboration with his junior officers, he wrote and published "A Short History of the United States Navy." The book was carefully examined by the academic board and adopted as a text-book for midshipmen at the Naval Academy.

David Watson Taylor, who will succeed Rear-Admiral Richard M. Watt as chief constructor of the navy, graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1885, at the head of his class, and excelled the highest record ever made there up to that time. He was sent to Greenwich, where he received the highst honors of the Royal College and established a record for students. In 1901 he was made a captain in the navy. He was the first American to win the gold medal of the British Institute of Naval Architects for the best original paper on "Ship-shaped Stream Forms." In the field of technical writers he is well known, among his works being "Resistance of Ships and Screw Propulsion" and "Speed and Power Ships."

May Help If You Have Tuberculosis

Proper diet, fresh air and temperate habits aid persons suffering from Tuberculosis. Often more is needed. Reports show that Eckman's Alterative has brought about many recoveries. Read what it did in this case:—

Madison Lake, Minn.

"Gentlemen:—In December, 1908, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs, which confined me several weeks, each time to my bed. My doctor advised me to go West. In November I started for Denver, Colo. After my arrival I met Michael Brody, who, upon learning of my condition, urged me to take Eckman's Alterative. I kept on taking the medicine and improved fast. In March, 1910, I returned home. I am entirely well, have a good appetite and sleep well. When I left Denver my weight was 130 pounds. I now weigh 165, my normal weight. I thank God and your Alterative for my health." (Abbreviated.)

(Affidavit) PAUL L. FASNACHT.

Eckman's Alterative is most efficacious in bronchial catarrh and severe throat and lung affections and upbuilding the system. Contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs. Accept no substitutes. Small size $1; regular size $2. Sold by The Owl Drug Co. and leading druggists. Write Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet of recoveries.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Mrs. Bird S. McGuire, wife of the Oklahoma Congressman, promises to become a modern Portia. She has taken up the study of law at the George Washington University in Washington and intends to finish the course.

Mme. Jusserand, wife of the French Ambassador to the United States, who, though an American woman, is firmly attached to her adopted country, has become the directress of the French relief work in this country.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt befriended a Senegalese infantryman in the course of her Red Cross work in Paris, and when the soldier was leaving the hospital he invited Mrs. Vanderbilt to return with him to Senegal, where she would be made a chieftainess of an African tribe.

Miss Callie Smith, daughter of United States Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, has personally offered cash prizes in gold to the American school children under 16 years of age who write the best essays of 300 words each on "The Cotton Plant and its Uses."

Miss Augusta McCrellis of North Berwick, Me., is still working at the looms, having been continuously at the work for almost fifty-three years. She is said to be still as alert as in her girlhood days and her intellect is unimpaired. She is interested in everything that is taking place in her world.

SCIENTISTS, EDUCATORS.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, pure food expert of the United States, during the last Republican administration, celebrated his 70th birthday last week, and was given a dinner in Washington under the auspices of the National Mouth Hygienic Association which was attended by ex-President Taft and many men closely identified with health improvement.

Prof. Pierre Boutroux of the department of mathematics of Princeton University has remained in France in the service of the French government.

Dr. Erwin Baur of Berlin, who was to have been the Carl Schurz Memorial professor at the University of Wisconsin, has returned to Berlin from Port Said. He will not come to America before the end of the European war.

Dr. Ernest Linwood Walker, who has come to San Francisco to commence his research work as associate professor in tropical medicine at the George Williams Hooper Foundation for Medical Research, is former chief of the medical laboratories in the bureau of science, Manila. He was also chief of the department of medical zoology in the university of the Philippines. Before his four years of service in the Philippines, Dr. Walker was in charge of the State bacteriological laboratories of Massachusetts.

BY OLIVE GRAY.

THE GOOD HOUSEKEEPER'S HINT: A dainty way of serving an egg for an invalid is to separate the yolk from the white, beat the white to a froth and place it in a well-buttered ramikin—one of the small, flat ones with a handle—drop the yolk upon the white, and after seasoning to taste, place in a pan of boiling water upon the top of the stove and cook until the egg is set.

What sort of neighbor are you?

Are you one of those who pay skimped visits at stated intervals and who invite to your house upon social occasions, if at all, and who otherwise pay little or no attention to those who reside in your vicinity? Are you of that vast majority who believe that "neighbor" has gone out of the present-day dictionary—that it belonged to the Biblical time when everyone lived in the open and has no significance in the present day and age? It is, of course, largely a fact that those living in cities do not and perhaps cannot know the full meaning of the word "neighbor;" but after all there is none so poor but that his life touches others at many points and "neighbor" must mean such touch. Just how do you interpret the responsibility which such contact brings?

I confess that I had been far from giving it the deep meaning which I found read into it during a visit to my country friend. Her interpretation was a revelation to me. To her neighbors she is ever ready to lend not alone anything which she may possess—from frying pans to books—but of her time, her sympathy, her knowledge, her inspiration. She is even quick to flash her anger if anyone endeavors to do them wrong. She is mother to the girl-wife in her time of need, when her own mother is far away; sister to the homesick boy, and agricultural advisor to the one striving to wrest his living from the soil. But those are not the only cases in which she extends patient and unremitting care. She as completely enters into the betterment of those around her as though they were actual members of her family. Does someone err—or has she or he a grievous fault—does she gossip of it to the neighbors and thrust the erring one out of her daily association? Not she! On the contrary, she goes about assisting him to remake his life. Not with preaching cant, but by loving sympathy, and by the warm handclasp, by counsel and advice. It is not with her, "you must" or "you should do so and so!" But, "let us see how we can manage to do this or that" toward better things. She has learned the divine way to enter into her neighbor's disordered house, whether it be material, financial or spiritual, and to help put the place in order. To help in the common, every-day need, and to help as cheerfully as though the one in need were one's own child—this is the highest interpretation of neighborliness, according to the unspoken gospel of my country friend.

"Lie Down to Pleasant Dreams."

I really was in hurry, but so many were crowding around that corner window, gazing and gazing, that I felt constrained to stop and see what was attracting so much attention. It was no wonder they looked and looked again. For my part I had never seen such beauty, such luxury of its kind. The kind was mattresses, and the beauty was in the material and also in the make. Imagine satin mattresses! That was what they were. But it was not alone the fact of this—which in itself is an unusual material to see in mattresses, but the way in which they were made, was quite as exceptional. There was not a wrinkle where the tufting came, but, as a small card informed one, and as you forthwith observed, all the fullness was sewed tightly so that no crevasses remained for catching dust and germs. This way of sewing had to do also with the tautness of the covering, which created the no-sag quality possessed. Athirst for further information, as soon as I learned that these wonderful mattresses were made in Los Angeles, and made, moreover, from Imperial cotton, I visited the department where such articles are kept—no, I mean where they are not kept, but sold—and asked further information. I learned that the Imperial cotton is the very best for the purpose, and that even the less expensive mattresses are of fine quality, and as a matter of fact, every one looked so comfy that I actually began to feel sleepy as I looked. Seriously, though, I have never seen an article of bedding so luxurious as those. And I feel proud that they are made in Los Angeles, and "grown in Imperial." Do not tell us that anything else can be as good—and certainly none is nearly as reasonable in price, for the amount of good obtained.

"Next to Godliness."

If cleanliness is next to Godliness, as I verily believe, it is well to have the appurtenances of the art of cleanliness the very best that can be obtained. However contracted one's purse, one can in that sale of bathroom fixtures—at that double three sale—secure some long-wished for article for the cleanliness room. There are, for instance, sprays on long rubber tubes—what a jolly jolt these will give your drowiness when you take your morning shower! You'll pay less than half for these during the three-three sale. Then there are towel bars of glass and nickel. I like these, they seem so clean and shining. In fact, if you have, either on paper or in your mind a list of bathroom always-wanteds you may find them here and for a price which makes purchase imperative.

In Fashion's Hand Mirror.

Trains are pieces of stuff hanging here and there without any apparent reason.

Some handsome sports coats are being made up in corduroys and velveteens.

Muffs to match the new fur coats are a feature of this winter's fashions.

Very, very wide borders of fur appear on the most splendid of the new velvet coats.

The very small round muffs are made only of the very finest furs such as Russian sable.

The attempts at the long bodice have been much more successful than anybody would have expected.

Fashionable and economical is the combination of fur and velvet. These smart sets can be made at home.

The up-to-date woman is now wearing a jumper of velvet over a blouse of fine linen or mousseline de soie.

A new development of the tunic is tiny flounces set on close together from waist to near the foot of the skirt.

One of the most favored hats this fall is the black velvet sailor of medium size with a band of fluted grosgrain ribbon.

For the simple frock, gabardine in dark blue combined with black satin, moire or taffeta is the most fashionable material.

Military fashions should not be ignored by the woman who would be up to the minute, for they embody the spirit of the day.

Handbags and vanity cases are loaded with precious stones, and bracelets, as well as necklaces, are studded with them.

This is a sparkling season, a season of misty stones, of subdued brilliancy produced by bugles and crystals, smoke-lined as it were.

MEN OF NOTE.

Marshall's Last Minute Story.

[New York Sun:] Vice-President Marshall has a habit of telling a funny story at the eleventh hour. In fact, he usually waits until the eleventh hour and about fifty-five minutes.

The consequence is that when he enters the Senate chamber to convene that body of solemn toilers he is apt to have a half-suppressed smile on his face, and the Rev. Forest J. Prettyman, the Senate chaplain, has even more difficulty in maintaining the serious countenance of a man about to lead in prayer.

Here is the way the thing works out. Along about 11:30 Marshall shifts from his office in the Senate office building to his room in the Capitol. A few minutes before noon the chaplain comes to be in readiness to accompany the Vice-President into the chamber. Now, for some unaccountable reason the presence of the chaplain makes Marshall think of a funny story. At about five minutes prior to the hour of opening the Senate he starts to tell this story with calm deliberation.

The golden moments speed on their way, and by the time Marshall has the basic part of his story outlined it lacks only two minutes or less until 12 o'clock. All hands begin to grow nervous and the sergeant-at-arms comes to the door, watch in hand, to make certain that the Vice-President is going to reach his seat in due season.

Marshall gets up from his desk and proceeds across the corridor, still working towards the point of his story, and by a burst of speed gets out the climax just as he pushes open the door into the Senate chamber. Chaplain Prettyman has his choice then of not laughing at the story, which would perhaps be impolite on his part, or of laughing and then pulling his face back into shape ready to offer prayer while walking a few steps from the door to the rostrum.

Jones in Bad Shape.

[Boston Advertiser:] Representative Houston of Tennessee tells a story on his predecessor, George B. Jones, who was known in his day as "the watch dog" of the treasury.

Jones was a merchant, and one day an irate old lady dismounted in front of his store, gathered her voluminous black calico riding skirt, took her eggs under her arm and sailed into the store.

The names she called him would have made a Missouri mule blush. Backing out flushed with victory, she was about to mount when she remembered that she had not fired the most effective shot in her ammunition chest, so opening the door, she shouted:

"And I want to tell you, George P. Jones, that you have got the worst shape any man ever had."

THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S WIFE.

Though New in the Sense of Making One of Cabinet Circle, Mrs. Gregory Knows Her Washington Very Well, Having Spent About Five Years Studying at the Cabell Institute.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

©Harris & Ewing

Mrs. Gregory, wife of the Attorney-General.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—It is seldom that three Cabinet hostesses are from the same State, still less from the same city. With the coming of Mrs. Thomas Watt Gregory, wife of the Attorney-General, Austin, Tex., claims three of the official hostesses, Mrs. Albert Sidney Burleson being one and Mrs. Albert Sidney Burleson being one and Mrs. David Franklin Houston the other. It is a pleasant coincidence that these ladies have always been friends, that their parents were friends and all their associations and traditions make for a strong bond of sympathy. Austin, Tex., is most assuredly on the social map. Mrs. Gregory has but recently come to Washington and she is going through the usual ordeal of house-hunting. Not only has she to consider a domicile suitable for a Cabinet family but she has two daughters, one Miss Jane Gregory, a charming girl who has taken the A.B. degree in the University of Texas, and the other a pretty little miss of 8, Cornelia, who will make a chum for Sallie McAdoo and Nancy Lane. There are two sons, the elder, Thomas Watt Gregory, Jr., has just entered Princeton and the second, Nalle Gregory, is preparing for the same seat of learning.

Mrs. Gregory is preceded to her new sphere of action by pleasant rumors. She is well equipped for the role she must fill, having been carefully trained in all the social arts at a once-famous institution here, the Cabell Seminary, now passed out of existence. She spent some years in traveling and has a rounded education in every way. But it is as a hostess of the old hospitable type that Mrs. Gregory will be most welcome. Her home in Austin has been prominent in the most agreeable way. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Nelle, possessed large means, her father being concerned in many of the vast industries of the State, lumber, oil and cotton planting. From her early childhood she has seen the stately observance of the social customs of the old South and these traditions have influenced her when she set up her home and began the rearing of her family. Mrs. Gregory will be, without doubt, one of the genuinely valuable additions, for her husband replaces a bachelor in the Wilson Cabinet and one who had no feminine relative to represent him in the gentler aspects of his official position. Then, besides Mrs. Gregory there is the young daughter, Miss Jane, who will make her bow to Washington society under such brilliant auspices.

The Attorney-General is a close friend of the Postmaster-General and for several years conducted his Congressional campaigns in the Tenth District of Texas, which he represented for fourteen years. Mr. Burleson and Mr. Gregory graduated from the law department of the University of Texas about the same time and their careers, which have culminated in their association with such lofty posts, began in the usual way of the young and ambitious lawyer. The Attorney-General, unlike his colleague, is not a native of the Lone Star State but of Mississippi. He took his A.B. degree from the University of Virginia and then decided to go to Southwest for a law course. After studying for three or four years in Austin, he pitched his tent in that city and he made a notable success in his profession and married the daughter of one of Austin's most substantial and revered citizens, the present mistress of his home and in the order of official precedence the fourth lady in the Cabinet line. Mrs. Burleson, Adele Steiner, daughter of Dr. Josephus Steiner, who was born within a square or two of Mrs. Gregory in a quiet residential part of the beautiful Texas capital, was friendly with Julia Nalle in her girlhood and the close association of the two husbands brought them into frequent intercourse and increased the affectionate regard which was in a way an inheritance from their parents. The same may be said of Mrs. David Franklin Houston, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, who was Miss Helen Beall and whose parents lived on the same street with Dr. and Mrs. Steiner.

Mrs. Gregory takes up her duties under the happiest combination of circumstances. She has two tried and true friends among those with whom she must be associated and she has a previous knowledge of what Washington requires of a Cabinet Minister's wife. She laughingly recalls her own experiences in making the Cabinet calls. For it was the accepted thing in those days for the pupils at finishing schools to be escorted through the Cabinet homes by one of the teachers. It seemed very grand and delightful to Mrs. Gregory as a girl of 18, and she gazed in awe at the gracious ladies who so smilingly greeted the hundreds of callers all strangers and all rushing through a routine at a breathless speed. Texas then had no representative in the Cabinet and the closest interest was to find that the cousin of such a lady had once lived at Ft. Sam Houston or had spent a winter in San Antonio.

"Now Texas is well supplied and the well-known pride of the State in the honors which come to its citizens will be gratified more fully than mine was," said Mrs. Gregory. "Allowing for the changes which the years bring and for the roseate view which a young girl takes of everything novel, I find Washington a different city. But now I see only the interior of houses which are to be let and my entire scheme of existence centers in getting a home which will please five distinct ideals of what a home should be. My opinions will be more valuable in about a year or two."

Mrs. Gregory being the latest member of the Cabinet and the only hostess not in the original list made public on March 4, 1913, is naturally the focussing point of social speculation. That she is hospitable is good news, that she is in affluent circumstances and can maintain the traditions of her family is equally so and that she prizes the domestic virtues more than gold and attends personally to the ways of her household paints the most attractive part of the picture. But that she has a debutante to present is the best news of any. Mrs. Burleson has definitely disposed of the humors of the debut of her second daughter, Lucy Kyle, or of her rumored engagement by stating that both Miss Burleson and Miss Adele Sidney Burleson will resume their studies at the George Washington University and will continue there until they take their degree. This for Miss Lucy Burleson will be in 1916. None of the other Cabinet families have daughters eligible for the privileged bud class. Miss Jane Gregory has been very popular in Austin very much like all pretty and attractive girls in university towns. Though she makes her formal debut here and amidst all the trappings of state, this will not be her first peep at social happenings by any means. Mrs. Gregory's home has been one of the liveliest in Austin and she has been gracious to the youths who visit Miss Jane. Dances, receptions, all kind of amenity for the students have been given through the year, and the holidays at Christmas and Easter were a gala time. But to make a debut when one's father is in the Cabinet is quite an event both for the heroine of the occasion and for the younger set. This administration has not yet possessed such an attractive figure. Miss Gregory will be feted galore by all the Cabinet hostesses, her mother's friends, Mrs. Burleson and Mrs. Houston will, of course, be especially attentive.

Mrs. Gregory came to Washington with Miss Jane just in time to accept some of the regal hospitality which the city of Baltimore was extending to the nation in honor of the centennary of the "Star Spangled Banner." They spent three days in the neighboring city and Miss Jane was among the belles who danced the olden measures at the colonial ball tendered by the Mayor of Baltimore and Mrs. Preston on the last evening of the week's celebration. Since then Miss Gregory has been joining her friends, the Misses Burleson, at informal dances at the Dower House and at the Chevy Chase Club.

Mrs. Gregory is entirely without fads and describes herself as a simple woman who has the responsibilities of a husband, home and children to claim all her energy. She delights in reading and she has the keen outlook on politics and public affairs which goes with sympathetic association with a successful publicist. The Attorney-General had charge of the New Haven case before the Department of Justice when he was selected to succeed Mr. McReynolds. Mrs. Gregory, though reticent about discussing such matters, knows the case thoroughly, as she does all the important themes with which her husband's name has been associated. But she finds her time well employed in attending to the material needs of her brilliant husband. Her home is well regulated and delightful, and she plans to transplant it as far as possible from Austin to Washington. Though she will take a furnished home for the nonce, she will make it the same dear and familiar spot to which her husband and children have been accustomed and will either get her own belongings or some so alike that they will answer for the time. She delights in serving a splendid dinner and though she has trained servants she directs everything personally and can herself get up as toothsome a meal as a French chef.

Mrs. Gregory takes a broad view of public questions and has been identified in her home community with all that tends to elevate and to improve. Her family came to Texas originally from Virginia and she has much to be proud of in their early history. She has aided all the endeavors of the patriotic societies and the historical associations and has filled places on their boards, which required time and attention. She likes to read and her library is the popular room of her home. She also likes her needle and has been taught to honor that lovely feminine accomplishment, fine and regular needle work, plain sewing as it is called misleadingly. As a girl, Mrs. Gregory was a fearless equestrienne, but now she permits her daughter to gather all the laurels in that line while she prefers the more leisurely way of a motor car or a landau to cover the distances. Mrs. Gregory is a handsome woman in every way and will add greatly to the charm of the official hostesses who play such a part in the success of the administration from the standpoint of Washington society.

WOMEN ABROAD.

Princess Catacuzene, the daughter of Gen. Frederick D. Grant, is a Red Cross nurse in the Russian service.

Mrs. Penfield, the wife of the American Ambassador to Vienna, is devoting her time industriously to the Red Cross.

Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt has filled her mansion in Paris with sewing women, making shirts and rolling bandages for the Red Cross.

The Duchess of Marlborough, who was Consuelo Vanderbilt, has been the moving spirit in London in organizing American assistance for the British soldiers.

The Duchess of Talleyrand, formerly Anna Gould, has opened a workshop in Paris to give employment to needy women whose masculine supporters have gone to the war.

Mrs. W. E. Corey, the Mabelle Gilman of other days, has long ago placed her husband's splendid country place, the Chateau Villegnes, near Paris, at the disposal of France.

Countess Bernstorff, the American wife of the German Ambassador to the United States (formerly a Miss Luckemeyer of New York,) is giving all her time to the Red Cross at Munich.

Lady Beatty, who was Ethel Marshal Field of Chicago and is the wife of Great Britain's youngest admiral, already a hero of the war because of the battle of Helgoland, has turned her yacht Shelah into a hospital ship for the Admiralty.

Lady Paget, the daughter of the late Parar Stevens of New York, wife of Lieut.-Gen. Sir Arthur Paget, is the chairman of the American war relief fund, which has equipped as a hospital of 200 beds the country home of Paris Singer.

The Duchess of Croy, Nancy Leishman that was, is at the disposal of the Kaiserin to serve in any capacity which the Red Cross may direct. The Duke's castles and estates in Germany have been opened to receive the wounded soldiers.

Miss Anne Morgan, Miss Elizabeth Marbury and Miss Elsie de Wolf left Versailles after their villa was razed by order of the commandant of Paris, who needed the site for his artillery, and these ardent friends of France established a hospital and saw it in working order before they departed.

Mrs. James Hazen Hyde, formerly Miss Martha Leishman, and more recently the Countess Lewis Contaut-Biron, is working as hard in France for the soldiers of the republic as her sister, the Duchess of Croy, before her marriage Miss Nancy Leishman, is working for the Soldiers of the Kaiser in Germany.

Mrs. Lewis Harcourt—Miss Ethel Burns—the American wife of the British Cabinet Minister, is an indefatigable worker in Queen Mary's Needlework Guild, which is organized throughout the country and turning out tens of thousands of knitted socks and shirts and countless rolls of bandages for the soldiers.

Countess Johannes von Sierstorff (Miss Mary Knowlton of Brooklyn,) who is said to have spent $50,000 to entertain the Kaiser for one day's shooting three years ago at her husband's estate in Silesia, has placed the castle at the Kaiserin's disposal for the Red Cross, establishing herself a hospital in Berlin. Her husband and two sons are in the army.

THE BRIGHT SIDE OF SUNSHINE LAND.

A DEBUTANTE'S LETTER.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 31.

Coralie darling:—It was lovely to have your letter, with all the news. We, too, cherie, are preparing for a brilliant winter season. Society is rapidly opening up its premises for business with the loud cymbal, song and dance. Ostensibly to amuse ourselves in divers and strange ways, but actually to further the good ends of matrimony, to provide a merry and attractive setting for the mating season.

We are getting very clever at advertising—brought it to a fine art. But don't you think it is a little hard that the society chronicles should always harp so upon the genus feminine? Debutantes, jeunes filles, beauteous matrons et al. have all the publicity and those poor darling, neglected men never get a look in.

And really, you know, it would be so helpful to hear a little more about the eligible men, wouldn't it? As it is, they manage to pursue the hopelessly uneven tenor of their way in unostentatious seclusiveness. When, season after season finds them still detached, it is never made too obviously patent and no one remarks, "Dear me, poor Charlie. His fourth season, you know. We really must do something to get him settled!"

It isn't fair. Many of them are such personable creatures. If only their charms were sufficiently advertised, I am sure we could do something for them. The attention of maidens—and widows—should be delicately directed their way, some small mention might with decency be made of their many assets, social and financial.

Do you know, we have positively dozens of delightful bachelors down here, men who stand upon that sinister line that divides manhood from old fogeyism, men who are perilously near the stage when they are dubbed "stuffy old birds," "cranky old guys," or, at the best, "gay old dogs." It's such a shame. We must save them from such a fate at all costs.

Of course, I know bachelors are society's best asset. It would be quite horrid without them. But no special contingent ought to be allowed to sacrifice themselves in this unselfish cause, however. We ought to have them in relays regularly changed each season, don't you think so? Of course, bachelors are indispensable as a pleasant concomitant at dinner parties, dances, joy rides and all those other small divertissements that make the world habitable—it would be quite horrid if they were all married, but we ought to organize a system of change—best for them and best for us.

Now we have quite a hundred mature bachelors in this vicinity—polo bachelors, golf bachelors, bridge bachelors, and plain society bachelors. They all shine in at least one department of social activity. They generally dedicate their incomplete lives to some sort of sport with more or less success, or at the least they become adepts at handing tea, at social persiflage, as theater escorts, as sitters-out of dances, as timely handholders, as confidants of other people's love affairs, as dispensers of piquant gossip. Their manly breasts are ever at the service of any forlorn maiden who invariably regards them as "so safe."

But they have other charms which we should not overlook. Well set up gentlemen, for the most part, and comfortably provided with this world's goods, courageously cheerful in the face of neglect. They invariably wear their clothes nicely, use their table implements without undue anxiety, and, except under exceptional emotional strain, can be relied upon to comport themselves with a nice regard for social usage. Clean, well-groomed, more or less intelligent.

Of course, some of them drink too much, most of them smoke too much, many of them suffer from intermittently deranged digestions which have a wearying effect upon their complexions and tempers. But these are minor defects from which a number of husbands suffer, too. And the average bachelor has wide and far-reaching knowledge on the subject of pick-me-up ingredients, together with a sophisticated understanding of the value of the spruce tie, the correct collar and the barber.

Society ought to take hold of this problem. These matchless unattached ones should be given our bountiful consideration. When you come down we shall make a point of introducing you to James Long, for instance. He is the Country Club's most accomplished housewife, tall, slender, dazzling, auburn headed. Or E. H. Bagby, a golfer of repute and great conversational attainments; J. W. Wilkinson, 6 feet 4 inches, in his stockings, commanding presence; A. L. Schwarz, fondly known as Duffy, Y. L. Mott and Walter Van Pelt, social lights, these; Frank L. Miller, who wears his clothes so nicely and attains perfection in collars; W. R. Millar, known to his friends as "Dusty," almost a golfer, he; R. J. Cash, reckless and courageous in color combinations and ties; W. P. Reed, Robert Troescher, pronounced bachelors, both.

The original, permanent, established, undiluted bachelor, of course, is L. F. Vetter of the California Club; and Charles Seyler, he who swanks it as leading spirit in a club devoted to bachelors (embryo backsliders, however,) should no longer be allowed to languish. The Midwick has two prominent bachelors in the persons of Carleton Burke, ye handsome polo hero, and Norwood Howard, ye plumptical amateur baseball director, both of whom should be taken thoughtfully in hand by some skilfull society matron.

The San Gabriel Club has an appalling number of these forlorn, unattached ones—Jim and Edmund Parker, Jim reckless and sporting, Edmund reserved and lady-like; Robert Devereaux, willowy, soft-spoken, charming, rich uncle; R. A. Fowler, quiet, gentlemanly, collects golf clubs; besides those only in their third season or so, about whom it is early days to get anxious—Bill Bacon, Harry Cole, H. N. H. Woodcock, Frank Wade, et als.

Riverside simply teems with bachelors who will be faded flowers if they don't watch out—Frank D. Hudson, Martin Redmayne, Lt. Holden, polo men, these, and neck-deep in oranges; something ought to be done for them. A little thoughtful entertaining, you know—they only want bringing out. Redlands, too, has her pet bachelor in Ben Aymer—very gentlemanly, writes poetry.

And then there are the widowers—I will write to you about those next time. Widowers ought not to be casually laid aside. They ought to be given their social opportunities, pictures in the papers, society paragraphs and all that sort of thing. We women have been very selfish in our society advertising hitherto, we have monopolized all the space. Mature bachelors and widowers must see a kindly renaissance in their favor, their charms should certainly receive every public recognition.

Very well, then. Come down as soon as you can, Coralie, dear, and help in the good work. I am getting quite enthusiastic about it.

Lovingly yours, DOLLY.

THE WEEK.

PARTIES, RECEPTIONS, DINNERS, WEDDINGS AND THE LIKE.

OF THE many smart functions dedicated to the ghosts and hobgoblins of All Halloween, as notable as any was that given Friday night at the Beverly Hills by Mme. Gillette, Miss Lida Gillette and Mr. and Mrs. George Gillette.

The George Gillettes have given up their beautiful home in Santa Monica and are at the Beverly Hills for the winter season, this dinner-dance beginning a series of functions of a similar character with which they will entertain during the next few months. On Friday evening covers were laid for twenty on the round table before the fountain. The table decorations were in orange and yellow dwarf chrysanthemums and cosmos and the favors and placecards quaint conceits of witches and broomsticks. Black cats with golden eyes illumined Halloween novelties scattered over the table and no touch was spared to add to the general eerie effect.

Afternoon Party.

Mrs. E. M. Smith, No. 2943 Brighton avenue, entertained with an afternoon Halloween party, Tuesday. The beautiful home was aglow with yellow and black conceits, nature adding her charm with many yellow and white chrysanthemums. Mrs. T. A. Hellikson, Mrs. T. A. Stroble, Mrs. M. F. Monroe and Mrs. J. R. Miller secured prizes for fashioning the best black cat on orange-colored cloth. Delicious refreshments were served and those responding to invitations were Mrs. C. K. Myers, Mrs. M. S. Sidea, Mrs. A. L. Sweitzer, Mrs. C. B. Van Hoorbecken, Mrs. G. D. Weingarth, Mrs. J. R. Miller, Mrs. J. M. Black, Mrs. E. S. Marston, Mrs. J. A. Watt, Mrs. S. E. Olds, Mrs. J. E. Pugh, Mrs. H. Morgan, Mrs. W. D. Clark, Mrs. N. N. Brown, Mrs. A. J. Little, Mrs. W. A. Wood, Mrs. S. P. Will, Mrs. E. E. Bean, Mrs. H. A. Morris, Mrs. A. N. Pauff, Mrs. J. R. Moore, Mrs O. C. Pauff, Mrs. J. H. Bakeman, Mrs. M. F. Monroe, Mrs. F. H. Davies, Mrs. R. C. Loesch, Mrs. A. Dexter, Mrs. C. H. Denalde, Mrs. C. E. Couch, Mrs. A. L. Blumbing, Mrs. H. Burd, Mrs. M. T. Mancha, Mrs. J. S. McKelvey, Mrs. T. Strobel, Mrs. R. C. McAfee, Mrs. L. E. Shane, Mrs. M. Smith, Mrs. R. R. Hutchason, Mrs L. H. Loefler.

Last evening Mr. and Mrs. Smith entertained with a Five Hundred party to meet Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Ball., Jr., who were recently married. Those assisting were Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Salyer, Mrs. Hortense Barnhart Dorr, Mrs. Cora E. Couch and Earl Couch. Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Ferrell of Berkeley are the guests of their daughter, Mrs. Ball, and were also special guests of the evening. Before her marriage Mrs. Ball, it will be remembered, was Miss Eulalia Margaret Ferrell.

In Pasadena.

Black cats and witches and other Halloweeny things greeted the guests of Misses Vivian Hobson and Dorothy Thurston the other evening when they gave a delightful "goblin tango" party.

For the enjoyment of the dancers, the various rooms of the Hobson home, No. 723 East California street, were dressed up in yellow and black festoons, among which witches and black cats played hide and seek.

Especially attractive was the big veranda, which with its clever holiday arrangements, made a fitting setting for the weirdly-costumed and masked "tangoers."

A "goblin" supper, which was served at 11 o'clock, was followed by the "goblin tango." Guests en masque were Misses Kathryn Hubbard, Mary Hester Phillips, Emily Loomis, Barbara Loomis, Ellen Eason, Myra Goldberg, Irene Compton, Ruth Rowland, Hortense Fulton, Dorothy Tyson and Charlotte Winter, Messrs. John Neimeyer, John Waldo, Lowell McAdam, Castleman Smith, Howell Tyson, Wyllys Halsted, Charles Howe, Ardena Winter, William Fundenberg, Gardner Black, Rowe McKinley and Albert Butler.

Halloween Dancing Party.

Pumpkins, black cats, witches on broomsticks and lighted jack-o'-lanterns all lent their fulsome sway at the enjoyable dancing party presided over by Dr. and Mrs. James R. Cowan and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin R. Knox, at the home of the latter in the Owens apartments, Thursday evening. One hundred and fifty guests were included and artistic yellow programmes adorned with Halloween motifs, tied with black and yellow satin ribbons, were presented as favors. Delightful music was furnished by an orchestra and a delicious buffet supper was served.

Halloween Stunts.

A very merry party was given Dr. and Mrs. Elmer Pascoe, No. 300 Harvard boulevard, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Robinson, also of Harvard boulevard, last evening. Halloween stunts were enjoyed and quaint decorations appropriate to the occasion of black cats, pumpkins of gold and lighted jack-o'-lanterns, all added to the fun. A buffet supper was served to fifty guests and all sorts of games were indulged in.

Charming Dinner.

Three charming eastern visitors were honor guests recently at a prettily-arranged dinner party given by Mrs. Emma Connor of No. 329 South Marengo avenue, Pasadena. Halloween was observed in all the decorations. Covers were laid for the honorees, Mmes. Anna F. Boardman of Rochester, Cora Schell of St. Louis and Lillie H. Brown of Somerset, Pa. Others were Mrs. Anna Gray, Alex Gray and Mr. and Mrs. Connor.

Evening Party.

Dr. and Mrs. John C. Hopkins and Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Fisher entertained with a Halloween party at the home of the former, No. 107 South Coronado street, last evening. Their two little sons, John Burrows Hopkins and Wright Sargent Fisher, dressed as miniature ghosts with death heads, received the guests at the door. The home was aglow with autumn tints in foliage, cornstalks, big golden pumpkins and lighted jack-o'-lanterns. Games suggesting the day were enjoyed, and those included were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fox, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Sydney B. Webb, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. von Breton, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stavnow and Mr. and Mrs. Holtby Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dennis, Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Allan, Mr. and Mrs. Burton Weyl, Mr. and Mrs. Le Roy Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Hernando Wood, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Quillian, Miss Eugenia Chappell, Miss Roselyn Sargent and Edwin Whalen.

Children's Party.

The children of the Beth-El School for Girls, No. 3919 Marion Way, were entertained with a wonderful Halloween party Thursday evening, many enjoyable games being indulged in. The rooms were decorated with witches and ominous-looking black cats that peered forth from every corner. Little Frances Land gave a recitation followed by two readings by Mrs. Heimer. Twenty little guests were present.

Dinner and Theater Party.

A delightful host of the week was Charles Albert Shay, just prior to leaving for a trip to Salt Lake City. The affair honored Mrs. William Weaver, who has just returned from a six weeks' trip to Louisville, her former home. A delectable dinner was followed by a theater party at the Majestic. Others included were Mr. and Mrs. John Kinehan, Miss Florence Howard and William Weaver.

Two Halloween Affairs.

Mrs. Robert S. Hardy and Mrs. Jessie Cairns Shoebotton presided over two Halloween affairs at the home of the former, No. 339 South Wilton place, yesterday afternoon and evening. In the afternoon they entertained with a bridge tea, and assisting ladies included Mrs. Mary Stringfellow, Mrs. Grace Hudson, Mrs. Robert C. Gortner, Mrs. George C. Bush, Mrs. William H. Harrison, Mrs. Norman Foote Marsh, the sister of Mrs. Shoebottom, and Miss Lois Cook, the daughter of Mrs. Hardy. In the evening games of auction were also enjoyed, and assisting ladies were Mrs. Harry Brown, Mrs. Rose Quinan, Mrs. Norman Foote Marsh, Miss Edith Myers, and Miss Maude Hillerman.

The parties were pervaded with the Halloween atmosphere. Little Mary Louise Docker and Marion Elizabeth Marsh dressed in Halloween costumes greeted the guests at the door. A spacious porch illuminated with jack-o'-lanterns beamed welcome on each arrival. A novel feature were the driveway and garage, which had been converted into a witch's den with Halloween deckings of pumpkins, cats, witches, ghosts and bewitched broomsticks. Here a cafeteria luncheon was served, the viands appropriate to the occasion. The house was lovely with a wealth of golden tinted chrysanthemums. The rooms were darkened in order to flood them with electric lights fantastically shaded in Halloween lanterns.

Engagement Luncheon.

A charming affair of the week, which will prove of much interest to many, was the luncheon given yesterday by the Misses Frances and Anna St. John at their home, No. 1122 Elden avenue, at which the announcement of the engagement of the latter to Roe Mitchell Barrett was made, the wedding to take place January 1. The tale was told by little birds perched on the water glasses, holding in their beaks the gold-edged name cards, and on the reverse side the names of the young couple—and the wedding date, which came as a complete surprise, and created a most delightful ripple of pleasure and congratulations.

Candelabra of cut glass surmounted with yellow shades were placed on either side of a huge mound of feathery yellow chrysanthemums, topped with huge bows of yellow tulle. Favors were lace baskets filled with bonbons. Those invited to share the secret were Mrs. Noel Hinman, Mrs. John Percival, Mrs. John Layng, Mrs. Hawthorne Stevens, Mrs. M. L. Barrett, Mrs. Walter Dowie, Mrs. Karl Klitten, Miss Flora Cronemiller, Miss Lois Adland, Miss Marion Moses, Miss Grace DeLano, Miss Florence Cook and Miss Mildred Finch.

Miss St. John is a graduate of the State Normal and U. S.C. and a popular member of the Alpha Chi Omega of the latter institution. The groom-to-be is also a graduate of U.S.C. and a member of the Phi Nu Delta. He also attended U.S.C. law school and is a Phi Delta Phi. He is a practicing attorney of Santa Rosa and, to the regret of her many friends in this city, will take his bride there to live.

Invitations Issued.

Mrs. Robert C. Gortner, Mrs. Arthur Heimann and Mrs. Arthur Forbes, all of South Pasadena, have extended invitations for a large auction bridge luncheon to be given at the Woman's Club House in that city, Thursday afternoon.

Alegria Club.

A buffet luncheon was the pleasure provided by Mrs. Ira Sydney Chapman for members of the Alegria Club at her home, No. 857 West Fifty-sixth street, Tuesday. The home had been turned into a fall garden by the use of fluffy white and yellow chrysanthemums, and the score cards suggested the game of auction. Prizes were captured by Mmes. Goldsmith and Dick. A special guest of the afternoon was Mrs. E. L. Cyrenius and members present included Mrs. P. W. Bresee, Mrs. G. W. Saurret, Mrs. Eva Neubauer, Mrs. J. H. Goldsmith, Mrs. H. H. Henderson, Mrs. P. Johnson, Mrs. A. Weilheimer, Mrs. J. Baum, Mrs. Irving Smith, Mrs. Eugene Woody and Mrs. Ralph Deming.

Bride-elect Complimented.

Miss Virginia Nourse, who will become the bride of Louis Cass Wednesday evening, the ceremony taking place at St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral, has been the recipient of much attention this week, one of the largest, though very informal affairs, was the tea given Friday afternoon by Mrs. Alfred Wright at her home, No. 433 South Harvard boulevard, between the hours of 4 and 6, to which the girls and the younger matrons were included. Gorgeous yellow chrysanthemums and plumosus fern were effectively used in an elaborate decorative scheme except in the dining-room, where the table was dainty in the Dresden coloring. The hostess was assisted in receiving by her honor guest, while other unbonneted ladies were members of the bridal party, including Miss Katherine Banning, Miss Katherine Ayer, Miss Florence Brown, Miss Margaret Ericson and Miss Emily Cass.

Last evening Dr. and Mrs. Robert McReynolds, No. 20 Berkeley square, entertained with a dinner of twenty-two covers at the Midwick Country Club, honoring Miss Nourse and Mr. Cass. The appointments all suggested the coming marriage, as well as the Halloween motif. Hanging over the table was a large "honeymoon" of yellow crepe paper, in which a young couple were sitting. On a raised platform on the center of the large banquet table was the bridal procession—the figures made of peanuts, dressed in crepe paper clothing, leading to an altar, where the rector awaited them—the platform being outlined with asparagus plumosus. Favors were the large peanuts filled with bonbons, and places were marked by lighted pumpkins and candles. Covers were laid for the host and hostess, the honorees, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Philo Lindley, Mr. and Mrs. Standish Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Elton Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Robinson, Miss Katherine Banning, Miss Margaret Ericson, Miss Florence Brown, Miss Katherine Ayer, Frank Cass, Paul Nourse, Joe Banning, Weston Wislon and Garretson Dulin.

Thursday evening Miss Nourse and Mr. Cass were the complimented guests at a theater party at the Morosco, followed by a supper party at the home of the hostess, Miss Florence Brown, No. 355 South Normandie. The table was aglow with golden-tinted chrysanthemum and gold-monogramed cards marked covers for the bridal party only, including the hostess, Miss Nourse, Louis Cass, Miss Emily Cass, Miss Katherine Banning, Miss Katherine Ayer, Miss Florence Brown, Miss Margaret Ericson, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Wright, Donald and Quincy Cass, Mr. and Mrs. Standish Mitchell, Tom Workman and Paul Nourse.

Mrs. Manuel E. Ericson, No. 1675 West Twenty-fifth street, and her daughter, Miss Margaret, who will attend Miss Nourse as bridesmaid, will entertain the bridal party with a dinner at the Alexandria tomorrow evening, preceding the rehearsal at the church, for which covers will be laid for eighteen.

Sunday evening Mrs. Alonzo B. Cass, mother of the groom-to-be, and Mrs. R. N. Frick, aunt of the groom, will entertain informally with a tea at the summer home of Mrs. Frick at Redondo Beach. The bridal party only will be included to this affair.

At Home.

Mrs. Louisa Dreyfuss, No. 1738 West Twenty-fifth street, will receive friends today from 2 to 5 in honor of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Fannie, to Fred Fleishman of Tucson. The wedding will be solemnized at the home of the bride's mother Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock and will be a strictly family affair.

Married in this City.

Miss Gertrude Elizabeth Wallace, daughter of Mrs. Mary E. Wallace of San Bernardino, and Cary Peebles Taylor of Sacramento were married in this city Friday, the service taking place at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. W. Y. Elwin, of No. 946 Beacon street. The home was gorgeous with a color scheme of yellow and white, chrysanthemums being the favored flowers used. The bride, a member of the Delta Delta Delta Sorority, was attired in white satin made with tunic and square train. Her tulle veil was fastened with real orange blossoms and she carried bride roses and valley lilies. Miss Ora McDermott of this city assisted as maid of honor and was attired in the palest of blue charmeuse with gold spangled tunic and a sheaf of golden chrysanthemums. The bridal party marched through an aisle formed of asparagus chains held in place by sorority sisters of the bride. They were met at the altar by Rev. Dr. Ezra E. Healy. A Stanford classmate, Anthony Endes, stood with the groom, and Miss Leona Cook played the wedding marches. Following a dainty collation, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor went direct to Sacramento, where they will make their future home.

Tea Friday Afternoon.

Miss Frances Edwards, the bride-elect of Dr. C. L. McClish, and Miss Loretta Rouse, who is soon to wed Jack Vallely, were the inspiration of an afternoon tea given by Miss Marie Nichols Friday afternoon at her home on Menlo avenue, which was enjoyed by the younger set. The home was decorated with a profusion of gorgeous pink chrysanthemums and fernery to honor the occasion, excepting in the dining-room, where the fluffy yellow pompom chrysanthemums centered the tea table. Those assisting Miss Nichols were her mother, Mrs. F. H. Nichols; Mrs. Wyley J. Rouse, Mrs. F. H. Edwards, Mrs. James Woolacott, Mrs. William G. Shepard, Miss Fanny Thompson, Miss Viola Hamilton, Miss Blanche Davenport, Mrs. Geraldine Grady, Miss Beatrice Furnham, Miss Dora Rogers, Miss Katherine Torrance, Miss Irma Milligan, Miss Jeanette Mackie, Miss Winifred Howland and Miss Adeline Kellogg. One hundred and fifty guests were included and a delightful programme of music was presented during the reception hours by Mrs. J. M. Jones, a harpist.

Guests in this City.

Mrs. Minnie Seymour of Mill Valley, Mrs. Mabel Seymour of Sacramento and Dr. Haven of San Francisco are guests of Mrs. Robert D. Scriver of No. 743 Alvarado street.

Home from Northern Trip.

Mrs. W. H. Kelly, No. 941 Potter Park avenue, has returned from a delightful northern trip, where she visited Santa Cruz, San Francisco, Lassen county and Reno.

Enjoyable Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Harber entertained recently with a dinner at the Elks' Club, the table aglow with large yellow chrysanthemums. Covers were laid for the host and hostess, Mrs. Harriet Squires, Mrs. Minnie Silver, Mrs. Theodore Docker, Mrs. Nellie Meigs, Mrs. Katherine Love and Mrs. Jessie Cairns Shoebottom. Mr. and Mrs. Harbert, who formerly resided at No. 1400 Gramercy place, have taken apartments at the Weymouth for the winter, where they are at home to their many friends.

Return from Eastern Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Addison Bentley Jones of Harvard boulevard have returned from a delightful eastern trip.

Marshalltown Birthday Club.

Mrs. Alice J. Dering entertained members of the Marshalltown Birthday Club at her home, No. 1517 Van Ness avenue, Thursday, with a dinner party, when covers were laid for fifty. A social afternoon concluded this very pleasant affair.

Formal Announcement.

Mrs. J. Kaplan of Ocean Park formally announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Rose, to Harry Wexler of Livermore. Mrs. Kaplan and her daughter have just concluded a pleasant trip to San Francisco.

Miss Reehl Complimented.

Miss Helen Reehl, whose engagement was recently announced to Allan H. Wheeler, is the motif these days of many charming affairs. Tuesday afternoon Miss Gertrude Doran entertained with a Five Hundred at her home on Burlington avenue, honoring Miss Reehl. A color scheme of white and yellow was carried out suggesting the harvest time as well as Halloween. A basket of luscious fruits and vegetables centered the refreshment table, with jack-o'-lanterns illuminating it. Miss Zella Partridge captured the card prize and other guests included were Miss Gladys Martin, Miss Lucille Spencer, Miss Winifred Howland, the Misses Esther and Katherine Stevens, Miss Marie Nichols, Miss Randaline Shaw, Miss Phyllis Drewer and Miss Bernadette FitzGerald.

Friday afternoon the Misses Bessie and Alva Gardner and Miss Lili Wendling entertained with a tea at the home of the latter in the Fremont apartments, South Pasadena. The rooms were lovely with a wealth of golden-tinted chrysanthemums and an elaborate tray supper was served. Guests included Mrs. Walton Wood, Mrs. J. C. Bowden, Mrs. Frank Bush, Mrs. Homer Sharp, Miss Ann Mumford, Miss Muriel Fisher, Miss Gladys Martin and Miss Frances Bischoff.

Yesterday afternoon the pleasure provided for Miss Reehl was a tea at the Alexandria, which was dainty in the Dresden colorings, the fragrant violet and Cecile Bruner rosebuds being combined in a low mound for the tea table. Guests who will be members of the bridal party include Mrs. Margaret Reehl, Mrs. Allan Wheeler, the hostess, the honoree, Miss Gladys Martin; Miss Mary Wheeler and Miss Lois Duncan.

Guests in Los Angeles.

Miss Louise Eliza and Miss Marie Roberts, daughters of State Treasurer Roberts, who are to marry respectively Walker William Kamm and Philip Schuyler Kamm of Portland, O., are guests in this city at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stoddard Jess, No. 2133 Hobart boulevard. A number of pre-nuptial affairs are being given for them here, among which was a luncheon at the California Club yesterday by Miss Hortense Koepfli of the Hershey Arms; a dinner last evening by their host and hostess, and this afternoon a tea at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Bond Francisco. The double wedding will take place November 14, at the Mission Inn, Riverside, and is looked forward to with eager anticipation by the smart set of the two States.

Luncheon at Country Club.

A pink rose luncheon was the pleasure provided by Mrs. Alonzo B. Cass of South Pasadena, Tuesday afternoon at the San Gabriel Country Club, honoring Miss Frances Loftus, the charming bride-elect of Everett Ball. Rose cards marked covers for the hostess, the honoree, Mrs. H. B. Mills, Mrs. Carl Tufts, Miss Florence Metzner, Miss Agnes Maloney, Miss Alice Briggs, Miss Myrtle Waters and Miss Jocelyn Loftus.

Wednesday afternoon Miss Metzner and Miss Maloney entertained with a theater party for Miss Loftus, followed by tea at the Alexandria and Thursday afternoon Mrs. H. B. Mills entertained with a bridge party in her honor at her home on North Serrano street.

Miss Loftus, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Loftus, No. 2725 West First street, will be married Wednesday evening in St. John's Episcopal Church. Miss Jocelyn Loftus will attend as maid of honor, while Miss Florence Metzner, Miss Agnes Maloney of San Francisco, Miss Agnes Briggs of Hollywood and Miss Myrtle Waters will assist as bridesmaids. Ivan Ball will serve as best man and the ushers include

George-Childress Wedding.

A quiet afternoon wedding will take place at St. Stephen's Church, Hollywood, Saturday, uniting in marriage Miss Hazel Childress and Melvin F. George. No invitations have been issued, only relatives and a few close friends have been asked. Dr. George H. Cornell of Sierra Madre, who performed the marriage ceremony of Mr. George's parents, twenty-eight years ago, and Rev. J. Arthur Evans will officiate. Miss Lois Salisbury of Los Angeles will be maid of honor and little Katherine May Bueller will be the flower girl. Ben Utter will assist Mr. George as best man, while the ushers will be B. W. Riley, David Barmore and Arthur J. Gowan. Mrs. Graham F. Putnam, organist of St. Stephen's will have charge of the music. Mr. George and his bride will leave at once following the wedding for the north, witnessing the big Berkeley-Stanford game and touring many places of interest and charm in California. They expect to return in three weeks and will visit Mrs. Charles J. George's mother at No. 1772 Ivar avenue, until after the Christmas holidays when they will move into their own home.

Miss Childress, who is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Childress of No. 1819 West Adams street, is popular in Los Angeles society circles and will be a great addition to the social life of Hollywood.

At Home.

Mr. and Mrs. James P. Burns have closed their summer residence near Playa del Rey and are again at their home, No. 3538 Wilshire boulevard.

Miss Wells Honored.

Complimenting Miss Katherine Wells and her betrothed, Dr. James Luther Flint, many smart parties have been given recently. Wednesday even five hundred was the fun provided by Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Robertson of Stocker street, Casa Verdugo. The home was a bower of pink and white chrysanthemums and foliage in honor of the guests, who included Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. John Legge, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dale, Mr. and Mrs. Beamon, Miss Harriett Wells and M. Salzman.

Miss Myrtle Pulliman also entertained for Miss Wells and Dr. Flint, who have chosen November 4 for their wedding. This affair took place at the hostesses home, No. 148 Kenwood avenue, Glendale, and the pleasure was a Halloween party. The home was decorated suggestive of the season and the hospitality was shared by Miss Emily Ellias, Miss Katherine Lewis, Miss Harriett Wells, Mr. and Mrs. John Legge, Miss Loraine Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Wheeler, Miss Annie McIntyre, Miss Lucy Klingersmith, Miss Mattie Bell Provolt, Miss Clara Provolt, Oliver Kees, Mr. Nash, Shives Mitchell, E. Poly, Mr. Munson, Mr. Salzman, Allan Rhodes, William Shaver and Harry Braden.

Thursday evening Mrs. A. M. Beamon was hostess for the young people and Friday afternoon Miss Elizabeth Woodward of Elden avenue, this city, had a few friends to meet Miss Wells, while yesterday the Misses Provolt did the honors.

Opening Ball and Card Party.

The opening ball and card party of the Wilshire Emergency Club will take place Friday evening November 6, at Goldberg-Bosley Assembly-rooms. Mrs. Ira Sydney Chapman is chairman of the affair and she will be assisted by Mrs. Eva Neubauer. The entrance hall will look stately with palm and bay trees, while clusters of roses and chrysanthemums will enliven the reception-room. In the ballroom, side baskets of blossoms and smilax and potted palms will be utilized. Miss Wilhelmina Rector, Miss Kathleen Lockhart, Miss Willie McClelland, Miss Valmere Schmidt, Miss Gertrude Bresee, Miss Edith Holder, Miss Lucille Fanning, Miss Ethel Ridley, Miss Ruth Schellenbach, Miss Ruth Holder, Miss Elsa Fanning, Miss Josephine Neil, Miss Martha Durand, Miss Florence Porter, Miss Gladys Smith, Miss Florence Howard and Miss Ethel Newel, will circulate among the guests presenting souvenir programmes from baskets garnished with ribbons of varied hues. Among the assisting ladies will be Mrs. G. W. Saurret, Mrs. Harry H. Rose, Mrs. M. W. Everhardy, Mrs. L. L. Vogel, Mrs. Frank B. Harbert, Mrs. Leo V. Youngworth, Mrs. William Cline, Mrs. Frank Sherwood Wise, Mrs. Edwin J. Brent and Mrs. C. R. Luton.

Enjoyable Affair.

The home of Miss Alda Miller, No. 1033 Hubbard street, was the scene of an enjoyable Halloween party last evening when she entertained a number of her friends. The house was beautifully decorated in yellow and black. The evening was pleasantly passed with games and refreshments. Those invited were the Misses Lucille and Louise Holland, Viola Fossler, Margret Jorgason, Maud Owens, Ethel Scott and Nellie Brierly, and Messrs. Harold Woolsey, Lester Wallace, Frank Egger, Vincent Brown, Ray Rogers, Vernon Farquar, John Roberts and Beauregard Lee.

Married in Chicago.

Mrs. Elizabeth Naylor Brier of Highland Park announces the marriage of her grand-daughter, Miss Elizabeth Stratton, to Douglas Mudge Kinney, the affair taking place yesterday in Chicago. They will make their home in Dayton, O. Both were formerly students at Occidental College.

Out of Town Society.

South Pasadena.

THE largest affair of the fall season took place at the Woman's Clubhouse Tuesday afternoon—a bridge tea and thimble party—hostesses being Mrs. George C. Bush, No. 1511 El Centro street, and Mrs. Norman Foote Marsh, No. 911 Fair Oaks avenue. It was a brilliant function, pervaded with the Halloween atmosphere in the accessories and decorations, combined with a wealth of gorgeous, vari-colored chrysanthemums. Mrs. Bush and Mrs. Marsh received their guests in the reception room and other unbonneted ladies included Mrs. Otis Byers Manchester, Mrs. T. W. Bishop, Mrs. G. Maurice Crow, Mrs. B. F. Huntington, Mrs. Robert Hardy, Mrs. Jessie Cairns Shoebottom, Mrs. W. D. Newerf and Mrs. Hartley Packer. A contest was enjoyed by those engaged in needlework, the prize falling to Mrs. Werden, and card prize winners were Mmes. Bingham, Thomas and Knight. Delicious refreshments were served and those enjoying the hospitality of the afternoon included Mmes. George W. Adams, W. F. Axtman, Ralph Avery, T. W. Bishop, L. A. Barker, E. E. Barden, J. S. Mrs. Fred C. Delano of Monterey road, who has been on an extended eastern trip, will arrive home today.

A dancing party, honoring her house guest, Miss Margaret Snowden of Los Angeles, was the pleasure provided last evening by Miss Gladys Newerf at her home on Monterey road. The rooms were enlivened by the fluffy chrysanthemums of varied hues, and in the pergola where punch was served Japanese lanterns were used for lighting. Supper was served at the conclusion of dancing. Those asked to meet the honoree were the Misses Ida Burns, Florence Kohler, Tillie Bauer, Winifred Montgomery, Irene and Ruth Salisbury, Louise McDonald, Adelaide Dow, Lucille Counsil, Dorothy Thompson, Orilla Daggett, Marguerite and Elwyn Perry, Isabella Richard, Kathryn Leonard, Ruth Goddell, Marymae Cattern and Messrs. Complimenting Miss Bertha Bosbyshell, who has just returned from an extended European trip, Mrs. Camille J. Balfour has issued invitations for an auction bridge luncheon, to be given at her home, No. 1963 Marengo avenue, the afternoon of Tuesday, November 3.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Klein opened their beautiful new home, No. 2011 Fletcher avenue, when they entertained the members of the Neighborhood Whist Club. Every room in the house was aglow with Halloween deckings of jack o'lanterns, velvety dahlias and fluffy chrysanthemums. Members present were Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Carlin, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Woods, Mr. and Mrs. William Bakewell and Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur J. Filley, No. 142 Waye avenue, are enjoying an automobile trip to San Diego, via Elsinore.

Alhambra.

THE home of Dr. and Mrs. Charles B. Alexander was the scene of a charming party Thursday afternoon, when Mrs. Alexander acted as hostess to a West End social club of which she is a member. The pleasant home had been attractively decorated with flowers and greens, and a delightful time was enjoyed by the guests present, of whom there were about twenty. Several musical selections added to the pleasure of the event, and refreshments were charmingly served by the little daughter of the hostess, assisted by a number of her friends.

Most original and delightful was the party given by the members of Die Schwalbe Club at their clubhouse Saturday evening. The affair was in recognition of Halloween, and many novel arrangements in the beautiful decorations greeted the guests on their arrival. Splendid music was furnished for dancing, which was the amusement of the occasion, after which delicious refreshments were served the enthusiastic merry makers, whose parties are popular events.

Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Powell, who were former residents of this city, have returned to their present home in the Lucerne Valley after a delightful visit with friends and relatives in this vicinity. They were accompanied by their sons, George and Thornton.

Miss Elizabeth Noon and Miss Mary Dennett are guests of Miss Bessie Smith. During their visit, which will be of several months' duration, Miss Smith's guests, who are from New York City, will be extensively entertained.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Richardson of North Hidalgo avenue entertained with a most attractive supper party recently, the occasion being the tenth anniversary of their wedding. Decorations were carried out in a charming scheme of white and yellow, chrysanthemums being lavishly used throughout the house. At the conclusion of an elaborate course supper, cards were enjoyed the remainder of the evening. The pleasant event was enjoyed by Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Graves of Venice, Mr. and Mrs. Ora King, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Quimby of Highland Park, Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Graves.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Glen E. Zinse are regretting their departure for San Francisco, whither they have gone, planning to make their permanent home.

Mrs. Harry C. Graves entertained Saturday afternoon in compliment to Miss Frieda Chandler, who is one of the most feted of the fall brides-elect. Covers were laid for an elaborately-decorated table, and a delectable six-course luncheon enjoyed. Miss Chandler is active in the O.E.S., and as a gracious compliment to her a floral star in the emblematic colors of the order formed a beautiful centerpiece, the points reaching the edge of the table, and at each point the guests were seated, the place cards being exquisite gilt-edge affairs, containing the fortunes of the company. The original verses containing the destinies of the young people were the signal for much hilarity as the luncheon progressed. Favors were tiny hand-painted stars, mounted on nut cups, the original idea of the hostess. Those enjoying Mrs. Graves's hospitality included Miss Florence McDonald, Miss Amy Perkins, Miss May Hatch and Miss Frieda Chandler. Miss Chandler is one of the most popular of the young social set, and many charming affairs are planned for her, previous to her wedding, which will be an early fall event.

Mrs. A. D. Ogg of Monrovia was the week-end guest recently of Miss Ada Parrish at her attractive home on South Cordova street.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Knox left recently for San Francisco, where they plan to remain a week or two before their return, by way of the San Joaquin Valley.

Word has been received by Miss Irma Dean of South Marguerita street, of the wedding in Rochester, N. Y., of Miss Ida Murray, formerly a resident here, to Glen B. Brown, a young attorney of that city. Miss Dean was extensively entertained by her many friends here before her departure, but laughingly declared she was not obeying Cupid's mandates in leaving California.

A wedding of interest to Alhambrans occurred in Santa Barbara last week, when Mrs. M. E. Johnson was married to Mr. S. L. Gardner. Mr. Gardner is one of the prominent business men of the city, and with his bride returned to Alhambra Monday. Congratulations have been pouring in upon the happy pair, who plan to make their permanent residence here.

Mrs. Iva Drake of Canton, Ill., who has been spending the summer and fall in Alhambra and vicinity, has returned from a delightful visit of several weeks' duration spent in San Diego and La Jolla.

The members of the Byde a Wyle Social Club had a charming party recently, when they gathered at the home of Mrs. J. F. Smith to spend the afternoon in conversation and dainty bits of needle craft. The home had been prettily embellished for the occasion and much merriment was the result of a clever guessing contest provided for the entertainment of the guests.

Monrovia.

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH FOWLER and Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Sarwine entertained a number of Monrovia and Duarte friends Thursday evening at Oakleigh, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sarwine, with an auction bridge party. The rooms were decorated with autumn flowers and chrysanthemums. Supper was served late in the evening.

The S.H.R. Club was entertained by Miss Florence Kelly at the home of Mrs. W. F. Bovee on South Magnolia avenue, on Thursday evening. Autumn flowers were the decorations used, and were very beautiful. The guests were occupied with needlework during the evening, after which delicious refreshments were served. The guests were Mrs. William Hilts, Miss Nettie Miller, Miss Rita Shobe, Miss Bessie Thayer, Miss Alice Loops, Mrs. W. F. Bovee. Mrs. J. Q. Thayer was a guest of the club.

Mrs. H. R. Miller and Mrs. E. B. Rivers, assisted by the members of the Foothill Auction Bridge Club, entertained about eighty guests with a musicale at Los Rios Gardens Thursday. Chrysanthemums were used in masses in decorating the Japanese pavilion, where Mrs. Rivers and Mrs. Miller met their guests. Miss Aileen Northrup gave several selections on the piano and violin. Miss Freda Peyke of Los Angeles sang several songs, eight of them being her own composition. Most of her selections were children's songs. Miss Peyke, being a great lover of children, rendered these especially well. Tea was served in the gardens.

Mrs. William Beardsley entertained the Auction Bridge Club at her home on Thursday afternoon. Pink roses were used for decorations and the same color scheme was carried out in the dainty refreshments. Mr. William Young and Miss Irene Young of Denver, who are house guests of Mrs. Beardsley, were guests of honor.

Mrs. E. S. Hulme entertained the Buena Vista Whist Club at her home Thursday evening. The rooms were gay with flowers and ferns. After an evening of cards, delicious refreshments were served.

Nairn Rivers was host to a number of friends at an informal dancing party Friday evening in compliment to his house guest, Mr. George Babit, of Flagstaff, Ariz. Dancing was enjoyed in the pavilion in the garden and later in the evening refreshments were served at the house. The guests were Miss Dorothy Brown, Miss Mildred and Rebecca Thomas and their house guests, Miss Marie Wishard of Los Angeles; Miss Frances Rothwell, Miss Dorothy Stone, Miss Maybelle Wessling, Earl Kernsten, Arney Brewer, Harry Morse, Ben Badgley, Arden Knox and Glen Butler.

Dr. and Mrs. M. C. Davies gave a very charming dinner party at their home on East White Oak avenue Friday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Scarborough of Los Angeles. The house was beautifully decorated in autumn flowers and chrysanthemums. Other guests included Miss Ruth Scarborough, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Hazen, Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Hawes, Dr. F. M. Pottenger, Miss Aileen Northup and Mr. Robert Scarborough of Banning.

Mrs. J. R. Rogers was hostess Monday afternoon to the We Are Twelve Club at her home on East White Oak avenue. Cosmos were used as decorations in the living-room, and dainty refreshments were served at the close of the game. The members present were Mrs. A. Castillo, Mrs. M. E. Conable, Mrs. L. S. Roberts, Mrs. Walter L. Hodges, Mrs. F. E. Shafer, Mrs. A. G. Wessling, Mrs. Augustus Pratt, Mrs. Smelyn Graves, Mrs. A. D'Arcy of Los Angeles, Mrs. Oscar Benson, also of Los Angeles. Mrs. Benedict Schupp was the guest of the club.

In compliment to Mrs. L. V. Schluraff, who is soon to return to her home in Erie, Pa., after several weeks' visit here, Mrs. Benedict Schupp entertained at her home on Wild Rose avenue with an auction bridge party this afternoon. The living and dining-rooms were beautifully decorated with masses of cosmos, and tea was served at the close of the game. List of guests included Mrs. M. L. Stone, the mother of the guest of honor; her sister, Miss Dorothy Stone, Mrs. B. J. Darnielle and her mother, Mrs. Frank O. Eager, Mrs. Jonathan L. Pomeroy, Mrs. George Bookout, Mrs. L. S. Roberts, Mrs. W. L. Hodges, Mrs. J. R. Rogers, Mrs. Kenneth Carter and Mrs. C. B. Johnson of Bakersfield.

San Gabriel.

A MERRY party enjoyed cards and dancing until a late hour Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Clewett, whose hospitable portals are opened for many delightful affairs. After dancing, delectable refreshments were provided the guests, among whom were: Mr. and Mrs. George Dake, Miss Sadie Ramlin, Miss Dorothy Robins, Dr. and Mrs. H. Hamlin, Miss Pauline Powers and Mrs. H. Hosford and Messrs. Theodore Robins, Douglas Coughran, Neal Neely and Charles Coughran.

Mrs. Earl Wakeman entertained pleasantly at her home on Broadway with a musicale and dinner Friday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. George Voege of Los Angeles. The affair was charmingly arranged and a delightful social time enjoyed by the guests, who included: Dr. and Mrs. Charles McGee, Mrs. Oetiker and I. Yeisley.

One of the most important of recent social events was the formal dinner party given for twelve by Mrs. Alexander Thornton, as a compliment to Miss Genevieve Lawton, whose marriage will be an event to occur in the near future. Exquisite decorations in white prevailed throughout the rooms, and the charm of the occasion will remain a pleasant memory to the fortunate guests.

Most attractive in its floral decorations of cut flowers and greens was the home of Mrs. C. H. Birchfield recently, when Mrs. Birchfield was hostess at a delightfully-appointed luncheon. The guests enjoying the gracious hospitality of the hostess were: Mrs. Phelps Reed of Alhambra, Mrs. Maurice Low of Los Angeles and Mrs. Frederick Cruice, of Prescott, Ariz.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Riedel was the scene of a unique party at which twenty-four friends were entertained recently. Daylight was excluded from the rooms and Jack o' lanterns furnished a glow by which a delicious luncheon was enjoyed. A witch leaning over a seething caldron formed a centerpiece, while autumn flowers were extensively used to embellish the dining-room. Attractive souvenirs and prizes emblematic of Halloween were received by the guests at the original affair, who included: Mrs. Thomas Brown, Mrs. L. S. Cottle, Mrs. William Brown, Mrs. H. E. Church, Mrs. William Eckhardt, Mrs. A. J. Epling, Mrs. George Eno, Mrs. C. C. Noble, Mrs. Kearney Wilcox, Mrs. William Wagner and Mrs. William Weller, all members of the Brownie Club of Los Angeles. Other guests were: Miss Minnie Wood, Miss Susie Townsend, Mrs. Albert Haneman, Mrs. C. A. Holden, Mrs. E. S. Morrow, Mrs. W. B. Watts of Nome, Alaska; Mrs. Frank M. Fowler, Mrs. R. M. Taylor, Mrs. E. L. Townsend, Mrs. William Planck, Mrs. Chester McGee and Mrs. William Weaver.

Glendale.

IN ADDITION to being the honored guest at a beautiful party given Friday evening by Miss Lillian Mills at her home, No. 422 South Louise street, Miss Katherine Wells, one of Glendale's near-brides, also found herself the victim of a linen shower, which added many beautiful pieces to the preparatory chest. Card tables were arranged in the living and dining-rooms, wherein gorgeous chrysanthemums nodded their shaggy heads from attractive encasements. Five Hundred, tallies for which were dainty cupid conceits in yellow and pink, filled the early hours with pleasure and was followed by a delicious collation and the awarding of prizes to the honored guest, Dr. M. Louise Davis and Miss Charlotte Read.

Besides Mrs. C. Irving Mills and Mrs. Richard H. Wells, mothers of the hostess and the charming honoree; Mrs. A. M. Beamon, Mrs. Joseph L. Stagner, Mrs. H. H. Faries, Dr. M. Louise Davis and Miss Christine Shenk, guests bidden to this delightful affair were the St. Margaret, including Mrs. Arline Hallihan, Mrs. Charles U. Wells, and the Misses Mattie Belle Provolt, Olga Purt, Eva Black, Clara Provolt, Irene Read, Elizabeth Lange, Harriet M. Wells, Ethel Read, Bessie Provolt, Athena Purt, Clara Read, Gertrude Champlain, Cecelia Wilson, Ethel Land, Charlotte Read, Maysie McCann, Edith Foss, Pauline Sholz, Elizabeth Russell, Amy Bowerfield and Dorothy Smith. Assisting the charming hostess during the evening were Miss Harriet M. Wells and Miss Elizabeth Lange.

Monday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Sprinkle on East Fifth street occurred the marriage of their son, Clarence L. Sprinkle, and Miss Lois M. Bennett, daughter of G. M. Bennett of Eagle Rock. Only the immediate relatives were present to witness the pretty ceremony, performed by Rev. C. R. Norton. Mr. and Mrs. Sprinkle departed for their future home near Barstow, where the groom has provided an attractive ranch home.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Loveless and daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Beveridge, and children returned Saturday from a delightful visit among former friends in Illinois.

Complete was the pretty little dinner party with which Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Hall of No. 245 Louise street entertained on Saturday evening. Red chrysanthemums appeared throughout the home except in the dining-room. Here yellow and old-gold blossoms were used in profusion, a low piece adorning the table center. Besides the host and hostess covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Everett W. Peckham, Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Peckham, Miss Phyllis Peckham and Mr. Ralph Peckham. Cards were enjoyed during the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan W. Fairchild of No. 1321 Arden avenue entertained Thursday evening with a dinner party. Spicy pink carnations and ferns were used to grace the center of the table. Guests bidden to accept the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Fairchild were Miss Jane Wolfe, Mr. William Brunton, Mr. Ralph Newcomb and Mr. C. C. Bancroft.

Monday Mrs. C. H. Woolsey of No. 1629 Riverdale drive opened her attractive home to the members of the Monday Auction Bridge Luncheon Club. For the occasion huge feathery chrysanthemums and Halloween suggestions were used throughout. At high noon a course luncheon was served at the small tables, afterward being cleared for cards. Club members attending were Mmes. O. E. Clements, Clarence M. Good, Herman Paine, D. H. Hewes, C. O. Pulliam, W. M. Kimball, D. M. Smith, J. H. Smith, Charles E. Shattuck, Frank McKenney and Roy Hirchcliffe. Mrs. Clements scored highest during the afternoon and a handsome prize was awarded her. The club members have decided to play another series, and Mrs. Clements will be hostess for the meeting in November.

Mrs. R. A. Hoagland proved herself a charming hostess Wednesday afternoon, when she entertained as guests in her home members of the Wednesday Afternoon Thimble Club. After the usual hour or two of industrious work, delicious dainties were served.

A very merry dinner party was enjoyed Wednesday evening in the home of Mrs. M. Scott, No. 315 North Glendale avene, Tropico, when, in celebration of the birthday anniversary of her son, Mr. James P. Scott, a number of young people arrived upon the scene to make merry. Chrysanthemums were used exclusively throughout, a pretty yellow and white motif having been adopted for table decorations, at which a delicious course dinner was served. Dancing followed, out-of-town guests for the evening having been the Misses Pykie, Powell, St. John and Mr. L. Pykie of Los Angeles and Pasadena.

Mrs. D. W. Hunt and Mrs. Helen I. Campbell were hostesses Thursday evening at a card party in the home of Mrs. Hunt on West Fifth street. Everything for this delightful affair, which was given for St. Mark's choir, was suggestive of Halloween, and a happy time was thoroughly enjoyed.

Tropico.

SINCE the announcement of her approaching marriage to Roy Landis, of Los Angeles, Miss Jewel Foster, of that city, has been the recipient of many social attentions, but none that was more delightful than the china shower with which Miss Clara Jenkins and Miss Alice Patterson entertained in the home of Miss Patterson on Brand boulevard, Friday evening. Mr. Landis and Miss Foster were the dinner guests of Miss Jenkins Friday evening and later were invited to call upon Miss Patterson. Upon arriving at the home of Miss Patterson, Mr. Landis and Miss Foster were ushered into a room where fifteen couples and merrymakers were anxiously awaiting the arrival of the charming bride-to-be and her fiance. Miss Patterson's home was beautifully decorated in red hearts and also Keupie dolls which were suspended from electroliers, while jardineres and tall vases supported great feathery chrysanthemums that seemed to nod a cordial welcome with their shaggy heads. The verandas and lawn were prettily festooned with Japanese lanterns. One corner of the veranda was transformed into a charming cozy corner. Following the surprise of Mr. Landis and Miss Foster, they were escorted into the dining room where a generous array of the daintiest china, cut glass and silver greeted them and then they fully realized that they were the victims of a pre-nuptial shower. Later dancing was enjoyed, the programmes being heart-shaped. Guests whom Miss Patterson and Miss Jenkins entertained complimentary to Mr. Landis and Miss Foster were Miss Gladys Justema, Miss Annette Foster, Miss Mabel Bailey, Miss Ruth Wilson, Miss Lyon, Miss Viola Seccombe, Miss Alpha Prindle and Miss Carol Willisford; Messrs. Merrill Burke, John Dew, Ernest Brown, Arthur Byman, Holman Medcalf, Lee Jenkins, George Lyons, Paul Brown, Ray Kneath and Harry Glazier.

Miss Anna Anderson and her sister, Miss Elsie Anderson, entertained the Young People's Society of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of this city in their home on Virginia place, Tuesday evening. The Halloween celebration afforded a motif for the elaborate decorations, which were quite unique.

Mrs. Jennie Ritchie arrived from Denver, Colo., the latter part of the week and will spend several months as the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. J. Phillips.

Mr. and Mrs. K. E. Hollingsworth are entertaining as their house guest, Mrs. Burt Rosser of Des Moines, Iowa.

Officers and members of N. P. Banks Camp, Sons of Veterans, accompanied by their wives, motored to Pasadena Tuesday evening and there attended Phil Kearney Camp, Sons of Veterans. Those attending included Camp Commander J. G. Griffin, Delos Jones, R. M. McKee, Dr. O. P. Lucas, Comrades Thomas Gillet, Robert Taylor, Maj. J. P. Weiler, Mr. and Mrs. Burt Burlington, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Meyers, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Danner and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bruck.

Eagle Rock.

MEMBERS of the Eastern Star gave a very delightful party Monday evening to the Blue Lodge in the Masonic Hall. Ghosts, pumpkins and Halloween decorations were used. The evening was spent in dancing and playing cards. Mrs. Schrinker won the first ladies' prize, L. O. Hatch the gentlemen's and Mr. Norris the consolation prize. Refreshments were served in the banquet room. About eighty were present and enjoyed the evening.

Masters Wayne and Robert Kingdon celebrated their birthdays on Wednesday afternoon at their home on Fairmount avenue. The Halloween decorations were used. Two fine birthday cakes, one bearing seven candles, the other four candles, were of great importance at this party. The little guests were: Jack and Richard Blumer, Miriam and Marguerite Kleine and Miriam Kingdon.

Mrs. F. A. Miller and little daughter, Elsa May, were guests of little Frances Engram at her birthday party in Los Angeles on Friday afternoon.

Mrs. F. A. Miller of West Sycamore avenue will have as her luncheon guest Wednesday, Mrs. Harriett Myers of Highland Park, who is to address the Parent-Teacher Association on that afternoon.

Mrs. James Fer-Don of Oak Grove drive gave a farewell dinner Sunday in honor of Mrs. G. Kinsley, who is returning to her home at Detroit, Mich. The table was decorated with carnations and maidenhair ferns. Covers were laid for fourteen. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Palen, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Fer-Don, Dr. and Mrs. E. Raymond, Mr. and Mrs. C. Walter, Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Carr, Mrs. Myra Jennings, L. Bigelow, Mrs. F. Bigelow, Miss M. Sweeney, Mrs. S. R. Eagan and Mrs. G. B. Walton.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Palen entertained at their home on Linden way with an old-time German dinner on Saturday. Plates were laid for ten guests. The table was decorated with yellow chrysanthemums and smilax. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Fer-Don, Miss Rhea Fer-Don, Mrs. S. Eagan, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Eagan, Mr. and Mrs. Kleingenstein and Mr. Sartori. A most enjoyable evening was spent playing Five Hundred.

Azusa.

MISS HELEN SMITH was hostess at a charming juvenile party at the home of her parents Friday evening, when a merry coterie of young people were invited to surprise her brother, Vincent, whose birthday it was. Attractively decorated for the occasion with cut flowers and greens the house resounded with the merriment of the young people. At a late hour refreshments were served amid charming appointments to the guests who included Miss Pauline Franklin, Miss Dorothy Davis, Miss Ada Ellis, Miss Hazel Monia, Miss Helen Raney, Miss Ruth Wright, Miss Hulda Hendrick and Messrs. Emerson Taylor, Vincent Smith, Dwight Peirce, William Warren, Walter Stewart and Vivien Quick.

Miss Lillian Krebs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Krebs, left Wednesday for Anaheim, where she will be entertained as the guest of relatives and friends.

Very charming in detail and appointment was the banquet tendered by the Rebekahs Tuesday evening when the honored guest of the occasion was District Deputy Mrs. Irene Steinman of Pasadena. The speeches of the evening were notably clever and the delectable menu thoroughly enjoyed by the guests of the occasion many of whom were from Pasadena and nearby cities.

Miss Muriel Atkinson is entertaining with a most elaborate week-end party at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence W. Atkinson. The delightful affair was planned in honor of her sixteenth birthday which occurred yesterday, and the fortunate guests include Miss Helen Raney, Miss Dorothy Davis, Miss Ada Ellis, Miss Phoebe Davis, Miss Ruth Ellis, Miss Ruth Ellington, Miss Jessie Poston, Miss Louise Powell and Miss Mary Powell.

Mrs. Ralph N. Burt was hostess at an elaborate dinner party Sunday afternoon, when her guests included Miss May Norton of Batavia, N. Y., Mrs. Ida Wilcox of Broadville, Ill., and Mrs. O. M. Burt of Glendora. Mrs. Wilcox and Miss Norton are spending the winter in Southern California and many pleasant affairs have been planned for them during their visit.

Casa Verdugo.

MR. AND MRS. ANDREW ROBERTSON of No. 925 Stocker street entertained most delightfully on Wednesday evening at their home in honor of Miss Katherine Wells and her fiance, Dr. James Fli of Glendale.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Abell, North Maryland avenue, were the guests of Los Angeles friends at Alamitos Bay for the week end.

Mrs. Sarah Vandecar of North Central avenue, who has recently come from Troy, N. Y., to make her home in Casa Verdugo, entertained informally on Tuesday afternoon at her charming bungalow. The guests were Mrs. E. E. Harrington, Mrs. F. B. Land and Mrs. J. W. Lunbris, sisters of Mrs. Vandecar.

Mr. Harry Browne has returned from Oxnard where he has been for the past year and will now engage in business in Los Angeles.

Miss Ethel B. Land was the guest of Miss Elizabeth Lange of Dryden street Tuesday.

Col. Lankershim of Los Angeles entertained a party of guests with a Spanish dinner at La Ramada on Tuesday evening.

Dr. J. E. Eckles has just welcomed to his home his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Eckles, and their daughter, Miss Myrena, of Polk, Neb., who will spend the winter as the guests of Dr. Eckles.

Gardena.

ONE of the most delightful social affairs of the past week in Gardena was the annual reception of the Woman's Progressive Club "reciprocity day," tendered Wednesday afternoon at the clubroom. More than one hundred women of Gardena and vicinity were present; the room was beautifully decorated in fall leaves and ferns. A very appetizing luncheon was served, after which an interesting programme was given.

Mrs. H. S. Trotter of Van visited in Gardena with the members Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Richwine and family left Thursday for several days' outing at Long Beach.

Mrs. J. M. Edinston is visiting her two daughters at Sawtelle this week.

Mrs. Norman Kid and son, Fra of Ocean Park, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Boles Friday.

Mrs. Ada Sargent of Los Angeles was the house guest of her sister Mrs. Homrighausen, this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Haustine and family left Friday for Huntington, In where they expect to pass th months.

Mrs. J. E. Williams of Edmunst Can., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Struthers and their little daughter Elizabeth, whom Mrs. Struthers has so fondly cared for since but 5 months old.

Mmes. Adam Reed, Crow Carpenter, Smith, Cable, Cates, and Misses Gooding, Oderlin and Bale of Long Beach were visitors in Gardena at the club on reciprocity day.

The home of Miss Florence Wilson and Miss Aetna Wilson, in Strawberry Park, was the scene Thursday of a jolly gathering, when twenty-two of the young folks enjoyed a surprise given in honor of Miss Wilson and Mr. Richardson, who recently arrived from Iowa.

At a tea party given recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G ram, the engagement of their daughter, Miss Vollet, to Mr. Mack K was announced. Twenty guests were present.

Mrs. Carrie Stone Freeman addressed the club on music Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Reid entertained relatives and friends from Long Beach Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Homrighausen and Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Burke were dinner guests of Mrs. H. J. Ni son in Los Angeles recently.

Whittier.

CHIEF among the interesting social events of the week was the wedding of Miss Cassandra Ha of this city and Mr. Guy Buckmaster of Lindsay, Cal., at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Hannah Hazzard, Wednesday, at high noon, a company of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties witnessing the beautiful ceremony, which was performed by Rev. G. W. Coultas of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The decoration scheme was great chrysanthemums and slender strands of smilax. The bridal party entered the wedding room through an aisle of smilax, held by four dainty nieces of the bride—the little Misses Wheatland, Katherine Bennink, line and Louise Hazzard. Mr. Marshall Hazzard, brother of the bride, sang Schumann's "Dedication." Mrs. Earl Hazzard of Pl played Jensen's "Bridal Song." The bride is well known here, having lived here from childhood, and is most popular in social circles. The groom was formerly of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Buckmaster will reside in Lindsay after a brief wedding trip.

Mrs. David Evans and daughter, Miss Anna Evans, have returned from a visit with friends in Des Moines, Iowa, their former home, and are again occupying their beautiful home on Sixth street, East Whittier.

Mrs. George Little left for Thursday for a visit at the home of her son, Elwin Little.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Wicker entertained delightfully at Five Hundred at their home on East College Wednesday evening. Following the games a delicious collation was served by Mrs. Wicker. The guests

Watches That Are Dependable—

A dependable watch of standard (proven) make and pleasing style is a life-long source of gratification—it is a silent, true, ever-present friend "whose quiet voice speaks authority."

Our watch showing today is the most important in the forty-five years' history of this house—all the standard makes, ranging from the pieces of modest price to the ornate, jeweled creations at $1000 or more. Our $10 Waltham and Elgin watches, in twenty-year gold filled cases, offer positively the biggest watch values obtainable.

Nordlinger watches are dependable always—they carry a guarantee that knows no "ifs" nor "ands."

SOCIETY.

Mr. and Mrs. Melville Hopkins, Misses Kathleen Swain and Hazel Wallace, Mr. Walter Spicer and Mr. Wallace Hood.

The Berean class of the Friends' Sunday-school enjoyed a Halloween party at the college gym Tuesday evening. A hard times masquerade furnished the chief amusement for the early part of the evening. A half hundred guests participated in the evening's pleasure.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Johnston have returned from a month's visit with friends at their former home, Marshalltown, Iowa.

Mrs. Max Friebel of North Comstock avenue entertained the Linger Longer Club at her delightful home Wednesday afternoon. The rooms of the Friebel home were beautifully decorated with yellow mums and greenery.

Political meetings for discussion of the famous forty-eight amendments were the order of the week, various clubs, organizations and brotherhoods giving the time of regular programmes to hear addresses and discussions by local or imported speakers. Among the features of special interest during the week was the address of Mrs. Seward Simons before the Home Makers Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. A. H. Gregg, president of the club, introduced the speaker, who spoke clearly on the various moral amendments.

Mrs. F. E. Eldred, assisted by Mrs. Charles Newcomb, gave a delightful Halloween party at the home of the latter in honor of the birthday of Miss Margaret Eldred Tuesday evening. The guests were a score of young people, friends of the honoree, who enjoyed sports appropriate to the Halloween season.

The East Whittier Improvement Club listened to two charming speakers well known for their civic work in Los Angeles at their meeting Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. M. E. Johnson and Mrs. Sidel Lawrence were the speakers and the time of the programme was given to the discussion of the amendments to be voted on next week. Following the interesting addresses of the visitors a delightful social half hour was enjoyed. The hostesses for the day were Mesdames E. Y. Partridge, H. D. Heywood, J. A. Cole, A. L. Reed and R. F. Merrick.

The Country Fair given by the Parent-Teachers' Association of Los Nietos at the schoolhouse Saturday was an unqualified success. Among the attractions of the evening was a cake walk, the prize going to Miss Esther Bennett and Frank Pellissier. The Halloween motif prevailed in the decorations.

Mrs. Newt C. Hoskins of East Franklin street has returned to her home from an extended visit with former friends in North Carolina.

A week-end party at Seal Beach was enjoyed by a group of Whittier young people, chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Melville Hopkins. Others of the group were the Misses Alma Swain, Kathleen Swain, Pearl Ellis, Fannie Ford and Messrs. A. B. Campbell, Wallace Hood and G. W. Henry.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Buckmaster of Lindsay were the complimented guests at a dinner given by Mrs. A. C. Simmons Tuesday.

Mrs. Edith Grubb of No. 327 North Milton avenue entertained Monday in honor of the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Amos T. Griffith of Los Angeles. An elaborate turkey dinner was served by the hostess, and afterwards a delightful programme of readings and music entertained the guests. Place cards were of white and gold, the decorations were large golden chrysanthemums and the bride's cake was golden. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Amos T. Griffith, Miss A. R. Griffith of Los Angeles, Mrs. C. O. Perrin of Hollywood, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Milhous and son William, Mrs. Elizabeth Milhous, Mrs. Martha Ware, Frank Milhous, Jesse Milhous, all of East Whittier; Miss Mary C. Abrams of Long Beach, Mrs. Belle Duffield of Yorba Linda and those from Whittier were Mr. and Mrs. Asahel Hussey, Mrs. C. L. Jacobs, Mrs. Manary, Mrs. Collins and the Misses Gladys Ashton and Mary Griffith.

Mrs. A. D. Clark and Mrs. Lewis Butman entertained the charter members of Plymouth Congregational Church with an attractively appointed luncheon at the home of Mrs. Butman Tuesday. The affair is an annual one, and this year was doubly interesting, as the year marks the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the church.

Santa Ana.

THEIR golden wedding day, rounding out half a century of wedded happiness, was happily celebrated on Tuesday by Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Forgy, pioneer and prominent citizens in the upbuilding of Santa Ana and its present life. A family luncheon at the home of their son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Forgy, was the initial event of the day. Those at the table were Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Forgy, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Forgy, Fred and Dorothy Forgy, Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Forgy and son Edward of Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. F. C. McIlwain of Los Angeles. Chrysanthemums of golden yellow were used to adorn the house and the table, and a white and gold color motif was shown in nut cups and the gilt-edged place cards on which gilt wedding bells were tied with white satin ribbon. The cards bore the names of the bride and groom and the dates of the first and the golden wedding days, done in gold. The afternoon and evening were marked by a delightfully informal reception at the home of the honorees, No. 812 Bush street, that was a complete surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Forgy. Mrs. H. K. Forgy acted as hostess, assisted by Mmes. O. K. Forgy, Mary Heathman, Frank Remsberg, E. S. Wallace of Santa Ana, and Mrs. E. W. Forgy of Los Angeles. Miss Dorothy Forgy assisted in serving. Buffet refreshments were served, the white and gold color scheme prevailing. A wealth of the golden chrysanthemums and other lovely flowers, many of them sent in by friends, made the house a veritable bower of blossoms. More than one hundred guests called through the afternoon and evening to tender congratulations and good wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Forgy, who were married in New Carlisle, O., October 27, 1864, at the bride's home. Mr. Forgy was from the town of Forgy, O., named for the Forgy family.

Mrs. W. H. Thomas, the charming wife of Superior Court Judge Thomas, handsomely entertained the ladies of the Past Matron's Association, O.E.S., on Tuesday, the beautifully arranged home on West First street being made doubly attractive by the profuse use of chrysanthemums in various hues. Mrs. Thomas was assisted in entertaining by her daughter, Miss Marie, whose fair beauty has not been marred by a recent sever illness. One of the very pleasant features of the afternoon, which was enjoyed informally, was an interesting talk given by Mrs. Cora Cavins, present Worthy Matron of Hermosa Chapter, O.E.S., and who is the season's guest of the Past Matrons. She told of the recent grand chapter of the Eastern Star held at San Diego. Miss Mary Cotter of The Regent apartments, Los Angeles, was a guest, as well as a member, Tuesday afternoon. At the conclusion of the afternoon dainty ices and cakes were served by the hostess on plates prettily adorned with richly-tinted autumn leaves. Those partaking were Mmes. George Balderston, W. D. Barker, William Clayton, D. W. Crawford, R. E. Dickinson, S. J. Evans, H. S. Gordon, J. R. Medlock, H. H. Reeves, Max Reinhaus, O. M. Robbins, C. E. Ruddock, P. L. Tople, W. L. Tubbs, Abe Roberts; Miss Mary Cotter of Los Angeles, Mrs. W. R. Harvey and Miss Cavins.

Receiving for Mrs. Laura Carson, who sails from San Francisco on October 31 for Chin Hills, Burmah, to resume mission work after a summer spent here with her son, a student at Throop College, Mrs. W. W. Crozier recently entertained half a hundred ladies who have been intimately associated with Mrs. Carson during the past summer. The North Main-street home of the hostess was beautifully radiant with quantities of creamy chrysanthemums. The table in the dining-room, where tea and wafers were served throughout the afternoon, with Mrs. A. Warren Brakeman and Mrs. MacRobbins pouring, was centered with a handsome filigree brass basket filled with gorgeous pink begonias and maidenhair ferns. Mrs. Crozier was assisted in receiving by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Fred Crozier of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Otto S. Russell. Besides Mrs. Carson, a special guest of the afternoon was Mrs. Hoy, who recently located here after a deeply interesting work in India. Both Mrs. Carson and Mrs. Hoy had loaned unique souvenirs of their stay abroad, and both of these traveled women are of charming personality.

Mrs. F. H. McElree, president of the City Federation of Parent-Teachers' Associations, recently entertained the presidents of the various associations with a delightful luncheon. Great golden chrysanthemums and marigolds united in an affluence of color, the golden motif prevailing in the table appointments and luncheon courses. The dining-room was festive with Halloween symbols, and miniature witches and pumpkin-shaped booklets marked covers for Mrs. S. M. Davis, Mrs. A. J. Crookshank, Mrs. W. D. Baker, Mrs. McElree, Mrs. J. M. Cain, Mrs. W. L. Sacman, Mrs. F. L. Norton, Mrs. W. R. Sylvester, Mrs. M. E. Bissett, Mrs. G. P. Hill and Mrs. T. A. Winbigler. Prettily-gowned girls gracefully waited on the table, and assisted Mrs. McElree in the original pastimes provided for the afternoon by the clever hostess. The assisting girls were Misses Marie Skidmore, Mildred Newell and Pauline McElree. The leading diversions for the guests were guessing contests that keenly drew on the wits of those engaged, and so successfully filled the hours that the afternoon waned all too swiftly.

Not even the famous feast in childhood lore where four and twenty blackbirds were baked in a pie to make a dainty dish to set before a king, could have surpassed the feast provided for little Miss Eugenia Gilbert and the tiny folk invited to be her guests at a dinner party celebrating her third birthday anniversary, and given by her mother, Mrs. E. S. Gilbert, at the charming home at No. 420 South Main street. The small guests were seated at a table where a long mirror that centered it reflected a beauteous birthday cake blazing with three candles, while sweet pink carnations bordered the crystal plateau. The epicurean menu offered deliciously cooked California quail with flaky mashed potatoes, tender green peas, hot muffins and delectable jelly and ice cream molded as animals, these latter giving the children the greatest delight. A silver candlestick at each plate bore aloft a lighted taper. The pretty scene was further enhanced by the wealth of pink carnations and rose-tinted chrysanthemums that adorned the dining-room. At the table besides Miss Eugenia were Harold Jordan, Marian Parsons, Newell Vandermast, Kenneth Prince, Edwin Gearhardt, Carl Gearhardt, Jeanette Briggs. After merry games the little guests were whirled home in an automobile by the father of the tiny hostess.

Orange.

PRINCIPAL G. I. JOHNSTONE of the High School, aided by his capable wife, entertained the members of the High School faculty recently at his home, which was handsomely decorated with roses and chrysanthemums. A mirthful pantomime in which the members of the company portrayed their youthful ambitions, proved very funny. The educators unbent their dignity for once and indulged in juvenile sports, one of these being a trackmeet on the spacious porch of the Johnstone home, where genuine amusement was extracted from the various contests staged in what proved rather a cramped athletic field. A musical programme of impromptu, but enjoyable nature was given indoors, Miss Norman rendering a violin number, Miss Murray a piano solo and Miss Medders reading the palms of the guests. Principal Johnstone's charming little daughters, Irma Leah and Katherine, singing and playing piano selections, respectively. Cooling refreshments closed the evening that had been enjoyed by Mr. and Mrs. Teach, Mr. and Mrs. Higgins, Mr. and Mrs. Stoner, Mr. and Mrs. Kaylor, Mr. and Mrs. Forbes, Mr. and Mrs. Pettit, Mrs. Wood, Miss Rose, Miss Pryne, Miss Medders, Miss Nobbs, Miss Murray, Mrs. Murray, Miss Parker, Miss Norman, Mr. Fishback, Mr. Peck, Mr. and Mrs. Reed of El Modena, Miss Souders and Mr. Montgomery of Santa Ana and the hosts.

One of the very jolliest small stag parties of the season was that of recent date when E. A. J. Mueller of the Mueller Music Company invited some of his men friends to aid in celebrating his fourth wedding anniversary by a motor ride to the Fourth Crossing of the Santiago in the Santiago Canyon. It was an evening affair and over a supper of rarely cooked porterhouse steaks, black coffee, brown bread and cheese, dill pickles and olives, to say nothing of the other delicacies, jollity prevailed. Mr. Mueller was made the speaker of the evening and master of ceremonies, and he was equal to his duties of hospitality. Mr. Mueller's guests on this royal excursion included many of the prominent business men of Orange, the list comprising Messrs. D. A. Blank, E. W. Bolinger, C. C. Youngs, W. G. Hagen, C. W. Eastin, N. T. Edwards, Teddy Tetslaff, K. E. Watson, Dr. A. H. Domann, Fred Struck, M. Eltiste, G. K. Brandriff, J. W. Morrison, William Varcoe, C. O. Field and Dr. V. A. Rossiter.

Donald Meadows was most joyfully surprised on Friday evening when on returning from a call on his friend, Roch Bradshaw, he found a merry company of young men and women awaiting him. There were eighteen members of the sophomore class of the High School assembled, all in high spirits, which had ample vent during the jolly evening that followed the arrival of the involuntary host. Games of lively sort, and much music, with jest and laughter sped the hours, which were pleasantly concluded with the appetizing refreshments that were served by the visitors. Those in the party besides the honoree of the surprise, were Misses Catherine Speer, Mildred Anderson, Vera Sherwood, Nita Walton, Virginia Flippen, Hazen Danner, Barkus Patton, Gretta Brooks, Marie Dennis, Wyne Huffman, Harry Nuffer, Leo Young, William Handley, Romaine Camfield, Harold Everet, Glen Potter, Albert Benson, Roch Bradshaw.

Santa Monica.

MRS. A. PETCH delightfully entertained the German Reading Circle at her pretty Fourth-street home Tuesday afternoon. Although she is not a member, Mrs. Petch gave the members a most enjoyable time. She was assisted by Miss Beck, who helped Mrs. Peck in receiving. Pleasing piano numbers were given by Mrs. G. L. Schreiber and Mrs. Sutherland Hutton. During the afternoon a dainty collation was served. Wednesday afternoon the circle met at the home of Mrs. J. J. Williams in Los Angeles for the purpose of welcoming home Mrs. Williams's daughter, Mrs. Carolyn Sax, who has just returned from a long European journey.

Mrs. Florence Collins Porter of Los Angeles addressed the members of the public affairs section of the Woman's Club Tuesday afternoon, speaking on various of the proposed amendments. Immediately after the meeting the speaker was entertained by Mrs. Harry J. Slater, chairman of the section, at her Ocean Front home. Mrs. F. H. Taft and Mrs. C. H. Ritchie were also guests.

Mrs. F. R. Warner has returned to her Los Angeles home after having been entertained by her grand-daughter, Mrs. E. P. Nittinger of Second street. On Tuesday Mrs. Warner celebrated her eighty-fourth birthday anniversary in an informal but none the less delightful manner.

Not satisfied with the success they attained when they produced "The Old Maids' Convention" at the McKinley school house, the ladies of the eastern part of this city went to the Soldiers' Home and gave the show for the people there. The auditorium was crowded to capacity and the women were delighted with the production.

This week has been a busy and interesting one for the younger society folks of this city, and several dancing parties at the pavilion and various private homes have been most delightful. The Halloween spirit has been recognized and the youth of the city have had their share of the fun. Last night several parties were in session and everyone attending had a great time.

Miss Arta Rogers celebrated her fourteenth birthday anniversary on Tuesday afternoon at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Rogers, of No. 928 Fourth street. The afternoon's fun was brought to a surprising climax when the dinner was announced. Halloween spirits and goblins were everywhere, and the motif could not be mistaken so complete and artistic were the decorations. Covers were laid for the family, the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Elliott; Miss Edna Cole, Mrs. Robert Westmeyer, Mrs. F. E. Hull and Master Bille, Mrs. K. R. Johnston, Mrs. Stella Hull and Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Guidinger and Master Ted, who motored to the beach especially for this event from La Canada.

Mrs. W. T. Gillis, one of the best known of Santa Monica's society leaders, has departed for a six weeks' tour of the East. She will be the guest of friends and relatives in Minneapolis, formerly her home; Chicago, Grand Forks, North Dakota and other large cities.

Mrs. J. W. Todd of Third street is entertaining her mother, Mrs. M. K. Miller, who came west from Salida, Colo., to spend the winter.

Mrs. F. H. Taft and Mrs. J. B. Lorbeer are heading the committee of the music section of the Woman's Club which will produce an amateur show some time during next month. The affair is quite unique because men only will run the show. The men will act. The cashier will be a banker, while the ticket taker will be a like individual, and the ushers and other managers of the event will be men. A minstrel show is anticipated, and men will blacken their faces and men will offer other attractions on the bill. The show will in all probability prove a great success.

MRS. AXEL WEID entertained the members of a jolly little sewing club which meets Thursday of each week for an all-day gathering over fancy work for Christmas. Her pretty home on Glyndon avenue and Pico boulevard was filled with merry seamstresses, who enjoyed the afternoon of stitching. Among the members of the unique club are Mmes. Earl Fraser, Wilson, Charles Thatcher, Edwin Keugleman, Misses Harrier and Florence Mitchell, and Mrs. Weid. A dainty luncheon was served at noon. Recently the club was entertained by Mrs. Thatcher at a morning bathing party on the strand. The club members will shortly go on a tour to one of the near-by canyons.

Mrs. Howard Issard has had to postpone her card party planned for Thursday, on account of the political situation on the beach and the coming election. Instead, the affair will be held on next Thursday evening in Sunshine Lodge.

The Five Hundred Club has changed locations for its Monday afternoon sessions. Hereafter games will be played in the St. Mark's Hotel instead of in the dancing pavilion. Monday afternoon's session was largely attended and the high scorers were Mrs. H. R. Jones and Mrs. Joseph James, and Mrs. Beacox drew the coupon for the day. Whist, auction or Five Hundred may be played by both gentlemen and ladies at the nightly meetings on Mondays and Fridays in the hotel ballroom.

The board of directors of the Vacation Home League held a meeting at the home of Mrs. E. Rundell, the president, on Wednesday afternoon. It was ascertained that the home will be able to keep open house until after the first of the year, and possibly longer, even through the entire season. Those present besides Mrs. Rundell were Mmes. Charles Shissler, C. E. Gillon, Evelyn Dwyer, Thomas Higgins, Katherine Ruff, Joseph Braun, H. B. Eakins and Miss Anna Schofield.

Ocean Park.

WHEN last night the dark overtook the world, and the witches, goblins, and other denizens of the blackness came out to play by the light of the pale moon, hundreds of human spirits, clothed in costumes of the autumn festival, Halloween, joined the mysterious fellows from above and below, and natural and unnatural representatives of the night mingled together and had the time of their lives. The pier, plaza, street and dancing pavilian were packed with these wierd folks, who danced and frolicked until the wee sma' hours and a threatening dawn drove the spirits to their lairs and the human merrymakers to their homes, tired but joyously happy.

The most interesting party to be given last night was that at the social Breakers' Club, where the Bachelors' Club joined the sea folks in their fun. All the spirit of a rollicking Halloween was present and the merrymakers enjoyed a long evening of various pastimes, from bobbing for apples to tangoing, the latest dances. Mrs. Earl A. Fraser was perhaps the most unique of hostesses, having a large party of young people, most all dressed in cotton garments, to boost the buy-a-bundle movement.

Herman Ehlers celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday anniversary at his home Monday evening. Mrs. Ehlers arranged a merry evening of cards, progressive whist being played. Mrs. Michel and Mr. Holdz were the lucky prize winners. After the games, a delicious supper was served. The Ehlers came here from Shennandoah, Iowa.

Beautify Your Home With the Newest

"Aerochrome"
Wall Decorations

THE delicate, cloudlike effects and pleasing colorings of the new "Aerochrome" wall papers adapt them unusually well for the treatment of living room, breakfast room, library, den or hall.

"Aerochrome" wall papers are produced entirely by hand with the air brush. This makes possible a highly distinctive rendering not present in many other wall coverings.

With hand-worked panels and friezes, "Aetochrome" is among the foremost processes of mural decoration.

"Aerochome" wall papers are shown in many unusual colorings—mulberry, tan, brown, blue, green—and may also be furnished to order in special colorings to harmonize with the present hangings and floor coverings. Each sheet is nine feet wide and the seams are invisible. The California Furniture Company has the only showing in Southern California of the season's newest "Aerochrome" wall papers.

But whether you wish the most elaborate hand-worked effects or the most modest printed wall papers, you will find them here—at the very lowest prices careful business methods will permit.

We employ here only competent men who are qualified and ready to assist you in making proper selections. Feel free to consult these men at any time, and make liberal value comparisons.

The exquisiteness of "Aerochrome" is well demonstrated in our windows this week.

The great October demonstration of "better values" practically cleared our stocks of all the garments which were purchased early in the season.

November first finds us with our stocks new and fresh—and for the most part bought under very advantageous circumstances.

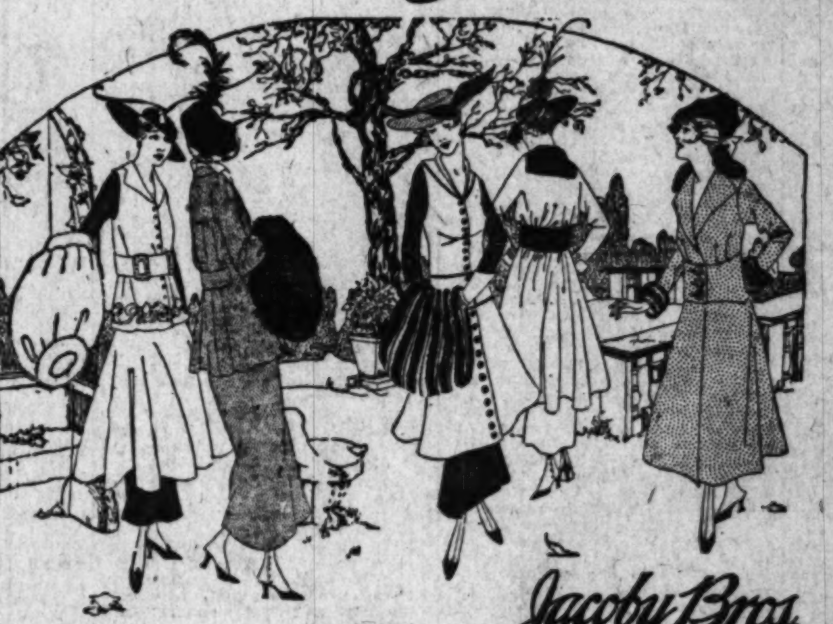
These three items which we tell of below are fair examples of the wonder values that you'll find ready here Monday.

Charming dresses of silk at 25.00

"Oh! Oh! Aren't they pretty!" said the saleswomen as we were unpacking them on Friday—and a customer who happened to see them in the marking room declared they were among the best values that she had ever seen at 25.00.

They're of soft clinging satins, charmeuse, crepe de chine and crepe meteor in black, navy, delft, Russian green and the popular new shade of brown. There are smart frocks for street and for evening wear in attractive designs—some have beautiful lace—some embroidery and some have beading and net trimmings.

Some of them in one of our windows today!



Jacoby Bros.

New suits at 19.50

Beautifully tailored suits of French and English serges, wool poplins, and broadcloths—in all the popular new colorings for fall. There are scores of distinctive styles—some have 32-inch coat trimmed with fur or velvet—have straight military fronts with loose or fitted backs—others are elaborately braided or velvet trimmed.

New suits at 25.00

The greater part of them are of fine broadcloths or of wool poplins—all attractive models—some are fur trimmed and are in strictly military styles—others are trimmed with rich passamentary work—many models are in plaited or shirred effects—the skirts have simulated hip yokes. They are to be had in practically every color that Fashion has made so popular for fall.

Third Floor—Jacoby's.

WE make a specialty of suits for women who wear the sizes from 42 to 50—and we've expert fitters who specialize in fitting stout women.

What's new!

Saturday we showed for the first time a 36-in. net, accordion plaited—it has a pico edge with two lace trimmed ruffles—comes in white, cream and flesh, marked 1.00 a yard.

A special purchase has brought to us vestees of lawns trimmed with insertions and embroidery—pique collar and cuff sets of organdie, some hand-embroidered and with scalloped edge—crepe de chine dutch collars and a number of other attractive neckpieces to sell at 50c.

Dainty, new, fresh, handkerchiefs of pure Irish linen have just been received in the handkerchief store. They are in a great variety of borders—are priced 15c.

• • •

The Juniors store on the 2nd floor has just received by express 10 dozen "Jack Tar middies." They are of peppered twill and are trimmed with colony galatea—both white and navy blue sailor collars, specially priced at 1.00.

An introductory sale of Fit-rite corsets . . . 1.95

The manufacturers have co-operated with us in this event and as a consequence we are able to offer a splendid model of coutil that would sell in the regular way at almost double this price.

These corsets are boned with a good firm boning, and they're trimmed just as corsets that cost several times this price. Every pair is guaranteed—and our guarantee means that you must be entirely satisfied.

No. 119 is a low bust model of batiste with rustproof boning, 1.00.
No. 110 is a medium bust, long hip model with elastic gusseting, 1.50.
No. 124 is a medium low bust model of batiste—it is rustproof and well finished, 1.50.

A full line of baby ribbons—the very thing that is wanted so much right now for Christmas fancy work—come in white, pink, blue, red, yellow, lavender and green in plain and fancy designs. No. 1½ ribbons at 8c; No. 2 ribbons at 10c yd.

Main Floor—Jacoby's.

SEE the splendid showing of new waists which we are making in one of our windows today, then plan to see the many others on the fourth floor Monday.

Glorious new waists ready!

—Most every woman who has come to the 4th Floor Waist Shop these last few days has spoken of the unusualness of our display—not a few have declared it to be the most complete they had seen. Among the waists which commanded most attention were

Waists at 2.45

They're of crepe de chine in a splendid style range—some are made plain with hemstitching at collar and down front—others are made with the collars and cuffs of pique. Then there are a number of blouses with shadow lace sleeves and collar.

Waists at 2.45

A great number of these are of silk lace over chiffon—in pretty vestee effects. They are made with low neck and long sleeves—some are trimmed with satin—others are entirely of lace. They are in white and cream only and come in all sizes.

Waists at 2.95

There are included messaline blouses in basque effect and in novelty styles in high or low neck, and short and long sleeve models. Then there are blouses of crepe de chine in any number of pretty styles—some prettily embroidered—some lace trimmed—a wide, wide color range.

Waists at 3.50

They're of silk shadow laces, crepe de chines, and messalines in low neck—long sleeve effects. Those of silk lace are chiffon lined—have plaited lace collars and lace vestees. They come in black and white. Those of crepe de chine are trimmed with silk military braid and are in white, flesh, maize and pink. The ones of messaline have lace sleeves—come in navy, black and white.

Waists at 3.95

Crepe de chine waists—some made with pointed collar, low neck and novelty cuffs—they come in white, pink, navy, maize and flesh. Others are prettily hemstitched at collars and cuffs. They are made low neck and come in black, white, navy, Russian green and tete de negre.

Waists at 5.95

—One model is of black chiffon with neat vestee of white chiffon—the collar is high standing—the waist is in plaited effect with hemstitching down the front and on the cuffs—another model is of crepe de chine with black chalet collar and cuffs—a stunning affair in white, pink, flesh and maize.

Jacoby's—Fourth Floor.

The road to a thousand savings Jacoby's Underprice Basement The road to a thousand savings

An unusual purchase brings two great lots of women's suits to sell at 10.75 and 12.75

—If we were in the habit of quoting worth prices in our advertisements and if we printed them in the above headline—we'd need to say nothing more to arouse your enthusiasm—as it is, we'll let the pictures tell the story here—and the suits tell it in the windows.

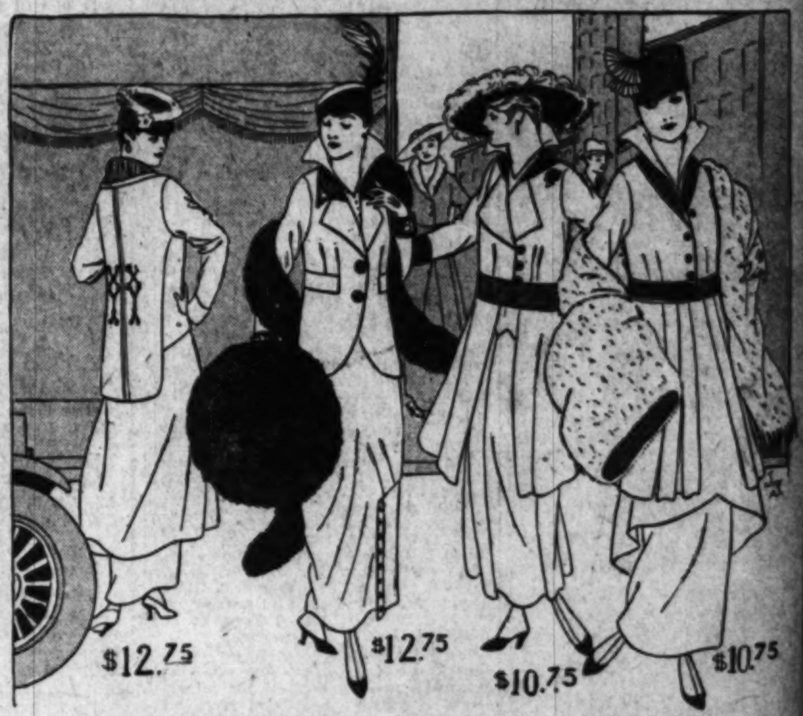
The Suits at 10.75

They're of broadcloth, granite weaves, novelty fabrics and rough serges in brown, green, navy, blue and black. Some are made in strictly tailored effects—some are in the Redingote and Cossack styles. Some have trimmings of fur—others have trimmings of velvet—all lined with guaranteed satin.

The Suits at 12.75

These are of broadcloths, poplins, crepes, diagonals and English serges in Tete de Negre, Russian green, Copenhagen, blue and black. There are any number of popular styles, including the Redingote and cape effects. Some of the suits are trimmed with silk braid ornaments—others with velvet—all sizes 16 to 44 are included.

Jacoby's Underprice Basement.



500 shirt waists 23c

Here's a special that should crowd the Underprice Basement with a throng of eager shoppers starting right from store opening Monday morning.

500 shirt waists of lawn, batiste, rice cloth, voile and marquisette that were made to sell at over four times this price.
No phone orders—no exchanges and none sent C. O. D.

House dresses, 79c

They're of plain chambrays in navy, tan or gray, or striped percales and checked ginghams. They're made full length with three-quarter sleeves and turn-back cuffs. They are button trimmed and in all sizes to 44.

Corset covers, 23c

Corset covers of good quality muslin—some have scalloped edges and eyelet embroidery tops run with pretty wash ribbons—others are lace trimmed—all sizes to 44.

Bungalow aprons with caps, 33c

Large, neatly made aprons of percales, and of chambrays in striped and dotted patterns—all piped in contrasting colors. They are made with a large patch pocket and a dust cap is to be given with each apron purchased.

Dressing sacques, 59c

—Dressing sacques of flowered flannelette in light blue, gray, lavender and pink—each with a flower design in contrasting colors. The collars and cuffs are of silk with scalloped and embroidered edge—sizes to 44.

Long kimonos at 1.00

—Full length kimonos of flannelette. They're made with V neck, yoke effect in back and front and are trimmed with wide silk ribbons and piped with white and black.

Basement—Jacoby's.

Classified Liners.

Times Classified rates: The rate for inserting Want Ads in the Daily Times is 1c per word each insertion; in the Sunday issue, 1½c per word each insertion; minimum charge, 25c; except under the following classifications, the rate for which is 2c per word daily, 2½c per word Sunday, minimum charge 30c daily, 35c Sunday: "Society Meetings," "Personals," "Special Notices," "Church Notices, Miscellaneous," "Stocks and Bonds," "Money to Loan, Salary and Chattels," "Physicians," "Medical," "Detectives," "Sanatoriums" and "Baths and Massage."

The Times reserves the right to classify all advertisements under appropriate headings.

Minimum space for classified advertisements ordered for more than one insertion, 14 words.

Sunday real estate advertisements, to be classified properly, must be in The Times office before 8 o'clock Saturday night. Other classified "Wants," "To Lets," etc., received over counter or by telephone until 11 p.m., Saturday. Ads received after closing hours for each division will be inserted under heading "Too Late to Classify." Rate 1½ cents per word.

The Sunday circulation of The Times exceeds 80,000 copies, and more "liners" are regularly printed in its columns than in the five other Los Angeles newspapers combined.

Telephone your want advertisements. Ring up "The Times," Main 8200, Home 10391, any time of day or night, and secure prompt and careful attention.

The Times cannot guarantee accuracy or assume responsibility for errors of any kind occurring in telephone advertisements.

The Times will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion of any advertisement ordered for more than one time.

Advertisers should retain receipts given by The Times in payment for "liners," as no mistake can be rectified without them.

The Times will not accept 'phone or verbal orders to discontinue or change "till forbid" advertisements.

The Times constantly endeavors to render its columns satisfactory and efficient service, and it will appreciate complaints of, and make a proper adjustment for any material errors it may make in printed announcements.
"Be quick to kick if things seem wrong,
But kick to us, and make it strong."

INSTANT SERVICE FOR TIMES PATRONS.

For the convenience of persons who may desire to reply to classified advertisements printed in The Times, send communications to this newspaper, and have "liner" and other advertisements inserted, Times letter boxes have been placed in various downtown buildings for the purpose indicated.

Collections will be made from these boxes every hour.

Each piece of advertising copy must contain the name and address of the advertiser, number of insertions, and heading under which it is desired that the announcement be printed.

The boxes are located as follows:

MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist, of London, England, may be consulted at 322 SOUTH SPRING STREET, by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS, FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY HONESTLY PRACTICED WILL NOT tell your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

WANTED—

ANOTHER OPPORTUNITY.

"They do me wrong who say I come no more,
When once I knock and fail to find you in,
For every day I stand outside your door
And bid you wake and rise to fight and win.

"Wail not for precious chances, passed away;
Weep not for golden ages on the wane.
Each night I burn the records of the day.
At sunrise every soul is born again."

Are you not satisfied with your record of the past? Do you feel capable of realizing upon an opportunity if one is given you? Are you a real man with red blood in your veins and a determination at the bottom of your heart to make of yourself a success? If you are, I will give you the same opportunity that other men have taken advantage of. If I could point out to you men who since coming with me are earning from $500 to $1000 a month, would it fire you with ambition to come and do likewise? Regrets over what might have been are a waste of precious time, and so fill your mind that you are not able to hear "Opportunity's" gentle knock when she does pass your way. Tomorrow is past—today is yours. All you need is a good appearance, good manners and an ability to stick strictly to the truth. If you have these qualifications, and believe in yourself, see me any morning after 9 a.m., Room 323, Los Angeles Investment Building.

CLAUDE S. HAMILTON,
General Sales Manager,
LOS ANGELES INVESTMENT COMPANY.

WANTED—

An opportunity to get on our sales force prior to a tremendous campaign on one of the fastest-selling propositions on the market. Your qualifications must include honesty, push and strict attention to your work. Large remuneration will be your reward.

WANTED—

ARE YOU AN EXPERT SALESMAN?

Are you getting enough for your services?

Would you consider the best selling proposition in Los Angeles if you could better your condition?

Would you like to sell property that has a guaranteed argument that is almost impossible to resist?

If you are in earnest, free to choose the best, and are willing to work continuously, consistently and intelligently, we can make you a lot of money every month.

See Mr. Armstrong Monday morning after 9 o'clock.
GUY M. RUSH COMPANY,
733-735 S. Hill st.

WANTED—A1 PUMP AND MACHINERY SALESman. Preference given man who is not "hard up" and in need of ready cash. We want party capable of taking a live list of prospects and working on commission basis.
An excellent opportunity for right man. State briefly your experience. Address and telephone number. Address R. C., box 228, TIMES OFFICE.

WANTED—MEN TO SELL REAL ESTATE. HIGHEST COMMISSIONS.

Whether you have had experience or not, you must conform to our successful methods; training costs you nothing. We keep busy because we have what the people want; viz.: the best located properties, the highest improved tracts, the lowest-priced lots and the easiest terms; we pay the biggest commissions because we are organizing for the biggest campaign, and we want to keep our men right through 1915. No matter what you are doing or how much you are making, drop everything and come in and see us right at the beginning of a big history-making campaign now. If you have the knack of selling anything at all you can sell real estate at our price and terms, and by an unfailing system; if you are a trained salesman, so much the better. See our sales manager between 9 and 10 a.m.

E. C. D. PRICE, Sales Manager for

WANTED—

DOES THIS MEAN YOU?

A good appearance, pleasant manners, truthfulness, energy and enthusiasm, plus proper training, equals, in the real estate business, SUCCESS. Recognizing your time and your energy as your capital, or assets, there is no business that is an honest business, that will make you the financial returns upon that capital invested and expended as the successful selling of real estate. If you believe you are as capable of making a success as other women who had nothing except the above essentials when they came with me, who are making as high as $200 to $400 per month, it will pay you to see me about this important matter that concerns you, YOUR SUCCESS. See me any morning after 9 a.m. MR. SOLOMON, Room 323 L. A. Investment Bldg.

CAN I BUY A CHEAP CAR

THAT IS A GOOD CAR?

Was the question asked by a used-car prospect this week. After years of successful experience in this line of motor car selling we answer that it is impossible—under ordinary circumstances. As a rule, people will buy at a cheap figure—and after the transaction is closed investigate the purchase—and incidentally the firm. It's too late then. Do your inspecting beforehand. That is our rule. Every car we offer is searched by experts. Every car is sounded and passed on. Every car we sell is right. A dissatisfied customer is worse than no sale at all. We consider a smiling buyer—actual profit.

Birds.

BIRDLAND—

Bell note and warbling canaries are due from Germany, via Holland, about October 15, when we shall again have our choice selection of the world's best songsters. The canaries we have now are singing nicely; in fact, quite well for cheap birds. Talking parrots of all varieties, the kinds that will talk and are guaranteed to do so. Birds for aviaries of all kinds in brilliant colors, also ornamental land and water fowl. Goldfish, globes, food and plants for them. We carry the largest variety of cages, seeds, foods, remedies and the best only. We buy and sell dogs and carry a full line of kennel supplies, such as leads, collars, sweaters, combs, etc., and all the standard remedies. The maltoid bone-shaped dog and puppy food, the kind that is best for your dog; also Spratt's and the other kinds. Should you be interested let us send our free book on dogs, cats, poultry or birds, telling all about Birdland and the stock we carry.

MINING—

MINING MEN, ATTENTION! QUENNER IMproved crushers, manufactured under full patents, can now be delivered in five sizes and types. The new tungsten hammer tips insure long life, crushing action, and can be changed in a minute's time. This machine is unequaled for placer (wet or dry,) gravel, cement or conglomerate, and is equally useful for quartz or any rock work. For cheap, rapid, thorough crushing of any refractory materials nothing compares with the "QUENNER." See this before you order a stamp mill, and you will save thousands of dollars. For dry placer this machine has no possible competitor, as demonstrated in Sonora, Mexico, where one machine has taken out over a million dollars during the past six years. The Quenner's mining record is known from Alaska to South Africa. Apply for information to office, 908 South Olive street. PHONE MAIN 6147.

PARTNER WANTED IN MINING WHO CAN INvest for a short time $2500, which will all be returned to you out of the business. You will own 1-4 interest and be a director in corporation. Patent on machine valued at $25,000. Machine already built which will handle 100 yards of gravel per day. We have 3700 acres of placer ground and want to get to work. Look this up at our office, 310 WILCOX BLDG., corner 2nd and Spring.

MINING ENGINEER WITH EXTENSIVE EXPErience, is open for engagement. If you have a proposition requiring practical and technical skill, administrative ability and a wide range of experience, I can be of valuable service. Am not a promotion engineer. My specialty is getting results from the ground. Salary nominal until ability proven. Address Engineer, T, box 59, TIMES OFFICE.

EXPERIENCED MINING MAN HAS EXCEPTIONally attractive lease and bond on developed gold property on Mother Lode. An expenditure of $5000 in development will release 500 tons of $40 ore on dump and pay for mill, etc. Mine now equipped with hoist, pump and motor; electricity for power. To principal furnishing above money can offer exceptionally attractive proposition. Principals only. Address S, box 64, TIMES OFFICE.

TO MINE OWNERS—

PORT NOTES.

Losses on the Southern California Fish Company, which was destroyed by the recent fire in East San Pedro, have been paid by the Canners' Exchange Subscribers, a mutual organization representing assets amounting to $23,000,000, and is backed by 750 of the largest canneries on the Pacific Coast. Frank Van Camp of the Van Camp Canneries Company is chairman of the board and was instrumental in effecting the organization in the West. He was asked to effect the adjustment of the losses and it is probable that the field of endeavor will be extended, owing to the low rate of insurance demanded by mutual companies.

Deputy sheriffs left the port tonight for San Clemente, where it is alleged that a fight is likely between employees of the Rowland brothers, who lease the island from the government, and the craw fishermen, who claim to have equal rights. Already there have been several collisions between the two interests and a large number of fishing boats have gone to San Clemente to spend Sunday, in order to be on hand if trouble arises.

Many of the lumber companies at the harbor are preparing bids for the erection of municipal dock No. 1, which recently was authorized by the Harbor Commission. The lowest offer so far was presented by the San Pedro Lumber Company, which put in a bid of $15.70 a thousand feet for the flooring.

After discharging her cargo, the Olsen and Mahoney left tonight for Puget Sound to reload with lumber for this port.

The steamer Willamette unloaded a cargo of lumber and returned north tonight.

AGENTS IN ORANGE BELT.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

RIVERSIDE, Oct. 31.—The group of Southern Pacific passenger agents which is making a tour of the State and of the Southwest in the interests of tourist travel during 1915, have gone from here to Phoenix, after passing a day in touring the orange groves. The party returned early this morning from the Imperial Valley, enthusiastic over the achievements and possibilities of that agricultural empire. General Passenger Agent F. E. Batturs, of Los Angeles is in charge of the party, which will make an automobile trip to the Roosevelt dam after reaching Phoenix.

GAINS WEIGHT AS POLICE CHASE HIM.

"FAT FELLOW OF CHICAGO" IS PURSUED FOUR YEARS; CAUGHT HERE.

"The Fat Fellow" is arrested at last. For four years the police of Chicago have been besieging the police departments of the West to arrest John J. Edson, who weighs something less than 300 pounds. So distinctive is his freightage of flesh that he was familiarly identified as "the fat fellow," there being no other suspected criminal in the world of nearly that avoirdupois.

He was brought to the Central Police Station yesterday and booked as a suspect in reference to an alleged bunco game worked on the National Lead Company of Chicago. On April 24, 1910, he was indicted by the grand jury, there, but was released under heavy bonds. Without adieu to his bondsmen, it is charged that the fat Mr. Edson left Chicago with alarming speed, and his bondsmen were left to face the court with alarming shortage in their treasury.

For four years the Chicago police have been actively trailing "the fat fellow." His movements have been charted to a detail, and two days ago, telegram came to the police department that "the fat fellow," codified by his fat, was in Van Nuys.

Officers Wynn and Burgess were dispatched to find the man. They rode to Van Nuys yesterday and identified their man, asking the first man they saw, who happened to be a barber: "Where's the fattest man in town?"

"Bill Hayton is awful fat," the barber commented, "but there is a feller here that has got him beat, he lives over at that lodging-house." With complete assurance that there was no mistake, the detectives hurried to the rooming-rouse and arrested Mr. Edson.

"I've been running for four years," was Mr. Edson's only comment, "and I have gained fifteen pounds a year." But he would tell nothing of his troubles in Chicago.

EXHAUSTED IN MAN HUNT.

Alleged Forger Caught as He Asks for Mail at the Harbor—Four Men on His Trail.

Worn out by a walk from Santa Monica to Los Angeles harbor, where he presented himself at the postoffice for his mail, Lawrence Comeford, who for three weeks has been hunted by four men through Texas, Oklahoma and California on a forgery charge, was arrested last night by operatives of the Burns agency. Comeford, who has a number of liases, looked relieved when the officers caught him, for he was without a cent and tired of the unrelenting chase. He is said to have confessed to forging checks at the least totaling $1200, using whatever name came to him in whatever city he was in at the time.

The specific charge is the forging of a $50 check on the Exchange National Bank of Houston, Tex. In Dallas, Tex., he has a wife and two children. Late last night he was brought to Central Police Station.

INCREASED FREIGHT RATES.

Railways are Preparing Them, but Whether or Not They are Allowed is the Big Question.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Increases in freight rates, ranging from 10 to 40 per cent. on dressed meats, livestock and packing-house products are being prepared by the eastern railways for submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission. The prospect today was that the proposed new rates would be suspended when filed pending an investigation.

The present rate on dressed beef between New York and Chicago is 45 cents a 100 pounds on a minimum carload weight of 20,000 pounds. It is proposed by the roads to advance the rate to 50 cents a 100 and increase the minimum rate to 20,000 pounds. These two factors would increase the transportation charges per car from $90 to $105, or about 16 per cent.

Similar increases are proposed on livestock and general packing-house products. The new tariffs are expected to be filed on or before the end of November. In that event they would become effective, unless suspended by the commission, by the first of January.

THE JURY THAT IS OUT.

Deadlock of the Twelve Tried and True Men is Like that of the European Armies in France.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SCRANTON (Pa.) Oct. 31.—Although they have been out for nearly nine days, members of the Pegram murder jury are still hopelessly deadlocked. John P. Thomas, the foreman, yesterday sent a letter to Judge Edwards, who was on the bench at the trial, asking that the jurors be discharged as there was no possibility of their reaching an agreement.

Some of the jurors declared several days ago that they were prepared to remain all winter, while others pleaded to be sent home. The court at that time informed them that a verdict of some kind must be rendered in a case where the commonwealth asks for a verdict of murder in the first degree.

SIX PERSONS BRUISED.

Santa Fe Train Runs Into an Open Switch at Knightson and is Partly Derailed.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ANTIOCH (Cal.) Oct. 31.—Six persons were slightly bruised today when Santa Fe train No. 41, westbound, ran into an open switch at Knightson, near here, plowed through two refrigerator cars and was in part derailed. The engineer and fireman jumped as the engine and ten'er turned over in a ditch, alongside the rails. S. B. Roberts, the section foreman, acknowledged having left the switch open, which was found locked open, after the accident.

NEW STEEL TANKER LAUNCHED.

Named After the President of the Company, the Ship is Christened by Mr. Stewart's Daughter.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—Named after the president of the Union Oil Company and christened by his daughter, Miss Dorothy May Stewart, the steel tanker Lyman Stewart was launched today at the Union Iron Works. The vessel is 426 feet long by 55 feet beam, has a displacement of 14,000 tons, a speed of 11 knots and a carrying capacity in sixteen tanks of 62,000 barrels.

The Luisitania Arrives Safely.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Anxiety regarding the Cunard liner Luisitania which had not been heard from since she left Liverpool last Saturday with 961 passengers, until she reported her position by wireless last night, was relieved when she arrived here today, more than twenty-four hours overdue. Bad weather was responsible for her delay.

GERMANS' POWER SURPRISES ALL

EVEN TEUTONS DID NOT KNOW OWN RESOURCES.

Los Angeles Teacher Returns from Scene of Conflict Impressed with Preparedness and Calm Spirit Displayed—Saw Nothing of Mutiny on Relief Ship's Voyage.

"Not even the German people had an idea of the size of their military resources," declared Miss W. M. Rodenberg, of No. 647 West Seventeenth street, teacher of German in the Los Angeles High School, who, with her mother, Mrs. J. Henry Rodenberg, arrived in Los Angeles yesterday, after passed weeks in Europe after the beginning of the hostilities.

"We lived for weeks in Frankfort just a short distance from the recruiting barracks," she said, "and day after day men gathered from all parts of that district. They came in small companies and varied uniform, but all came out looking alike as to dress and equipment. Every uniform was new; weapons, shoes and all equipment were direct from the factories.

"The harness for the horses was also new and every automobile, no matter what its make or the period of its service, was thoroughly overhauled, equipped with new tires and all painted in regulation gray. The uniformity and preparedness was absolutely marvelous and the lack of any evidence of despair, of slightest feeling against the government or even against the idea of fighting was noticeable.

"The women shed tears at the depots as their husbands, brothers or sons left for the front. Occasionally after they had left, some of the women cried, but not before. The long lines of departing soldiers were always garlanded with flowers and every gun barrel was filled with a nosegay, making the display more one of festive nature than one of dire war.

"We saw numerous wounded soldiers on our trip to Holland, where at Rotterdam we finally took passage on the Red Cross, the ship that had brought the American relief corps over. There was some talk of the trouble on the voyage over because of a crew that did not believe in discipline, but no evidence of it was seen on the journey home. We heard little of the mutiny of some of the crew until our arrival in New York, when several of them were placed in prison."

Speaking of treatment accorded foreigners in Germany, Miss Rodenberg stated it is uniformly courteous no matter what nationality is concerned—even English, French or Belgian.

"Every possible effort was made to extend courtesies to Americans, more so than to any other nationality, and to hear stories of discomforts on arriving home seems hardly credible," she said. Of alleged atrocities practiced by German troops, she stated that nothing had ever come home as news. Proofs indisputable of good treatment by some of the soldiers of other countries have been discussed in German papers.

WAR REPORTER HERE FROM MARS

DEMENTED MAN ATTEMPTS TO FLY TO EUROPE OFF LONG BEACH PIER.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONG BEACH, Oct. 31.—Declaring that he was on his way to Europe to take 10,000 feet of film of the European war, and that he just stopped off in Long Beach to take on gasoline was the startling statement of Christopher Stahlberg, who was seized by local authorities at the end of the municipal pier today as he was about to make an attempted flight in a strange velocipede contrivance.

Stahlberg said when questioned that he was a special war correspondent from Mars, and had received permission from the world powers to take motion pictures of the present war activities to show the peaceful inhabitants of the noted planet. He protested vigorously when taken to the local police station to be examined as to his sanity.

BEACH BRIEFS.

A number of voters of Long Beach have protested to the City Council that a smooth-talking man has been canvassing the city endeavoring to persuade the people that unless they vote upon each and every one of the amendments on the ballot next Tuesday that their vote will be thrown out and not counted. The complainants were told that their informant's contentions were entirely erroneous and that no attention should be paid to him.

Arrangements have been completed by the officers of the Long Beach Poultry Association for the next poultry show, which will be held at the forum November 12 to 17.

This exhibition will be open to all poultry and pet stock, indiscriminately, and promises to be the largest and most successful held in this city.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SHOW.

Reproduction of Library Park in Miniature is Feature at the Azusa Exhibition.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

AZUSA, Oct. 31.—The cynosure of all eyes at the fourth annual chrysanthemum show given under the auspices of the Woman's Club at the club bungalow today was the reproduction of Library Park with the library building in the background. This original and exquisite feature was the work of Maurice B. Jones, superintendent of the park, and was perfect in detail. It was situated outside the entrance to the bungalow occupying a space five feet square and was backed by a magnificent display of flowers in the background. In the evening the little building was aglow with lights making a most beautiful sight.

There were many outside exhibitors from nearby cities. The practice of admitting all amateur growers to the competition has made the event a popular one all over this section of the country, and among the most enthusiastic exhibitors were the school children, whose rustic school houses and May-poles were distinctly creditable.

Mrs. O. J. Berner, who won the sweepstakes at last year's exhibition, relinquished the cup given by the Chamber of Commerce, which was to be won three successive times by an exhibitor to become permanent property, to Miss Gertrude Elliott of Covina, whose beautiful display won her four first prizes. Besides chrysanthemums there was a wonderful showing of roses and dahlias by local people.

FACT AND COMMENT.

The leading civic and commercial organizations of Los Angeles and a host of prominent citizens have given their indorsement to the three State building amendments that will appear upon the ballot at next Tuesday's election. In their desire for a State building in Los Angeles and in their conviction that such a structure is needed here and should be erected here by the commonwealth of California, voters whose opinions on many of the measures to be submitted to the people are widely at variance are united in spirit and effort. From outside Los Angeles and Los Angeles county assurances are coming in that the voters generally south of the Tehachepi will rally to the support of the amendment that means so much to this city and Southern California.

The amendment that relates to the Los Angeles State building project directly bears the number 38 and is fifth from the top on the last column of this record-breaking election ballot. It is important that the geographical position of the measure upon the enormous expanse of paper that will have to be unfolded by the men and women who enter the polls this year should be remembered. Otherwise, the average voter, bewildered by the mass of questions to be answered and personal choices to be made, might, in confusion and despair, overlook this very timely and worthy proposition.

How anyone can expect to go through the whole of the ballot and to pick out and weigh all the measures thereon in the short time that a voter may reasonably be expected to occupy a booth is beyond understanding. It is to be feared, in fact, that many voters will ruthlessly stamp a "No" opposite every amendment just to be on the safe side and to save bother. Therefore, in order not to forget No. 38, it would be well for all who want to vote for this measure either to mark it plainly on a sample ballot or at least to memorize its location on the huge sheet of paper.

Two Others Also.

Now, as to the two other State building amendments; Sacramento and San Francisco both are in need of new buildings for the housing of State offices, the former because the public business at the State capital has grown to such proportions as to outgrow all present facilities and the Bay City for the reason that the State is being forced to rent expensive quarters in private office blocks to care for its interests in that place. In this respect San Francisco and Los Angeles are exactly in the same boat.

The voters of California are asked to bond the State as a whole to the amount of $5,250,000 for the three projects, $3,000,000 to go into the Sacramento enterprise, $1,250,000 into the Los Angeles building and site and $1,000,000 into a building for San Francisco. The northern cities have pledged their support to the Los Angeles measure in return for corresponding promises of support for the San Francisco and Sacramento amendments upon the part of the Southland. For Southern California then, therefore, to vote "Yes" on No. 38 without also giving their sanction to Nos. 35 and 36, covering the Sacramento and San Francisco projects respectively, would be acting in bad faith.

The chance of securing for this city a splendid new public building erected at the expense of the State of California is one that Los Angeles and the south should not miss. Los Angeles has never received its just share of consideration in the disbursements of State funds and this is undoubtedly due in part to this city's own attitude of modest acceptance of what the more aggressive north has in the past chosen to vouchsafe us. Los Angeles is probably more poorly equipped with imposing public buildings than any other city of its size in the United States. For the sum of $1,250,000 the State could build here a structure that would be the source of permanent and justifiable pride and a fitting unit in a worthy civic center. The most practical argument of all, of course, is that which is based on the fact that the State actually needs a building of its own in this part of California.

HIGHWAY ASSURED.

Contract is let for the Improvement of Western Avenue from Manchester Southward.

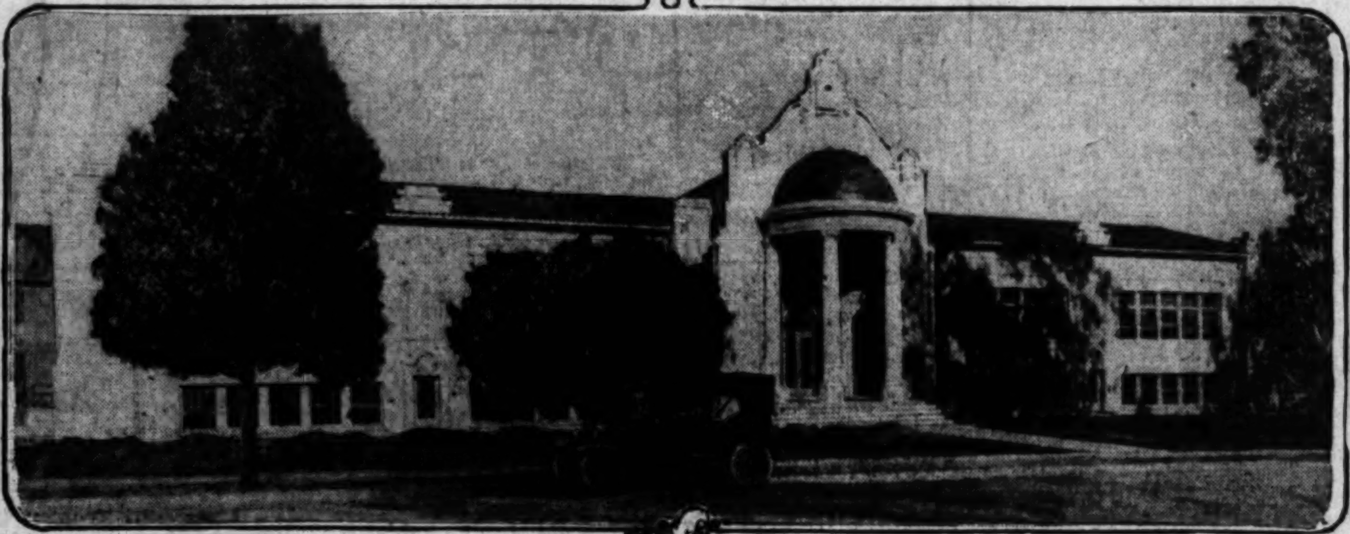
The foundation for the early completion of a great highway extending from the base of the Hollywood foothills to the harbor was laid during the past week when the contract for the first two miles of the Western-avenue boulevard, running southward from Manchester avenue, was re-let to the Brashear-Burns Company, following a delay due to technical error in a previous award. Members of a joint committee, selected by the Chambers of Commerce of Hollywood, Moneta, Torrance, Lomita and San Pedro, together with Col. George A. McCaughna and L. F. Shepherd, acting as committeemen at large, have been actively engaged in furthering the boulevard project.

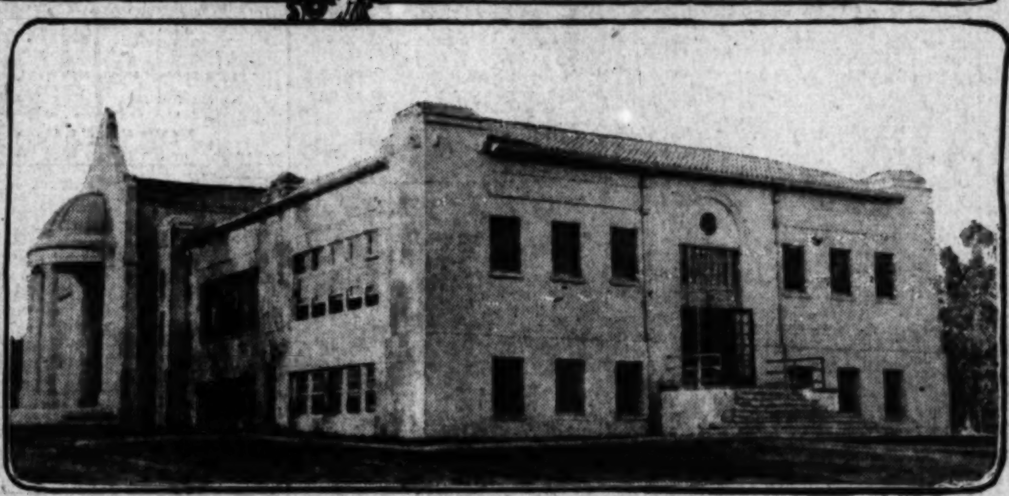
The boulevard when completed in its entirety will afford an outlet from the western and southwestern part of Los Angeles directly into Griffith Park on the north and the harbor district to the south. It is expected that the highway will be used almost entirely by those driving for pleasure, as trucking will naturally go to the Harbor boulevard, two miles to the east. The drive over the boulevard will be an attractive one, including many scenic features, particularly where the roadway touches Griffith Park, Narbonne Canyon and the hill region of the Palos Verdes ranch above San Pedro. The highway will pass through many beautiful residence districts and will serve to link Torrance, Moneta and Lomita still more closely with Los Angeles.

NEW FOOTHILL TRACT.

Santa Anita Acres, a foothill tract lying on the first elevated table land at the base of the Sierra Nevada Range, near Monrovia, has just been put on the market by its owners. The property has been cut up into half-acre, acre and four-acre lots. The streets are to be graded and oiled, and gas, electricity and mountain water will be supplied to every site.

Notable Contribution to Southland School Architecture.





Modern grade institution just completed at Palms.

Two views of beautiful structure built to house educational activities of progressive suburban community. The new Palms school, besides having a marked individuality of design, is said to have an unusually practical and economical general plan. Oliver P. Dennis and Henry Harwood Hewitt were the architects.

INTERESTING EXHIBITS.

Miss M. L. Schmidt, manager of the Metropolitan Exhibit of Building Materials in the Metropolitan Block, reports that a number of firms have installed displays within the past week. The Simons Brick Company has just perfected an exhibit containing twenty different kinds of brick laid up with various styles of mortar. The Refrigeration Plant Manufacturing Company is now putting in a display. An interesting exhibit of built-in beds and ironing boards is being installed by B. H. Wedemeyer. The H. H. Hamilton Art Stone Company is now assembling an exhibit of art stone products.

RANCHES EXCHANGED.

The firm of Ford & Bennett reports that it has negotiated an exchange in which A. G Keene, of this city, has traded a 1000-acre stock ranch in Mariposa county for an eighty-acre alfalfa and dairy ranch at Chino, owned by J. J. Houlihan. The total consideration is given at $80,000. Duane Bennett represented Mr. Keene in the deal and George Diddock handled the interests of Mr. Houlihan.

CULVER CITY HAS BIRTHDAY.

VENICE SHORT LINE TOWN, ONE YEAR OLD, HAS REMARKABLE RECORD.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CULVER CITY, Oct. 31.—Culver City celebrated its first birthday anniversary yesterday. Just one year ago the site of Culver City was a barley field at the junction of the Venice Short Line, the Del Rey and Redondo and the Santa Monica Air lines. Today the visitor to this spot sees a town with a considerable business district, an attractive residence section, an industrial district, a public park and miles of sidewalks, curbs and macadamized streets.

The Pacific Electric Railway Company has just completed a concrete depot in the town. The Harry H. Culver Company has built a $12,000 office block. The State Bank of Culver City is completing a bank. A theater has just been started. The United Presbyterian congregation has just dedicated a church here. The Panama Macaroni Company is now occupying its $25,000 plant in the industrial district, where are also the Cyclecar Manufacturing Company's building and the building of the United Medical Institute. Three office buildings, several stores, a garage and an apartment-house have been built. Fifty-three residences have been or are being erected.

A souvenir of the Culver City anniversary celebration has been prepared in the shape of a special pictorial birthday edition of the Culver City Call, giving the history of the town in picture and story. The edition will be sent broadcast all over the United States to show the East how Southern California builds complete cities in a year's time.

WAREHOUSE STARTED.

Art Glass Concern Building Substantial Structure at Thirty-first and Griffith—Plans Improvements.

Construction has been begun upon a three-story concrete warehouse for the Dixon Art Glass Company at Thirty-first and Griffith streets. The building will cover a ground area of 80x140 feet.

To the Alta Planing Mill Company has been awarded the contract for the construction of a four-story brick warehouse for the Economy Paper Company, on McPherson street, near Santa Fe avenue. The structure will be 45x140 feet in size. A galvanized iron shed 35x140 feet in dimensions will be built adjoining.

ON CANYON'S EDGE.

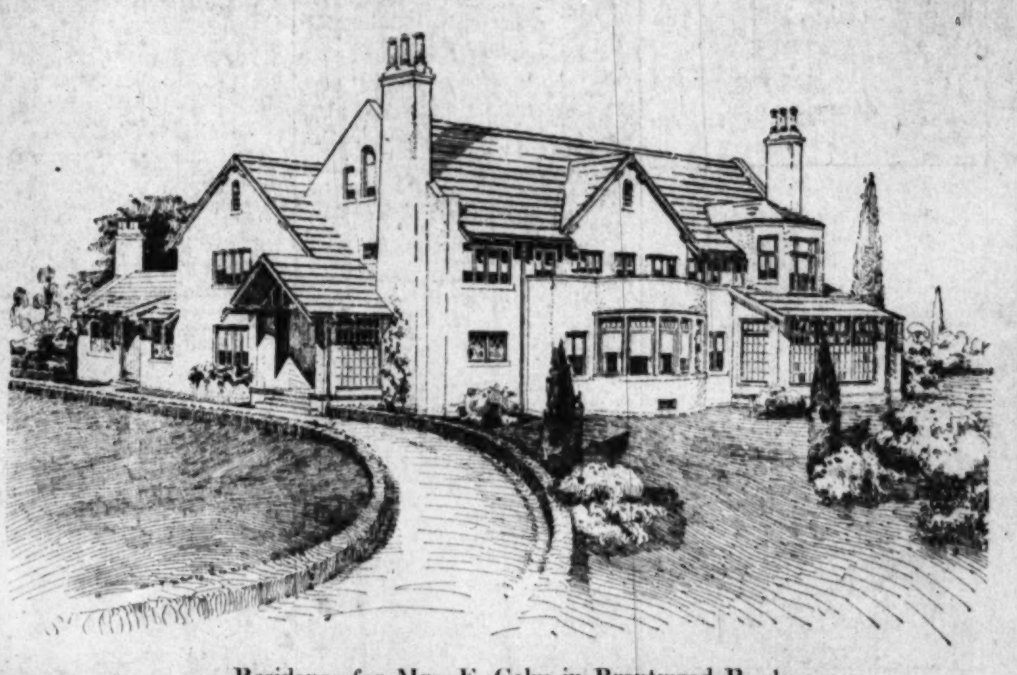
Attractive New Brentwood Park Residence Commands Wonderful View of Sea and Mountains.

An attractive house of the modern English type is nearing completion for Mrs. E. Calm in Brentwood Park. The dwelling stands at the very edge of Santa Monica Canyon, commanding an unobstructed view of the ocean and the Santa Monica range. The site, which is 250x300 feet in size, was elaborately landscaped before the building operations commenced, and as a result, the house itself will be in a developed setting of gardens and lawns as soon as it is completed.

The style of the residence is almost severe in its simplicity, the plain walls being relieved by numerous large windows, placed to give the most pleasing views of garden, mountain and sea. The exterior is of plaster, the roof being of moss-green shingles laid in a double-packed effect. The walks, drives and terraces are to be paved with square blue brick. The garage will have accommodations for three cars, with living apartments on the second floor. A separate house is being built for the gardener.

The principal rooms of the house will be floored and finished in oak, with the exception of the library, which will be in redwood, with dark red tile flooring. The solarium will have a floor of flint tile laid in patterns. The bedrooms will be in French gray and ivory enamel. The baths will have tile floors and wainscoting.

The place was planned by Needham & Cline, under whose supervision it is being erected. G. B. Schuler is the general contractor. The house will be ready for occupancy by December 15.



Residence for Mrs. F. Calm in Brentwood Park.

Attractive place planned by Needham & Cline and now nearing completion in San Vicente-Santa Monica district subdivision.

DEAL INVOLVES ENTIRE BLOCK.

LARGE FRONTAGE ON VERMONT CHANGES HANDS.

Corner at Twenty-fourth Street Bought Outright and Adjoining Corner at Twenty-fifth Leased, Purchaser of South Los Angeles Site to Build.

The transfer by D. D. Ryus to George W. Brown of the southwest corner of Vermont avenue and Twenty-fourth street for a given consideration of $75,000 is reported by the firm of Hildesheim & Schiller, which acted as broker in the transaction. The site is 107x130 feet in size and is improved with several one and two-story business buildings. The purchase price also includes the transfer to Mr. Brown of a long-term ground lease on the adjoining 150 feet of frontage on Vermont avenue. The deal in its entirety gives Mr. Brown control of the whole block on the west side of Vermont from Twenty-fourth to Twenty-fifth. The leased property is improved with store buildings, a brick garage and flats.

In part payment, Mr. Ryus received a business lot 50x100 feet in size on Pier avenue, in Ocean Park, valued at about $30,000, the balance being adjusted by cash and mortgage. Mr. Brown, it is stated, will still further improve the property he has acquired with substantial buildings.

The same realty firm reports the transfer for Eliza J. Herlihy to J. R. Smurr of a nominally improved lot, 45x145 feet in size, at No. 1516 South Los Angeles street for a given consideration of $20,000. Mrs. Herlihy took as part payment a lot 60x150 feet in size on Mariposa avenue near Sixth street, with a value of $4500, and a seven-room bungalow on West Twenty-ninth place near Western avenue, valued at $6000. Mr. Smurr expects to improve the site he has acquired with a brick building.

BIG DEAL HAS THREE ANGLES.

SOUTH PASADENA, MONROVIA AND ANAHEIM PROPERTIES INVOLVED IN DEAL.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

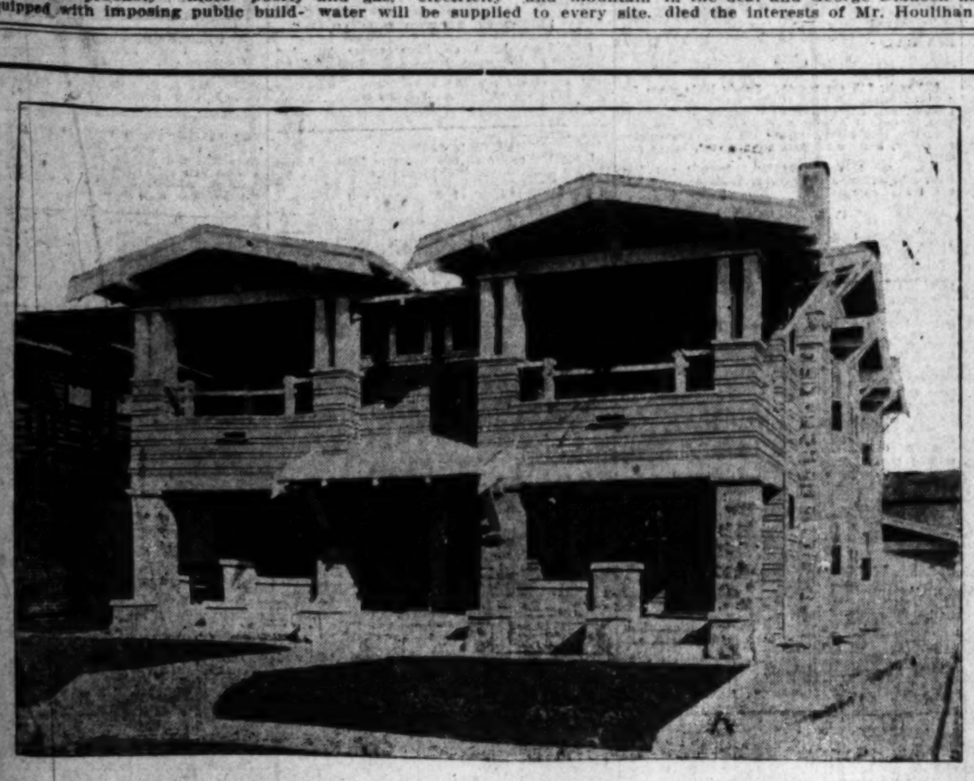
SOUTH PASADENA, Oct. 31.—By a three-cornered real estate deal just completed, R. B. Chapman has disposed of property in this city valued at $25,000. The property consists of a ten-room white plaster house, garage, stables, tennis court and two acres of beautiful gardens, on Edgewood drive, between Wayne avenue and Chelton way. In exchange Chapman received twenty-five acres lying eighteen miles east of Anaheim, near Modjeska's ranch, in a location with wonderful scenic beauties. The property was once the location of a large mine, and about $15,000 worth of buildings, including kitchens and bungalows for the workmen, are still on the place. The property is held at $25,000 and belonged to Homer Fort of Monrovia, who acquired it from the Donovan-Bourland Company of Los Angeles in exchange for six bungalows on West Palm street, Monrovia, valued at $18,000, and cash.

A South Pasadena bungalow—that of Julius Seyler, at No. 2029 Edgewood drive, has been honored by a special mention in an article in "Country Life in America," by a well-known architectural expert, on the growth of the bungalow idea throughout the country. An article in another column of the same magazine tells of the leadership of South Pasadena among Southern California cities in the erection of high-class houses, and places this city among the first of suburban communities in the country in the point of prevalence of attractive dwellings.

Mrs. M. E. Bradford has purchased a lot on Laurel street in Oneonta Park, and will build a home to cost in the neighborhood of $4000. The deal was negotiated by the Thomas Realty Company.

RUSHING TRACT WORK.

G. G. Noble, sales manager for Home Builders, reports rapid progress during the past week in the improvement of the 2200-acre tract of that corporation between Burbank and San Fernando. One hundred and fifty men and twenty-five teams, it is stated, are being used in the work. Cleveland avenue, a roadway extending through the property from the point of junction of San Fernando and Lankershim boulevards, will soon be completed. The first unit of the big subdivision is now on the market and a number of sales of five-acre plots have been reported.



This Elegant Income Property Only $13,500

A Rare Opportunity Located in the Heart of the Beautiful West Adams District.

This beautiful 4 flat building is considered one of the most handsome, modern and conveniently located structures of its kind in Los Angeles. It has always been filled with high-class, permanent tenants and shows an annual income of over $1700. The price is far below duplication value. Satisfactory terms can be arranged for responsible parties. Quick action is necessary to acquire this snap as it certainly will not last long. Don't lose this opportunity to secure a fine piece of income property at a bargain. See Mr. Houston,

OUR idea of a home is one both PRACTICAL and ARTISTIC. By careful thought we manage to instill certain INDIVIDUALITY into each home.

It quite frequently happens that the PROSPECTIVE BUILDER'S IDEAS and PURSE do not correspond. In such cases our PRACTICAL knowledge comes to the rescue, and often where others have hopelessly FAILED, WE SUCCEED.

We build homes from the modern five-room cottage, at $900, to the most elaborate dwelling. It rests with the INDIVIDUAL, entirely, what his home will cost. By concentrating our PURCHASING POWER, combined with our PRACTICAL knowledge, and being in a position to DISCOUNT our BILLS, we can, for a given quality of work, discount our competitors' prices.

We build either by contracts on a fixed fee of 10 per cent. of estimated cost of work, or on our own lots in Los Angeles, Hermosa Beach and San Pedro, on easy terms.

We make no additional charge for our Architectural services if we build, or if we fail to satisfy you both as to price and design.

Our REFERENCES are PEOPLE for whom we HAVE BUILT, who FREELY indorse us.

We make liberal building loans.

AS AN INDUCEMENT FOR A QUICK SALE.
$7500. $7500. $7500.
This new house, just completed, is the most original and artistic 8-room, story and a half Swiss chalet in the Wilshire district. Contains every known feature of an ideal home.
Living-room, dining-room, den and large open stairs all finished in Juana Costa mahogany. Hardwood floors throughout. A dainty breakfast-room, in white enamel, with decorations in imported bluebird paper that is so new and fashionable now. Maid's room and bath, kitchen and butler's pantry also in white enamel. Ruud heater, furnace and garage.
Second floor has two large bedrooms with dressing-rooms containing dainty built-in dressing tables and many new built-in features that appeal to every woman. A tile bath with pedestal basin. The decorating was done by one of the best decorators in the city and are all imported and in exquisite taste. The fixtures in this house were all made to order.
At the price, $7500, given for a short time only, we consider this the best buy in the district. Don't neglect this big opportunity, call on us at once.

"A HOUSE THAT IS DIFFERENT"
SEE THIS BEAUTIFUL PLACE AT ONCE
AS IT WILL SOON BE SOLD.
$11,500 PRICE $11,500
Any one passing along the street is immediately attracted to this beautiful home, built upon a slightly elevated lot in the highest section of the Wilshire district, and of a new and entirely different design, with tapestried brick and concrete retaining wall and broad cement porch.
The minute one passes through the doorway, with its big door of genuine Peruvian mahogany, they immediately become aware of the extreme care used in the interior finish of this house.
Peruvian mahogany is used in the finish of the living-room, with its nice fireplace. The dining-room, which has large buffet, and the library, with its bookcases, cove windows and window seat, also a side door opening out upon wide driveway bordered with pretty lawn and flowers. A very exquisite breakfast-room in white enamel with mahogany trimmings; maid's room and bath; an up-to-date kitchen and large butler's pantry, also in white enamel. Very expensive lighting fixtures, hardwood floors and artistic decorations throughout.
Staircase in Peruvian mahogany leads the way to the upper floor, which contains four very large and airy bed chambers, linen closet and plenty of clothes closets, a fine large dressing-room, a study or sewing-room and tile bathroom with shower, pedestal wash bowl and full-length mirror. The entire upper floor is carefully finished in white enamel. An immense sleeping porch that is a living-room in size is also one of the many features of this lovely home.
In the rear is large cement porch with pergola; lots of flowers and lawn with fountain, etc. A concrete basement with high ceiling, furnace, automatic hot-water heater, plaster garage, paved driveway and, in fact, everything that is usually found in houses twice the price of this place. This home is a gem of modern perfection in design and construction and should bring $15,000, but the owner has agreed to sell at this low figure, providing it can be sold immediately. Will take part trade. This is YOUR opportunity, don't hesitate, do it now. See us at once.

FOR SALE—IF YOU REALLY WANT TO BUY THE best lot bargain in the close-in southwest I want you to see this one today and compare it in location and convenience and price with anything you have seen in Los Angeles. The lot I offer you is on West 38th street near Wilton place—a location the equal of any in the entire southwest. It is in a choice residence neighborhood, there never was a shack or an undesirable building in this section. My price is $800—which means a saving to you of $350 when compared with the price of similar lots near. The terms are easy: $25 cash and small monthly payments. Gas, water, phones, electricity, all street work and park assessments paid. Two 5-cent cars. Walking distance to Exposition Park and Manual Arts School. Splendid view and good soil. Come and see this today. Take West 38th-University car going south on Spring st., get off at Western avenue and walk 2 short blocks north to the corner of 38th place and Western avenue. I will be there all day to prove to you the absolute truth of this offer. See me personally—J. H. WARNACK. After Sunday call Main 2251 or Home F5023.

BUY AT GARDEN ACRES,
BECAUSE IT'S THE LOGICAL PLACE TO BUY
either from the homesite or investment standpoint. There is no section around Los Angeles that is developing more rapidly than the Inglewood section. If you are looking for a close-in suburban home, here is the place; if you are looking for an investment, here is the place. Location means everything in this country. If you buy in the pathway of progress, you are buying right. GARDEN ACRES is located in the pathway of progress. That Los Angeles will go to the sea no one will question; that means GARDEN ACRES within a few years will be Los Angeles, and that means Los Angeles values. We are selling GARDEN ACRES upon prices and terms that make it possible for the ordinary man to own property. Go with us upon one of our excursions, INVESTIGATE FOR YOURSELF; that's all we ask.

FOR SALE—

ALFALFA CORN
DAIRY HOGS
WATER AND SOIL.

When you have the right kind of soil and the proper amount of water used intelligently, there is no question about the results from alfalfa and corn. If you have alfalfa and corn, there is no question but that the dairy and hogs will make you more money than any other line of endeavor. Hogs mean quick money. Dairy means a weekly income. You can contract your cream for Los Angeles prices at your door, sell your cream and feed the skim milk to your pigs. You can buy land at the SANGER RANCH for $50 per acre that has the RIGHT kind of SOIL, the RIGHT kind of a WATER right, will produce ALFALFA and CORN in abundant quantities on very liberal terms. Also a perpetual water right of nearly 6 ACRE feet per acre with an upkeep charge of less than 40c per acre yearly for $75 per share, right on the Southern Pacific Railroad with station on the property, on terms that will give you 12 years to complete payments. Special excursion next Thursday night.

OF
THINK OF OROSI,
TULARE COUNTY.

WHERE NATURE MAKES HONEST EFFORT WORTH WHILE.

THE HOME OF DIVERSIFIED FARMING, CALIFORNIA'S COMING CITRUS CENTER. Where land is fully 50 per cent. cheaper than that lying near Los Angeles.

Oranges, lemons, peaches, grapes, alfalfa and prunes in full bearing on every side.

ABUNDANCE OF WATER GUARANTEED, IN EVERY CONTRACT.

Santa Fe Railroad now crosses the tract. A thriving townsite is under actual construction.

The terms upon which we are selling Orosi Farms are such that will appeal to every one really desiring good farm land and overcome the two great obstacles covering land near Los Angeles—a prohibitive price and undesirable terms.

We only ask a small cash payment, and will allow six years before second payment, with the lowest rate of interest in the State.

Cheap rate excursion this week. Get in touch with success today. Come and see what we guarantee.

YOU TAKE NO CHANCES
WHEN YOU INVEST IN OUR NORTH WHITTIER HEIGHTS
LEMON, WALNUT, ORANGE AND GRAPEFRUIT
LANDS, OR YOUNG PLANTED GROVES.

Some of the most successful citrus men of the Southland have invested in the unplanted lands or young planted groves on the foothill slopes of this property, and two of the acknowledged authorities of the walnut industry of the State have purchased land in the lower valley portion of this choice holding, which absolutely demonstrates that it has the conditions necessary for success.

We are offering this property for sale in unplanted tracts of 5 acres and up, or in tracts of 5, 10, 15 and 20 acres, planted to Eureka lemons, Valencia oranges, Marsh seedless grapefruit, and grafted softshell walnuts, and on easy terms if desired. We will also contract to plant or care for groves for those who desire to have us do so. We shall be pleased to take prospective buyers out to see this property by automobile any day in the week. We know you will not be disappointed in the property when you see it. Call, phone or write for descriptive folder.

FOR EXCHANGE—

ORANGE AND LEMON GROVES

FOR NORTHERN, EASTERN OR SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA PROPERTY.

19-acre young lemon and orange grove, 3 acres in oranges, 16 in lemons, 5 acres interset with peaches. 19 shares of water stock; underground cement pipes with hydrants at the head and also in the middle of each row. Soil red decomposed granite, similar to the famous Redlands soil.

Only one mile from Corona, the largest lemon shipping station in the country.

Owner, being a physician with extensive practice and no time to care for grove, has placed the low price of $12,500 on this property.

This grove should increase in value at the rate of $2000 a year for the next 5 years.

S. M. COOPER,
802 Story Bldg., 6th and Broadway.
Telephones: Broadway 379, A2783.

FOR SALE—
10, 20 OR MORE ACRES
FOR YOU, MR. FARMER,
IN RICH MERCED COUNTY,
ON MAIN LINE OF RAILROAD.

Smooth, rich, clean land ready for the plow; abundance of cheap water. You may develop an independent supply or select your land under community pumping plant already installed and tested. Merced, the county seat, is but a few miles distant, San Francisco four hours' ride, and Yosemite Valley close by.

Climate is delightful—dry air and cool nights.

Cheap electric current is available on the farms. In fact, practically every convenience of city housekeeping will be yours on these lands.

Write at once for prices and terms. "Farm Service Sheet," which gives hints on the examination of farm lands, will be sent you free.

CHILDS & RYAN,

WANTED—TO BORROW $7500, 3 YEARS, 8 PER cent., on 35 acres, with 50 shares of water stock in the famous Highgrove district of Riverside. Ranch is well improved with full-bearing oranges and has been present owner's home for 15 years. Owner can furnish two Riverside bank appraisals of $35,000 and one local appraisal of same amount. Moral risk is unquestioned and any reference required will be given. Vacant land in this section sells for $350 per acre, with water, and a loan of this amount on the bare land with no improvements would be considered excellent. With the improvements added better security would be hard to find.

ATTENTION INVESTORS.
THE WALL ST. JOURNAL of Oct. 26 states that $274,000,000 will be set free when the Federal Reserve Banks commence operations and that money is not only becoming distinctly easier, but is returning in a flood to Chicago and other Reserve centers. The local money market is evidently much easier. Acceptable EIGHT PER CENT. loans will soon be unprocurable.

MRS. BANNING BUILDS FIRST CUBIST HOUSE.

Wealthy Pioneer Woman Has Opinions of Her Own About Architecture.

Dreamed for Generations of One Day Presiding Over Dust and Fireproof Mansion Without a Jigsaw Ornament on it or in It—Ended by Rearing City's Most Daringly Original Dwelling.

BY BERTHA H. SMITH.

TO HAVE a dear dream come true is a pleasant thing, even though one wait for it till the days of lavender and old lace.

This is what has happened to Mrs. Mary A. Banning.

"I have dreamed all my life of building a house just as I wanted it," said Mrs. Banning, sitting in the midst of her transplanted and already domiciled Lares and Penates in the new home at Commonwealth avenue and Fifth street that is the realization of her life's dream.

"That great old house at Wilmington to which I went when I married Capt. Banning was too big. One doesn't need twenty-three rooms—it makes too much care. Then when I came from the old mansion to Los Angeles more than a quarter century ago—long, long ago it seems, for then I knew everybody in Los Angeles county—not the city, but the county—everybody—when I came to Los Angeles and bought a place up on the hill by the old high school, I bought for the location. The house had been a saloon. I made it over instead of building a new one, for I had so many other things to do with the money a house would cost. I had my children to educate and then I traveled with them in Europe—always there have been things that stood in the way of the house I meant to build, things I wanted more than I wanted the house, of course, or I would have had the house long ago.

"But last year the idea of the house took possession of me and I decided to have it. I was so ill at the time that it took two people to help me out of my invalid's chair, but that didn't matter—I've always had my own way, and I wanted this house."

By way of explaining how she has managed always to have her own way, Mrs. Banning recalled the fact that she has been a widow since she was thirty-six. As if that explained it. Even before that, she admitted, she had always had it because she had her separate income and need not account to anyone for the money she spent. As if that explained it.

It is a pretty way they have, those women of a certain type of the passing generation, of trying to explain the wholly inexplicable method by which they secured to themselves more rights than the most belligerent suffragette has yet succeeded in wresting by force of law from anybody.

All of which would be neither here nor there, but for the kind of house that Mrs. Banning has built. Only one used to having her own way, wholly unafraid of cutting across the opinion of others, would build as Mrs. Banning has built.

THOUGHT IT A WHIM.

"The architect thought it was only a sick woman's whim," and Mrs. Banning smiled at the recollection. "He humored me by talking over the plans, and waited for me to die instead of beginning the house. My man of affairs, too, thought I would die, and so did all my friends—but you see I'm used to having my way and here I am. I have my house at last. Come and look at it."

She led the way to the hall, big and welcoming as the hall of a southern mansion, but not at all the hall of a southern mansion or any other house of any other period or place. It is the hall of this particular house. The suggestion of likeness to any other is a fleeting one. Outweighing all other thoughts is the certainty that this house is an expression of strong individuality.

At the farther end the hall leads through an arch to a large living porch overlooking the garden where many rare plants and trees from the old Banning home on the hill have been transplanted.

Two things vie for domination in this hall, the staircase and a window on the landing. The balustrade of the stairway is of slender mahogany spindles, graduated in length by the graceful turns of the handrail, ending in a great swirl of spindles at the newel post.

On the stair landing, directly above the arch leading to the porch, a window opens to the west. It is of long narrow strips of beveled plate glass held by copper beading, the simplicity of the long, straight lines broken only by a single row of ornament with a Unique place built by wealthy Los Angeles pioneer woman with ideas and opinions of her own. Mrs. Banning and her architect, Irving J. Gill, thoroughly agreed in their conceptions of structural craftsmanship and in their dislike of unessential ornamentation. The house they planned between them is startlingly different from any other erected in Los Angeles.

PERMIT ISSUED FOR BIG STORE.

City Authorizes "Robinson's" to Go Ahead.

Building Total for October Million and Half.

Year's Improvements Number Nine Thousand.

Permits for new structures of all kinds to the number of 760 were issued by the chief inspector of buildings in this city during the month of October. The total valuation represented by these improvements is given in the official building report for the month at $1,565,000.

The largest and most important single permit for the month was that granted for the mammoth new J. W. Robinson Company department store at Seventh, Grand and Hope. The valuation of $645,000 named on this permit does not represent the full cost of the big store, which, with its appointments and equipment, will represent an expenditure of close to $1,000,000.

The new "Robinson's" will be seven stories in height and of reinforced concrete construction. It will be one of the largest buildings of its character in the West, having a frontage of a whole block on the south side of West Seventh street between Grand avenue and Hope street, by a depth of 126 feet on each of the latter thoroughfares. There will be close to nine acres of floor space for the display of merchandise.

The building was planned by Frederick Noonan and William Richards, architects and engineers. The C. J. Kubach Company has the general contract. The piers for the foundation work of the great structure are now being laid. It is the hope of the builders to have the store ready for occupancy during the summer of 1915.

The building department officials give the total figures of building operations for the year to date at approximately 8750 permits and a valuation of $16,000,000. Mark C. Cohn, chief clerk of the department, estimates that the valuation total for the year will be about $18,000,000.

SALES AND EXCHANGES.

Head of Local Realty Concern Reports Several Trades of City Property for Country Acreage.

Tolle house and lot in Highland Park, six lots in Las Vegas, N. M., being accepted in trade.

REPORTS EXCHANGES.

Fred Dornberger reports the following sales and exchanges: For Henry Schmidbauer, property at No. 977 East Twelfth street, lot 40x150 feet, for a six-room bungalow at No. 2267 West Twenty-ninth place, belonging to Anna Kuttner; for Frank C. Johnson, 93x268 feet, south side of Fourteenth street, near Fremont avenue, Santa Monica, for five-room bungalow, lot 25x80 feet at No. 725 Navy street, Santa Monica, belonging to Alphonse and Daisy Bucher; for Lloyd Jevne, two-story frame building at No. 1917 George street, Chicago, for double bungalow belonging to Mrs. Magdalena Becky, at no. 399 West Vernon avenue, and for Mrs. Nannie T. Stringfellow, fourteen-room brick building, with four-room cottage in rear, at No. 710 Buchanan street, Amarillo, Tex., for nine-room bungalow on lot 150x150 feet in size at No. 1749 West Forty-ninth place, belonging to Mrs. Bessie Elder Rodgers.

BOTH OWNERS AND AGENTS HOPEFUL.

SIGNS OF IMPROVEMENT IN PORTERVILLE FIELD.

Los Angeles Men Buy Quarter-section of Improved Alfalfa Land. Five-hundred-acre Tract will be Converted into Model Dairy Farm. Canadians Invest Near Gardena.

PORTERVILLE, Oct. 31.—While not yet normal for this season of the year, the real estate trading in the Porterville district continues good by comparison, and the dealers and property owners are much encouraged with the present outlook. There is a particular activity on the part of Southern California buyers.

B. J. Fox and B. H. Smith, both of Los Angeles, have purchased 160 acres of land in the alfalfa district west of this city from Los Angeles owners who recently took over the Ridgway lands. The property is well improved, including two complete sets of farm buildings, and is said to have cost the new owners $40,000, a large proportion of which was cash. Smith and Fox expect to move here from the south in a short time.

J. J. Green has sold sixty-three acres of alfalfa and fruit land in the Tulare district to J. P. Maple of Fresno, receiving a reported price of $10,000 for the tract. Maple has disposed of his interests in the Fresno district and expects to make his home here, engaging in dairying.

The E. H. Rose ranch of 500 acres, situated in the heart of the Alpaugh irrigation and alfalfa district, has been sold to Los Angeles investors, who expect to start work at once on a series of extensive improvements. The consideration involved in the deal has not been given out. Improvements on the property include a fine set of farm buildings and two complete irrigation outfits. The land is all under the ditch of the Second Extension Water Company, and an ample supply of irrigation water is therefore assured. It is understood here that the new owners expect to stock the property with fancy cattle and to make of it a model dairy ranch.

NAMED MANAGER.

G. G. Noble, a Long Beach real estate man, has been appointed sales manager of Home Builders, and will direct the campaign to dispose of Fernando Fruit Farms, a 2200-acre tract in the San Fernando Valley, which has just been placed on the market by this corporation.

CANADIANS BUY NEAR GARDENA.

HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND SOUTH OF LOS ANGELES BOUGHT BY TORONTO MEN.

The Guy M. Rush Company reports having acted as agent for Toronto (Can.) buyers in the transfer of 100 acres of agricultural land near Gardena. E. W. Bradley, the seller of the property, was represented in the deal by the firm of Dryden & Kerr.

The brokers report that a large amount was paid down in the transaction, the balance being adjusted by long-term mortgages. The purchase was made for investment purposes.

ANNUAL BARBECUE.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Oct. 31.—The Holly Sugar Company last week gave its third annual barbecue picnic to the sugar beet growers of the Huntington Beach vicinity. About 1500 of the growers and their families attended. This celebration is annually given to celebrate the close of the beet harvesting season. The occasion this year was an especially happy one, because the crops have been good and both factory and growers have prospered. The factory has paid out about $1,000,000 for beets and will pay out about $150,000 in wages.

HOTEL MAN BUYS MINING CLAIMS.

Angeleno Now Interested in Famous Mine.

Greater Activity is Shown in Gold Districts.

Developments in Various Mining Sections.

KINGMAN (Ariz.) Oct. 30.—One of the most important mining deals closed in Mohave county for several months is the sale of the Banks gold mine to E. R. Cooper, former lessee of the Lankershim Hotel, of Los Angeles. He paid $55,000 for this famous gold mine, which is situated on the southeast slope of the Wallapai range. Richard Banks, I. M. George, George Kayser, Frank Kayser, C. M. Stowe and O. D. M. Gaddis were the former owners.

Seven claims are included in the group and five are on one ledge. The vein, as disclosed by a number of open cuts, crosscuts and one fifty-foot shaft, is ten to twelve feet wide and carries gold values ranging from $16 to $209 a ton.

Four other claims near this property are owned by Banks, Thomas Sickles and others. Mr. Cooper may take them over at a later date.

Dr. E. H. Thacher, Louis Murphy and Charles E. Anderson, well-known business men of Republic, Wash., have purchased the Mohawk group of three claims, just across the gulch from the famous Golconda zinc mine. This property formerly was owned by James Dundon and J. H. Beauchamp. About three weeks ago they shipped twenty-eight tons of ore that netted them $3600. A drift has been on along a well-defined vein for a distance of 700 feet.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY, CHEMISTRY.

INQUIRIES FROM AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

An Assortment.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 8.—Q.: I send you five samples that were sent to me by an engineer on survey in Nevada. With the samples I add two rocks; name each of them please. I am informed that No. 1 is from a ledge of approximately four feet in width, and this ledge runs east and west. What is it? No. 2 is from a narrow seam about four inches wide, and the lead is one of northeast and southwest. Is this an ore of lead or antimony? Is No. 3 an iron ore? It was taken from a point southeast of Battle Mountain. What is No. 4? No. 5 carries no copper; what is it? I have been an occasional contributor to your rare minerals department covering a period of seven years, and I desire to thank you for the practical information that you have given me.

P. S.

A.: Sample No. 1 is a variety of hematite known as micaceous iron ore, and good quality at that. No. 2 is antimonial-lead ore; it is further described as follows: Zinckenite (zinkenite) occurs in regular six-sided prisms, "terminated by low six-sided pyramids. The faces of the prisms are generally deeply striated longitudinally, while those of the pyramids are uneven, but not furrowed." The sample fits the description given to a nicety, and the specimen is of a grayish-steel color, with file-streak same as color; of uneven fracture; opaque, and of bright metallic luster. In composition, sulphantimonite of lead. Samples similar to this analyze as follows: Antimony, 44.39; lead, 31.84; sulphur, 22.58; copper, 0.42 percentages, respectively.

Zinkenite flies to pieces (decrepitates) before the blowpipe, and "on charcoal melts as readily as so-called gray antimony; small metallic globules are formed, which entirely volatilize, while the charcoal is covered with a white coating of lead oxide. With sodium carbonate yields globules of metallic lead. Sample No. 3 is high-grade wolframite (tungstate of iron.) No. 4 is quartz, with zinkenite in the mass. No. 5 is smalt-blue colored dumortierite (aluminum silicate.)

The grayish-white rock (?) is Scheelite (calcium tungstate,) and the yellowish sample is quartz (citrine,) a variety of silicon dioxide that is often referred to as "false topaz."

Iridescent Pyrite.

BEAUMONT, Oct. 9.—Q.: I am mailing you a sample of mineral that has many colors. It comes from a claim nine miles from Beaumont where the garnet comes from. Please tell me what kind of mineral the sample is?

MRS. T.

A.: While the sample is named at the subheading we find with the iron a low per cent. of chalcopyrite (yellow copper ore of the mining boys) present. This is covered with an iridescent tarnish. The sample is of mineralogical interest only.

Gold Present.

OWENS (Ariz.) Oct. 10.—Q.: What kind of ore do you call this? It carries gold all right, but is it quartz or iron?

"TAB."

A.: The sample is auriferous quartz; iron oxides are scattered through the well-baked matrix. Native gold is plainly discerned in the sample when viewed with a magnifying glass.

Wulfenite Present.

AJO (Ariz.) Oct. 11.—Q.: Am sending you more samples as requested. It will be a pleasure for me to obtain tests on the specimens.

L.

A.: The samples contain galenite (lead sulphide) in good percentage; silver present. Not tested for gold. Iron oxides and zinc in the mass. Arsenic present, and particularly we note a small percentage of lead molybdate (wulfenite,) and a very high authority, to whom was referred part of the samples, confirms our analysis by finding wulfenite in the mass.

Barytes.

KEELER, Oct. 11.—Q.: I am sending to The Times two samples of rock. One of them I know is barytes, but on the other sample I have no guess to make. You will observe that this puzzling sample is made up mostly of very odd and peculiar crystals, and I am liberal enough to admit that I never saw this kind of crystals before; not even in this section, where so many odd crystallized minerals are found. Please run these out for me and give results in "In the Earth" column.

J.

A.: Glad to hear from you. The massive sample is barium sulphate (heavy spar of the mining boys,) and it is mineralogically named at the subheading.

The "puzzling sample" is likewise baryte. "Baryte occurs massive and crystallized, with a lamellar structure, which in the massive varieties is sometimes curved; also fibrous or granular. Colorless, or inclining to yellow, blue, red, gray or brown. Transparent to opaque. Luster vitreous, inclining to resinous. Streak white. Possesses double refraction when held in a particular direction. Sometimes fetid when rubbed." Hardness of your massive sample is 3.5. The crystallized specimen is slightly over 3 in the scale of hardness. Sp. gr. of each and both samples is 4.5.

Both specimens are high-grade mineral, and represent material of commercial value in the paint industry especially.

Steatite.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 12.—Q.: Please name the sample I send you. Locality, on the desert.

T. K.

A.: Attempts have been made to use soapstone on the order of the sample in the paint industry, but so far no satisfactory results have been reported.

Ilmenite.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 13.—Q.: In this bag you will find some pebbles that hold back in sluicing some placer dirt from a locality in Arizona. I think it might be pitch blende, the uranium ore. Please tell me what it is. Thanking you for help many times received.

"DAN."

A.: Glad to hear from you. The samples are ilmenite (titanic iron ore.) Uranium not present.

A Hard Job.

VAN HORN (Tex.) Oct. 14.—Q.: I am mailing samples of rock. Please test them, etc.

I. N. P.

A.: Of all the rocks! The sample is a greenish silicate slightly over 7 in the scale of hardness. Sp. gr., 3.5; streak, white.

Part of your "shipment" was referred to Washington, and we would be glad to hear further from you as to the occurrence of this substance. If it is ledge matter, kindly send us samples of the walls. If wall matter, then send some of the ledge, and samples from the other wall.

While at present we shall not report fully on the samples, you are advised that gadolinite is sparingly present.

Lime Carbonate.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 14.—Q.: Here are some samples from a ledge in the Coast Range. It has some shells in it. What is this, and has it a commercial value?

W. S.

A.: Glad to hear from you. The samples are those of lime carbonate chiefly, but some of the shells are now in silica form. Phosphoric acid is present in low percentage, but not sufficiently high for fertilizer constituent. The samples represent a second-grade dressing for grasses, and so forth.

Iron and Quartz.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 15.—Q.: I have had several tests made by your department and have been prospecting for some time. I have one property started, and as I have some new showings of ore that I want to know about, and whether any of them are of commercial value. So, I will send a few samples in the hope that I can make good on. All of the rocks are from the Funeral Mountains, Inyo county, and show good large veins. Samples Nos. 2 and 3 are in contact. Is there any bauxite or potash present?

A. S. W.

A.: Glad to hear from you. The samples carry an average of 4.2 per cent. potash (sampled together.)

On the question of bauxite (triple hydrate of aluminum,) it occurs sparingly, so far as known, in the West and Far West.

A cherry-red brick is manufactured near Washington, D. C., by using iron oxides in the molding sand, and by another process used at the locality referred to the mineral bauxite is added.

Bauxite occurs in many varieties and shapes. Typical samples are 2, in the scale of hardness, with sp. gr. 2.6. In composition, 66 per cent. alumina; 5 per cent. iron oxides, and 29 per cer cent. water.

The mineral is of a dull and earthy luster; colors cream white to blackish-brown; meager to the touch; elasticity none; of uneven fracture, and granular to concretionary in texture. "Bauxite is assumed to be a deposit out of watery solutions percolating through clays or other formations containing the alumina, and so forth, in soluble forms, and it is therefore, not necessarily confined to any particular geological horizon."

The substance as it occurs in nature is very rarely pure, and the appearance of samples in nowise show a reliable index as to purity. There is a bauxite that occurs with heavy percentage of iron, and in granular form along the Potomac River shore near Alexandria, and this is also manufactured into "cherry brick."

We are giving much space to a description of bauxite for the reason that many inquiries and samples come to this Times department seeking information and tests, and bauxite is a mineral that is in good demand, but low in price. It is a base, or rather a substance, which is utilized in the aluminum industry, and, "it is recognized as the cheapest source of production for alums and the many similar products used in the dyeing and bleaching arts, for which uses much of it is now exported to Europe."

Concluding: Sample No. 1 is a mixture of opal silica and silicon dioxide: lead a trace. No. 2 is an impure siliceous talc with potash 4 per cent. Traces of bauxite in the mass. No. 3 (in metallic box) is in part bauxite; alumina 43 per cent.. iron peroxide (hematite) present with quartz. No. 4 is on the order of the Lee (Cal.) hematite, but darker in color, alumina present.

Sand-Lime.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 15.—Q.: Will you please favor me with tests on the accompanying four samples found about fifty miles northeast of Los Angeles? Thanking you for the favor.

C. A. D.

A.: Glad to hear from you. No. 1 is a granular mixture of aluminum silicate, iron oxides (in part Fuller's earth of no value,) trace of sodium chloride (common salt,) trace of potash, and lime. No. 2 is on order of No. 1, carrying greater per cent. of iron oxides, and trace of bitumen. No. 3 is lime carbonate; soda and potash traces; trace phosphoric acid. No. 4 is sand-lime; bitumen trace.

"JUMBO'S" DEAL FOOLS "SHORTS."

Payment for Velvet Claim Made in Advance.

Market for Stock Takes on Stronger Tone.

Happenings in Goldfield Mining District.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Oct. 30.—From a mining standpoint, the most noteworthy recent event in the Goldfield district was the completion Thursday of the Velvet claim deal. The Jumbo Extension Mining Company paid to the Goldfield Merger Mines Company the balance of $30,000 due on the purchase price. This is six months in advance of the date named in the lease and bond for the final monthly installment of $5000.

Particular significance attaches to the transaction, since it refutes vague rumors, evidently put in circulation by outside brokers "short" on the stock of the puchasing company, to the effect that monthly payments had not been made on time and that the Merger company was contemplating the institution of court proceedings to restrain the Jumbo Extension Company from the further operation of the newly acquired territory, which is rapidly developing into a veritable storehouse of wealth.

While such rumors were only whispered about and were discredited generally, they nevertheless had a depressing effect upon Jumbo Extension stock, causing it to decline on the exchanges of San Francisco and New York about 35 to 45 cents. The completion of the deal by which title to the claim passed was immediately followed by heavy buying of "Jumbo" and a resultant increase in its selling price.

The ability of the management of the company to take up in one transaction all the remaining installments due on the claim six months in advance of the date fixed for final liquidation is not in the least surprising when it is known that General Manager J. K. Turner estimates that the gross value of the output of the mine this month—largely the yield of the Velvet claim—will total $110,000.

This estimate is based upon the gross value of the ore extracted up to last Monday, which was figured at $90,000. It is only reasonable to assume that the value of the yield for the remainder of October will reach $20,000, making a total for the month of $110,000. Manager Turner further estimates that, after operating transportation expenses and smelter losses are deducted, the net profits for October will approximate $75,000.

In view of this splendid showing, it is needless to say that the newly discovered rich ore body of the Velvet claim is holding its own. As a matter of fact, its continued exploration is daily increasing its proportions and potentialities.

Merger and Atlanta.

After a suspension of several months, operations at depth in the properties of the Goldfield Merger Mines Company and the Atlanta Mines Company will be resumed within the next week or ten days, the two new immense pumps for the 1800-foot Merger shaft, through which both are operated, having arrived on the ground Tuesday evening from the plant of the manufacturers at Dayton, O.

It is the intention of the management of the Atlanta company to resume the exploration of the big vein revealed about six months ago by the long southwest crosscut from the 1750-foot point in the Merger shaft into the Union Jack claim. The Merger company will extend from that portion of the crosscut in its own territory a branch crosscut to intercept the northern extension of the Atlanta vein.

"MADE IN AMERICA."

Facts on Some of the Mineral Resources of the United States.

BY R. O. HALL.

BULLETIN 599, "Our Mineral Resources," by George Otis Smith, director United States Geological Survey, gives a most interesting array of facts relating to exports and imports of ores, minerals, earths and metals; specifically showing "our national mineral resources that the United States Geological Survey has given special attention since its organization in 1879." The Congressional enactment creating the survey specified as its duties "the classification of the public lands and examination of the geological structure, mineral resources and products of the national domain."

"The imports of mineral products both crude and manufactured (in 1913,) exceeded $270,000,000, and, the only essential of the first rank of which the United States has no known supply at all commensurate with its needs are nitrates, potash, salts, tin, nickel and platinum, the list thus comprising two essential mineral fertilizers and three very useful metals." Mr. Smith further shows that there may be quite an "opportunity for export" of mineral fuels, including petroleum, and furthermore refers to iron, manganese, zinc, lead, tin, copper, aluminum, antimony, arsenic, platinum, radium, barytes, phosphate rock, potash salts, nitrate, graphite, flint, sulphur, mahnesite, fluorspar, strontium, and other products.

It is on some of the "other products" that this discussion will apply; to show some methods by which "Made in America" products will be, in a measure, realized, and to make a few suggestions whereby discoveries of the important ores and minerals of commerce can be made by the mining boys and prospectors.

A few localities will be given where there is a probability of obtaining certain ores and minerals in commercial quantities, and so forth.

A department of the survey should be created by Congress for the purpose of bringing "the man with the pick" and the survey into more intimate relations; this can be accomplished by authorizing the survey to pay over to prospectors a monetary consideration, a bounty, if you please, to those who find valuable locations where ores, metals, earths and minerals occur (new localities.)

Prospectors, very often, uncover valuable finds, with no money at hand for further exploitation, and rather than disclose their locations to certain camp followers keep the localities strictly to themselves. If, however, the prospectors could frank samples of their discoveries to the department suggested; a report proving their finds of value by the survey, and the bounty then to be paid over, there would result the most active search for commercially valuable metal and mineral substances, and more, all of the useful ores and minerals would be found in tonnage and quantity with the possible exceptions of tin, platinum, and nitrate.

There would be but little time spent by the mining boys in the hills for the ores of radium. It has been conclusively shown and proven that so-called radium is practically of no value in the treatment and cure of malignant tumors, and there are other substances, much lower in price than the salts of radium that will do all that "radium" can perform in the epithelial field of benign tumor. The ashes from incinerated carcinoma are radioactive, and impure limestone (cement rock) becomes radioactive if boiled in water, daily, for a period of three years. Radium is merely a physical and chemical laboratory curiosity.

It is no easy matter to proceed at once on manufactured products with the made in America brand. Many of the synthetic substances, inluding certain dyes, chemical processes, etc., are protected by patents, and likewise apparatus and machinery, are so protected.

Apricot kernels are purchased in California at $45 per short ton; shipped to Europe; almond oil expressed therefrom; by-products obtained, and then shipped back to the United States. Freight charges added to and from Europe, and notwithstanding all of this expense the referred to products can be sold in the United States at a much lower price than if made in America—owing to the cheap labor of Europe.

The magnesite deposits of California are now available for shipment to the Eastern States. Approximately 200,000 short tons of magnesite are imported annually, while the production of the United States (California included,) will not average 20,000 short tons. In the manufacture of brick the Austrian mineral is preferred for the reason that its 7 per cent. iron oxides content makes a better brick than the California variety. Why not (cement-like) add the iron oxides percentage to our native mineral in brick manufacture?

Foreign syndicates "make the price" on bismuth and its salts. Near Beaver, Utah, a very large tonnage of commercially valuable bismuth ores occur, and should be "turned into money." The high-grade sparingly occurring (near Engle, N. M.,) a native bismuth, with other bismuth ores are purchased and shipped to Europe.

Within a few miles of Flint, Idaho, 65 per cent. antimony occurs; some of this stibnite is from four-foot veins, and in stringers assays 6000 oz., silver per short ton.

Barytes can be mined near Keeler, Cal., and the ores of tungsten are to be had in quantity, with vanadium minerals, in the Camp Signal mining district near Goffs, a station on the Santa Fe Railroad, Cal.

Probably nitrate is indicated by localities near Green River in Wyoming and Utah; near the Colorado River in Arizona and in California; east and west of the Vegas Range, and on the Ralston Desert in Nevada; in Utah ten miles southeast of Salt Lake City; on the islands of Great Salt Lake where guano also occurs; and southwest tof Coursehouse. One other Arizona nitrate locality is that one near Keam's Canyon, and near the copper claims once located by Gen. John A. Logan.

Chrome iron ores, and those of mercury, occur plentifully in California, with those of manganese. Admitting that the mercury per cent. on new finds will average but 2 per cent., it will pay to mine and distil at present prices.

Coal tar can be produced at many points in the Far West, with many of the thousands of by-products; it takes money, however, to start this "infant industry," as it were.

The native hydrocarbons of Utah, ozokerite, gilsonite, elaterito and others; those of North Park, Colo.; the paraffin shales of Utah and of Colorado, especially those of near Debeque, in the last-named State, with the ichthyel-like bearing shales of Wyoming; all of these substances are awaiting development.

Southern Oregon will, in time, supply the nickel desired; the cassiterite (tin oxide) of the Black Hills, South Dakota will furnish tin, and the ores of cobalt can readily be obtained in Idaho and Oregon.

The iron and coal deposits of Great Britain are being rapidly exhausted. The high-grade iron ores of Europe are now but history. The iron ores of New York and Pennsylvania are practically worked out. Within forty-five years, at the present rate of consumption, the iron ores of Michigan will not pay to mine, owing to the great depth then called for to reach the ore bodies. The Northwest will look, probably, to Canada and Washington for future supplies. The Far West, however, has immense fields of high-grade ores; coal and limestone are near the deposits, and near Gunnison, Colo., high-grade ores of manganese occur with a like grade of iron ore. Other localities are near Cedar City, Utah; in Northern and Southern California, similar high-grade ores occur, and the California deposits will probably be smelted electrically or by some form of oil as fuel.

During the winter months the ranges of the West lose many cattle by cold and exposure. Why not utilize the carcasses in the manufacture of ferrocyanide of potassium? All cyanides are directly or indirectly made therefrom. It is a matter of common comment that mills using the cyanide process for the extraction of gold are often dependent on Europe for the supply of "cyanide."

The Panama Canal is open for shipments; the manufacturing and industrial chemists are ready to do their part, but how about the capital required to exploit the referred to industries?

Given to prospectors the bounty suggested on all valuable discoveries of commercial ores, metals, earths and minerals; together with proper survey reports and bulletins, with added reports, maps and estimates of tonnage, mode of occurrence and localities fully set forth by those having the confidence of investors, then, and not until then, will the necessary capital for work and development be obtained.

News of the California Oil Fields

Bakersfield.

APPRAISEMENT PROGRESSING.

Agency Committee Working in "West Side."

Data for Kern River and Coalinga Gathered.

Happenings in Kern County Districts.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 30.—Having completed their survey of the Coalinga and Kern River fields, the members of the Appraisement Committee of the Independent Oil Producers' Agency, M. V. McQuigg, M. L. Requa and R. S. Haseltine, are now busy in the West Side fields. They are engaged in gathering data for an accurate estimate of the value of the various properties owned by the Agency members, and are accompanied by a corps of engineers and other technical experts.

The purpose of the investigateion is to enable the consolidation of the properties making up the Agency should it later be desired to take such a step. Furthermore it is believed that an offer may at some future time be made for the properties composing the Agency by some combination of capitalists, and the Agency would be in a position, as a result of the data gathered in the present investigation, immediately to set a price and talk business.

The appraisements of the West Side fields will probably take longer than in the case of Coalinga and Kern River.

Spreckels Redrills.

The Spreckels No. 5 on 32, 12-23, is being redrilled in order that the eight-inch casing may be carried down to the bottom of the 2400-foot hole. The well was originally finished with a three-inch casing and came in with a big flow. It afterward sanded up.

The No. 6 of the same company is under construction and down 2200 feet with eight-inch. It was drilled to 1500-feet with the rotary and then changed over to cable tools. The water has been successfully cemented off.

General Petroleum Annex.

The General Petroleum's No. 2 on the Annex lease, which was finished in the producing sand at 2700 feet, is being deepened to 3000 or 3500 feet. The well will be finished with larger casing. Number 4 on the same lease has been drilled to 2550 feet with a rotary and has been cemented, tested and found water-tight. Standard tools will now be used to continue the work down to the deepest known producing sand. Six-inch casing is being used.

Panama Treating Plant.

Inability to locate the source of the water coming into the wells on the Panama lease has forced the company to erect a treating plant with two batteries to clean the oil before it is marketed. At present it is about 20 per cent. emulsion. The water is thought to come from wells on some of the adjoining leases. Long efforts have been made to determine which, but they have failed.

Soudan Lease.

Dabney, Miley & Buley will drill another new well on the Soudan lease, the narrow strip adjoining the State Consolidated property on section 26, 31-22. This is in the shallow territory just north of Fellows, where the State and others were bringing in well after well at less than 900 feet and as shallow as 400 up to the time when the Standard cut prices and inaugurated its policy of keeping deliveries down to a minimum.

The Mocal Oil Company on the same section is installing gas engines to consume the large flow of natural gas, which has hitherto gone to waste. The pumping expense will thus be greatly reduced. The Midway Consolidated, Ltd., on 4, 32-23, is likewise installing gas engines for pumping.

"Espee" Work.

The K. T. & O. (Southern Pacific) is in the sand with the ten-inch casing in its No. 25 on section 1, 32-23, at 2300 feet, less than 100 feet below the point where oil and gas were encountered and the well breaks forth and gushes for periods whenever attempts are made to put the tools in. The well is capped with heavy gates. Number 29 on the same section has been abandoned owing to collapsed casing and the rig moved to the site of No. 40, which will be started shortly.

On section 9, 32-24, No. 19 has been sanded up for a few days. Number 12 is down 700 feet with fifteen-inch casing and No. 13 is at 2450 feet with ten-inch.

Buys Lakeview Oil.

The Standard's contract with the Lakeview No. 2 will expire very shortly. It is understood that it will be renewed at once and that the maximum daily delivery, now about 1000 barrels a day, will be somewhat increased. As the big gusher has ceased to flow the new contract will be filled with oil from the sumps.

Baltimore Well.

The old Baltimore lease on 28, 32-24, which was forfeited by the oil company of that name, has made good in the hands of W. J. Murphy, owner of the land, who has taken it back. The well which the company drilled at great cost without result passed through a sand at 2500 feet, which was thought to be barren. Mr. Murphy backed up and tested it out with the result that the well is flowing at the rate of 100 barrels daily.

IMPERIAL OIL COMPANIES.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

HOLTVILLE, Oct. 30.—Four oil companies have taken up land in the Dry Lake district, twenty miles east of Holtville, and within the next two months, it is stated, will begin to engage in the search for oil. The four concerns, with the amount of land which they control and their capitalization are as follows: Imperial Valley Oil Development Company, 3200 acres, $500,000; Margaret Oil Development Company, 1000 acres, $500,000; Black Gold Mining Company, 3200 acres, $200,000; Salton Sea Oil and Development Company, 1000 acres, $100,000. The district is far distant from any producing wells.

NOT LIKELY TO COME TO COAST.

ANY BUSINESS UNION HAS WITH MR. WEIR TO BE TRANSACTED IN EAST.

That there is little likelihood that Andrew Weir, the English ship owner, will make a visit to the Pacific Coast on his present trip to this country is indicated by the fact that W. L. Stewart and John Garrigues, president and treasurer of the Union Oil Company, have left for New York to hold a consultation with Mr. Weir.

Practically the only thing which would bring him to this Coast is some development in connection with the affairs of the Union, whose treasury stock Mr. Weir and his associates last year contracted to purchase. The General Petroleum bond interest problem can be settled in the East; in fact it appears as if there is nothing more to be done in that regard for the present, anyhow.

At the time he left for the East, J. T. Currie, the attorney who has been representing the English interests on this Coast, stated that he did not think it likely that Mr. Weir would come to Los Angeles. There was, however, at that time some uncertainty concerning this.

FINDS EVIDENCE OF BETTERMENT.

MORE STABILITY IS NOTED IN PETROLEUM MARKET.

Eastern Financial Publication Says Investors Appreciate Advantageous Steps Taken Toward Adjustment of Oil Trade Following the Outbreak of War.

Cause for optimism is found by Financial America in the way investors are taking the efforts made by the marketing companies to restrict the scope of oil operations. The journal's article indicates that the restrictions have had the effect of strengthening the foundations of the business, and therefore build its future more securely. The article in part follows:

With evidence of the ready way in which the oil trade has handled the exigencies of the situation brought about by the war, there has become manifest a noticeable stability in the petroleum market, which is calculated to have its beneficial effect on oil stocks when official trading again begins.

Although investors are not overlooking the fact that the oil industry has been adversely affected by the conditions which for a time resulted in the stoppage of export business, and in the elimination of certain foreign markets, it is believed that they have appreciated the advantageous steps that have been taken toward an adjustment of the situation and from so-called nominal quotations obtained from brokers doing business through the Stock Exchange committee office continued confidence in oil stocks is clearly indicated.

Many of the Standard Oil stocks are being traded in at prices, above those of July 30, and from what can be determined there is a reasonably active demand. This is the case despite the fact that several of the so-called Standard Oil companies have reduced dividends with formal statements that present business conditions reflected in the oil trade have made that action necessary. The reduction in dividends has been particularly noticeable in the pipe line companies which were immediately affected by the cessation of export business, the impossibility of marketing the product secured at the wells and the condition of over-production already existing. It looked as though the various marketing companies would be compelled to expend large sums in building additional storage and it was the work of prudence if nothing else to protect earnings and surplus. There was the further consideration of continued declines in the price of crude oil which not only had its bearing on the production but on stocks held by the various companies.

The quick resumption of export business had much to do with straightening out the situation, but the greatest benefit accrued from the action of the pipe line companies in reducing runs from the various fields. This resulted in the necessary curtailment of field operations and served the purpose of limiting oil stocks to somewhere near the actual demand. The combination of the resumption of export trade on an almost normal basis and the curtailment of production has done much to eliminate the necessity of building a great amount of new tankage, which in turn has meant a substantial cash saving to marketing companies.

One big feature looming up in the oil situation as a future prospect is the state of European markets and the present conditions in foreign oil fields. Present indications are that many of the foreign fields will be, at least temporarily, put out of the running either because of actual military operations in their vicinity, labor conditions or because of a blockade making it impossible to market oil produced. Authorities believe, therefore, that oil fields of this hemisphere must be looked to by foreign markets hitherto relying on production of foreign fields.

Old Yuma Mine.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) Oct. 30.—Within thirty to sixty days the Old Yuma mine, in the Tucson Mountains, fourteen miles northwest of here, will be in the producing class. It has been taken over by a syndicate of practical mining men headed by W. J. Laffey. They paid the former owners $50,000 cash and agreed to pay a royalty on the ore marketed.

The discovery that ore from the Old Yuma contains a high percentage of molybdenite led to the sale, which is a preliminary to operations on a large scale. Heretofore little attention was paid to the molybdenum, though much ore valuable for its gold, silver and lead, has been extracted. Now, however, there is a steady demand for molybdenum.

Florence-Goldfield.

Four carloads of ore were shipped from the Florence mine to the Millers' sampler of the Western Ore Purchasing Company during the past week. These shipments brought the total output of the mine thus far this total output of the mine thus far this mately 500 tons of ore. The output at present is being largely yielded by the big stope on the main Florence vein.

LABOR PARTY IN AUSTRALIA.

Victory Gives it Majority in Next Parliament.

Suffragists a Large Factor in the Results.

Women go to Booths with Babies in Their Arms.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

MELBOURNE (Australia) Sept. 12. The returns from the Federal Parliamentary elections of September 5 indicate that the victory of the Labor party will give it thirty-two Senators in the next Parliament, as compared to only four for the Liberals, and forty-one members in the House of Representatives as against thirty-three Liberals. The overthrow means the resignation of the Liberal government, headed by Premier Joseph Cook, and the resumption of power by the Laborites, headed by the former Premier, Andrew Fisher.

From an American standpoint, the return of the Labor Party to power may be particularly interesting from the fact that this party is committed to higher protective duties which may affect the importation of American goods.

Nearly 900,000 women are registered in Australia, and their ballots were, as usual, a large factor in the result. The predominating popular charge against the Liberal government was to the effect that the Senate had ceased to be democratic. The outbreak of the European war and Australia's participation in it largely detracted from the issues, and the women, particularly, were so engrossed in sewing and other feminine aid for the army that the vote was lighter than usual. In some districts, as was the case throughout Melbourne, women leaders of the Labor Party emptied whole streets of womenfolks and took them all, including many old and infirm, to the polls.

Since this is the eleventh year that Australian women have enjoyed suffrage, the scenes of election day, such as women carrying their babies with them into the election booths, are no longer a novelty here. Miss Adela Pankhurst, a daughter of the English suffragette leader, was an interested spectator. She said she was much impressed by the intelligence of the women voters of Australia.

At this election there were two women nominees for the House of Representatives who made above the usual showing. Mrs. Emily L. Paul, a Socialist, who ran independently in the Cook constituency, polled only 480 votes as against 15,740 for the Labor candidate, while Vida Goldstein, who ran on the Independent-Labor ticket in a suburb of Melbourne against Representative Sir Robert W. Best (Liberal) received 9269 votes as against 11375 for Sir Robert.

BARBERS USE VIOLENCE.

Men Striking for Better Working Conditions They Follow Customary Union Methods of Unionites.

[The Square Deal:] Having watched the outcome of the barbers' strike in New York City, the Boston barbers believed it was their opportunity to take up the cudgels for shorter hours, better working conditions and greater pay. We have always believed that the barbers were working altogether too long hours as compared with other trades, and our sympathies are with the barbers everywhere in their efforts to better their conditions. We cannot help, however, but condemn the methods they chose to use to force the issue. They were in line with the usual tactics of the Industrial Workers of the World and the old methods that have been in vogue so long. To smash windows and destroy property, to maim and bruise those who do not accept their dictum is certainly not in line with peaceful progress. They may win, but usually when a condition is forced upon the employers when opportunity offers to retaliate it is human nature to do so.

This strike has shown that the American Federation of Labor and the Industrial Workers of the World are at enmity, and the fact that the American Federation of Labor offered to fill the positions of the striking Industrial Workers of the World men is another example of the tactics employed. We wonder how it can conscientiously furnish so-called "scabs" to take the positions vacated by other men when it is so strenuous in its denunciation of any man who will work when it has called a strike.

We believe that the Industrial Workers of the World are opportunists and simply looking around for a chance to cause trouble, and are wise in their selection of places, because usually they find the conditions which are ripe for trouble.

"HEARD THEIR MASTER'S VOICE."

The Unionite Reason Why Congress Took no Action Unfavorably in Connection with the Michigan Strike.

[The Square Deal:] A union journal that comes to our exchange table has this to say about the Congressional investigation of the Northern Michigan and Southern Colorado strikes: "By a vote of four to three the House Committee decided to report unfavorably on the proposed Congressional investigation on the strike in Northern Michigan and Southern Colorado. It is very unusual for the House to disregard a recommendation of the committee, but in this instance it was given scant consideration. This smashing of precedent was occasioned by thousands of letters and telegrams being received by members of the House from trades unions, central bodies and Socialist locals demanding that the investigation be made. Our representatives heard their master's voice."

This represents the attitude of organized labor towards the Representatives in Congress. They determine that they are the masters irrespective of the fact that they are but a minority of both the population and the voting power. It is safe to say that a very large proportion of those who wrote letters, sent telegrams and petitions knew little about the real facts in the case, but accepted the biased articles in their own journal as the facts and truth.

REPORTS ON WAGES AND CONDITIONS.

Timely Bulletins from All Parts of the World.

It is a fact that the United States Steel Corporation has increased the wages of its employees 28.5 per cent. since its establishment, only cutting once because of the severe depression in the steel trade in 1904, when it had to cut the dividend on its common stock; it is a fact that the corporation restored wages before restoring dividends, and never cut wages through the panic of 1907 when its competitors did; it is also a fact that when employees are laid off because of trade depressions, they are still considered as employees and the corporation provides them with rent money and food money and they and their families are looked after.

Securing Work in Canada.

Within the last week more than a score of Boston and Albany and New York Central employees, either by securing leaves of absence or giving up their positions, have left for Canada, where they have secured work on the Canadian railroads. Because of the present war many Canadian railroad men have been sent to the front, and the Canadian railroad companies are now forced to send throughout the country for help, and are also offering double wages.

Wages in Tripoli.

There was in 1913 in Tripoli a recession from the high prices for labor established during the rush days. In the first six months of the year wages remained stationary, but later, especially during the last quarter, the scale descended rapidly, and at the close natives who had been receiving $1 to $1.20 per day were compelled to work for 58 to 68 cents. In the present year further declines have come about, and 48 cents is now freely accepted, and less in some trades. This is still in excess of what the Arab was accustomed to receive in other days, and the decline in wages can only be regarded as a healthy condition; fewer farmers are tempted from their fields, and in a country so completely dependent upon agriculture as Tripoli every man drawn to the city is a distinct economic loss.

Cost of Living in Tripoli.

High prices for commodities were also maintained in Tripoli in the first months of 1913, but receded gradually until at the close they showed declines ranging from 15 to 65 per cent. Beef sold for 40 to 45 cents per pound; veal, 45 to 50 cents; pork and sausage, 18 to 23; mutton, 26 to 31; goat meat, 18 to 23; sugar, 5 to 6; coffee, 26, and tea, 23 cents per pound. Fowls brought 40 to 50 cents each, and eggs were 35 cents per dozen. Prices have gone still lower since the opening of 1914 and, as more gardening was done, there has been a plentiful supply of vegetables at reasonable cost. Rentals remained high and are still high, in spite of lessened demand and untenanted premises. It is thought the completion of new buildings and the continued departure of officers with their families will result in a lowering of rents.

Profit Sharing in the United Kingdom.

According to the British Board of Trade Labor Gazette, there were on June 30, 1914, 152 firms in the United Kingdom having some form of profit sharing in operation. This number shows an increase of ten over that of the preceding year. It appears that various schemes of this nature have been introduced in a number of industries, but the one covering by far the largest number of work people is that adopted by a firm of coal and iron mine owners and ironmasters—industries in which profit sharing has hitherto been comparatively rare in the United Kingdom.

More than half of the new schemes reported to the Board of Trade during the fiscal year 1914 provided for cash bonuses, three others provided for part payment in cash, and one gas company gives its bonus in cash when preferred. It appears that the simplicity of the cash-payment system and the more direct appeal it makes to the recipient has led many employers to adopt the system, at least at the beginning. The difficulty of absorbing large additions to capital in some businesses may have led some employers to prefer the cash system.

During the fiscal year 1913 the average number of persons in the employ of 151 of the firms known to have profit-sharing schemes was 131,871; while the greatest number of casual employees on any one day was 5052.

The following table indicates the ratio to wages borne by the bonus under 113 declarations of bonus which took place in 1912:

Ratio of bonus to wages—	Total number of permanent employees.	Number of participating employees.
Nil	5,714	4,174
Under 1 per cent	330	247
1 to 2 per cent	912	343
2 to 3 per cent	20,338	3,307
3 to 4 per cent	1,944	1,504
4 to 5 per cent	4,528	2,890
5 to 6 per cent	18,140	14,585
6 to 8 per cent	28,580	23,772
8 to 10 per cent	11,373	9,563
10 to 12 per cent	3,777	2,358
12 to 16 per cent	803	801
16 to 20 per cent	18	15
Over 20 per cent	103	64

One hundred and four of the firms supplied particulars as to the amounts of the bonuses distributed by them in 1913; the total amount being $1,739,389, which was apportioned among 63,572 employees, giving an average of $28 to each participant. The 63,572 employees included 526 persons not permanently employed, all of whom were probably employed as winter men by gas companies. Of the amount named, $676,983 was accounted for by gas companies, this industry forming by far the largest trade group among profit-sharing undertakings in the United Kingdom.

WELFARE WORK.

The Harvester Company Expended Nearly a Half-Million Dollars in One Year for Employees.

The annual report of the International Harvester Company for 1912 tells of several undertakings which cast doubt on the common statement that a corporation has no soul. In the year nearly half a million dollars was expended in welfare work for employees. This expenditure is summarized as follows:

Compensation for industrial accidents, $135,298.91; contributions to Employers' Benefit Association, $68,186.25; pensions to aged or disabled employees, $31,765.06; accident prevention, $82,988.48; medical, including anti-tuberculosis campaign, $55,080.22; sanitation and ventilation, $66,224.16; education, clubs, matrons, lunchrooms, etc., $55,891.34; total, $495,424.42.

Numerous modern corporations, especially the larger ones, are expending large sums in welfare work. Pension systems are becoming common and working conditions are generally better than in the past.

AS TO UNIFORM WAGES.

[EDITORIAL.]

THAT labor may combine for the general good of the workers is freely admitted by every responsible employer. But no union can benefit its members unless it seeks to promote their welfare by increasing the general efficiency of the whole working organization. The measures advocated by our present labor union officials, to force the price of makeshift labor to an equality with that of skilled craftsmanship, means the lowering of our American standard of efficiency and in time the debasement of all classes of workers.

The doctrine that all men employed in any special kind of work should be remunerated at the same rate of pay, irrespective of individual efficiency, is a pernicious relic of slavery grafted onto our free American industry. It is a wonder that any ambitious, self-respecting mechanic or laborer can be found ready to bow to such an imposition. Uniform wages for all bricklayers, for all carpenters, all plumbers, all mechanics, all house painters is as absurd as uniform fees for all lawyers, all physicians, all architects, or uniform salaries for all bankers, preachers or artists. The laborer is worthy of his own, not of somebody else's, hire.

To enforce a uniform wage scale among bricklayers the number of bricks laid by the quickest artisan must be limited to the capacity of the slowest worker. To prevent one carpenter or mechanic from earning more wages than another in a given time, an eight-hour working day must be made compulsory by law. All these measures are ordained to lessen output and lower efficiency. Though advertised as giving employment to a greater number of men, they really reduce the number of jobs available by destroying the profits of employers, by compelling them to pay for the listless and lackadaisical at the price of energetic labor.

If California adopted a compulsory eight-hour-day limit for all workers, some of our largest employers of labor would be obliged to remove their industrial plants to some freer State; every man and woman with the smallest stake in any California city or town must suffer in consequence.

The uniform wage fallacy, of which the eight-hour working day is a component part, means the immediate impoverishment of all industrious citizens for the benefit of the shirkers and shiftless. It means even worse than this. By taking away the initiative and ambition of the individual it lowers the whole standard and tone of American labor. All the joy and hope and variety is taken out of the common tasks of humanity and the majority of our people is converted into a condition of aimless drudgery from which there is no escape.

For what incentive has the efficient man to do his best when that best is marked down to the value of somebody's worst? What encouragement is given the inefficient man to improve his work under a system of uniform trade wages? What spur is there for the enterprising to increase his output when his working hours are forcibly curtailed by a tyrannous law? The whole scheme is devised to depress the determined-to-get-somewhere and to cater to the go-as-you-please element.

This cannot advance the cause of American labor or promote enterprise or industry. You can by unjust laws, if you so please, make the rich poorer and the useful more useless; but you cannot by legislation make the poor richer or the useless more useful. By mechanical interference you can prevent a fig tree from bearing figs, but you cannot make good table grapes grow upon thistles.

Nature knows no uniform wages nor any compulsory limit to her working day. Uniform wages should be paid for uniformly good work and the number of hours a man may work be limited only by his strength and ability.

AN EMERGENCY CURRENCY.

Down South They are Putting out Cotton Warehouse Certificates as a Circulating Medium.

[Toledo Blade:] A new form of emergency currency is circulating in Georgia. It is the certificate of a probate judge, acting as trustee, that he holds cotton at 7 cents a pound as security in warehouse receipts, the certificate bearing 6 per cent. interest. The paper carries the names of banks and mercantile houses which will accept it as a deposit or as payment for purchases. Denominations are $1, $5 and $10. The issue and circulation of these certificates are against the law. The Federal government alone is empowered to print or coin anything in the shape and meaning of currency. But it will be surprising if anything is done about it. The government wisely chose to say nothing in 1907-08 when clearinghouse certificates were put out to the amount of millions of dollars. It was of infinitely more importance that the country should have money with which to do business, meet the pay rolls, keep the corner grocery from bankruptcy and the home from starvation than it was to keep every statute rigidly enforced.

Ten Years' Strike Losses.

[The Square Deal:] A profit-and-loss account of the strikes of the last ten years, prepared from government returns, supplemented by details furnished by trade-union leaders in the principal industries, show that the loss to the organized workers alone from stoppages of work due to disputes of all kinds in the United Kingdom has been equal to $84,741,000 in wages, not to speak of a vast sum spent in strike pay. Against this, the net gain in wages resulting from disputes is returned at $13,209,000, leaving a net loss of $71,531,000.

Mr. Bryan's Ploughshares.

[New York Herald:] So the ploughshare paperweights which Mr. Bryan has been presenting as premiums, or decorations, to diplomatists who have signed his "breathing-spell" treaties were not made out of swords after all! Instead of using the sword blades which the Secretary of State had garnered for the purpose, workmen at the naval gun factory found it more convenient to make the "They-shall-beat-their-swords-into-ploughshares" souvenirs of ordinary scrap iron.

Discovery of the fact is not likely, however, to disturb the equanimity of a man who once believed that sound money could be made of silver at "sixteen to one."

A Hold-up.

UNION LIMIT OF APPRENTICESHIP.

ABSOLUTE DICTATION REGARDING LEARNING OF TRADES.

An Employee Cannot Teach His Own Son the Trade in a Union Shop Unless the Union First Gives its Consent, and There's Graft in It.

[Alleyne Ireland in The Square Deal:] "One of the most flagrant and injurious defiances of the constitutional rights of the people of this country is the refusal of the trade unions to allow American youth to learn a trade.

"A great deal has been written about unemployment and its causes, but I have not yet seen any reference to one of the most important factors—namely, that in this so-called free land a man cannot teach his own son his own trade unless the union allows him.

Mr. James L. Carr, a retired hat manufacturer of Orange, N. J., leaves you no opportunity of doubting the earnestness of his convictions upon this subject. To his own experience of thirty years' practical familiarity with the hat trade he adds the result of long and careful study of the problem of apprenticeship, in the course of which he has extended his inquiries into other branches of industry, with the result that he has reached a firm conviction that the present system of restricted opportunity constitutes a serious menace to the efficiency of American workmanship.

"In February last," said Mr. Carr, "there was introduced into the Assembly of New Jersey a bill designed to put an end to this abuse. The bill was only eight lines in length and it shows what we wanted to do. I'll read it to you:

"'Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, that it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to prevent, attempt to prevent, or combine to prevent any individual from learning or from becoming an apprentice for the purpose of learning any useful and lawful trade, or perform any act which shall result in restricting the number of individuals who may learn or become apprenticed for said purpose, or in any way interfere with the enrollment as an apprentice or the employment of any individual desiring to learn or acquire a useful and lawful trade.'

"This bill was introduced early in the session and it had a hearing before the Committee on Revision of Laws on March 10. At this hearing it was pointed out that the bill was aimed at a form of monopoly especially vicious and tyrannical because it destroys the sacred right of every young American to enjoy freedom of opportunity to learn a useful trade, and thus affects directly and intimately the future welfare of the children of our citizens.

"Those of us who were interested in securing the passage of the bill made out what we thought was a strong case. We disclaimed any hostility toward trade unionism; we admitted that unions play an important part and have done valuable service in the industrial growth of the country, but we denied that the unions have earned the right to say to the people, 'So many and no more of your sons and daughters may enter the useful trades.' We pointed out that the New Jersey Legislature had done its share in passing laws intended to establish fair play between big business and little business and to safeguard the freedom of opportunity from the aggression of capital; all we asked was that this freedom of opportunity should be safeguarded also from the aggression of labor.

"Well, we were beaten. The bill never came out of committee; too much trade union pressure was brought to bear against it.

"Now I want to tell you just how this apprenticeship scheme is worked. I'll tell you a case in point. A working woman whom I knew came to me some time ago and asked me if I would help her to get her son into my hat factory as an apprentice. I made inquiries and found that there was going to be a vacancy in a short while and I told my foreman that I had a boy in view to fill. Some time later the foreman told me that there might be some difficulty about it, as a certain officer of the Hatters' Union wanted to put a friend in; but I insisted and put the boy in. When I told this to the woman she said, 'How much must I pay?' and when I asked her what she meant, she replied, 'I understand there's $30 to pay, which goes to the officers of the union.'

"I made inquiries and found that it was not unusual for a parent wishing to get a son into a trade to pay from $10 to $50 as a rake-off to some union official, but that when a parent stood out against this and there was no competition the bribe would fall as low as $2. That shows you the money graft of it, but there are other kinds of graft in it, too.

"One serious effect of this system is that the quality of workmanship in many trades in the United States is falling off while wages are going up. It is no common thing to hear employers say that if they want to secure a first-class workman they have to look among the middle-aged and elderly men, who were not trained under the present union rules, but under the earlier system, when workmen were united by a pride in good work and not by a suicidal policy of hostility toward their employers.

THE MAN ON THE JOB.

BY CHARLES STELZLE.

There are large numbers of workingmen who aspired to positions in life for which they were utterly unfitted and who have today degenerated into bitter cynics. This class furnishes a large percentage of those who are dominated by the spirit of social unrest. They are the disappointed visionaries among the artisan class—the idealists without a sense of proportion.

There are thousands of other men, unsuccessful products of our professional schools, who really might have made first-class mechanics.

Practically every American boy has, at some time, been dominated by the notion that he will become President of the United States. Has he not been told repeatedly that this is quite within his rights? Many a boy has realized, with something of a shock, that this great office would undoubtedly be denied him. Fortunately, he soon found some other occupation. There is something fine in the thought that the greatest gift within the power of the people may in time, be bestowed upon the humblest youth in the land.

But here, as in some other things, it would be well to give the young people of our country a clear sense of proportion and an appreciation of true values. It is so manifestly impossible for more than perhaps a dozen men to become President during the average period of possibility in a man's life, that it would be well to center the boy's attention upon those things to which he may attain with almost absolute certainty, if he is willing to pay the price of persistent hard work. For, after all, this is the essence of genius.

It is unfortunate that our system of education—particularly in our public school— is such that the vast majority of children, even the sons and daughters of the working class, desire to become professional men and women because they have an idea that such work is more genteel than that in the trades; with the result that the professions are overcrowded with people who are unfitted for the occupation which they have selected as their life's work.

The next great task of our educational institutions is so to dignify mechanical labor that it will appeal to the boys because of the possibilities in it for them. This will raise the artisan class to a higher and saner level and will give the efficient working man the place in society which he is justly entitled. It will take away the false conception, present even among working men themselves, that to toil with one's hands is to accept a menial position. It will also take away a large element of a certain spirit of social unrest which today exists among the masses, which is beneficial neither to themselves nor to anybody else.

Let's put first things first. Success is a matter of personal caliber and equipment. In almost every case it is a question of personal development, but there are mighty few who are willing to pay the price. It's so much easier to stop when the job becomes difficult, and find a really legitimate excuse—one that will be accepted by our friends and be a comfort to ourselves. Those who succeed get there principally because they hang on—hang on when others let go. It isn't because they possess more originality, or because they have greater knowledge. It's because they stay on the job.

It's usually in the little things that most men fall down. It isn't the big obstacle, which comes only occasionally, that floors them—they'd surmount that and win out. But the little troubles and vexations that come every day until they tire one out—these are the things that test a man to the limit of endurance. You've read the story of Gulliver's travels. You will recall how the army of tiny Lilliputians bound him hard and fast with fine cords, as he lay, unresisting. There is many a man who can successfully fight the giants of life, but the Lilliputians will render him powerless. It's the man who can stay on the job in spite of these—the one who has learned how to laugh them in the face—who will win out in the end.

It's in the little things that men judge us. Sometimes it's just a word spoken at a critical moment which either makes or unmakes a fellow. An opinion expressed, a criticism made, a judgment given—and the keen judge of men sizes you up and generally puts you where you belong. True enough, he doesn't always judge right, but it's usually a character and a life which is back of your remark, and the alert man of the world knows it. You'll probably get another chance, but for the present you've lost out.

Sometimes it's a matter of dress. A frayed collar, not worth another laundering, has cost many a man the chance of a lifetime. You've been sized up as "cheap, careless, slouchy." When a stenographer applies for a job with her collar fastened with three common pins, their points projecting, she isn't likely to make a good impression.

There are some geniuses who think that they can also be slouches, but you must prove first of all that you are a genius before you can afford to be a slouch. An average workingman hasn't much money to spend on his clothes, especially when he's out of a job, but a clean shirt and a clean collar, with a clean-shaven face, has singled out many a man from the crowd of unemployed that answered a newspaper advertisement.

In the end it's the man who is really on the job all the time who will win out. Whether he works or plays, whether he reads or writes, whether he thinks or talks, or talks and thinks—but always on the job—that's the fellow who will make his way to the front, while others step aside.

Important to Visiting Buyers

When you have purchased your goods from the first merchant, ask him to enter the sale on a transportation check. He will do so and give you this check, on which you will have recorded any subsequent purchases you may make in other FREE FARE STORES.

When your shopping is finished, present this check at the refunding office, The Los Angeles Times (First and Broadway) and they will cash it without red tape; delay, or formalities. They will refund the full amount of your round trip fare if your purchases are sufficient; and if not, the percentage to which you are entitled.

The Los Angeles market offers an assortment of merchandise at all times equal in extent and variety to all possible demands of all classes of buyers. Los Angeles merchandise is suited to the special requirements of the people living in Southern California, Arizona and New Mexico. It is sold at prices, quality for quality, at least as low, and in many cases lower, than the same class of goods can be obtained from any other available source of supply. The visiting buyer in Los Angeles will be treated in such a way that he will come again. He will see and examine the merchandise before parting with his money, and a responsible local dealer will be answerable for its quality. The visitor will be considered as under the protection of the merchants whose names appear in this advertisement, and each one of them will see that his visit is made both pleasant and profitable. Moreover, each merchant will be as much interested in protecting the interests of the visiting buyer while he or she is in Los Angeles as the visitor himself could possibly be.

ONTARIO PROUD OF "HOTPOINT."

Has Seen Industry Grow Out of Small Beginning.

Is Now Center for Electric-heated Appliances.

Southland Factory Alone is Valued at Million.

ONTARIO, Oct. 31.—From a small one-room factory, employing perhaps half a dozen men and girls in 1900, to a concern whose local factory alone gives employment the year around to 500 employees, with a pay roll of $40,000 a month in 1914, is the almost unbelievable history of the Hotpoint Heating Company of Ontario.

In fourteen years the manufacturing of "Hotpoint" electrically-heated appliances has come to be not only the leading industry of Ontario, but one of the foremost enterprises of the State of California.

The Ontario factory of the company, alone, is valued at $1,000,000, and in addition to this the company now maintains a large manufacturing and assembling plant in Chicago, with assembling and shipping depots in New York City, Vancouver, B. C., Toronto, Ont., and London, Eng.

Electrically-heated appliances to the number of 750,000, including heating and cooking articles of all descriptions, is the annual output of the Hotpoint company. Of this number one-half are the famous "Hotpoint" flat iron, which is shipped not only to points in the United States and Canada, but all over the civilized world.

Earl H. Richardson, who invented the iron and many other members of the "Hotpoint family," is the man who started the industry. In the face of many difficulties, with but meager capital and little encouragement, he set up a small factory in a rented storeroom on West Main street, Ontario.

Within a year he had succeeded not only in drawing the attention of the electrical world to his inventions, but had interested the financial world as well. L. Booth & Sons of Los Angeles became interested in the business at this time and it has since developed rapidly and been built up to its present prosperous condition by the Richardson and Booth families.

At the end of three years, the business had grown to such proportions that all available space in the building occupied by the original factory room had been filled and a new and permanent factory had become imperative.

It was here that the business men of Ontario got together for a master stroke. Realizing the future of the "Hotpoint" industry and its importance to Ontario, they secured an option on a desirable location on East Main street, between the Southern Pacific and Salt Lake Railroads, and offered it to the Hotpoint company, providing that it should locate in Ontario permanently. In 1905 the company moved into the first unit of what is now the "Hotpoint" factory. An abundance of cheap electric power was one of the chief factors in the company's decision to locate in Ontario.

One of the first questions put to the heads of the company when the business is being discussed is why the main plant of a company doing national business should be located in California.

LOGICAL LOCATION.

Of the several reasons for this, perhaps not the least important is that the heads of the company would live nowhere else. California, however, uses more electrical current per capita than any other State in the Union and all the Western States are favored with low rates and therefore use electricity more freely than the Eastern States.

Despite this fact, however, 65 per cent. of the "Hotpoint" output is now sold east of the Rocky Mountains. Climatic and labor conditions for manufacturing purposes are ideal here and the only real handicap to Ontario as the headquarters for a concern doing a national business has been removed to a great extent by the opening of the Panama Canal, which greatly facilitates the movement of material to and from plants located in this section.

While the "Hotpoint" line carries twenty-five or thirty household electrically-heated appliances, the flat iron is the principal single product. The "Hotpoint" iron was the first to develop the three most important features which are embodied to a greater or less degree in most of the electric irons now on the market, namely, the attached stand, the hot point and the detachable switch plug. The "Hotpoint" people were the first to put an electrical toaster on the market, ten years ago, and the first to put out a moderate-priced and successful electric coffee percolator, five years ago.

The Ontario factory is chiefly of concrete construction and, being for the most part on one floor, is afforded splendid light and ventilation facilities in all its departments. The factory maintains its own cafeteria, where all food is electrically cooked and sold to employees at actual cost of supplies and labor.

Involved in Important Deal of Past Week.

Ponet Hotel, corner Pico and Hope.

Modern close-in hostelry leased to George A. Eastman thr ough agency of E. W. Cason & Co.

FOR TEN-YEAR TERM.

Hundred-Thousand-dollar Hostelry at Pico and Hope Leased to Los Angeles Hotel Man.

A deal has just been closed through the agency of E. W. Cason & Co., associated hotel brokers, whereby Mrs. N. Ponet has leased to George A. Eastman the new Ponet Hotel building at the northeast corner of Pico and Hope streets for a term of ten years. The total rental consideration is given at $100,000.

The hotel, which has just been completed, is a class "B" building with downstairs lobby and cafe. Upstairs there are 115 sleeping rooms and sixty private baths. The building cost approximately $100,000 and was planned by Morgan, Walls & Morgan.

Mr. Eastman is well-known in California hotel circles, having operated several European plan hotels both here and in San Francisco, and was last proprietor of the El Capitan Hotel at Merced. He also recently leased the new Jacoby Hotel at No. 735 South Hope street, which has 100 rooms, and which he will operate in connection with the Ponet Hotel.

FOR CAMPUS GROUP.

Chapel of Harvard Military School Nearing Completion at Sixteenth and St. Andrews.

A noteworthy addition now being made to the campus group of the Harvard Military School for Boys in this city is the chapel, which is nearing completion on that part of the grounds cornering upon the intersection of Sixteenth street and St. Andrews place. The building, which was planned by Reginald D. Johnson of Pasadena and C. M. Winslow of San Diego, acting as associated architects, will seat about 300.

The architects followed out a Spanish treatment, in keeping with the general style of the other buildings. The structure is 91x35 feet in size. The cement gun method of applying plaster over metal reinforcing was used in the finishing of the exterior walls. The interior finish is entirely in redwood, the heavily-timbered ceiling being a feature.

Mr. Johnson is now engaged in the preparation of plans for a natatorium, containing a swimming tank 30x75 feet in dimensions, and to be built near the school gymnasium. This building will follow the same architectural style as has been used in the chapel.

NEW BLOCK STARTED.

POMONA, Oct 31.—Wilton Bros. of this city have secured the contract for the erection of a cement and iron building for Elliott Hinman at the corner of Gibbs and Second street and have commenced work. The structure will be opposite that on which Mrs. Josie Volk of Long Beach has just built a business building and will be occupied by the Hinman Feed and Fuel Company.

Builds Cubist House.

sort of Persian motif, in soft sapphire blue.

It was afternoon and the sun rays, shattered into their elements by the beveled glass, flung themselves riotously over the walls and the floor of the hall, where a rich oriental rug caught and hid the colors to give them out again when the sun was gone. By the simplest means a most unusual effect of ornamentation is produced. It is here in the hall one who delights in the obvious must linger, for it is here on this main axis that all attempt at ornamentation is concentrated.

On opposite sides of the hall at the front are dining-room and drawing-room. On the plan, in modern phrase, the latter is doubtless the living-room, but there is so much of dignity in its proportioning that it suggests men and women in evening dress—a salon rather than an intimate chat. By a trick of furniture arrangement a corner of it might invite to a cosy tete-a-tete, but it is essentially formal.

"Only one of my friends has told me what she really thinks of the house," said Mrs. Banning. "Her verdict was: 'It's too plain inside and out. I don't like it.' All I could say to her was: 'But I didn't build it to please you. I built it to please myself.'

TIRED OF GINGERBREAD.

"You see, I'm tired of the everlasting pursuit of the grain of dust. I'm tired of the gingerbread work that characterizes our American houses. I wanted something simple, easy to care for, but I wanted the best of material and the best of workmanship."

Beyond question this house is a veritable gospel of simplicity. It takes a moment to comprehend the manner in which the monastic severity of the interior has been achieved. But gradually one becomes conscious of the fact that there is no wood in this room save the polished oak floor and the doors. There is no baseboard, no picture molding, no door or window frames. Even the mantelpiece gives no relief to the general austerity, being in effect but a section of the plain wall thrust forward and topped with a heavy mantel shelf.

The doors are of mahogany, without panel or molding, sheer slabs swung into place on invisible hinges, with heavy glass knobs.

With two exceptions there is little variation in the essential features from this formal reception-room to the farthest of the servants' quarters. Usually there is an obvious dwindling in quality of material and workmanship from front to rear, but this house is an exemplification of absolute democracy—what's good enough for the mistress is none too good for the maid. Perhaps in the modern mode of thought one might better hope that what's good enough for the mistress may possibly be tolerated by the maid. However, reception-room, kitchen, guestroom, servant's bedroom, all are alike in their perfect craftsmanship. And here lies the justification of the complete austerity. With ordinary artisanry the effect would be crude and characterless, hopelessly insipid. Instead, one finds a vivid demonstration of the difference between artifice and art, between the mechanic and the craftsman.

PLASTERER AN ARTIST.

Whoever plastered these rooms is an artist at heart. He had it in his power to ruin the house. The steel door and window frames, invented by the builder, are of structural integrity and need no wood frames or jambs to hide them. But they present a problem to the plasterer, who has concealed them with rare skill.

The mahogany doors are of carefully-selected wood, hand-finished, though, of course, they are a radial veneer on a laminated core, in the modern method that is a guaranty against warping and checking. The spindles of the balustrade of the hall stairway are hand-wrought. And so every detail, the finish of the oak floors, the insertion of the screen between the bisected spindles of the front door, the setting of the German silver sink in the butler's pantry, the very cupboards in the kitchen bespeak the hand of the craftsman.

In two rooms, and two only, has wood been allowed any decorative part. The library has a high wainscoting of mahogany, a mantelpiece of the same wood, and in this room are the only wood window frames in the house. But there is no molding or beading, no paneling, nothing to break the plain surfaces, nothing to divert attention from the perfect finish of the wood, not a crack or crevice where dust may hide and one day leer at the housekeeper.

THOUGHT OF SIDEBOARD.

At one end of the dining-room are two built-in mahogany cupboards, through whose clouded glass doors the colors of old china gleam softly. Between them is a recess lined from floor to ceiling with mahogany, built especially for an elaborately-carved sideboard, one of the Banning treasures, made to order in San Francisco back in the early seventies. It is a relic of the black walnut era and of that period when the taste of the Nob Hill millionaires dominated the artistic endeavors of San Francisco craftsmen. But for this recess it might look a trifle ill at ease in these new surroundings.

"My daughter wrote from New York imploring me not to bring this old sideboard into the new house," said Mrs. Banning, "but I wrote her I intended to bring every piece of furniture and everything else I possessed.

"Why, not since I left the old mansion at Wilmington have I had a room big enough for all the pieces of my bedroom set that was made to order in San Francisco along the same generous lines as this sideboard. And I am so happy to have a place for all these things that I have no idea of giving up any of them. I've built the house for them with a special place for each and every one."

Oddly enough, to this most unusual of houses this old furniture adapts itself better than it would to any of the usual types of modern houses. The plain walls form a background which enhances whatever of individual merit any piece of furniture may have, and a rare Chinese table, a fine specimen of work of Emile Gallee, whose shop at Nancy was once the Mecca for lovers of inlaid woods; a consol of one of the French Louis periods, some fine old Colonial mahogany and these examples of mid-nineteenth century San Francisco woodcraft—the heterogeneous collection of a lifetime—live in this house more friendly than might at first seem possible. The house is as a scroll on which the builder may write her personality without constant intrusion from the architect.

NEUTRAL COLORS.

Perhaps the most subtle suggestion of the architect's part is in the treatment of the walls. Throughout the house they are the same, of no color yet far from colorless. This quality is effected by a mixture of paints of strong primary colors, blended to a pregnant neutrality. One by one these colors assert themselves, in the varying lights of day and evening, responsive to the chromatic provocation of a polished mahogany table, of a curtain or rug, of a red cement walk outside or a bed of flowers, of a woman's dress or the shattered rainbows of the west window on the stair landing.

Standing in one room looking into another it seems incredible that the walls are identical in finish, so varied is the coloring. They have the elusive quality of a pearl, at no two moments the same, to the eyes of no two people the same. At night with the diffused light from pearl-like bowls suspended from the ceilings the effect is even more subtly beautiful than by day. There is nothing monastic or severe about it to any lover of color.

BUILT TO ENDURE.

In its outward form the house is merely the expression of the spirit within—that of absolute simplicity, absolute sincerity, absolute independence.

It is built of reinforced concrete and hollow tile, a house that will outlast more than one generation. Built by the Aiken system of construction, each wall cast separate and complete on a great table supported by jacks and, when set, raised into position and firmly anchored there, this house was a seven-days' wonder to the neighborhood when it was under way. And the wonder has not ceased, for it is indeed a daring departure in architecture. It stands today in its naked truth, a protest against jigsaw ornament and shoddy workmanship and all the flimsy pretense under which American architecture too often tries to hide its insincerity.

Of course Mrs. Banning disclaims credit for the designing of the house and insists it belongs to her architect, Irving J. Gill. Mr. Gill, in turn, gives the credit to Mrs. Banning. Between the two one gathers that Mrs. Banning knew what she wanted and Mr. Gill knew how to give it to her, and as the house developed Mrs. Banning learned that she wanted a lot of things she did not know she wanted and might never have found out had she collaborated with an orthodox architect.

Mr. Gill is an architectural heretic. He has a creed of his own, based on the negation of the non-essential. Mrs. Banning subscribes to that. She is tired of cheap gingerbread work and tawdry superfluities.

Mr. Gill believes in craftsmanship, placing the builder a niche above the architect. Mrs. Banning subscribes to that and was willing to pay for day's work from foundation to roof in order to have a hand-wrought stairway that is a thing of beauty, plastering that is a work of art, a window of daring originality, doors that are possible only because they are perfect, and the knowledge that in parts unseen the house is equally well made. Incidentally, the architect and builder of this house wear the same hat.

Mr. Gill says simply and directly what he has to say. Mrs. Banning likes frankness, too, and so this house does not say one thing to your face and another when you are not looking. In other words, there is not a great pretense at the front and stark ugliness at the rear. Indeed, the view of the house from the garage or the laundry beyond the clothes yard is the most interesting of all. All the walls rise sheer to an abrupt sky line, without cornice or overhanging roof, but here at the back the broken mass is terrace-like and the skyline irregular, and, looking upward, you seem to come suddenly upon the secret of the Paolo Veronese skies. Italy's sky is not really bluer than California's. It only seems so because of the Italian architecture.

MUCH LEFT TO NATURE.

Mr. Gill's work has some of the elements of futurist art, not in the obvious sense of his use of cubic units which might catalogue him among the cubists, but in his insistent demand upon the imagination of others. He asks no one to be content with the bald facade of a newly-finished house, but would have you foresee what time and nature will do for it. He holds that in California the exterior ornamentation of a house should be left to nature.

He counts definitely on the decorative value of palms and vines, shrubs and flowers and trees, and so the walls of the Banning house were scarcely in place before there was a generous planting of bignonia and ampelopsis and Ficus repens, of palms and roses, and plants for window boxes. And when these vines and flowers form a tangled tapestry over the walls, they will not hide a lot of useless ornament but will themselves serve a definite and preconceived purpose of ornamentation.

Not only in its esthetic articles has Mrs. Banning subscribed to the Gill credo, but in all the practical ones as well. In this house no less thought was given to the method of garbage disposal, to the small door for the delivery of ice from the outside direct to the refrigerator, to a mail box opening outdoors and in, to fireplaces that will not smoke, than to the proportion of an arch, the design of hall, window and front door, and the rare conceit of the stairway.

With a client free from subservience to tradition, wholly indifferent to the opinion of others, Mr. Gill has had a chance to proclaim his heresies in a louder voice than ever before. Most of those who have seen the house inside, less honest than the one frank friend, have begun with the usual platitudes and later unconsciously admitted their insincerity by the naive declaration:

"It does grow on one, doesn't it?"

Wrestling with house-building usually makes the owner feel miles nearer to his grave, but Mrs. Banning, long ago abandoned her invalid's chair and counts the past year one of the happiest of her life. She stands ready to recommend the building of a house after one's own heart as a panacea for all human ills.

OCCUPIES NEW HOME.

Head of Big Drug Concern Established in Handsome Windsor Square Residence—Landscapers Busy.

Milton E. Getz, banker and president of the Sun Drug Company, he just occupied his new home in Windsor Square. The house was ready several weeks ago, but the owner preferred to wait until all of the elaborate landscape work around the residence was completed before moving in. The dwelling, which is of [illegible] is one of the handsomest places in the tract.

Miss Mary Crimmins, another Windsor Square builder, has moved into her new home on Windsor boulevard. The residence was designed by Morgan, Walls & Morgan, and is in the French renaissance style. Workmen are now engaged in beautifying the grounds surrounding the Crimmins place.

Daniel Teare, whose residence was completed a short time ago in Windsor Square, has arrived in Los Angeles from Chicago and will occupy his home in a short time. Half a dozen other fine places are nearing completion in the subdivision.

Results of a Long Trust.

[Westminster Gazette:] The late Lord Ellesmere was not the only peer of the present day who came into a vast fortune as the outcome of a trust of long duration. Another was the late Lord Rendlesham, who inherited an immense estate in very similar circumstances as the descendant of Peter Thellusson, whose last testament created so much sensation rather more than 100 years ago. It was, indeed, this will which was responsible for the act of Parliament making any further dispositions of the same order impossible.

In his own case, however, Parliament refused to interfere, and the property bequeathed was constantly allowed to accumulate until the £600,000 had become tens of millions. But the law courts swallowed up most of the money before the three generations had passed away, and Lord Rendlesham, to whom the inheritance came on the death of the last survivor in 1856, received but an ordinary fortune instead of the huge mountain of gold which old Peter Thellusson had dreamed of.

Huntington Beach

Growth Continues Despite Depressions, Wars, Elections

This is a story of optimism, based on a most convincing array of facts.

Eighteen months ago we began selling our small farms and lots. We have since then faced the following conditions, which followed each other in quick succession:—

California had just been through a frost in its citrus belt;

Financial depression throughout the world;

Tariff legislation, which struck at sugar and citrus fruits;

Japanese war scare;

Few tourists—everyone waiting to come Exposition year;

War;

Finally, a disturbing State election.

Such a series of blows might be expected to hold back any community, but we can show you that

Huntington Beach Displayed the Most Evident, Substantial, and Rapid Growth of Any City Near Los Angeles

The population 18 months ago was under 2000; the school enrollment now shows it near 3000. Over 200 new houses have been built. More than 300 small farms have been sold in the vicinity, and scores of people have settled on them. Concrete recreation pier was built, best on the Coast. County laid dozens of miles of paved boulevards within a short radius. South Coast boulevard started. Linoleum factory, one of South's biggest industries, built and started. And many lesser things came.

The reason is that Huntington Beach is only partly developed, that it is one of the very finest beach city locations near Los Angeles, that it has varied resources to support many times its present population.

Small Farms—$300 An Acre and Up

In 1-3, 1-2, 1, 2 and 5-acre tracts; adjoining or near the city. First-class alfalfa, fruit and lemon land. An abundance of good, soft water for irrigation.

50-foot lots—$500. In best residence part of city, houses all around, cement sidewalks, curbs, good dustless streets, in and paid for. Near the surf.

Terms—One-tenth down; interest 6 per cent.

We take you down free.

REVIVE MOORISH STYLE.

Architect Says California Mission Effect in Dwellings is Bad Taste. Too "Churchy."

California is always showing its loyalty to Spanish traditions to which it is indebted for much of its absorbing romance. Richard Requa, an architect of San Diego, says the State's latest recognition of the Spanish idea is shown in a present revival of Moorish architecture.

"The Hispano-Moorish type of architecture, developed in Southern Spain, is especially suited to this region," Mr. Requa declared yesterday at the Clark. "Southern Spain and Southern California are strikingly similar in landscapes, coloring, topography, atmosphere and climate.

"Architects approve the development of the Moorish style much more than they did the tendency toward the Spanish mission style, which became so pronounced in California. The mission style is purely ecclesiastical and it is wrong to use it in dwellings. The mission style is all right for churches and some other public buildings, but in dwellings it offends taste.

"The Moorish has a recognized residence type of architecture. The prominent features of the Moorish style for dwellings are the patio, long windows opening on an ornamental balcony, and touches of strong color.

"California builders are copying types directly from Southern Spain. This tendency is especially pronounced around San Diego and is noticeable in Los Angeles and other parts of the State.

"The mission style of architecture has been called Moorish by mistake. The old California missions were built after a simplified form of the Spanish Renaissance type. The padres held to the lines and proportions of the type but from the lack of tools and material were forced to leave out the ornamental features."

DEATH IS MERE BOYS' PLAYING.

YOUNGSTERS JUGGLE DYNAMITE, EVEN LETTING IT FALL TO CEMENT PAVEMENT.

Two urchins toting dynamite enough to fill an I.W.W. dream, strolled up to the inebriate farm yesterday and asked Sergt. John North, in charge there, what he thought the strange contents of the bag might be. At first, the boys thought some odd variety of vegetable had come into their charge, then they thought the queer sticks much too even and too hard for anything to eat.

They took a few sticks out, played with them. Harry Tilden was a juggler, and could keep four of them in the air at once. If they happened to drop on the hard road or a chance stone, what of that? It didn't bother the boys.

Harry was keeping four of them spinning with his hands as they walked up to the inebriate farm. Much cement walk surrounds that institution, and Harry was so interested in looking at the barracks and the array of carefully cultured flowers, that he repeatedly dropped his playthings. Sergt. North happened along, witnessed the jugglery and then looked closely at the tubes.

"What are you playing with?" he asked suspiciously.

"Something we found," the boys answered.

Just then the regularity of the boy's throwing was interrupted and the four pieces dropped to the pavement. The sergeant identified them as sticks of dynamite. The bag contained thirty pounds, and was found by the two boys in an abandoned water main on the Los Feliz road.

WRITES HIS OWN DEATH SENTENCE.

Death pleaded more eloquently than life yesterday when T. F. G. Gentle sat in judgment on his destiny. He ruled in favor of death, and executed his judgment by drinking poison. When he arrived at the Receiving Hospital, the case was closed.

As the judge he wrote the following brief of his decision: "I am not drunk nor out of my mind. Neither am I crazy. I do not care to live a cripple. I refuse to go through life like a lame duck. I have no money, so there is no use in looking for it. I have enjoyed my last dollar. I don't beg forgiveness or feel sorry. I enjoyed my life and I have no kick."

He lived in a lodging-house at No. 637 Union avenue, where he has been confined to his bed for several weeks, suffering from a painful attack of rheumatism. His limbs were drawn and tortured with the rheumatic assaults. For several weeks he lay thus, and then he told his landlady that he was going to hold court on himself and decide whether he should live or die. She thought it a fanciful quip, for he was always merry with his jests and japes.

But Mr. Gentle was in earnest, and he viewed his case carefully, listening to arguments for both life and death. He wrote his farewell letter with a shaky scrawl, and then tucked the pen into the hands of a Billiken that he used for a paper weight.

Legacy to Science.

SCHOLAR'S WILL IS FILED HERE.

CELEBRATED NATURALIST HAD CALIFORNIA PROPERTY.

Lengthy Document Recalls Tragedy When Sir John Murray, Oceanographer of Note, was Killed in Motor Wreck in Scotland—Research Plans Laid Out for Heirs.

Projecting into the future scientific work that occupied his life, the foreign will of the late Sir John Murray, K.C.B., celebrated naturalist, and oceanographer of Edinburgh, Scotland, has been filed for probate in this county. It comes here because Sir John made investments in Los Angeles county worth $5602.79, and in Riverside county worth $2000.

Sir John, a Canadian, was 73 years old at the time of his death. He was a naturalist on the Challenger during her historic scientific voyage that lasted from 1872 to 1876. In 1911, he lectured at Boston and Chicago. He was killed in a motor car accident at Kirkleston, Scotland, last March 16.

The will, which covers fifty pages written on both sides, was executed November 27, 1911, and admitted to probate at Edinburgh. It was offered for probate here by Maurice M. Armstrong, who holds an assignment of a portion of the legacy and shares in the estate of the surviving widow, Lady Isabel Murray.

Lady Isabel is 47, and resides at Wardie, Edinburgh. The children are Margaret P. Murray, Rhoda Isabel Murray, John C. Murray, Thomas Henderson Murray, and Winifred Alice Murray. They reside with Lady Isabel. John Davis Murray is on Christmas Island, where Sir John was interested in the Christmas Island Phosphate Company, Ltd.

The will provides an annuity of $25,000 for Lady Isabel during her lifetime. The estate, the value of which is not given, is to be divided among the children when Winifred, now 14, reaches the age of 21. An exception is made of 250 shares of stock in the Christmas Island Phosphate Company, Ltd., the income of which is to be devoted to scientific research and expeditions for twenty-five years.

Sir John's scientific library, laboratory, instruments, records and specimens are bequeathed to his sons. The children are given a free hand to use the money bequeathed to them, but it is suggested to them that a particular use can be made in oceanology and limnology, which will have a tendency to increase knowledge in those lines of scientific endeavor.

In his comprehensive scientific scheme, Sir John advises his children to consult with the Royal Society of London and the Royal Society of Edinburgh, if they contemplate devoting any considerable sum to the work. He outlines a period of twenty years for this object, at the end of which time the children may devote the sum to a further period of years or they may devote one-half to themselves and the other half to the Royal Society of London.

Castle Challenge Lodge is given to Lady Isabel during her life, as well as the furnishings, except the scientific articles that go to the sons.

Villa Medusa, which has been used for scientific purposes, may be continued for this work or it may be sold. If the latter is decided upon, Sir John requests that another place be equipped and called Challenge Lodge Scientific offices. Bequests of $25 each are made to the servants and co-workers in Sir John's laboratories.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS AS A BEAUTIFIER.

Wednesday saw the closing of the first annual chrysanthemum show to be held by the Vermont Square Chrysanthemum Club with a scene festive and beautiful, both in the exquisite showing of prize flowers and the table gathering of charmingly-gowned ladies who made the entries and superintended the exhibit. The evening's programme was devoted to the awarding of the prizes and the discussion of the club's many plans for the coming year.

More than 100 varieties of rare chrysanthemums were entered by the amateur resident growers of that section in competition for a number of valuable prizes. Some new specimens excited much comment, such as the Baby chrysanthemums, no larger than a violet; the delicate Pompon, which can be worn in a lady's hat, and the giant Lady Bertha, which is so heavy as to bend its own stalk. There were twelve different classes of entries and the winner of the largest number of first prizes was Mrs. Francis Steinmetz, followed in order by Mrs. B. F. Woodward, Miss Pearl Hawley and Mrs. E. C. King. Other prize winners were J. F. Bailey, Mrs. H. E. Hales, Mrs. S. J. Bowles, Mrs. E. D. Arbinggast, Mrs. J. C. Robertson, Mrs. D. Adams and Mrs. B. H. Scott.

Professional exhibits were received from Dr. and Mrs. Walter Jarvis Barlow of No. 2329 South Figueroa, from Alexander Buchanan and from Westlake and Elysian Parks through Supt. Shearer of the landscape department. These entries were not eligible for prizes as the aim of the club is to promote zeal among the amateur gardener residents in Vermont Square in bringing about the greater beautification of that section by the growth of chrysanthemums.

The idea of forming a chrysanthemum club and holding a regular annual flower festival originated with Caroline Brittin, librarian of the Vermont Square branch, who is an especial student and lover of flowers.

The judges were William Kennedy, Carl Lambert and James McGillivery. The committee in charge of the show was composed of Miss Caroline Brittin, chairman; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Steinmetz, Mr. and Mrs. O. N. Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stoneham, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Woodward and Miss Alma Morris.

CONTEST FOR CONTROL.

Aunt Rosa and Cowboy Mines in the Amalie District Under Management of New President.

A lively contest for the possession of the controlling interest in the Aunt Rosa and Cowboy properties in the Amalie district, near Bakersfield, occurred a few days ago. John W. Kelly, an oil man, and his associates succeeded in swinging the deal their way, by purchasing some of the stock of the minority holders, although Philadelphia interests were active bidders.

A reorganization of the controlling company, the Kern Tonopah Mining Company, was effected, Mr. Kelly securing the presidency. Mr. N. N. Brown and P. J. O'Brien were reelected vice-president and treasurer, respectively. Among the directors are W. H. Dale and W. P. O'Meara.

FOR THE GOOD OF MAN.

Many Prominent Ladies Give Their Services to Aid in Curing Deformities of Little Children.

The personnel of the committee of ladies who will have charge of the orthopedic dispensary recently established by the Brownson House Settlement Association was announced yesterday by Miss Mary J. Workman, the president. The members follow: Miss Mary Kenealy, Miss Leta Murrieta, Miss Marie Mullen, Mrs. James T. Murray, Mrs. Henry W. Keller, Mrs. George Allan Hancock, Mrs. Mary Young Moore, Mrs. F. O. Houghton, Jr., Mrs. George Nevell Warwick, Mrs. Charles M. Masson, Mrs. W. J. Brennan and L. A. Cartier.

The orthopedic dispensary is open at the settlement house, No. 711 Jackson street, on Thursday afternoons from 1 to 3 o'clock. Dr. John Carling is in charge; Dr. Elizabeth Saphro, assistant.

Patients come from many of the outlying districts as well as Los Angeles. Deformities that are quickly remedied while a person is young are the specialties, for these, as the child grows older, oftentimes become impossible to cure.

CROSSES THE BAR.

Thomas H. Hastings Dies—Following a Service this Afternoon His Body Will be Taken to Kentucky.

Thomas Horace Hastings died at his home in Hollywood yesterday afternoon after a short illness, aged 38 years. The deceased was a native of Kentucky and a graduate of the University of Virginia. He practiced law in Kentucky for a short time, came to this city in 1901 and became associated with James A. Anderson, but after a few years' practice gave it up on account of ill health and went into the real estate and insurance business with his brother, Alfred. He was a man of strict integrity and commanded the respect of his large circle of friends and was esteemed by the membership of the Hollywood Presbyterian Church, of which he was also a member.

He leaves two brothers and a sister here—Dr. Hill Hastings, Alfred Hastings and Miss Elsie Hastings, all of whom were present at his death. The funeral service will be held at his late residence, corner of Russell and Serrano avenues, Hollywood, at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Interment will be at Elizabethtown, Ky.

Retracing Long Hike of Early Fifties.

Mrs. W. C. James,

Widow of the Iowa jurist, who is visiting here. She walked to California beside a prairie schooner over sixty years ago.

Across the Continent.

WALKED HERE SIXTY-TWO YEARS AGO; RIDES NOW.

ENTHUSIASM and romance are the recipes for keeping young, given by Mrs. W. C. James, 80 years of age, who returned to Los Angeles after sixty-two years yesterday. Her first trip across the plains to California, in 1852, shortly after the discovery of gold, was made on foot. She is the widow of the late Judge James of Council Bluffs, Iowa, who for years took a prominent part in the politics of his State. She is visiting Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Williams at No. 318 Avenue 53.

As a girl of 17, she took great delight in tramping along beside the train of overloaded prairie schooners, as it made its way wearily over the road westward. She says she thought nothing of walking twenty-five miles a day. There was no room for husky girls in the crowded wagons, so she walked.

With a party of friends she had set out to join her father, John van Arnum, who had followed the lure of gold to this State in 1849. Twice the travelers were threatened with attacks by Indians, once at Wood River in Nebraska and again at Green River in Wyoming. Mrs. James saw many die from cholera and other diseases en route.

She joined her brother in Yreka, and later went to Sacramento by muleback and stage coach, though a country infested by robbers. She returned East three years afterward by way of Panama, being one of the earliest travelers over the railroad which had just been constructed across the isthmus.

Although she again visited California in 1884, she never came to Los Angeles until the present trip. She now hopes to see the canal.

Mrs. James is still young in spirit and looks forward to living to be as old as her grandfather, whose age exceeded the century mark. Having herself had many interesting and thrilling experiences, she now enjoys reading books of adventure and romance. She says she is just as enthusiastic over life as she ever was.

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

[The Times invites strong, clear, bright expression of opinion on current subjects, timely, pertinent and popular. Brevity should be kept in sight. Essays eschewed. We Grow by Fighting.

EL CENTRO, Oct. 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I wish to thank you for that fine sermon by Henry Simon on "Baiting the Almighty" in The Times of October 26.

Out of the pure innocence of our finite hearts and minds we are often too apt to give the Almighty advice how to run his universe. Only recently we had a day set apart by the President for the special purpose of asking God for peace. Now, it's my conviction that the human race is responsible for any fractions of peace that we may have between ourselves as either nations or individuals.

God never started nor helped this or any other war. It was caused by our own depraved selfish human nature. Now, to my way of thinking, it would be better in keeping with the Gospel that Jesus taught to have asked God to so overrule this war to the betterment of the human governments interested, to so make it work out a better understanding of the uselessness of war and the folly of so much bloodshed to make "right by might." It is historically correct that we have come to our present civilization through wars, not only by those like this on hand, but by financial wars, social wars, etc.

We grow by fighting, but all the time there is an overruling Power constantly directing all these agencies to the betterment of the human race. And when we learn to look upon the character of God as he is, then and only then will we pray our prayers in accordance with His will. God will overrule this present unpleasantness to the betterment of the nations directly concerned, and while God never starts war, he certainly allows them for the good of those nations using such foolish and wicked means of settling their differences.

M. S. PHILLIPPE.

The Ridiculous Sunday Rest Law.

CORONA, Oct. 28.—[To the Editor of The Times:] To what can we liken that strange-looking Amendment No. 45? First, you see a Sunday law. Second, you see it perforated with exceptions. Third, you don't see it at all, and there stands the eight-hour specter in its place.

The law starts out by consigning the population of California, heretofore supposed to be rational men and women with brain powers sufficient to mind their own family affairs and to work when necessary and to rest when tired—consigning them to the baby nursery, where, like the spanked child, they must work or rest just when ordered, or get punished.

Religious laws, being radically wrong when applied by civil powers, are bound to be a misfit; and this Sunday law is a specimen of its kind. So many rights were invaded, that it was necessary to invent a varied assortment of exceptions.

The entire field of sports, and indulgence in luxuries, is encouraged on Sunday—the exemption does it—but an hour's beneficial labor is a crime. The ice cream stand and the theater are proper institutions, but an open bakery is a crime on the same day.

While this bill would successfully cripple the farmer and fruit dealer, it failed to include a clause stopping the growth and ripening of crops on Sunday. Possibly an oversight.

Another exemption classifies those who observe another day, presumably the seventh day, Saturday. Such individuals can keep out of prison, in exercising their faith, providing they join the Seventh Day Adventists or Seventh Day Baptists. This will constitute a process of painless extraction. The religious exemption, however, is not so broad as it looks. It places the Sunday keeper, without evidence, in security; but the Sabbatarian, if exempt, must produce proof to support his claim. It simply grants "toleration" to the Christian who differs from the popular belief; this word cannot exist in a land of true freedom. But Sunday laws are an invasion of inalienable rights and destroy freedom.

But the biggest exemption provides a privileged place for the Socialist. He who works but forty-eight hours a week is free to do as he pleases on Sunday. He can fearlessly write his articles, paste up his labels, or build him a chicken coop. But woe to the ordinary business man who tries to do likewise without the forty-eight-hour provision!

This amendment would create several distinct legal classes or castes. Smith, belonging to class ABC, could safely carry in an armful of wood on Sunday. But Jones, of class XYZ, following with a basket of chips, would be jailed and fined. In time these difficulties could be avoided by each family keeping a good lawyer on hand to plan the day's routine.

The interference with individual liberty on the first day of the week was first begun in the year A.D. 321 by the pagan Emperor Constantine. His decree read thus: "Let all judges and townspeople and all artisans, rest on the venerable day of the sun. But let those who are situated in the country freely and at full liberty attend to the cultivation of their fields." While it is true he was a pagan sun worshiper, yet he was far more considerate toward the tillers of the soil than some of the framers of more modern blue laws.

Religious legislation is practically an attempt to re-establish the old covenant enforced by fines and imprisonment. The intolerance of such laws cannot be discerned very fully until these two Western States are committed to Sunday laws, and a national act gives power to the entire group. Every true Christian and every loyal American should vote No on Amendment No. 45.

EUGENE A. BROWN.

Medical License.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 28.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I should like to call your attention to some objectionable features of the "Drugless Practitioners' Initiative Measure, No. 46." The wording of this measure is, in the main, practically the same as the drugless practice law now in force. But the following section (Sec. 20,) contains features that make the proposed measure absolutely pernicious:

"Any person who has been engaged in the actual practice of any drugless system or method of treating sick or afflicted human beings," this section reads, "which said drugless system or method is as set forth in and recognized by the terms of this act, within the State of California, for a period of six (6) months prior to the taking effect of this act, shall, upon the payment of the sum of twenty-five ($25) dollars, be entitled to register, without taking the examination hereinbefore set forth, as a drugless physician. Upon registering, such person shall be entitled to and receive a certificate as set forth in section eight (8) of this act, etc."

The first sentence reveals a "joker" of the most vicious character—one that cannot be considered humorous by any stretch of the imagination. For it states unequivocally that any person who has practiced any system or method of treating sick or afflicted human beings for six months is entitled to place "Dr." before his name, and practice medicine in California.

The word "afflicted" is (and undoubtedly was intended to be) of tremendous scope. For example, the person is unquestionably "afflicted" who has corns or bunions, and his affliction is made more tolerable by a skillful chiropodist. But most persons would hesitate to grant the chiropodist a license to practice medicine, and give him the title of "Dr." on the strength of his skill in cuticle paring. Yet, according to this proposed drugless measure, any person who has been engaged in easing other person's corn-aches in California for six months (skillfully or otherwise) may demand, and will receive without question or examination, a license to practice medicine on payment of $25.

The same demand may be made by barbers who have been engaged in opening and treating pimples or other facial discomforts for the past six months. As all barbers do this, it follows that practically every barber in California may "pay his money and receive his degree" if this drugless measure becomes a law.

Such drugless practitioners may not prescribe drugs, to be sure; but they may, if they choose, practice every phase of operative surgery, major or minor, since modern surgery requires the use of no drugs whatever. There is nothing in this proposed law to prevent any drugless practitioner attempting to remove an appendix, or a cancer; and he is also permitted to sign the death certificate in case his attempts are disastrous.

All this may seem facetious, perhaps improbable, this suggestion that some itinerant barber or chiropodist, with six months' experience, will attempt to perform operations that tax the skill of the best surgeons. But the old rule about "fools rushing in" still obtains. And past experience shows that ignorance about any operation is no bar to attempting it, particularly when this attempt is sanctioned by law.

There are many persons who contend that "if a man is fool enough to risk his life with any sort of doctor" it should be his privilege to do so. I am inclined to take this view myself—as regards adults, and persons of normal mentality. But what about children? And what about the army of strangers who visit California, and who will inevitably be trapped occasionally with the "Dr." signs, on the supposition that the term "Dr." is an earnest of medical education in California, just as it is in other civilized communities?

Let us take an easily supposable case. A stranger who is visiting Los Angeles finds that his child is ill. He has noticed Dr. Blank's sign near his residence, and acting on the supposition that Dr. Blank is a physician, and because he is close at hand, the stranger calls in the alleged doctor. The chances are about even that Dr. Blank is a drugless practitioner, possibly of the barber-chiropodist variety recently created.

If such is the case he will give the sick child no medicine. Meanwhile this child may have an incipient attack of diphtheria, and every hour that the giving of a dose of antitoxin is delayed lessens its chances of living. If antitoxin is given at once the child's chances of recovery are about fifty to one. If it is delayed forty-eight hours, or even twenty-four, the chances are shifted to more than even in favor of death.

Yet the father of this little child, ignorant of the facts about the "doctor" he has employed, and secure in the belief that his child is receiving good medical treatment, may not discover the deception until too late. The same thing might occur in cases of cerebrospinal meningitis, tetanus and a dozen other conditions.

Such a case as I have just outlined may happen—will occur inevitably—if the proposed drugless act becomes a law. And the persons who will be responsible for the child's death, and for this betrayal of a stranger's confidence in California's laws, will be the ones who vote for the proposed drugless practitioners' act, not the ignorant "doctor," who is only acting within his vested rights to visit patients, operate and sign death certificates.

To summarize: The primary purpose of medical license laws is to protect the public from incompetent persons who would give the impression that they are educated and skilled doctors.

The present medical law of California provides for the licensing of anyone who wishes to limit himself to drugless healing, and therefore there is no need for any additional legislation.

The real purpose of this amendment is not to regulate drugless healers, but to obtain a license without the formality of an examination, for several thousand ill-trained quacks and charlatans who have been practicing or attempting to practice their system of healing, and who cannot by any stretch of imagination qualify under our present medical law.

The association has a membership of 2500 and it is expected that the meeting here will bring at least 5000 additional visitors next year.

Figures Say.

BALANCE SWINGS WITH THE WAR.

MORE IMPORTS FROM ORIENT, LESS FROM EUROPE.

Report of Collector of Internal Revenue Here Shows Fortunes of Conflict for Los Angeles—Canada Also Takes Advantage of Situation as Does Mexico.

The receipts of the collector of customs for October show a large reduction, in comparison with the corresponding month of 1913 and 1912. The collections for October, 1912, were $93,175.42; for the same month in 1913, $81,256.17; for October, 1914, only $32,384.94. For the past month the receipts were $2647.74 from San Diego, as compared with $5919.14 for October, 1913; $900.23 from Calexico, as against $1566.64 for October, 1913; $20.50 from Campo, as against $1036.66, for the same period, and nothing last month from Tia Juana, as against $163.94 for October a year ago.

The collector states that the decline is due to the heavy falling off of importations from Europe as a result of the war. The figures show that the amount of imports from Germany are less than one-half what they were in October, 1913, the figures being $23,428 as against $60,210. The October shipment from Germany was made up almost entirely in one consignment of steel rails sent from that country before the war broke out. The imports from England and Belgium are small, but about the same as last year. They total only about $20,000. The importations from Austria-Hungary were reduced from $6324 in 1913 to $441. The October figures indicate that the imports from Scotland and Ireland are only one-half of what they were a year ago. Japan also dropped from $31,321 in October, 1913, to $13,562 for the past month.

China increased her importations over a year ago, sending us about $30,000 last month, as compared with $10,000 a year ago. Canada also shows an increase with $20,000, as compared with $9000 a year ago. Australia fell in the past month from $6000 sent in October, 1913, to $685.

Mexico is the largest importing country. Last month she sent across the line $275,000 worth. Most of the Mexican shipments are free goods, such as cotton and cattle. It is believed that shipments from the Orient will increase as a result of the war, but that there will be a steady decline of European shipments for the same reason.

Collector Carter of the internal revenue office reports collections of $82,971.60 for October, as compared with $95,471.62 for the corresponding period last year, and $76,757.59 for October, 1912. There is a big drop from the September collections that were added to largely by the astute wine men taking thousands of gallons of brandy out of the warehouses to prepare for the operations of the new war tax law, that fixed a tax of 55 cents a gallon on brandy used in the fortification of wine, instead of 3 cents, as has been the law since 1890.

With the additions to the articles and operations taxed by the war measure, it is expected that the receipts for November and December will break all records. The new law goes into effect on some articles today, but there are a number of taxes that will not be due and payable until December 1. These include bonds, debentures, certificates of indebtedness, sales or agreements, promissory notes, bundles shipped by freight or express, telegraph and telephone companies and messages, certificates of profit or damage, broker's note or membrandum, deeds or realty transfers, entry of goods at the customhouse, and for withdrawal, property insurance policies, foreign passage tickets, perfumery, cosmetics and a host of toilet articles, voting powers or proxies, etc.

LOSES NEW-FOUND FRIEND.

Well, Brooklynite, after His Experiences with Him, isn't so Sorry Now it's Over.

George Marshall, recently of Brooklyn, stepped out into the streets of a regular city when he left his lodging-house yesterday. He had an abiding faith in his fellow man, and when he met up with a friendly sort of a fellow, he immediately took him into his confidence.

He insisted that the stranger receive all the hospitality that his purse would permit. The stranger was willing, even anxious. After hospitality had reached a point where it was an issue of sheer endurance, Mr. Marshall decided to go to his room, and the stranger was invited to share his lodgings.

When half-way to the lodging-house, the stranger took Marshall into an alley, and there proceeded to throttle him. Marshall gave battle. He succeeded in saving his money, what little there was left, but he lost his friend. He wanted to.

THIS IS FOR MRS. JONES.

Device of Wilmington Investor to Enable Folks to See what is Going on in Street Without Looking Out.

When Mrs. Smith has a party down your street you can see just how many guests arrive and who they are if the invention of Oscar E. Gille, a young Danish electrician and machinist, ever becomes popular. The invention consists of a small refracting mirror which is to be set in the window frame or even on the inside of the room. Sitting before one of them it is possible to see both up and down the street, observing anything from a parade to a dog fight.

In addition to this, Gille, who resides at No. 200 Seventh street, Wilmington, has invented a combination desk tool. This can be used for moistening stamps and envelopes, cutting twine, erasing ink, sharpening pencils, cutting paper, pulling tacks and a few other incidental matters that come up in the course of a day's activities at a desk. The simple contrivance will soon be placed on the market and a factory will be started at Wilmington.

DEATH'S SUDDEN CALL.

The suddenness of death's mysterious call was deeply impressed upon Mr. and Mrs. J. Banning in the unexpected passing away on Friday of Mrs. Banning's father, Francis Watkins, from a cerebral hemorrhage at their home on North Wilton place. Mr. Watkins, who came to Los Angeles three years ago with his daughter and son-in-law from Mt. Vernon, O., was 75 years of age and at the time of his being taken ill, only the day before his death, seemed in perfect health. Mr. and Mrs. Banning left yesterday with the body for Mt. Vernon, where it will be interred beside that of Mr. Watkin's deceased wife.

Business: Money, Stocks, Bonds—Trade—Local Produce Market—Citrus Market

Hopeful.

ALL BUSINESS MUCH BRIGHTER.

Solution of Cotton Problem Rouses Enthusiasm.

Europe's Food Purchases Stimulate Market.

Money Rates Much Easier in Financial Centers.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Sentiment over the business prospect was decidedly brighter this week. Even in the steel trade a hopeful note was sounded.

Progress was made in working out the cotton problem, although some financial institutions in the West and other interior points show a lack of enthusiasm for the plan. Great Britain's exemption of cotton from all contraband restrictions when shipped in neutral vessels, even to belligerent countries, released large export orders. This was a prime factor in the drop in foreign exchange rates to nearly normal.

Clearing up of contraband questions also helped export buying of copper. Urgent demand for foodstuffs from abroad continued and many domestic dealers reported buying of war supplies on a large scale.

The nearly normal conditions in foreign exchange which have followed the flood of exports naturally reduces the menace of foreign liquidation of securities, but the time for resuming regular trading on the stock exchange remains a matter of conjecture.

Notable easing of money rates is resulting from the imminence of Federal reserve bank openings on November 16, with release of cash reserves estimated at over half a billion dollars. Marked improvement was shown in investment demand for short-term securities.

BIG SHIPMENTS FROM PORTLAND.

EXPORTS DURING OCTOBER ARE NEARLY HALF A MILLION GREATER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Oct. 31.—Portland's exports for the month ending today smashed every preceding record extending over the same period, amounting in value to $2,179,180. This exceeds the showing made in October, 1913, by nearly $500,000. The amount of wheat sent abroad was greater by more than 400,000 bushels than in the corresponding period of last year. Large quantities of oats for the cavalry horses of European armies were shipped to Europe and big consignments of flour were sent. Practically no oats or flour have been shipped to Europe from this port heretofore.

MARQUIS'S SON KILLED IN ACTION.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Oct. 31, 2:06 p.m.—Lord Nairne, second son of the Marquis of Lansdowne, Conservative leader in the House of Lords, has been killed in action. He was a major in the First Dragoons and served in the South African War.

Lord Nairne was born in 1874. In 1909 he married Lady Violet Mary Elliott, daughter of the fourth Earl of Minto, who was a former Governor-General of Canada. Since 1910 Lord Nairne had been an equerry-in-waiting to King George.

MILLION LOSS IN STRIKE.

Heavy Decrease in Earnings is Reported by the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DENVER, Oct. 31.—A decrease of $1,221,320 in the net earnings of the department of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company during the fiscal year ending June 30, was attributed mainly to the coal miners' strike, by President J. F. Welborn in his annual report, made public today.

The report detailed the decrease in earnings as follows:

"Gross earnings from operation were $17,803,025.21, a reduction of $1,812,862.50 compared with the previous year. The reduction in sales of iron and steel was $3,805,497.93, and of fuel, $3,007,364.57. Operating expenses were $16,729,255.25, and net earnings from operations, $1,053,-[illegible], being a reduction of $2,546,-[illegible]. Of this decrease $1,325,176.19 occurred in the iron department and was due primarily to the general curtailment of steel business throughout the country. The decrease of $1,221,320.19 in the fuel department was caused mainly by the direct and indirect effects of the strike, although without the strike there would have been a substantial reduction in these earnings."

President Baer of Occidental College will Leave for Canada this Week on Vacation Trip.

Dr. John Willis Baer, president of Occidental College, at the request of the Board of Trustees, leaves this week for an extended vacation, accompanied by Mrs. Baer. He will go up into Canada and from there gradually work his way east, with no definite time set for his return. He is not suffering from nervous prostration; he is not a physical wreck; there is nothing wrong at Occidental; he is coming back to continue the expansion of the institution along the lines he has so successfully prosecuted thus far. He has worked incessantly for four years without relief from the grind of college regulation and expansion, and was in need of a vacation to build up his physical strength and the trustees, realizing the value of his work, ordered him to take a rest. Dean Burt will be in charge of the college during his absence.

WHEAT MARKET FALLS BACK.

BIG RECEIPTS AT PRIMARY POINTS ARE FELT.

Fine Weather Puts Check on the Bulls in Corn, Although Fresh Sales to Europe are Reported. Buyers Hold Off in the Provision Field.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—Big receipts at primary points made the wheat market fall back today after an early advance. The close was nervous at 1-4c under last night. Corn finished unchanged to 1-4 cent down, oats off 1-4 to 1-2c, and provisions varying from 10c decline to a rise of 5c. Nearly twice as much wheat arrived at the principal terminals today as the total amount on the corresponding day a year ago. Besides the figures for the week exceeded 2,500,000 bushels, the record for the preceding seven days. Bullish sentiment resulting from the aggressiveness of Turkey, and the chance of a wet harvest in Argentina, was responsible for the strength of wheat at the outset, the market advancing to a level about five cents above the lowest prices of Thursday morning. Fine weather put something of a check on the bulls in corn. Account also was taken of the setback in wheat. On the other hand, fresh sales to Europe were reported, and it was said that the new Federal grading would delay the marketing of a great deal of corn which was moist. Oats were governed chiefly by the action of wheat and corn. Buyers held off in the provision market. Offerings were only moderate.

NIEUW AMSTERDAM'S TROUBLES. HER OFFICERS EXPLAIN THEM.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 31. — Why the liner Nieuw Amsterdam was taken into Plymouth on her last trip from New York, when she was bound to Rotterdam, was explained by her officers on her arrival here today. They said the vessel carried 1400 barrels of oil which the British authorities diverted to their own uses. It required six days to unload the oil, after which the Nieuw Amsterdam was permitted to proceed to Rotterdam.

THIRTY-FIVE MILLIONS.

Thirty Mining Companies Average Over a Million Dollars Apiece in Dividend Total.

Some idea of the richness of California's gold mines, when properly developed, may be gained from the fact that a total of $35,000,000 has been distributed in dividends by thirty mining companies during their career. This is, of course, only a small portion of all the companies which have operated in the State since the inception of the industry, and does not include all the dividend-payers, it being impossible in a number of instances to obtain the records of private corporations.

Gold mines principally have contributed to the total. Among the companies which have disbursed over $1,000,000, with the amount, are the following (gold unless otherwise stated:) Argonaut, $1,500,000; Hazel, $1,078,000; New Idriax (quicksilver,) $1,840,000; North Star, $4,136,989; Oroville Dredging, $2,164,000; Yellow Aster, $1,226,789. All the companies just mentioned have paid dividends this year.

Only thirteen of the companies which contributed to the $35,000,000 total have paid dividends this year, and their aggregate will exceed $1,500,000. Gold mining is now experiencing some stimulation, which will have a tendency to revive some of the old producers.

COMMERCIAL.

Trading yesterday was rather light and price changes few. Butter advanced to 30 cents after a single day at 29. The demand through the week has been very regular and the local supply has been growing a little heavier instead of lighter as expected. The increase in butter production through Southern California is one of the very notable things in the line of development. It is only a matter of time before this will be export territory instead of import, as has been the rule for many years past. The extension of dairy farming has had a tendency to increase the attention paid to butter and the grade of California butter is being bettered and today on the strict 93 score out of a possible 100 points it equals the best butter produced in the United States. San Francisco market is standing at 30½ cents.

Eggs are still an uncertain quantity as to prices. Quotations were up to 53 and closed the week at 51 in San Francisco, which has made possible considerable importation from the north to Los Angeles. The demand for fresh stock is far greater than the supply. Receipts were 171 cases and butter arrivals were 33,850 pounds. Cheese arrivals were 1560 pounds.

Potato receipts were 6590 sacks. The grading of spuds has been more careful during the past few weeks and no more potatoes affected by the tuber moth have been received since the condemnation of several cars by the local pure food inspector. Onion receipts were 323 sacks. Bean arrivals were 26 sacks. Sweet potato arrivals were 141 sacks.

Apple receipts were 11,246 boxes and among the arrivals were Spitzenbergs, Roman beauties, pearmains and winesaps, the late varieties of the season. There were no increases in the quotations on any apples during the week. The red apples are all averaging less than $1.50 a box. Grape receipts were 319 boxes.

HARRY CHANDLER,
Assistant General Manager, The Times.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 30th day day of September, 1914.

[Seal] T. L. CHAPIN,
Notary Public in and for the County of Los Angeles, State of California.

The Times is the only newspaper in Los Angeles that does not make a practice of permitting agents, newsboys and dealers to return unsold copies in its issue. Neither does it misbrand or predate its editions, or inflate its circulation by printing more copies than are actually necessary to supply its patrons.

The Times' entire circulation is practically net, and it is more genuine and superior in every respect to that of any other newspaper.

Legal Notice.

The Krt Seal Co., Inc., 1444 So. San Pedro St., Los Angeles, Cal. Notice is hereby given, that at a meeting of the Directors held on the 22nd day of Oct. 1914, an assessment of 10 per cent. per share was levied upon the capital stock of the Corporation, payable not later than Nov. 27th, to Albert E. Stein, secretary of the Company, at 1444 So. San Pedro St., the offices of the Company. Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 27th day of November, 1914, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction, and unless payment is made, above will be sold on the 14th day of December, 1914, to pay delinquent assessment together with cost of advertising and expense of sale.

TIGERS CRUSH TROJAN LINE.

Pipal's Men, on the Ball, are Too Strong.

McClung Crashes Off Tackle Successfully.

Fred Kelly Makes Several Long Runs.

BY HOWARD W. ANGUS.

Occidental "came back" with a terrific crash yesterday afternoon at Bovard Field, outplayed the Trojans of U.S.C. and won the most bitterly-fought, most spectacular football battle seen in Southern California in years.

Fighting like bull terriers, the Tiger linesmen held the big, red-jerseyed men and opened ragged holes in the line. Moving with a speed that was maddening, the Tiger backs slashed their way down Bovard Field on lightning off-tackle bucks, flying crashes through center and double passes for long gains.

KELLY SHINES.

The wide end runs of Fred Kelly, his interceptions of forward passes, were directly responsible for the Trojans' two touchdowns.

It was the phenomenal speed of the Olympic hero against the wonderful attack of the fighting Tigers, and the Occidental machine won.

Out of the confusion of the game, Sam McClung, the Tiger half, stands out the hero. He was unstoppable. Fighting his shifting way off tackle, he chopped down the field. Behind him came the monster Shipke, carrying the whole right side of the Trojan line along with him.

HERO FOSTER.

Ed Foster redeemed himself. He played an exceptional defensive game, stopping Kelly when it seemed that all others had failed. He began the game with a sensational 65-yard run from kick-off and until he tired, he, too, flew along on the off-tackle bucks. Capt. Davis, Elmore and Halloway were stopped by the savage Tiger defense. Kelly alone, on his speeding, wide end runs got off for tremendous gains and brought the hearts of the Tiger rooters into their mouths.

ON THE BALL.

The Tigers followed the ball like hounds. Every fumble of the Trojans found a black jersey coiled around the ball—and they were costly fumbles.

Occidental won because they knew more football, played better football and were on the ball every second; won because they were a football ma-

JOE TOBIN IN AUTO WRECK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—Joe Tobin, center fielder of the Seals, was one of a party of six thrown from an automobile on the Great Highway at 5 o'clock this morning. "Jimmy Sport" was killed. The boy, who peddled cigars and cigarettes in a resort on Pacific street, had no other known name. None of the rest of the party, which had been recruited from the same neighborhood, was seriously hurt. The driver, a garage proprietor, said the car got out of control.

Rooters and Noise and Football.

HARRY WILLIAMS SEES THE GAME.

FASCINATED BY SIGHT OF RAH RAHS SMEARING EACH OTHER.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

If wind and the ability to holler decided football games, yesterday's innocent pastime and amusement between Occidental and the University of California would have ended in a draw, for the loyal supporters of each side, as nearly as could be estimated, emitted exactly the same quantity and variety of strange noises.

But Occidental played the better all-around football, and therein is to be found the secret of its success, the justly celebrated Tigers walloping the equally well-known Trojans, 20 to 13.

Thus it will be seen that all the noise was a negligible factor. Six thousand persons passed the afternoon drawing the October atmosphere into their froggy lungs and then expelling it in a violent and jerky manner on the happy scene. And the pity of it is that all of this pure, wholesome air was ruined to no purpose.

It was a bitter contest in which the pick of each college did its best to grease the landscape with the flower of the other college. But it was a healthy hatred. True, now and then one of the splendid athletes got kicked in the head or the pit of the stomach, or had his Adam's apple mellowed by the knee of an opponent, but a college man with red corpuscles does not mind these trifles, especially when he is playing football for his alma mater.

The alma mater is the main works, and must be properly defended at all costs. If I had an alma mater no fresh guy could get flip with it.

SLOW STARVATION.

The game was saddened by the fact that there was nothing to eat in the place. A close search failed to reveal anything that resembled a peanut butcher. This is a serious defect in the present football rules, which should be remedied.

Sad to state, yesterday's struggle did not serve to clarify the championship situation. To recapitulate, Occidental, which was beaten by Whittier, who had been beaten by U.S.C., licked U.S.C.

This gives each of the three a percentage of .500 to date, and beautifully gums up the situation, with Po-

WAITING TILL LAST QUARTER THEY MAKE THREE SCORES.

CRIMSON MAKES A LONE SCORE.

Hardwick Plunges Across and Goals.

Neither Team Shows Open Football.

Line Plunging Wins for Harvard.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) Oct. 31.—Harvard defeated Michigan by a score of 7 to 0 here today in a football game almost devoid of spectacular play and confined to conservative attack and defense. Some 25,000 spectators witnessed sixty minutes of hard-fought scrimmage in which straight football predominated throughout.

Neither eleven evinced any particu-forward or lateral pass and the general advance was achieved by a series of line plunges, spiced with an occasional end run.

Harvard showed to better advantage than the westerners, displaying stronger defense at critical moments and striking with savage rapidity and skill in the second period of the contest when the solitary score of the game was made. Both elevens appeared to possess a stronger attack than defense, although the Crimson line and secondary defense held like a stone wall when the Wolverines twice penetrated to Harvard's last 5-yard line.

A disappointing feature of the game from the spectators' standpoint was the absence of thrilling open attack that it was thought Coach Yost's pupils would uncover. Michigan attempted only one forward pass and this was intercepted by a Harvard backfield player. As if further to upset the ante-game forecasts, the Crimson used four, of which three were successfully carried through and the fourth grounded.

Michigan apparently elected to use the rushing line of attack so popular in the East a few years ago. The campaign worked well between the 20-yard lines, but the Maize and Blue lacked the scoring punch once the team had carried the ball within the shadow of the Crimson goal bar. Harvard twice held Michigan on or inside her 5-yard line, each time taking the ball on downs and kicking out of danger.

Harvard, on the other hand, demonstrated that it had a sustained attack to use at the proper moment by forcing a touchdown and the resultant goal in the second period. Obtaining the ball at midfield on a Mich-

Buy Your 1915 Car from a Dealer Who Is Delivering 1915 Cars

Some dealers and factories have heavy stocks of left-over 1914 cars. That means the public didn't absorb the number of those various cars the makers anticipated. Something wrong!

Are those makers continuing that car with added improvements? Or have they passed it into the discard and, in their wild endeavors for business, sought after "strange gods?"

You can't afford to buy an old style car—neither can you afford an experiment.

The Chalmers Six is one of the few up-to-date cars. It represents the gradual improving of a correctly designed Six motor to its present perfection.

A few manufacturers have done this—have developed the "perfect six." Chalmers is one of these.

First—Buy a 1915 Car.
Second—Buy a Six—nothing else.
Third—Buy a Chalmers.

Spectacular Course for the Exposition Races.

W. L. Hughson, chairman of the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize Cup Race Committee, which will have charge of the big races in San Francisco next spring, was in Los Angeles last week. He announced while here that the course over which the races will be run in February has been practically completed.

Tests will soon be made over the course to show the speed possibilities. Just before coming south, Hughson and members of the Fair Commission made a trip over the course in a KisselKar. They found the road bed in fair condition and the turns not too difficult.

The 1915 race is bound to be spectacular. The road surface is of asphaltum, and it is from forty to seventy feet wide. There are two right-angle turns, and at each of these the road is seventy feet wide. There are two half turns, two gradual curves and one hairpin turn.

From almost any point on the course the race will be a spectacular one. At one point in the course the cars will almost meet, only a narrow strip of gardens separating the two tracks.

The grand stand will accommodate 25,000, and it is certain to be sold out long before the date of the races. Just how reservations will be made has not yet been announced, but there probably will be an advance mail-order reservation.

Entries for the race will close February 10. Assurances of enough entries to make this the greatest race ever run have been received. Many of the fast European cars which have made a showing are in this country, and they will be ready for the race.

Hughson also announced that the second entry reservation had been received. It was from A. H. Wollacott, who says he will enter the Alco which W. E. Taylor will drive in the Phoenix race as car No. 6. The first entry fee was received from Barney Oldfield.

LIVE ONE HAS THE NEW LINE.

VETERAN PLACED AT HEAD OF SELLING FORCE.

Mysterious Car Due to Arrive in City Soon and Rival Forces will Meet Under Same Roof Selling Machine which will not be Announced Until Received for Inspection Here.

F. S. Albertson has been appointed sales manager of the sales force which is to move the new Dodge Brothers' car in Southern California for the Harold L. Arnold organization. Albertson was formerly Hudson distributor at Long Beach and prior to that he was city salesman for Harold L. Arnold. Before coming to Southern California Albertson was State distributor of the Hudson and Marmon lines in Missouri.

The Dodge car is to be handled by a separate selling force from that handling the Hudson, but the two lines will be housed in the same building and the service, accounting and mechanical departments for the two lines will be run under the same supervision.

Doc Green is to continue as sales manager for the Hudson interests. Green and Albertson will head rival sales forces and be directly responsible to Harold L. Arnold, who will officiate as general manager of the establishment.

The first Dodge cars were finished last week and it is claimed that machines will be arriving here within another three weeks. Nothing will be given out in the way of specifications and no official announcement will be made until the car arrives in this city. Orders are now being taken for the new Dodge, but those who place deposits do not know what the price of the machine will be nor what it will look like.

NEW MODEL HAS TAKEN POSITION.

Never since the Velie agency was first established in Los Angeles has a new model been so well received as the "Biltwell" Six. This car has passed muster.

The fact that the Velie has the Timken axles was a surprise to those who had first heard the price of the car. The different accessories which have been added and the complete equipment offered for the low price had the effect that Curtis Colyear expected.

In order to secure an early delivery it will be necessary to order at once, as the demand throughout the East is such that many of the agents on the other side of the Rocky Mountains have arranged for large numbers of the cars, and it may be possible for them to secure their machines in advance of the cars that are to be shipped to the local agent in Los Angeles.

The "Biltwell" Six has an aluminum crank case and a unit power plant. The one-man top and easy entrance and exit make a decided impression on the women motorists.

ELECTRIC MEN TO MEET AGAIN.

The next regular meeting of the Los Angeles section of the Electric Vehicle Association of America is scheduled to take place at the Jonathan Club, next Wednesday evening.

A dinner is to precede the meeting. The last gathering of the local electric men was attended by about fifty members and the dinner and meeting Wednesday night is expected to bring out even a larger representation.

America to the Front.

TRUCKS WRECKED IN WAR REPLACED BY AMERICANS.

THE unparalleled destruction of vehicles of transportation, especially motor trucks, during the war now raging in Europe, will create a large market for American-built heavy duty trucks, according to John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Company.

The cessation of hostilities in Europe, he declares, will find all the countries without adequate means of motor transportation, due to the effects of the war. The factories are working overtime, but are unable to solve the problem of keeping the armies supplied with vehicles for the transportation of food, men and ammunition. Horses, too, are being killed in great numbers and already the shortage is felt in England, where the builders of light motor trucks are being crowded to supply the demand for their product to replace horses taken to the front.

The transcontinental railroads in or near the scene of operations in many cases have been blown up, and the motor truck will be asked to do much more of the hauling during the years after the war than ever before.

The enemy's gun fire is disastrous to the motor truck fleets of the various armies, but much more so is the manner of driving the trucks. It is often impossible to get oil, and in cases like that the truck is driven as far as possible and then abandoned. Minor mechanical troubles are allowed to develop into grave faults, and these, too, help to destroy the motor trucks.

The fact that the trucks travel in convoys and that the speed of some is too great for that of others has also been a big factor in destroying trucks. Owing to these many difficulties the German, French and English are finding their facilities inadequate and they are drawing every vehicle which might be used in commerce for the use of the army. America will be asked to supply the market created by this movement.

Club to the Front.

COUNTIES RALLY TO THE CAUSE OF COAST ROADS.

OF THE three routes to Ventura over the coast road north, two are in poor condition and the other is to be closed for a period of four months by the State Highway Commission.

This points to the fact that motorists will not have a coast tour for the month preceding the exposition year unless immediate action is taken.

A letter sent to the Automobile Club of Southern California from the State Highway Commission asks that officials of the club provide, if possible, for a satisfactory route which will keep the coast open to motorists throughout the year.

This letter, signed by George B. Harrison, chief of the right of way department, states, in part:

"While work is under way on the grade itself, it will be unfeasible and dangerous to keep the road open. This means that the grade must be closed to all traffic from about November 10, for a length of time depending upon weather conditions, possibly until March 15, 1915, or perhaps only till January.

"It is extremely important that a suitable alternative route be prepared to be available in about ten days and until May or April of next year, possibly. You can appreciate the probable effect upon Los Angeles if the coast road is thus choked up, as it must be if a by-road is not ready."

A request is appended asking that the Automobile Club undertake to have the counties interested take up the matter with an eye to supplying an open coast road.

The possible route which should be improved has already been selected by the Auto Club.

This route is through San Fernando and Newhall over the San Fernando boulevard to Saugus, thence north over the Castaic road to the Ventura county line, a distance of ten miles. From the Ventura county line the selected route plies through Piru, Fillmore and Santa Paula.

As reported by the Auto Club officials this route is now in very fair condition through Ventura county, a twenty-five-mile-an-hour road being maintained.

But in Los Angeles county, of the ten miles to the county line, six miles must be improved. There is every indication, according to Special Representative Carl E. McStay of the club, that the Los Angeles county Supervisors will see the importance of and improve this stretch which means so much to the southern section of the State and to the coast route.

Auto Club representatives are now at work to provide for the open coast route in 1915.

On the Job.

RANGERS WATCH THE MOTORISTS.

SHOWERS RELIEVE DANGER, BUT RANGERS KEEP BUSY.

Many Automobile Parties are Offenders, Due to Ignorance and Carelessness, but When Warned and Instructed They Carry Out Rules to the Letter.

Forest fire dangers have been eliminated to a certain extent during the past week by the showers, which soaked the forest ranges of Southern California, but the forestry department officials are still taking every precaution.

Many of the worst forest fires known to Southern California have taken place late in the season, after the rains had commenced. Hunters and motorists are among the worst offenders in the matter of recklessness on the forest reserves. Hunters make fires and are not careful with cigarettes. Motorists drive away and leave their fires burning through carelessness and the precautions of the rangers at this time are largely directed against motorists, who are ignorant of the dangers.

Last week F. H. Nichol drove a Case "40" up into the Angeles range and went over the "front" and into the canyons. Hundreds of acres of dry grass were found and in the foothills where the hunters are enjoying great sport at this time of the year there are many fire traps.

R. H. Charlton, supervisor of the Angeles National Forest has warned his rangers to keep a close watch on hunters and motorists during the next few weeks, or until the heavy rains come on and eliminate the danger.

There Again.

MOTOR CAR IS FOOTBALL STAR.

COACH RUSHED TO GAME AFTER MISSING TRAIN.

Hundreds of Automobiles Take Spectators to Game of Intercollegiate Season and so Much Room is Taken up that Machines are Barred from College Pigskin Field.

The automobile is an important factor in football this season. Practically every game brings out hundreds of machines and the automobiles take up so much room that they have been barred from certain parks.

When Occidental met Whittier, hundreds of machines from all over Southern California invaded Hadley Field. Three sides of the field were banked with autos and for blocks from the park motor cars were strung along the streets.

The U.S.C.-Whittier contest brought out a large delegation of automobiles also; but the Los Angeles Athletic Club-Pomona game at Claremont was made possible only by an automobile.

Coach Jack De Aule and several players missed the train and would have been unable to reach Claremont in time for the contest had it not been for Don Smith with a Chandler "six."

De Aule, Backus, Dowd and Meadows were in the delayed crew which made a fast motor run to Claremont and reached the field just in time to get into suits and get on the field before the whistle started.

Without these men it would have been impossible for the Athletic Club men to have made a fight against the Huns, but as soon as the coach and his four stars arrived, the game started and the Athletic Club boys made it interesting for the college men for the afternoon.

De Aule was not satisfied with working Smith for a ride in the Chandler, but insisted upon making him work as a linesman during the contest. While Don Smith is in the automobile game now and does not have time to play football, he is an enthusiastic follower of the sport and at one time was a star half in the East.

RIDE INTO THE OZARKS.

Two hundred and ten miles over the Ozark Mountains—that's the route taken on this season's annual endurance run of the Motorcycle Club of St. Louis, Mo. Heavy rains had put the roads in bad condition and had washed out a bridge so that the contestants had to ride several miles over railroad ties. But in spite of this, fifteen riders finished with credit. "I'd like to see any other vehicle try to make that trip," remarked one club member.

LARGE SUPPLY.

The Weinstock-Nichols Company has received a large allotment of the new G. & J. chain tread tires. This is one of the few non-skid types made in the small clincher sizes. This will appeal to users of small cars, who have had difficulties in obtaining non-skid casings for their cars.

Detroit Electric

A CAR for Town and Country

More Battery Power

The Detroit has outgrown the limitations of other electrics. The bigger battery and over-size motor gives it from 15% to 20% more power. It takes the hills as easily as a gas car and without any fuss about it. There's no pounding of an engine, no clamoring exhaust, no clash or shifting gears.

Speedy But Silent

It glides along with a restful silence and smoothness utterly impossible in a gasoline car. There's no vibration of the motor, no smoke, no dust, no odor. It will run 20 to 25 miles an hour and will keep going for sixty miles or more without recharging. How often do you want to go faster or farther?

Cuts Cost in Two

What's more, the cost of doing it will be less than half that of a gasoline car. Men who have driven both will tell you this is true. Then why tax yourself with double operating and up-keep costs if a Detroit Electric will do all you would require of a gas car? Every day more and more men ask themselves this question.

Every Third One a Detroit

As a result, our sales are increasing by leaps and bounds. Of all electrics made today, one-third are Detroits. This vast production enables the Detroit to be priced $300 to $500 under cars in many ways inferior.

These are facts too vital to ignore. Let us show you further proof that the Detroit Electric will do anything you're likely to demand of a gasoline car and do it at less than half the cost.

The newest models of Detroit Electric cars are now on exhibit at our sales room. We shall be pleased to show them to you and at the same time, explain our excellent facilities for the inspection or care of Detroit Electric cars whenever required.

PAIGE

$1300
F. O. B. Los Angeles

If you investigate and compare motor car values—you will buy a Paige

Practically every manufacturer claims that his product is "best."

But we don't stop with mere "claims." We are prepared to show the points of Paige superiority—and name the extra values. We challenge the manufacturer of any other car in the Paige price class to meet us on this eminently fair basis of proof rather than claims.

You will find no other car in the moderate price field which is equipped with the large unit Gray & Davis electrical starting and lighting system with separate generator and starting motor. This is admittedly the most efficient and most expensive system that a manufacturer can adopt.

Then, consider the cork insert multiple disc clutch, Mayo radiator, Bosch magneto and silent chain drive of camshaft, generator, magneto and pump. All of these features are the very best principles that have been developed in the entire field of automobile engineering, and the Paige is the only popular priced car which offers all of them as standard equipment.

So, keep these points in mind when you are considering the purchase of a moderate priced motor car. Insist upon the manufacturer proving his "claims." And let us repeat—if you investigate and compare motor car values—you will buy a Paige.

If you would know more about the company behind this great car—if you would learn the fundamental reasons for Paige supremacy—let us send you a most interesting booklet, "The Story of the Ten Associates."

OLD PAL HEN DROPS WAD.

On Trip Over Phœnix Road Race Course Almost Identifies Auto Club Landmark Photos and Gets in Bad Through Citizens of Fair City of Hackberry When Full House Is Lightweight Hand.

HACKBERRY (Ariz.) Oct. 31.

Friend Al:

Now I am in bad again, and this is how it happened:

When you said to me, Hen, old boy, you should get in that kaktus derby, I was all off. Min, my wife, says to me, Hen, why do you solgier on the job. Why don't you go an grab some of that coin and keep me in some class.

Well, Al, there was nothing for me to do but go in that Phoenix road race.

You know, my wife, Min, has a brother named Herb, and he has a friend named Frank which lives at La Jolla, down by San Diego. Frank says to me, Hen, you are a good driver; why don't you go in the kaktus derby. I will let you take my little car. Frank's little car is a Ford and his big car is a Abbott-Detroit or maybe a Abbott-Tia Juana, but the little car is fast. About twenty miles in a hour.

When I told you to get me a car for the Phoenix race I never knew the guy Frank, and that he had a Ford. But when I said, Al, send me 100, which I want to barro for the entree fe, I knew I had a fast car for the race.

Well, Al, I took my raceabout Ford and paid the 200 $s to Mr. Leon Tee Shettler for the entree, just after that Chevrolet fellow from back east, with his Chevrolet car, and the next thing I was up against was the trip over the kaktus derby course. You know me, Al.

I took Herb along for a mecanik and some Monagram oil that he likes, and also Min, my wife, and we started to go over the course. Just when we were going good down a hill purty near Victorville, Min says to stop because she sees one of those Auto Club landmark pitchers. Of course, we had to stop for her to give it the o. o. You know me, Al. I wuld not miss a chance if there was one.

Just then some bohunk come up and said: Say, what you doing here? Do you know this is the Phoenix road race course, and Barney Oldfield may be along here any minute. Take that Joe car off of here.

Min is rite there, and says, where do you get that. This is not a Joe car, its a Ford car, and a racer, too, and good on the hills. Yes, I bet, says that bohunk, going down hills. You better keep it on the Foothill boulevard. Al, if we had not had to move on we would have identified that Auto Club landmark pitcher sure. You know me, Al.

About nite we got into Victorville, and Min was all wore out and Herb was purty tired from sittin' on the gas tank pumping oil, and we found that our oiler never pumped at all because it was not connekted up at all, Al. I was sore, you bet.

Brite and erly the next morning we tore out for Needles. I was just thinking about making fast time in the great desert race when Min, she hollered: Say, look out, do you want to bust up the scenery. She grabbed the wheel and about then we turned over.

We got turned up O. K. again and was going along purty fast, when a bohunk which was walking cought up with us and Min says, give the pur man a ride, which I did. He sat on the gas tank with Herb.

He was very helpful by pushing, and he requested 5 $s to tell us where some of those landmark pitchers in Arizona was took at. Min and Herb said give it to him Hen, and I did. You know me, Al. He said I will tell you about them landmark pitchers in a few minutes, so we boald along purty fast and that nite we kame to Barstow.

That bohunk said maybe some of them pitchers was taken here and maybe not, but soon I will tell you. The next morning we went on and made Amboy by noon. That bohunk was still freighting with us, Al.

Everything was all rite O. K. until he said deflait yure tires. They all do it on the desert. I said I do not see any desert, and he said You are in it, there is a desert rite over there at Cadiz. Herb said that looks like a water tank to me. There is no use trying to fule Herb Al for he is wise and O. K. But I did deflait my tires just because it was getting dark and I did not want to come up on no desert in the dark without my tires deflated.

When all the air was out that bohunk started to run Al and he had my 5$s. Hay there I hollered, bring back my 5$s. You know me Al. There are those Auto Club Landmark pitchers yelled Min. In The Times Offus he yelped back.

Herb started to chase him because he is a purty good runner and was in The Times Marathon once, only he was beat by about sixteen Indians and only got a button for a prize. But he could not katch the bohunk which fooled us on the landmark pitchers. I says Min This is all yure fawlt. She said how dare you. You had better fix yure tail lite and not talk so much.

What do you think Al. That bohunk borrowed all my accessories. There is no tale lite at all Al. My tules is all gone and the extra tire and the top to my gas tank. I will rite to the Auto Club about that bohunk Al. You know me.

But we got to Needles and it was not very hot only about 140 in the shade and no shade only under the car. Barney Oldfield with a Stutz was there and Mr. Wing with the Metz came along and Billy Taylor too and Judge Root gave us racers all the o.o. and then eskorted us to the bridge over some purty good roads with fine scenery. Only it was dark an we culd not see much but we said it was all O.K. Herb said he always did like that agrukultural territory and said he knew the fellow which rote the song about the Silvery Colorado. That made Judge Root feel purty good you bet.

I said twice I thought I saw one of those landmark pitcher places. Min and Herb only said I was coo coo because I got bumped in the head up by Del Mar that time on the new State Highway.

We got at Kingman late at nite and there was a fine bunch wating for us Al. I made Min go up to bed in the hotel and she missed one of the landmark pitchers which was rite near there but Herb and me went out for a little rekreation with some fine sports which live at Kingman.

The next morning we left Kingman and made this place purty soon and I got into a little truble which was not my fawlt but Herbs.

Hackberry is not a very big place only two saluns one store and some houses which are rented when it is sheep shearing time in the year. When we stopped in frunt of a salun there was a big fine looking boob which said I beg your pardon but I think I know you. You are Mr. Oldfield. Well you know I look like Barney only not so big Al and X-eyed a little with a bawled head on top but I made friends with the man. You know me Al. I think he is the Mayor here or may be the deputy moving-picture sensor. But he invited us all to stay in Hackberry over nite.

He told us that Mr. Leon Tee Shettler came thru Hackberry ahead of all the racers with Louie Nikrent and a big boob named Brainyman or Brandyman. He knew Leon Tee alright because he told me he had on smoked glasses to make him think he was riding at nite. And Al this Hackberry fellow knows you. He said he was sore because you went away in that Paige car too soon and would not stay over for the poker game that nite. But I told him Al that you was a sport and that the Paige was only burrowed from Don Lee and had to get back to Los Angeles for the automobile show.

Well Al Min was tired and went to sleep in a hammok in front of the dobbie hotel house. Herb and me was invited guests at a poker game and all was fine until Herb bagan to lose and I had to help him out. So I played too high on 3 ases. Then I hocked Frank's Ford racer to a bohunk here what runs the store for 150$s and gave Herb 50$s which he lost and I would have won a big pot, you know me Al. Only when I had a Ase full one of the Hackberry lucky stiffs had four Kings and I dropped the Wad.

So Al I am here and I will have to ask you to let me have 150$s to get Frank's car back so I can go on over the Kaktus Derby route and get back to Los Angeles for the start November 9. I think you better send me about 250$s. I will pay you back as soon as the race is over and I get my money from Purdy Bullard. You know me Al.

Yure old pal, HEN.

P. S. Herb says his head thinks its baloon nite, but I feel fine. You know me Al. HEN.

P. P. S. Better send that 250 by Special Delivery. The postmaster is the storekeeper here and he will see that I get the letter soonr if it has one of those blue stamps on it. I saw him bring one out in frunt of the store today for that lucky stiff which held the four Kings last nite and is now joytouring around this town, in Frank's racer. Don't tell Frank. Al you know me. HEN.

HUDSON Six-54—$2500
LOS ANGELES

Costly Cars Have a Rival In This Big Distinguished Six

You men who want the utmost, want size, appearance power and room; want luxury and finish, comfort and convenience, will find your every idea met in this big impressive HUDSON.

And it will cause you to revise your ideas of what such a car should cost. For here is the maximum, all that new-day cars can offer. And the price is only $2500 f. o. b. Los Angeles.

Howard E. Coffin's Third-Year Model

The first-year model of the HUDSON Six-54 came out three years ago. It was designed by Howard E. Coffin, the great HUDSON engineer. He was then, as now, considered final authority in motor car engineering. And this HUDSON Six-54, in its first season, became the largest-selling Six in the world.

Today we show you his third-year model, his finished conception of a long, roomy, powerful car.

The HUDSON Six-40, this car's smaller sister, is today the most popular class car built. It is, for its size, today's finest example of modern motor car engineering. This HUDSON Six-54 is simply a larger edition.

Only Five Great Cars

There are in America five great cars from an engineering standpoint. This HUDSON Six-54 is one of the five. The others cost a great deal more.

None has a greater designer, higher standards, more of beauty, luxury or comfort. None has more power or room. The difference in price is due to HUDSON efficiency and to HUDSON output. We are the largest builders of quality cars.

Come make your comparisons with cars which cost from $3500 up. Judge for yourself if any car offers more than this. Made as a Touring Car, Sedan or Limousine.

REO the FIFTH

A Super-Car

A BETTER CAR Than Need Be—Vast Over-Capacity for Men Who Buy to Keep

The latest model of Reo the Fifth is on exhibit now. Come see its outer attractions, its lines, its finish, its equipment. You will see that Reo designers excel in other than hidden parts.

Its Chief Appeal

But, with all these beauties, the chief appeal still lies below the body.

This car—designed by R. E. Olds—is based on 27 years spent in car building. It is better-built than it need be for normal service or for one-season satisfaction. It is built to render years of perfect service.

The car has vast margins of safety. It has 35 horsepower, but the tests applied are for 50 horsepower requirements.

Its steels are made to formula. Test cars are run for 10,000 miles to find out each part's needed strength.

The car is built in a model plant, equipped with countless machines designed for this single model. Six weeks are spent on each car.

The factory cost is about one-fifth more than if built by lesser standards.

Rare Value

Reo the Fifth, with all its improvements, costs $220 less than it used to cost. That is due to mammoth output, new machinery, new efficiency. No other car in this class today offers equal value.

It will save you in trouble, upkeep and repairs. It will keep its newness when lesser cars grow old.

About 18,000 men who bought cars to keep have selected this Reo the Fifth. The present demand is the largest ever known.

Come and see the latest model. Let us show you the costly construction. Come now. The coming days are the best of the year for driving. Decide on your new car now.

The Shorter Trail.

NEW ROAD TO PHOENIX OF GREAT IMPORTANCE.

Automobile Club Engineers Working on Course which will Cut Down Mileage and be of Great Importance to Commercial and Touring Motor Traffic All Along the Route.

A SHORTER route to Phoenix by more than 200 miles is to be charted by the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Motorists will be provided with a direct tour from Los Angeles and San Diego through Niland and direct to Phoenix.

For commercial purposes this road will be of great importance, as it will provide a direct route through the Palo Verde Valley to the junction of the railway at Niland. This will mean the growth of a great truck industry from Phoenix westward.

Definite data will be secured by officials of the automobile club when a scout car is sent over the new route.

For three weeks the engineering and map-service staffs of the auto club have been concerned with securing information from all points in the Imperial Valley, and it has been learned that the newly-discovered road from Niland through Blythe by way of the Ehrenberg highway will make the material difference in distance which has caused the auto club to take up the work of charting the new Phoenix route.

GREAT BENEFITS.

All points throughout the Imperial Valley, San Diego and Los Angeles will be affected by this short cut for motorists. Not only for touring purposes but for commercial vehicles will this road be of importance.

Next year it is figured that travel to Phoenix will be particularly heavy, in view of the fact that many of the eastern visitors will want to make the Arizona tour. All information on the matter will be kept on file at he club headquarters and advice given as to road conditions and general topographical directions.

As the route is outlined at the present time, before the scout car made the trial trip, the coast road will be followed to San Diego, and from San Diego to the Imperial Valley by way of Campo and the Mountain Springs grade. From El Centro the route plies northward through Imperial and Brawley to Niland and thence through the Iris Pass to a point on the old Ehrenberg road six miles west of the Chuckawalla Wells and thence through Blythe to Phoenix.

UNIMPROVED ROUTE.

The grade through the Chocolate Mountains by way of Iris Pass is approximately ten miles long, and will not exceed 1½ per cent. for any distance over 200 feet. For ten miles crossing the valley between the Chocolate range and the Chuckawalla Mountains the soil is of volcanic character, which makes the unimproved route rough, but with a little work iit can be made an excellent road.

The importance of this road cannot be overestimated. Thousands of acres in the Palo Verde Valley have only been partially cultivated simply for the reason that there has been no outlet for their products except by way of Blythe Junction, which is impracticable on account of the character of the country through which the road runs. But, with the connection through to Niland, all difficulty will be done away with and commerce will be unimpeded.

The Financial Side.

LARGE INVESTMENTS ARE REQUIRED FOR CHANGES.

IN FACE of all the keen competition among motor car producers, of late years there has been a decided aversion on their part to the introduction of startling changes in design or radical improvements in the mechanics of machines.

This is a natural trait in view of the immense investment that is demanded for the production of any one type of car; a change of lines, a new contour, an introduction of a new design of a portion of the machinery means not only the fresh investment of a large sum, but the rendering useless of a good portion of an installed plant for the making of the discarded feature.

So that the recent announcement by the Cadillac factory of a new eight-cylinder car is of combined commercial as well as producing interest.

For to make this new type of car the company had first to invest something over half a million dollars; this went for new machinery needed to build a car entirely variant from the one the plant had been equipped to construct.

When it was definitely decided that the buying public desired this manner of car, there was no more hesitation; the money was spent, the new portions of the plant installed, and the eight-cylinder car was constructed on the same basis of surety and skill that marked its predecessor.

FRANK CHANCE AUTO TOURIST.

PEERLESS LEADER PASSES UP GAME FOR MOTOR.

Tours Across the Continent and Announces Retirement from National Pastime Profession to Devote Time to Orange Growing on Glendora Ranch and Automobiling.

Frank Chance and W. S. Duncan arrived in Los Angeles last Monday afternoon after a transcontinental tour in their motor cars. Duncan drove from Los Angeles to the Atlantic Coast early this summer in his Pierce-Arrow 48, and has spent the summer in touring the Eastern States, from Maryland to Maine.

Leaving New York, he was accompanied by Frank Chance. They proceeded west by way of Buffalo, where the Pierce-Arrow factory is located, and here Chance purchased a Pierce-Arrow 48, seven-passenger touring car, for use in California. He had the car shipped to the Southern California distributor, W. E. Bush, and took delivery on the new motor as soon as he arrived in Los Angeles.

Chance declares he is through with baseball. He will spend the 1915 season picking oranges on his Glendora ranch and touring California in his new Pierce-Arrow.

ANOTHER ONE.

Another Pierce-Arrow tourist to come west this season was F. L. Foote, dean at Cornell University. He arrived in Los Angeles last week and is enjoying a few weeks at Del Mar. Foote is on leave of absence from the university.

Foote came west by way of Buffalo, Chicago, Des Moines, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City, Reno, Sacramento, San Francisco and Los Angeles. He declares that transcontinental traffic is greatly on the increase. He says he passed a car on the average of every thirty minutes. Road conditions now are such as to make the trip a pleasant one throughout. There are few really bad roads to be encountered over the whole route.

Foote's only complaint in regard to the roads was aimed at California. He says the Kern county and Los Angeles county roads between Bakersfield and Saugus are the worst he encountered on the entire trip. Dust hub deep, sand, steep grades, ruts and chuck holes which are hidden beneath the layer of dust make the going treacherous throughout the entire distance. There is no relief from the time Bakersfield is left until the macadam road at Saugus is reached.

BETTER SPEED IS FOUND FOR BOAT.

The record-breaking speed boat, Disturber IV, built by James Pugh, commodore of the Chicago Motorboat Club, to bring back to America the Harmsworth trophy, has been equipped with a Los Angeles carburetor. Since the day the boat was launched Pugh has had trouble with his carburetors. The twenty-four-cylinder, 800-horse-power motor requires six of the largest size racing carburetors, and this gives great opportunity for trouble unless the carburetor is almost trouble proof.

Pugh has tried many carburetors in his attempts to right this condition, and to insure himself of finishing a trial when he starts, and at last he has been successful in his quest. The Master in trials and races during the last few weeks has given perfect satisfaction, and has materially increased the speed and efficiency of the motor.

OWN RESOURCES AND PROSPERITY.

PROSPEROUS ERA DAWNS WITH EUROPEAN WAR ON, BUT BUSINESS BOOMS.

"I know that this country is on the eve of an era of prosperity, which for magnitude and lasting qualities will be far greater than any other period that we have ever had."

This was the expression of opinion of M. S. Williams, president of the Western Auto Sub Casing Company, manufacturers of the Fisher "Rim-Grip" subcasing, on his return this week after a business trip by motor car through Southern California.

Continuing his statement, Mr. Williams said:

"This conclusion has not just been forced on me by the quantity of business which I transacted on this trip, although that might be considered a straw showing the direction of prevailing business conditions, but by close study of economic conditions, locally, nationally and internationally.

"Not on account of the war, but in spite of it.

"One big, powerful fact stares us in the face: The eternal law of compensation, the pendulum of averages. The fact that there can be no great loss without some time as great a gain, or vice versa.

"On this first trip of mine, I found the general business attitude far more optimistic than ever heretofore.

"The supreme factor that has made us great as a nation, can be found in the fact that Americans are most adaptable to any circumstances which may transpire. They are never at a loss for long. The facility with which this nation can adjust itself to any and all existing conditions has put it in the van of world powers. Americans as a nation learn quickly; as fast as the oriental and as accurate as the Teuton, if need be.

"If need be—and there lies the secret. We have permitted ourselves to depend on foreign countries for many, many things. Nationally we haven't exerted ourselves until we had to, and now is the time. All of us know that foreign visitors have always marveled at our way of doing things, of our prosperity, and we have felt complimented, when there was cause for shame."

BETTER SERVICE.

The Bosch Magneto Company has added to its list the following supply stations, thereby increasing a service system which now surpasses all other arrangements for the rendering of service in the fields of ignition: Olympia Auto Supply Company, Olympia, Wash.; James Auto Company, Ogden, Utah; G. TAHOE RECORD RUN A HUMMER.

FAST TRIP ATTRACTS STATE-WIDE ATTENTION.

First Time Trip Ever Made from Oakland to Lake Tahoe and Return by a Motor Car in One Day. Entire Distance Negotiated Without Any Mechanical Trouble.

The remarkable run of the Paige car from Oakland to Lake Tahoe, and return, made last Monday, has created no little interest among motorists in Los Angeles, especially those who know the kind of roads the Paige was forced to travel over from Stockton to Tallac.

Many who had been over the road declared it could not be done in the time made by the Paige, fifteen hours and seventeen minutes, but Don Lee has always been fond of doing the impossible, and when he started to break the Tahoe record he did it right.

The car was driven by A. R. Dawson, F. R. Sheets and Alden McElrath. The three men are all expert drivers, but the heavy work of piloting the car over 458 miles of mountain road and boulevard was a terrible strain. The car, too, was forced to undergo terrific strain, and only a car that is right, could have stood up under a trip like that. Not only was the car driven at top speed over every sort of road, but the motor was kept running as fast as possible for almost the entire distance. This meant that every part of motor and car was given a terrific test, and one which was bound to search out the defects if any existed.

The official start was made at Oakland at 3:31 a.m., and at 6:48 p.m. the crew jumped from their seats at the starting point to receive the congratulations of their friends. They had been heralded from end to end of the road, and at Stockton, Sacramento, Folsom and Placerville, they were greeted by large delegations.

A. R. Dawson, resident manager for Don Lee in San Francisco, in speaking of the run, declared it a wonderful record run in every way. The road from Folsom to Tahoe is wretched, but the car had to be pounded over it at top speed all the way to maintain the high average. One hundred miles of boulevard was more than counter-balanced by the terrible road in the mountains.

There are many cars which will not run 100 miles at top speed, and even in a fifty-mile run with the throttle wide open, all sorts of difficulties are encountered. But to go more than 400 miles without mechanical difficulties of any kind is a truly remarkably record.

This run has given the Paige a reputation for speed over all sorts of roads and the work of the two Paige cars in the Phoenix race will be watched with interest by the motoring public.

DOUGHNUT KING MOTOR VISITOR.

VISITS PORTLAND AND LOS ANGELES SCENIC AUTO TOUR.

Prefers Intercity Trip to Transcontinental Journey and Reports Great Road Improvement, Although Rains will Make Roads Dangerous from Now Until Spring.

With a large Portland pennant suspended over the hood and a Kewpie with an umbrella over the radiator cap, A. A. Hoover, the Portland doughnut king, reached Los Angeles in his Overland, accompanied by Mrs. Hoover.

Much road work is being done in the Northwest, according to Hoover, and the general road conditions will be greatly improved during the next year.

Hoover talks of this run from Los Angeles to Portland as one of the most beautiful and delightful automobile trips in the United States, and says it is much to be preferred over the transcontinental trip.

The mountains north of San Francisco consist of some of the most scenic roads in the world. The night stops are at the most pleasing of resorts and the traveler from the south will immediately be impressed by the old-time California atmosphere that still exists for a distance of 200 miles north of San Francisco. There are a number of roads that can be taken and each affords sights of unusual beauty.

The Overland made a perfect score on the trip. Although he made the run late in the season no trouble was encountered. This road will be dangerous from now on, due to the rains.

OCEAN PARK MAN BUYS AT THE SHOW.

A. R. FRASER SEES NEW MODEL FOR FIRST TIME AND CLOSES DEAL IN SHORT ORDER.

One of the quickest sales reported at the recent automobile show was made by the Carlton-Faulkner-Bowles Company, distributors for McFarlan and Fiat cars. A. R. Fraser of Ocean Park strolled into the auto show looking for his 1915 car, and the first one to take his eye was the McFarlan. He looked the car over, talked with the salesman in charge of the exhibit and within thirty minutes had placed his order for the McFarlan Six touring car.

Fraser is a keen judge of automobile values and has owned high-class cars for years. His endorsement of the McFarlan is one of the strongest recommendations it could have.

Don Carlton and Al Faulkner are visiting the McFarlan and Fiat factories. One matter which will be taken up is the securing of a Fiat racing car for the races here this winter.

WARNING BEING SOUNDED AGAIN.

Warning is being sounded for all tire users by the service department of the United States Rubber Company. They advise motorists to prepare for the winter, and see to it that their tires are in proper shape to do their best work.

All casings should be closely inspected and any cuts or tears mended at once in order to prevent them from getting wet in the rainy weather. The best way to do this is to clean them thoroughly and fill them with rubber gum. If this is not done the water is liable to rot the fabric and cause blowouts and other tire ills.

It is important that tire cuts should be closed at all times, but especially during the wet weather when the car is running on wet pavements and the tires have no chance to dry out.

RANCHERS LINE UP FOR TRUCKS.

Ranchers of the San Joaquin Valley are realizing the importance of the motor truck in their business, if the orders being received by the Mission Motor Car Company may be taken as a criterion. During the last ten days two carloads of Mission delivery cars have been shipped into the valley and two others have been driven to Fresno.

Manager Palmer stated yesterday that it would be necessary to greatly increase the facilities of the local plant in order to care for this year's business. Another large building will house new machinery for the manufacture of Mission trucks.

Several Mission sales were closed at the motor truck show, and the week at the Shrine Auditorium was a most creditable one.

GAS CONSUMPTION RECORD SCORED.

Perhaps the most remarkable record of continuous low fuel consumption reported this season is that of R. S. Daniels, who drives a Chandler Six. Daniels toured to Lake Tahoe and return, a distance of 1270 miles, and averaged seventeen and one-half miles to the gallon of gasoline. Daniels returned to Los Angeles Thursday.

He kept close tab on all gasoline used and while he made no especial effort to keep down the fuel consumption, he was greatly pleased with the showing of the car. Prices for gasoline ranged from 13 cents in Los Angeles to 42 cents in the mountain towns of the high Sierras.

Machines of '05 and '06 Vintage Still Doing Heavy Work on Mountain and Desert Roads of the State. One has Traveled More than Two Hundred Thousand Miles.

Drivers of old-time Stevens-Duryea cars celebrated a sort of impromptu reunion at the English Motor Car Company's Grand-avenue salesroom last Thursday afternoon. Four owners of old-time Stevens cars, three of the '06 vintage and one of the '05 factory production all dropped in to see Clarence English, the local distributor, and tell him of the service they have received from their cars.

C. C. Loomis has a 1906 Stevens in use as an automobile stage between Hollywood and Lankershim, and this car travels daily over the Cahuenga Pass road, seldom carrying less than fifteen passengers. The car does not loaf on the way and in spite of its eight years of service is still going strong.

James R. Bell drove from Bakersfield in a 1906 and says that in spite of the terrific roads the old Stevens made a perfect trip. This was one of the earliest sixes to be placed on the market.

Arthur Wycoff drove from Venice in his 1905 Stevens. He says that the old car still is dependable and will finish anything it starts in the touring line, in spite of occasional touches of rheumatism.

More than 200,000 miles is the record of S. M. Holms's Stevens, 1906 model, and at least half of this has been over desert and mountain roads. He has placed an order for a specially built Stevens with a combination passenger and a baggage body.

According to the Tax Commissioner of Milwaukee, the number of automobiles owned there is 5943, as against 4744 in 1913, a gain of 1199 cars in twelve months.

Found Good Roads; Would Lengthen Chain.

Capt. John D. Fredericks, popular candidate for Governor, on his recent trip through the State drove in his new Locomobile touring car.

Capt. Fredericks said that he found splendid roads throughout the State, although he is warmly in favor of extending the good roads in every possible direction, and thinks that every possible encouragement should be lent to this movement by the State government. He had practically no trouble with his Locomobile, and has long been a regular automobile enthusiast. He thinks that one of the greatest requisites for pleasurable auto riding found in a car 's proper tire equipment, and Mr. Fredericks says that it was certainly proven to him that he had the right equipment, when he used Goodrich Silvertown cord tires.

Difficult Task.

MUCH WORK IS REQUIRED ON ROAD TO CAMP BALDY.

TO KEEP the road through San Antonio Canyon open to Camp Baldy this winter will require a large amount of work.

The heavy rains of last winter made this road impassable, but it was repaired so that cars could get through this summer with little difficulty. However, slides are occurring along the new road and cave-ins along the brink have narrowed it so that the first heavy rain is almost sure to make it dangerous.

It would be possible for the rains to cause a slide that would entirely remove the road from the side of the cliff. A mass of rock and soil is slowly making encroachments on the narrow passageway that now exists. Across the road is a sheer drop of fifty feet onto the rocks below, and when wet this stretch will become decidedly treacherous going.

This information is gleaned from a party that made the trip to the famous resort in a new Herff-Brooks car a few days ago. The hotel is now closed, so it is advisable to take along a lunch.

The more than a mile-high climb was made in the Herff-Brooks without a bit of trouble. The radiator was filled at the toll gate, buth did not ned replenishing. The cooling system seemed splendid, according to members of the party, as the water did not approach the boiling point.

Although the Haynes factory has employed a night shift in addition to the regular day forces and has increased the production to 5000 cars, the company finds it difficult to satisfy the demands for the new models. Visitors to the factory secure the impression that a dealers' convention is in progress.

Dealer demand is, of course, created by consumer demand, and it is because of the latter that dealers from all over the United States have gone to Kokomo to wait for their cars.

EDDIE PULLEN IN OUR MIDST.

Winner of Grand Prize Race Out for Corona.

Will Remain on Coast Until After Spring Race.

Predicts Almost Impossible Time for Grind.

Eddie Pullen is back. The famous Mercer driver who established a new world's non-stop record in the recent Elgin race, arrived in Los Angeles yesterday and does not expect to leave the Coast again until after the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize races have been run next spring.

He is entered to drive in the Corona road race. He is confident of making a good showing as he will have the same Mercer with which he won the Grand Prize race at Santa Monica.

Pullen has become even more of an international figure than when he flashed into the limelight by winning the Grand Prize. In the Elgin race he finished a close second and set a new mark for distance covered in a road race without stopping. Not once during the 300 miles did Pullen stop. He had no mechanical trouble and did not have to change a tire.

HAVE YOU SEEN THE NEW LITTLE SIX

COLE

"The Standardized Car"

It's here for your inspection, and has the same high-grade, standard parts so well known to you in the Big Six Cole.

There has been no reduction of quality, no skimping in room or equipment and no expense spared in finish.

You will appreciate the deep, soft cushions, upholstered with the very best long grain, hand buffed leather; the long easy riding springs, guaranteed two years against breakage, and the oversize tires mounted on the famous Firestone rims.

And you will not overlook the Timken full-floating rear axle with its sixteenth-inch brake drums and noiseless spiral gears, the Timken front axle and the mechanical tire pump on motor.

Neither will you fail to observe the compactly built Northway unit power plant, delivering its full forty-four horsepower through a substantial torque member to the rear wheels.

We want you to see this latest Cole—Ride in it—Take it out on the hills—Get it off the pavement and test it for power, speed, comfort and easy riding.

Come by or telephone and we'll send for you.

Bull Tractor $495
AT LOS ANGELES

What the Bull Tractor Is

A three-wheeled machine; two in a hard smooth furrow, and one on the stubble.

One of the furrow wheels guides the machine when plowing, relieving the engineer of that responsibility.

Has a leveling device by which operator can readily level tractor when on side hills.

Has but five working gears. One of these is a roller pinion.

Has but one drive wheel thus eliminating equalizing gears.

Has but one main drive gear which will last during the life of the tractor.

The motor is two-cylinder, four-cycle, water cooled type and no better motor on the market today.

What the Bull Tractor Does

Pulls Plows, Seeders, Harvesters, Mowers, Drills, Discs, and then grinds feed, saws wood, or does any stationary belt work on the farm.

Delivers 12-h.p. at the belt; 5-h.p. at the drawbar, and is designed to do the daily work of 4 or 5 ordinary horses when properly operated under favorable conditions. Travels somewhat faster than horses, and continuously. Never gets tired.

WARTIME PAINT FOR MOTOR CAR.

Baked Enamel and Paint can not Stand Strain.

Novel Gray for Enthusiast's Road Traveler.

Double Crosses the Elements with Finish.

E. M. Gould of St. Louis, who is now in Los Angeles with his Packard car to spend the winter, is such a touring enthusiast that he has even had his car painted especially for the purpose.

When the car was driven into the garage of the California Motor Company a few days ago it scarcely was recognized by the attaches as a Packard because of its disguise. Instead of the baked black enamel, the Gould car is finished in a rust-colored gray that looks next to no color at all.

Asked how he happened to have his car finished in such a way, Mr. Gould said it was because no enamel in the world would withstand the wear and tear he and his family put upon their car. Black, blue, maroon or any other color that might represent the coach builder's art fails to withstand rough usage, he says. Constant washings in different kinds of water, exposure on the desert, mountain rain storms, and the snow and sleet of the Missouri Valley are more than paint can withstand, according to the owner, so his car appears in its metallic dress alone.

The Goulds have been touring the Pacific Coast region for several weeks and a few days ago came to Los Angeles. It is their intention to visit all the points of interest in Southern California during the winter months and be prepared to take in the California expositions as soon as the gates are opened to the public. They will make the trips to San Diego and San Francisco in their Packard if present plans are not interfered with.

BIG BUSINESS SEASON FEATURE.

Assistant General Manager Pedler of the J. W. Leavitt company visited the Los Angeles branch last week and was greatly pleased to learn that L. V. Starr has met with great success in marketing the new Overland cars. Last week Starr disposed of twenty-six cars, and thirty-six the week before. This same condition, according to Pedler, exists throughout the Coast territory. Every indication points to a banner year for the Overland in 1915.

A. D. Plughoff, the general manager for the company, has been at the factory for the last week endeavoring to secure additional cars for the Coast territory.

The sales have been so heavy that the Coast houses are running behind on orders. The Los Angeles branch in particular has been having a hard time keeping up with orders.

TRUCK SPREADS OIL OVER ROADS.

NINE HUNDRED AND FIFTY GALLONS ON ONE LOAD.

Pasadena Using Most Up-to-date Method of Treating Roads of City with Spreading of Hot Oil—Head of Street Department Praises Its Efficiency.

The city of Pasadena has been supplied by Smith Brothers, Southern California distributors for Peerless, Premier and Ohio Electric cars, with a Peerless four-ton oil distributor which is probably the most up to the minute truck in Southern California. The truck is used in oiling newly-made streets and is in active service in Pasadena.

The capacity of the oil tank is 950 gallons. The oil is spread by rotary pump capable of delivering oil at a pressure of fifty pounds, and it is possible to empty it in less than ten minutes when the distributor valves are wide open.

When the truck is traveling at a speed of twelve miles an hour the oil is delivered at the distributor valves under thirty-five pounds pressure, and this is the speed best adapted for quick, efficient oiling of the new streets. The flow of oil is controlled by a gate valve, and as much or as little as is desired may be allowed to escape to the road.

The pump is mounted within the tank, and thus is protected from road dirt and dust. The oil is introduced into the tank at a temperature of 350 degs., and the hot oil immediately heats the pump and causes whatever oil remains from the last pumping to become fluid and flow easily. This saves the bother of cleaning out the pump with distillate after each day's work to prevent it from becoming clogged, as is the case in pumps which are carried outside the tank.

The pipe which delivers the oil to the distributor points, returns whatever is not used to the tank, and this is another feature which aids in the economical operation of the truck. In the morning, when the distributor valves have become clogged with cold, heavy oil, it is possible to open them without wasting a barrel or more of oil, by simply closing the valves and pumping the oil through the main line until all the points have become heated and the oil ready to flow.

The truck is mounted on the regular Peerless four-ton chassis and is giving great service. The head of the street department of Pasadena declares it to be the most efficient truck for its purpose he has yet come in contact with.

Picked Him Up.

LOS ANGELES MOTORIST AS A GOOD SAMARITAN.

MOTORING with difficulty over the Casitas Pass, which at the present time is in poor condition, L. L. Sylvaine just brought his Hupmobile to a stop as the front wheels were about to pass over a crumpled object in the dark, that turned out to be the body of an aged pedestrian.

As far north as Santa Barbara there is little room for complaint, but Casitas Pass is poor.

On the grade there the old man was found, who after trying to make the ascent afoot had fallen exhausted.

Rincon road is closed for construction work. The little Hup averaged nineteen and one-half miles to the gallon, despite the second gear work that was necessary. After leaving the State highway at Santa Barbara the road is frightful, especially along through Goleia. If a machine travels faster than fifteen miles an hour, it is claimed the brakes had to be slammed on continually on account of chuck holes.

Sylvaine passed through Gaviota Pass early in the evening and the rest of the trip through Los Olivas was after dark. The garages along the way advised him that there have been more broken springs recently than any previous time.

The Dollar Saved.

PRICES OF TIRES CUT BY THE PANAMA CANAL.

THE Savage Tire Company has announced a big reduction in the consumers' prices of the tires and "Red Grafite" tubes.

It has long been predicted that the opening of the Panama Canal would bring lower prices to consumers on articles manufactured on this Coast. The Savage company gives the canal credit for helping to decrease the manufacturing cost of its rubber goods. Savage is now obtaining crude Para rubber and Sea Island cotton fabric at a considerable reduction, owing to the great saving in freight and insurance charges by the canal route.

The increased demand for the company's new "Savage Grip" non-[illegible] territory have compelled the employment of a night shift at the factory, which means practically a twenty-four hour production, and the installment of additional equipment for the popular-sized tires and tubes.

The Savage trade is expanding so rapidly into Nevada, Utah and Montana that it appears only a short time will make the Western States as well acquainted with Savage tires as with Savage rifles.

PLANS NEW YEAR'S RUN.

Plans are under way for the second annual elimination run of the Portland (Or.) Motorcycle Club. The event will be a fifteen-hour run, starting at 12 o'clock on New Year's eve. The route has not been definitely determined, but the thirty-three-mile course from Portland to Troutdale, Gresham and back to Portland will be used.

HOWDY BAND BOOMS RACE.

NO ANNOUNCEMENT could be made of greater interest to the people of California and Arizona than that of the annual tour of the Howdy Band.

This is the one musical event of the year the people look forward to and prepare for. When the cities of Barstow, Needles, Kingman, Prescott and the other Arizona centers that have contributed to the race fund made a bid for the race and finally secured the changing of the route, their real desire was to secure the annual engagement of the famous Howdy Band, so say members of the band.

This galaxy of musical stars makes its appearance only once a year. All the rest of the time its members are in training, and when the week of artistic effort arrives all California and Arizona clamor for a chance to see and hear.

The annual 1914 tour becomes of far greater importance than usual, as new towns are to be visited. For the first time Barstow will hear new and old-time airs rendered as they have never been rendered before. Once the Howdyites break forth never again will a desert canary raise its voice in the vicinity of Barstow. Needles and Prescott will have the band for an all-night session.

In addition to the musical stars there is a great aggregation of performers in other lines. "Yuma" Smith, the strong man, who tipped over forty-two beds in one night and carried a sixty-foot counter two miles on his shoulder, will positively appear and no extra charge will be made to see him perform.

Another star is that base drum demon—John Winton Wiese. John has an immense following in Arizona. Not only does he render solos on the jumbo drum, but he holds the record for speed in the street flushing regatta.

In the musical branch of the organization will be that celebrated Swiss bell ringer, Donald Lee. Don is the one man in ity who gets sweet music out cow bell. Lester Patee will play "Humoresque" on a snare drum.

P. H. Greer operates a cornet all the grace and cleverness kangaroo dancing the hesitation C. Robbins is the real star with horn. He plays standing on foot or rolling like an ocean

Cornelius Smiles will be there his matinee idol pose and the are in for a rare treat. Bananaman will appear at each as Little Egypt. Having old stage favorite in his days he is well qualified for this

The wonderful collection of lights will travel in their own cial train. Leon Shettler, the Bah of the affair, is kept busy cepting reservations. He only a few left.

Freddie Pabst, one of the of the Howdy Band, has been up nights thinking of some stunts. He hints at a real new tume. On the tour Freddie depended upon to play every ment from the base drum to spades and a heart.

Special costumes are to be and reservations should be early to assure a full outfit.

The train will leave thirty before the race starts and for tically the entire race the train follow along the course. This enable the people on the train the desert derby as it has never seen before.

Contrary to former trains the on the special this year is and it is very essential that vations be made early. This can done by notifying Leon Shettler.

HE BRANCHES OUT.

L. W. Neiswender, who has long connected with the Pacific selkar branch of this city, has nounced his retirement from the sel field. Neiswender is going business for himself soon and specialize on Ford accessories and built Fords.

WHALING SAYS THAT BRAVES WILL REPEAT.

Thinks There is no Team in League Good Enough to Defeat Boston and that Stallings's Machine will Beat Athletics Any Time They Start—James Threw but One Fast Ball in Second Game of Series.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

BERT WHALING says that the Braves are just about sure to repeat next season. This bit of important information will be grabbed with avidity by the excellent pee-pul of Boston, who, owing to the peculiar rigors of their climate, must depend solely on the printed word for their favorite pastime during the winter.

Bert, who is a Los Angeles boy, states that Boston has a better ball club than a lot of people suspect.

There should be no lingering doubts as to the ability of the Braves after their remarkable behavior in their own league, and the way in which they trounced the Athletics, but there are still those skeptical souls who do not think that they amount to much.

Whaling says the Braves won the world's series, not because the Athletics have gone back, but because Boston has the better ball club.

"The Athletics were up against some real pitching, a lot better than they had seen before, and you all know the result," said Whaling. "That first game killed the Athletics. They saw they were up against it, and showed no more fight than a sick rabbit in the next three games.

"Rudolph, James and Tyler knew that the Philadelphia sluggers didn't [illegible] and handed it to them. It was slow balls, curves and spitters that did the business. Plainly, the Athletics are fast-ball hitters.

"James, it will be remembered, held the Athletics down with two hits in the second game, a single by Collins and a double by Schang. Now, James has terrific speed, and in many games it is his main reliance, but I am going to tell you something about his tactics in that game which has not been published.

"James threw but one fast ball in that contest, and that was the one which Schang straightened for a double. That convinced him it wasn't exactly safe to provide speed for the Athletics to gaze upon. It was his [illegible] which had Mack's heavy hitters standing on one ear.

"This fellow Rudolph is one of the greatest pitchers of recent years. His coolness and versatility are his greatest assets. He has speed, curves, slow ones and a spitter, and you ought to have seen the way he mixed this assortment up on the Athletics. Most of the time they were standing up there with their lower lips doing duty as chest protectors and wondering what in the devil was coming up next.

"Tyler, with his overhand cross-fire, different from anything else to be seen in the big leagues, also had the Athletics at his mercy. I never caught a man whose delivery was as difficult to handle as Tyler's. It is almost impossible to describe his delivery. His ball seems simply to "sail" out of the reach of the batter just before reaching the plate. On a windy day, it is almost impossible to catch it, so you can imagine how much chance the batter has of hitting it.

"Don't let anybody try to tell you that any club with a trio of pitchers like that isn't a real pennant-winner.

"And there is that combination around second base—Maranville on one side and Evers on the other. Never was a keystone sack festooned with more class. The club is sufficiently well fortified in other departments to make it a most formidable machine.

"I can see no reason why the Braves should not win the pennant again next season, and, if their pitchers retain their form of this year, they ought to beat the Athletics any time they start. The Braves are more than a flash—they are a machine—and this machine should be running even more smoothly next season than this. Only in the last two months of the race did Stallings have it going right. If there is a better club in the league someone will have to lead me to it."

Whaling was asked his opinion of Stallings, the gent who cussed the Braves into the championship.

"The finest boss in the world," declared Bert. "During the game he is a whirlwind of invective, and drives his men to the limit, but off the field he will fight for any one of them—and every one of them will fight for him."

Whaling promptly spiked the rumor that he is negotiating with the Federals.

"It is true that I have not signed with Boston," he said, "but everything is understood, and I will be back on the job again next season. Should any other club offer me $2000 more than I will receive from Stallings, I would not consider it."

Plainly, Whaling is already counting the winning end of next year's world's series.

He pulled down $2800 as his share of the recent famous fracas, and showed himself to be a young man of rare judgment by promptly socking it into Los Angeles real estate. He should worry not about the future, and he says he is going to do the same thing next year.

OFFICIALS MADE A HIT.

The Times wishes to commend the work of Officials [illegible]holtz, Waddell, Holley and [illegible]nock in the Occidental-U.S.C. game yesterday. Their decisions were made without haste and with perfect impartiality and were upheld with cheerfulness. There were no debating society meetings, which spoiled the Occidental-Whittier and the U.S.C.-Whittier games. When a man calls back a touchdown such as Kelly made and such as McClung made twice, because of holding, his courage and eyesight are to be commended. If these four gentlemen officiate in the remaining conference games we may be assured of clean, fast and interesting play.

RACE HORSE KILLED IN WAR.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PARIS, Oct. 31.—It is announced that James Hennessy's chestnut horse Lord Loris, which had captured many prize turf events and brought its owner a fortune in purses, was killed while serving at the front as an officer's mount. The horse had been ridden by Jockey Alec Carter, who was recently killed in action while serving as a captain of the French Dragoons. The army, in requisitioning the horse, paid his owner 4000 francs ($800.)

Lord Loris's most recent turf achievement was the winning of the Grand Steeplechase de Paris, valued at $30,000, at the Auteuil course on June 21, last.

HATTER, WINNER, IS DISQUALIFIED.

Otto Hatter won the fourth of the series of championship races for Southern California last night at the Broadway rink, but, having fouled "Little" Wolfe, was disqualified and the race awarded to Ed Fairchild, who finished second.

The fifth race will be run off Wednesday night. To date Wolfe has won two races, Hatter one and Fairchild one. If either Fairchild or Hatter win then, a sixth race will have to be staged, as the medal goes to the winner of the largest number of the five races.

MUNICIPAL GOLF COURSE.

The new Los Angeles municipal golf course is an accomplished fact and is ready for play. It is situated in a 200-acre valley in Griffith Park near the zoo and experts regard the soil as the best for the purpose on the Coast. It is full eighteen holes. No green fees or charges of any description will be made to players. A clubhouse is soon to be erected. An opening day event will shortly be announced.

CHIP BITES HIS TONGUE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—George Chip, the Pennsylvania middleweight, resumed training today for his match next Friday with Jimmy Clabby, after a day's layoff.

Chip has a trick of sticking his tongue between his teeth when he gets eager. Four days ago, while sparring with his brother, he was clipped on the chin. The blow closed his teeth on his tongue and cut him badly. Thursday he played the same trick and that time the chop nearly cut off the tip of his tongue. It was necessary to take four stitches in the wound.

MISS BURNHAM TO MEET MRS. YEAGER.

Miss Beatriz Burnham and Mrs. Yeager will meet in the finals of the women's singles at 2 o'clock this afternoon on the Hotel Leighton courts. Miss Burnham reached the finals by beating Miss Mungen 11-9, 3-6, 7-5, while Mrs. Yeager got there by defeating Miss Hughes, 6-2, 6-4. The mixed doubles events will also be played today.

MANY LIVES.

An electric automobile has so many lives to its credit that even a cat does not make fair comparison. In Indianopolis there is an antique Waverly electric used for hauling a huge loaf of bread advertisement, that has an interesting history. In its palmy days it was a beautiful Waverley brougham. There was a fire in a private garage one day and when the wreckage was removed there was enough left of the electric to drive an advertising truck.

Barney and the Frenchman.

FEUD RENEWED IN THE PHOENIX DESERT BATTLE.

ALL ready for a revival of the famous Oldfield-Chevrolet "feud."

When Louis Chevrolet arrived here Friday to prepare for his part in this year's cactus derby, almost the first thing he asked was how Barney Oldfield was working. The two famous stars, once bitterest rivals for dirt track honors, are looked on as leading contenders in the Los Angeles-Phoenix grind next week, and already each man is boasting how far he will leave his rival behind when the gruelling battle commences.

Chevrolet has been out of the game for some time, and his "come back" effort will be one of the most interesting features of the annual event. Certainly Louis did not pick a soft spot, for anyone who has ever been over the Phoenix course knows that it takes a real driver to even finish, let alone be close to the money.

Chevrolet broke into big league company 'way back in 1905. Working as a mechanic in New Orleans, the French boy—who, by the way, is still under 30—attached himself to the staff of redoubtable William Pickens, who was then running the Buick team. The first rattle out of the box Chevrolet made good by piloting Maj. Miller's big Fiat a mile in 52 2-5 seconds. The mark was made at Morris Park, a mile and an eighth track, so Oldfield still claimed his mile record of 53 seconds, the Chevrolet crowd naturally assuming that Barney was wrong.

The first brush between Oldfield and Chevrolet came in June, 1905. The French boy won the first heat on the Hartford track by dashing between Oldfield and the fence on the last turn, nosing Barney out in a tight finish. The other heat of the match, slated for the next day, was more or less of a fiasco, Oldfield finally being declared the winner.

At Empire City a little later Chevrolet won two out of three heats of a match and then he and Barney hooked up again at St. Paul. Earl Kiser trimmed them both.

Now the old "feud" is to be revived in the Phoenix classic. One of the strange features of Chevrolet's entry into the desert grind is the fact that he is to drive one of the cars manufactured by W. C. Durand. Back in 1905, when Durand headed the Buick factory, Bill Pickens couldn't prevail on him to even pay Chevrolet a salary for driving on the Buick team. Pickens had to list Louie as a mechanic, and pay half his weekly stipend out of his own pocket.

Chevrolet's position of second to start promises a recklessly fast pace in this year's race. Louie promises to burn things up as far as the boulevards go. Oldfield, starting several places behind him, has put himself on record to catch the Frenchman before he reaches the edge of the desert. All of which makes it look like a new record if both the old timers stick in the battle all the way across to Phoenix.

Wiped Out.

PLANK, BENDER, COOMBS, ARE RELEASED OUTRIGHT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31.—All the baseball world received with a gasp of keen surprise the announcement today that Eddie Plank, Charles Albert Chief Bender and John W. (Jack) Coombs, than whom a greater trio of pitchers never performed at one time for the Athletics, had their names erased from the roster of the team they helped win five American League pennants. The famous trio was released outright today by Manager Connie Mack.

The three names which are synonymous wherever the great national game is played, were stricken from the Athletics' roster immediately after Manager Mack learned that Hughey Jennings, leader of the Detroit Tigers, had broken confidence by letting it be known that waivers had been asked on the veteran three.

Mack scored Jennings bitterly for breaking confidence and from the tone of his interview it is apparent considerable friction exists between the two managers.

PLANK SORE.

Eddie Plank was reached on the telephone at Gettysburg today and asked if he knew anything of his release. He said:

"It was a complete surprise to me and I knew nothing about it until a friend of mine called me this morning from Philadelphia and told me he had read it in the papers. I should have thought that Connie would have told me something about it particularly since I told him a few days ago that I had received a strong offer from the Federal League. I was man enough to do that and Connie might at least have done the same towards me. I gave the best I had to the Athletics and would like to be able to say the club treated me as well in return. I feel that I have at least a couple of years more good pitching left in my old wing and the fact that the Athletics want to release me will not make the Federals believe that I am all in."

Stock Motors, Ready-Made Motors, Parade Under Many Names

What is the heart and soul of an automobile? The motor! What determines the real quality of an automobile? The motor!

In these days of advanced, almost perfected, automobile construction a manufacturer can give roominess of body, quality of upholstery, durability of finish and completeness of equipment in any degree he chooses, and you can buy these things in any degree you choose.

With the motor—the heart of the car—it's different.

Many very successful and able builders of four cylinder cars have found themselves helpless when they came to building sixes. What is the result?

A lot of stock, ready-made six-cylinder motors parading under many names!

If you are satisfied with a stock motor, the name-plate on the car needn't bother you at all.

But are you satisfied with a stock motor? Do you want a six-cylinder car put out by manufacturers who can't build a six motor?

The manufacturers of the Chandler Light-Weight Six have been building six-cylinder motor cars and six-cylinder motors for eight years. They know six-cylinder construction which, as obviously is admitted by other manufacturers who could build their fours but can't build their sixes, is different.

The motor of the Chandler Light-Weight Six is the Chandler Motor. It is exclusive with the Chandler. You cannot get it in any other car.

And it is the Chandler motor, a marvelous engine, that has made the Chandler the greatest of all light-weight sixes.

Chandler pioneered the way in the light-six field. Chandler proved that a high-grade six-cylinder car could be built to sell for less than $2000.

The Chandler motor—exclusive, not stock, remember—made the Chandler car a sensational success.

And now, because of freedom from expensive mechanical errors and freedom from constant experimental work, Chandler can share profits with Chandler purchasers.

The price for the new 1915 Chandler—touring car or roadster—is $1595. It seems an impossible price for such a car, but that's the price and we can make prompt deliveries.

Come Pick Out Your Chandler Now. We Shall be Glad to Demonstrate for You.

FIRST TWO CARS GRABBED QUICK.

RIDES WITH FRIEND AND NEXT DAY ORDERS MACHINE BY TELEPHONE.

Convinced by a ride in the new six-cylinder Oakland car owned by H. R. Pollock of Pomona that it was the ideal car for him to own, W. E. Morse telephoned the representative of Hawley, King & Co. at Pomona he wanted to buy a car.

The first two six-cylinder Oaklands received have been sold as soon as they got here. The Pollocks wanted their car so badly that the agency had to offer them an inducement to hold it over for the auto show last week.

The Pollocks' car was delivered to them Saturday of last week. Sunday they took their first ride in it and invited the Morse family to accompany them. Mr. Morse telephoned the Pomona dealer asking if he had a "six" on hand. He did not, but Tuesday came to the city and that evening delivered the car at Cucamonga.

HE MADE GOOD.

R. L. Bisby, manager of the Martin shock absorber's retail branch, made good at the Automobile Show. In the two weeks that he had an exhibit at the Shrine Auditorium the largest number of Martin shock absorbers ever sold in the history of the corporation in a like period have been placed with automobile owners.

TO VISIT HERE.

C. A. Emise, vice-president and general sales manager of the Chandler Motor Car Company, wired Don Smith of the local agency last week that he would be in Los Angeles within the next ten days. Emise has been making a trip through the western territory, visiting all the agencies and making a general study of business conditions.

ON THE TICKET.

POMONA HIGH PARADES ALL OVER REDLANDS TEAM.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

POMONA, Oct. 31.—Outplayed in every point of the game, the Redlands High School Ruggers, in the second contest of the Citrus Belt League series, went down to smashing defeat this afternoon before the Cardinals of this city, the final count being 54 to 0, which, by the way, is the largest score ever run up in the history of the league.

Coach Evans and his speedy lads are naturally jubilant over the showing, as Redlands was supposed to have "some team," the members outweighing Pomona considerably.

The enthusiastic crowd of fans gathered at the Pearl-street campus only had to wait about two minutes after the "doings" opened up, with Redlands kicking off, until the Cardinals had the ball over their opponents' line for the first touchdown.

The visitors tried to steady themselves and made rally after rally to check the onrushes and heady work of the Pomona speedsters, without avail, and the first half ended 28 to 0 amid loud acclaim.

When the whistle again was sounded Redlands trotted to position as gamely as possible, but the second half, as to score, was nearly as agonizing for the Redlands boys as the first, 26 points being registered.

What was admitted by fans to be the finest exhibition of the pass rush ever seen in Southern California Rugby was shown by Pomona in this last half.

The Cardinals started on the 10-yard line and by a well ordered series of skillful and speedy passing, the lads worked the ball, through the nimble medium of eight of their fellows, down ninety yards to field and scored a touchdown, Redlands powerless to break the combination.

Pomona's scrum worked to a high point of efficiency and the back field was there with the goods whenever offered opportunity. Varcoe, Martin and Reeder all worked well in the scrum and Avis at five-eighths. Referee Stewart, formerly of Australia, gave satisfaction in his capacity.

ERIC KOBBE IS HERO OF HALLOWEEN GOLF PLAY.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

ERIC KOBBE was the hero of the Halloween golf handicap at the Annandale Country Club yesterday with 84-14-70. He is a slender young man with the correct golfing aspect who certainly ought to be relied upon to win things sometimes. He just missed glory at Del Monte, but the signs indicate that he will do Annandale credit this winter.

Dr. Walter Brown made second best showing, with 85-14-71, and Forrest Cornett, son of the Rev. W. H. Cornett, himself a prominent golfer, had a net 73 on 16 handicap. Both Charles H. Biggar and Howard J. Fish had 74 on 2 and 12 handicaps respectively. Biggar's 76 was the best gross score of the day—the rain, you know, is apt to add a stroke or two to our score and Biggar could not be expected to maintain his last week's 69 standard anyway.

Frank D. Tatum had a 78 gross, but Horace Major, who has been elated in the early seventies so regularly lately, indulged in a weighty 82.

They had seventy-five people to the Halloween dinner at Annandale last night.

The Midwick.

At the Midwick the golf took the form of handicap match play against par and was won by another personable hero in E. Conde Jones. Scores were not very inspiring at the Midwick, but many conditions went to enlarge them, the previous night's rain more particularly. Conde Jones finished 3 down on 3 handicap, and Norman Murray 5 down, Arthur Braly 5 down and Ralph Harris 6 down.

The men's doubles tennis reached the semi-finals before dusk and these and the finals will be played today. The semi-finalists are Reed and Rhodes against Cook and Wigton, Ayre and Guthrie against Carpenter and Merwin.

There were nearly two hundred dinner guests for the Halloween frolics at the Midwick last evening.

PRINCETON PLAYS WILLIAMS TO TIE.

TIGERS SCORE THEIR POINTS WITH TWO MINUTES TO PLAY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PRINCETON (N. J.) Oct. 31.—Princeton and Williams met in football here today and the game resulted in a 7-to-7 tie, the Tigers scoring their touchdown and goal with only two minutes to play.

Toolan of Williams was the star of the game. His run of fifty-five yards from a scrimmage formation was a beauty. His forward pass of fourteen yards to Overton on the next play resulted in the Williams touchdown, Overton running five yards after catching the ball.

The Princetonians' tackling and interference was poor, while Williams had a sterling defense and a crashing attack.

Princeton scored her touchdown when Gennert recovered Tompkins's fumble on Williams's 15-yard line. Glick advanced it three yards, and a penalty helped a little. Driggs rounded the end for five yards and Glick carried the ball over off tackle. Law kicked the goal that tied the score.

STANFORD VARSITY WALLOPS ALUMNI.

URBAN AND LACHMUND SHINE WITH SPECTACULAR DODGING.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PALO ALTO, Oct. 31.—In a game lacking in pep and fight, Stanford's varsity, composed chiefly of substitutes, walloped the Stanford California alumni team to the tune of 31 to 3.

Much Rugby science was displayed by both sides, but it was usually of no avail because of poor team work. The Cardinals won on individual plays and spurts. Slow work by the varsity in the first session, which resulted in a try for the enemy, seemed to verify the talk of a "slump" now going around, but the Cardinals came back strong in the last half.

Austin, generally the star, was eclipsed by the wonderful dodging runs of Urban. Lachmund, also, excelled in this respect. Burns played a star game at wing and bids fair to oust Reeves from that berth. Walker at half was a wonder at getting out his passes and in stopping of the ball.

The line-up:

PENNSY BESTS SWARTHMORE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31.—The University of Pennsylvania's football team defeated Swarthmore College on Franklin Field today by the score of 40 to 6. The game was good practice for Pennsylvania, which meets Michigan at Ann Arbor next Saturday. The home eleven played mostly straight football, few forward passes or other open plays being attempted. When the wind was at her back Pennsylvania constantly kicked, evidently trying to win without taking too great a risk of having her best men injured. The feature of the game was a ninety-five-yard run by Tucker, who caught the ball on a kick-off and evaded the whole Swarthmore team. Swarthmore's touchdown was made on a sixty-six-yard run by Locke.

TWO MONTHS TO LAND BIG ORDER.

After two months of satisfactory service by the highway and bridge department of Los Angeles county, two Standard trucks have been accepted from Hawley, King & Co. by the Board of Supervisors.

It is doubtful if any truck sale made in recent months met with such strenuous competition. No definite time was fixed by the Supervisors, for the consideration of the matter. At last the subject came up unexpectedly.

The Standard representative met the proposition of a two months' test. At the end of that time it was learned the trucks had not been laid up for a day, had not missed a trip, and had not been to the garage once. The operators of the trucks were so well pleased that they recommended their acceptance to the Board of Supervisors.

WINS FIRST PRIZE.

The first prize in the contest conducted by the Saxon Motor Company among its dealers, who personally drove their car from fifty to 100 miles and wrote the best description of it has been awarded John Gilbert, the dealer at Jacksonville, Fla.

CORONA TRACK IN CONDITION.

Huntley Gordon, with the Gordon Special, is the eighth entry in the Corona road race.

Fred J. Wagner has been officially announced as starter of the great 300-mile speed battle, which is scheduled for Thanksgiving Day on the circle city course. Wagner is well known here, having started the greatest motor races ever held on the Pacific Coast. A. M. Young, who officiated as starter last year, and who was scheduled for the berth this season, has been appointed manager of the classic by the Corona Racing Association.

The Corona authorities are taking every precaution this year. The lives of spectators will be safeguarded in every possible way. The grand-stand has already been completed, with a seating capacity of 7000. Heavy timbers, reinforced with steel rails, have been placed in front of the stands and a wire mesh fence, five feet high, is now being built around the entire course. On the lower stretch a fence has been placed back of the sidewalk and pepper trees as a bulwark to shield the thousands of spectators, who will line the fast course November 26.

MANUAL ARTS TAKES GAME.

Was a Rough House from the Start.

Hollywood Put up Surprising Battle.

No Good Rugby Played in the Game.

BY BOB WEAVER.

In a very ragged game of Rugby, Manual Arts vanquished Hollywood yesterday afternoon on Manual Field by 13 to 3.

The foothillers, seeking revenge for their defeat by Poly last week, entered the fray full of fight and determination to conquer the Toilers at all costs. Coach Webster's ruggers certainly caused the Manual rooters thirty minutes of anxiety the first half. They not only held them to one lonely try, but scored a drop kick from an off-side penalty that gave them three points.

The game itself was a fierce exhibition of Rugby, both sides seeming to forget the many lessons in Rugby taught them by their coaches, and that there was a back field, which was supposed to carry the pigskin once in a while.

The entire game was one continual fight for the ball by the forwards; they trying in their anxiety to score to play the whole game, which marred all the pretty plays that exist in an open game where the scrum gets the ball out clean to their respective backs.

Both sides fought too hard, thereby causing entirely too much rough play.

The Toilers, by winning today's game, won their second victory in the city series, so a victory next Friday over Poly will give them a clear title for the city championship.

Too much credit cannot be given to Hollywood for the low score Manual was held to. Times too numerous to count, they carried the ball from the shadow of their goal posts back to the center of the field.

Manual, probably overconfident, did not play anything like the game it has put up all season. The forwards played an aggressive game, but were over-anxious, and did not give the back field any chances to get away by passing rushes.

Hollywood won the toss, defending the south goal. The first ten minutes of play was fought mostly in the center of the field, with neither team having any advantage.

Hollywood's forwards finally carried the ball, by a fine dribbling rush, into their opponents' territory, and a few minutes later were awarded a free kick on Manual's 30-yard line. Rid[illegible] here showed his Brickley toe by kicking a beautiful drop-kick, which went between the posts for the first score of the game.

The large Hollywood rooting section, accompanied by their over[illegible] band, went mad with delight at their team getting first blood.

The Toilers kicked off from the center of the field, and rushed the ball past Hollywood's 25-yard line, where they managed to keep the ball for the next five minutes, but try as they did with all their strength, they could not pass the foothillers' stone-wall defense. [illegible] finally eased the strain for his team by a long kick to touch, putting the ball on the 40-yard line.

Here a free kick was given Manual. Maurer taking the kick, crossed the ball. His teammates were down on it like a pack of hungry wolves, which they seized from the hands of the Hollywood contingent, and with a pretty passing rush, the ball finally landed out to Ramey, who sprinted over the line for a try. Maurer missed the goal from a difficult angle. Score: Manual, 4; Hollywood, 3.

This ended the scoring for both sides, the game seesawing back and forth until the whistle blew, ending the fight for the first half.

The second half was a repetition of the first, both sides playing a forward game, continually falling on the ball in the scrum.

The Toilers, imbued with extra fighting spirit acquired at half time from Coach Fritsch, commenced a march for another try, and soon had the sphere in close proximity to their opponents' chalk line.

A scrum was given by Referee Blue on Hollywood's 5-yard line, and Capt. Blair, receiving the ball from his pack, ploughed over the line for the second try, with half of Hollywood's team trying to keep him from annexing the four coveted points. Maurer again missed the kick for goal.

The next and final try was scored a few minutes later, when Slobohm carried the ball from Hollywood's 20-yard line at his feet, and catching it finally in his arms, going over the line near the center of the field. Maurer kicked an easy goal, making the score, Manual Arts, 13; Hollywood, 3.

The balance of the game was fought in Hollywood's territory with very little advantage to either side.

Slobohm played a star game in Manual's pack, while Maurer starred in the back field, saving his side on numerous occasions by his wonderful kicking to touch.

This boy has a beautiful kick with either foot, and uses his head at all times. He is easily the pick of the full-backs in the South this year. Capt. Blair and Redpath both played a strong game, but were given few chances like the balance of their team-mates to shine on the offense. For Hollywood Capt. Gooding, Rid[illegible], Bailey and Goody played a splendid game and deserve lots of praise.

Several thousand enthusiastic rooters were on hand to assist their respective favorites, and kept busy throughout the combat with their yells and songs. The teams lined up as follows:

STANTON'S HUNS SHOW A LOT OF PLUNGING POWER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CLAREMONT, Oct. 31.—Pomona won her fifth consecutive victory of the season on Alumni Field this afternoon when it took Redlands into camp by the score of 47 to 7.

Both teams played rather flashy football throughout, the work being good and bad in spots. The Huns started out with a rush, scoring three touchdowns in the first quarter, the weak Redlands line was repeatedly battered and long gains resulted.

Pomona scored her first touchdown within the first five minutes when Adams gained twenty yards on a full buck, another touchdown followed in short order.

After Capt. Heath had made twenty-five yards off tackle, Adams again took the ball over the line, Pomona kicked off and scored again in short order. Craig put the ball under the goal porto by means of a spectacular thirty-five-yard forward pass, and Adams again went over for a touchdown after conversion. The score stood Pomona 19, Redlands 0.

The Sage Hens suffered a startling reversal of form in the second quarter, Hentschke and McFadden engaged in a punting duel which ended in Redlands blocking a kick.

The Baptists gained another twenty yards by uncorking one of their famous trick plays, and two bucks put the ball across the Blue and White line. Hentschke converted; score, Pomona 19, Redlands 7.

The Pomona goal line was never again in danger. The Huns played much better football the second half, and slipped over four more touchdowns. Greene, who had taken Adams's place, repeatedly penetrated the Redlands line for gains up to thirty yards.

The Baptist linemen seemed unable to stop the plunging full-back, Clary and Given made good gains on short-end runs, and McFadden repeatedly got away with quarter-back bucks.

Given made the spectacular run of the day when he eluded the opposing tacklers and gained forty-five yards before being brought down.

Capt. Heath had entire charge of the team, as Coach Stanton was out of town. Clary called signals during most of the game. The teams lined up as follows:

Pomona.		Redlands.
Meade Craig, Sugg	R.E.L.	Gillette

YALE OPEN PLAY BAFFLES COLGATE.

LOSERS MANAGE TO SLIP OVER A SCORE ON ELI SCRUBS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW HAVEN (Ct.) Oct. 31.—Colgate lost to Yale today, 49 to 7. The Rugby passing game completely baffled the visitors. In the third period Yale played its entire second team and it was then that Colgate scored. Yale played its regular team again in the fourth period.

NEBRASKA AND AMES AGGIES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

LINCOLN (Neb.) Oct. 31.—The Ames Agricultural College football team was put out of the running for the Missouri Valley championship here this afternoon when outplaying the Nebraska team for three quarters, they weakened and Nebraska won by a score of 20 to 7.

Much Too Good.

CHAFFEY UNION HAS NO TROUBLE WITH WHITTIER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ONTARIO, Oct. 31.—Scoring four touchdowns in the first ten minutes of play, Chaffey High today defeated Whittier High in football by a score of 35 to 0.

The game was played in ten-minute quarters. After the first quarter, many substitutes were tried out in the Chaffey line-up. In the last quarter the regular team was again put on the field and a fifth touchdown was scored.

They were on the way to a sixth touchdown when the game was called. Half-backs Benson and South, Quarterback Abbott, Tackles Siemon and Arnett, and Downer, end, starred for Chaffey.

The Tigers ripped the Poet line-up in the first quarter, scoring their first touchdown in four minutes when Abbott got away for twenty yards on a quarter-back run.

The second touchdown came quicker. Whittier received the kick-off and punted on the first down. The kick was a poor one and Abbott ran the ball back to Whittier's 30-yard line. On the first play, South circled right end for a touchdown. Whittier kicked off to Chaffey's 20-yard line. Benson went eighty yards for a touchdown on the next play.

This brought the score up to 21 in seven minutes of play. Three successful forward passes by Chaffey took the ball from their own 10-yard line to Whittier's 20-yard line, from whence Abbott scored on a quarter-back run.

In the second and third quarters Chaffey tried many new plays and men. In the last quarter, by straight football, they sent Abbott over for the fifth score. In the morning the Chaffey second team defeated the Whittier seconds, 14 to 6.

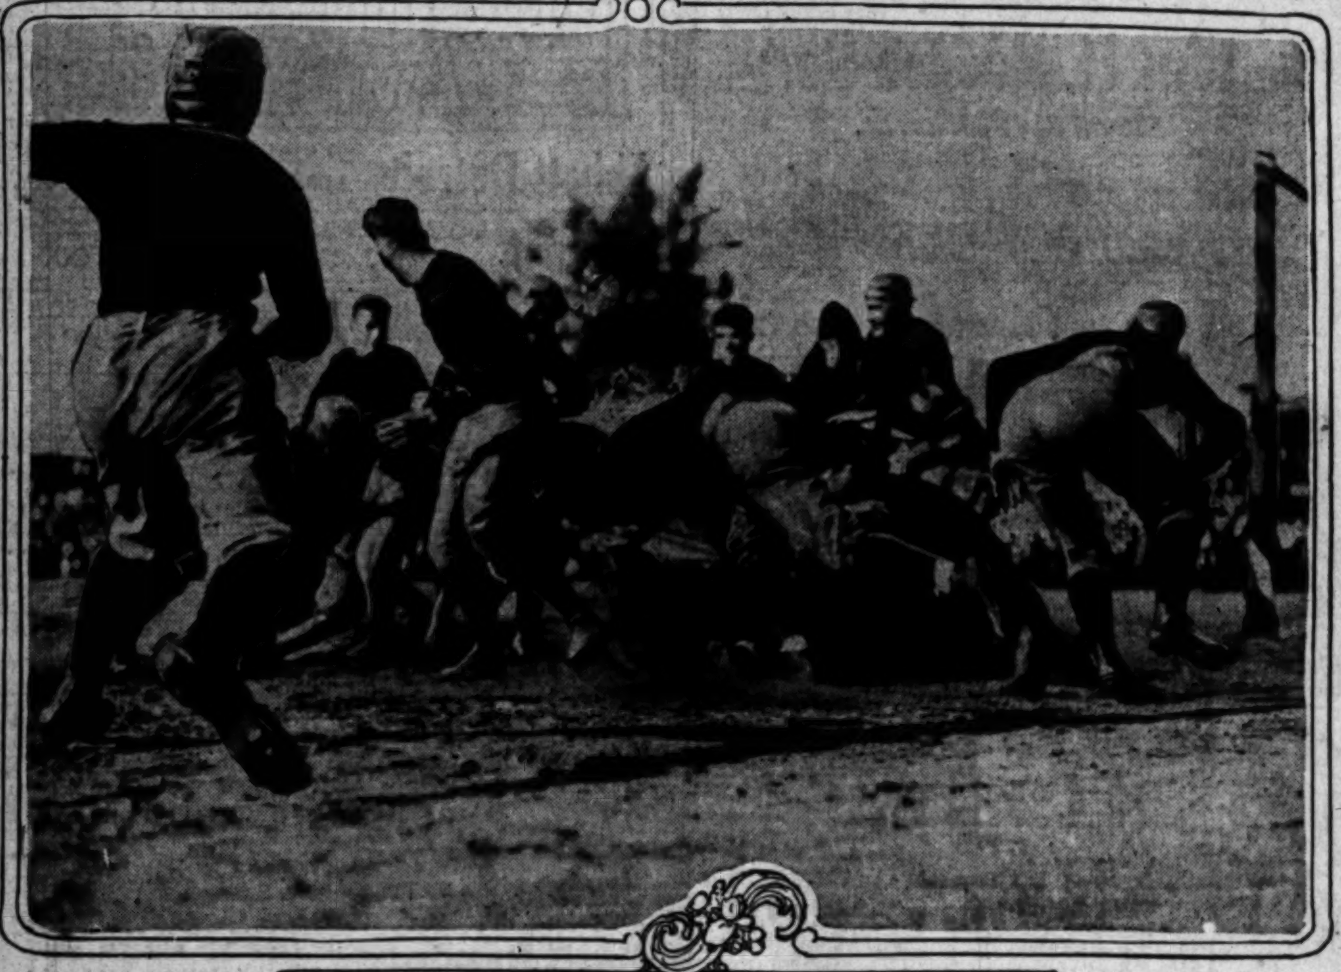
Fierce Tiger Onslaught.



Just before the Tigers scored.

The Trojans are defending the east goal. Fulback Charkey Johnson of Occidental has the ball and Elmore of U.S.C. is making a flying tackle to stop him. Tackle Deems of Occidental is ahead of Johnson in the interference and the figure in the foreground is that of Lund, the U.SC. halfback.

Williams' Version.

mons, the brunette equine, yet to manifest its personality. Our leading educational institutions may have to flip ae coin, draw straws or shake dice to decide which has the best football team.

Occidental galloped gaily into the lead early in the contest, Achilles McClung and Ulysses Foster each crossing the sacred line of the Trojans for touchdowns, and Achilles neatly kicking both goals. This left the score 14 to 0 at the end of the first inning.

KELLY BREAKS LOOSE.

In the second inning, the Trojans began to sit up and make observations. Hector Kelly, the well-known hurdler, broke loose from his opponents for a 70-yard run to what appeared to the untrained eye to be a touchdown, but he was called by alert officials, who would not stand for any funny business. In fact, there were so many penalties inflicted that both teams are estimated to have made more yardage going backward than forward. They probably had it coming to them at that, as the athletes on both sides were ambitious and full of vinegar, and it is thought that none of them would hesitate to take a toehold of an unsuspecting opponent if he thought that the officials were looking the other way.

After Hector had been called back, the Trojans got the ball down within a few yards of the line and registered their first touchdown on a tidy forward pass, Holloway to Elmore. Elmore kicked goal, and the second inning ended with the count, 14 to 7 and everybody perspiring freely.

Kelly became industrious again in the third quarter, and chased around the right end for another touchdown. By this time Elmore's big toe had grown weak, and he missed an easy goal. This made the score, 14 to 13, and left the issue greatly in doubt.

MISSED THE GOAL.

This seemed to goad the Tigers greatly, for they promptly plugged down the field until close enough to send McClung catapulting across the line. At this point, Sammy's best foot slumped and he missed the goal by a hair or so, hitting the post.

This score of 20 to 13 stuck to the bitter end. Occidental played a conservative game in the last quarter. The Tigers got possession of the ball early in this inning, and hung onto it most of the time. Foster, Shipke and a strong, fresh young athlete by the name of Smith, who had relieved the overworked McClung, occupied the last quarter profitably by horning their way through the Trojan defense for a steady march down the field, and had the playful pigskin on U.S.C.'s ten-yard line when the referee blew his judicial breath into a tin whistle announcing the cessation of hostilities.

Contrary to expectations Occidental won on straight football with a sprinkling of trick plays. The Tigers were unable to work their forward pass with the expected neatness and eclat, Kelly busting it up on innumerable occasions.

MIGHTY HURDLER.

Kelly also seemed to be U.S.C.'s most formidable athlete on the offense. On several occasions his hurdle stride carried him around the end at a high rate of speed and for large gains. On his touchdown that wasn't allowed, he simply outran the entire field, and at one time paused to turn up his nose at Sid Foster, who was hotly pursuing him.

Had Kelly been given more employment, it might be U.S.C. and not Occidental who is gloating today.

The firm of Teschke and Bailey also was a great power for good on the defense for the struggling Trojans. James played the best all-around game for the vanquished athletes.

The line-smashing of McClung and Shipke was something that U.S.C. seemed unable to combat with any of the weapons at its command, while the scintillating and versatile Foster was a perpetual source of annoyance. Time and again McClung plowed through the Cardinal line for excellent gains despite the fact that innumerable athletes were clinging to his clothing with grim determination.

Several times it seemed that his shirt or his pants would be torn from him, which would have been very embarrassing under the circumstances. It also would have been risky as John Danger was among those present.

The early crowd was entertained by the Wooz, a strange animal that appears to be a cross between a jaguar and a jackass. The Wooz is a hand-made animal with a human being concealed inside its picturesque interior, and is very amusing at times.

Fred Kelly,

The U.S.C. man who saved his team from a shut-out at the hands of the Fighting Tigers by his sensational end runing.

THE ROOTERS.

The Trojans were first on the field Their apearance was the signal for the U.S.C. section of the bleachers to show unmistakable signs of nuttiness. Then the Tigers streamed out from the opposite corners, and every Occidental student in the place also became a raving nut. By this time both of the college brass bands had busted loose and continued to blow large holes in the surrounding atmosphere throughout the afternoon. I hope one of these times to see the Oxy and U.S.C. bands matched in an endurance contest.

All this time Coaches Glaze and Pipal were following the maneuvers of their teams with the trained and critical eye of experience, while the officials were standing around and trying to look wise.

Several cops showed themselves to be true guardians of the people's welfare by climbing up in the press box and chasing out a large colony of undesirables.

After the game the Occidental students engaged in a serpentine dance, a form of lunacy that is peculiar to college boys and girls.

RECORD TIRE ORDER.

G. C. Christensen of Pasadena has placed an order with the local Firestone branch for a carload factory shipment of Firestone casings to take care of the winter tourist motor trade.

ARDEN VS. L.A.A.C.

L.A.A.C. will meet the Arden Club this morning at 10 o'clock in a practice game at Manual Arts Field.

Both clubs will put their best men in the field in order to get their teams in shape for the club championship games, to be decided next month.

SPORTSMANSHIP OF TIGERS MAKES HIT WITH BOVARD.

BY WARREN B. BOVARD.
(Graduate manager of U.S.C.)

AN INTERCOLLEGIATE football game between two old rivals has them all beaten. It is too strenuous to last like baseball but while it does last it is undisputed King.

Saturday saw the greatest crowd ever on our field. The two rooting sections came nearer the big eastern stuff than we have seen. It will only be two more years when the Conference football games in Southern California will draw a crowd equal to the Stanford-California match.

All we need to do is to stick together. The Occidental rooters came through with one of the finest pieces of sportsmanship and cemented the Conference when they rushed to the S.C. section after the game and cheered the losers.

I consider the Occidental team one of the greatest little machines in the football world. Fred Kelly did just what those who have followed him closely knew he would, came to the front in a pinch. He showed speed, fight and nerve and with the rest of the team fought to the last whistle against a wonderfully hard, clever attack.

Tigers Crush Trojans.

chine, because they were in better condition.

The Tigers had the ball in their possession most of the time. It was intercepted forward passes that gave the Trojans their chance.

THE REASON.

Yet it was the way the Tigers followed the ball that won the game. To begin with, Deems scooped off a fumble and was off for the run that made the first Tiger score possible. Sam McClung, Foster and Shipke could do the rest.

Johnson intercepted a forward pass and ran to the 10-yard line. McClung put the ball on U.S.C.'s 1-yard line and Foster went over.

Halloway fumbled the ball on a kick-off. Coffeen curled around it. Shipke, but mostly McClung, did the rest.

ONE RESULT.

With the Tigers following the ball like that with Sam McClung, the greatest half in the south, Shipke, the smashing tackle, and Foster, the wonderful open field runner, there was only one outcome.

The first quarter the speed of the Tiger attack swept the Trojans off their feet; they seemed bewildered. Before they could settle down, before Kelly could get into the game in Lund's place, Sam McClung and Sid Foster had crossed their goal line and the toe of McClung had made two goals.

Sid Foster opened the game with his run through the whole team for sixty-five yards. The Tigers made their first downs. They tried their forward pass and failed. The Trojans smeared their forward passes from the beginning to the end. They had learned their lesson from Whittier.

TROJANS HOLD.

On their own 30-yard line the Trojans held. Then they began a march. Lund cut in around end for nine yards. Davis slipped around left end for two yards and it was first down. It looked as if the Trojans were doing their grand march again. Then the Tigers tightened. Three times the Trojans failed to make an appreciable gain. A forward pass to Davis worked for fifteen. U.S.C. had opened up.

Then Elmore fumbled. Deems scooped up the ball and was off on a long thirty-five-yard run. He was downed on U.S.C.'s 10-yard line. Foster advanced the ball a couple. Then came the Tigers' new trick play. Shipke hurled himself out of tackle. Lenz still holding the ball crept behind him and tossed to McClung, who slipped through the puzzled Trojans for the first Tiger touchdowwn. He kicked goal and the score was 14 to 0.

Elmore kicked off to Batz on Oxy's 20-yard line. He was downed before he could take many steps. Occidental was penalized five yards for off side. Then McClung shot around tackle for twelve. On the next play Shipke fumbled the ball and Davis recovered on Oxy's 45-yard line.

Then the game hung in the balance. Then the Trojan backs had their chance. Elmore, Holloway and Lund failed to make over three yards. The U.S.C. smashers had failed. The Tiger line had held. Their defeat had been written.

Forced to the open play. Holloway tossed a forward pass at Davis. Johnson, playing full for the Tigers, went up into the air, got it and was off down the field like a bolt. He flew along with Craig after him. The husky Trojan downed him on U.S.C.'s 10-yard line. McClung began his deadly work. On the first down he went off Craig's tackle for six yards, on the next for three. Then Foster stole around the other end for the second touchdown. McClung kicked the goal and the score was 14 to 0.

Elmore kicked off to Batz again, because he was farthest away from Foster. Then began the Tiger march. McClung, Foster, Shipke, and Lenz went down the field. The quarter ended on U.S.C.'s 30-yard line.

THIRD QUARTER.

The Tigers began their march in the third quarter, when a fifteen-yard penalty made the short off-tackle runs impossible. They opened up, Kelly intercepted a forward pass and ran the length of the field. But Teschke had interfered with the Tiger trying to catch the pass and the ball was brought back. Badennock, the field judge, is to be commended on the courage he showed in that play. He did his duty with a whole eleven ready to jump on his back.

Then Shipke fumbled and Elmore got off with a thirty-five-yard run. The Trojans were held and the Tigers began their fight up the field. Punts were intercepted. But Taylor intercepted a pass, giving the Trojans their chance. They fought the ball along in the way the Tigers did until they got to Oxy's 10-yard line. Holloway shot a forward pass to Elmore back of the goal. Elmore kicked the goal and the score was 14 to 7.

So ended the first half and the tale of the game had been told. The Tigers were outplaying U.S.C. McClung, Foster and Shipke were unstoppable. But the forward pass of the Tigers had been broken to pieces.

Occidental had too much class, fought too hard, followed the ball too close. The Tiger backfield was too fast.

KELLY'S STAR WORK.

Kelly dominated the third quarter. His wide-sweeping end runs were directly responsible for the second Trojan score. It was he with the assistance of Elmore and Davis and Oxy penalties that went down the field and it was he that made the touchdown on a wide-sweeping end run. Elmore failed to kick the goal. The score was 14 to 13.

For the first part of the quarter, the Trojans outplayed the Tigers, swept them off their feet, thanks to Mr. Kelly. Sid Foster alone seemed able to stop him.

But when McClung kicked Holloway and Coffeen fell on it. The Tigers immediately came to life. There was no stopping McClung and Shipke. McClung finally went over for the touchdown but failed to kick the goal. The score was 20 to 13.

U.S.C. received the kick. The Tigers began again. They had solved the mystery of Kelly. The ball was on U.S.C.'s 20-yard line when the quarter ended.

From then on it was Occidental until Kelly intercepted a forward pass and ran down the field. But he was thrown for loss and fumble.

SMITH COMES IN.

Oxy, in spite of numerous penalties, was never in danger again. McClung had collapsed and gone out, but Fresh "Shorty" Smith had taken his place.

The last quarter was all Occidental. Two times the Tigers crossed the Trojan goal line and were called back on penalties.

It was a wonderful game. Too much credit cannot be given Pipal for the way he brought the Tiger backs. The Trojans fought gamely but were outplayed. James, Teschke and Bailey played a tremendous defensive game.

The whole Tiger team deserves credit for the victory. Their trick plays, their bucks, their defense was too much for the Trojans and them up in the air. Line-up:

MILLIONS IN MOTORS ONLY.

The hip Suruga is now on the high seas with a cargo of American-made motor trucks and automobiles for the use of the allies. The ship is sailing under the protection of the British flag. The cargo is rated at $5,580,000.

During the first twenty days of October there was $20,000,000 worth of motor trucks alone sold to foreign armies by American manufacturers. It is claimed that within ninety days there will not be a five-ton or a three-ton truck in the United States for sale if the war continues and the powers continue to call upon America for their machines.

On one ship which landed in Holland there was $440,000 worth of gasoline. The Packard Company alone has sold almost $3,000,000 worth of trucks to the allies and the White Company has sold almost the same amount.

BUYING A MOTOR CAR IS A TEST OF A MAN'S JUDGMENT

If you were to buy a piano, a watch, or even a typewriter—any article, in which you would expect the finest of service and in which you could take pride—you would undoubtedly have in mind some standard make which stood for the best.

The Stevens-Duryea company for twenty-five years has made the finest of cars—with the result that in the high-grade motor car market the Stevens-Duryea stands supreme.

The sincerest flattery is imitation and there is no car today so widely copied, both in body lines and mechanical construction.

People of means and discrimination are today buying the Stevens-Duryea. A combination of elegance, distinction and service.

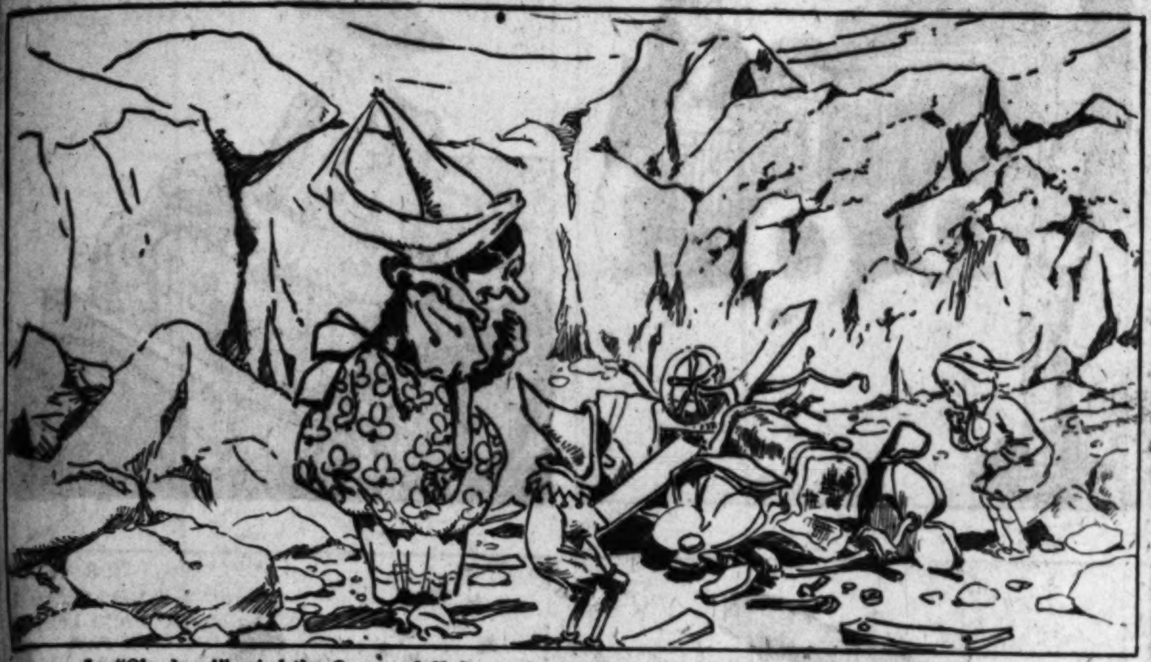
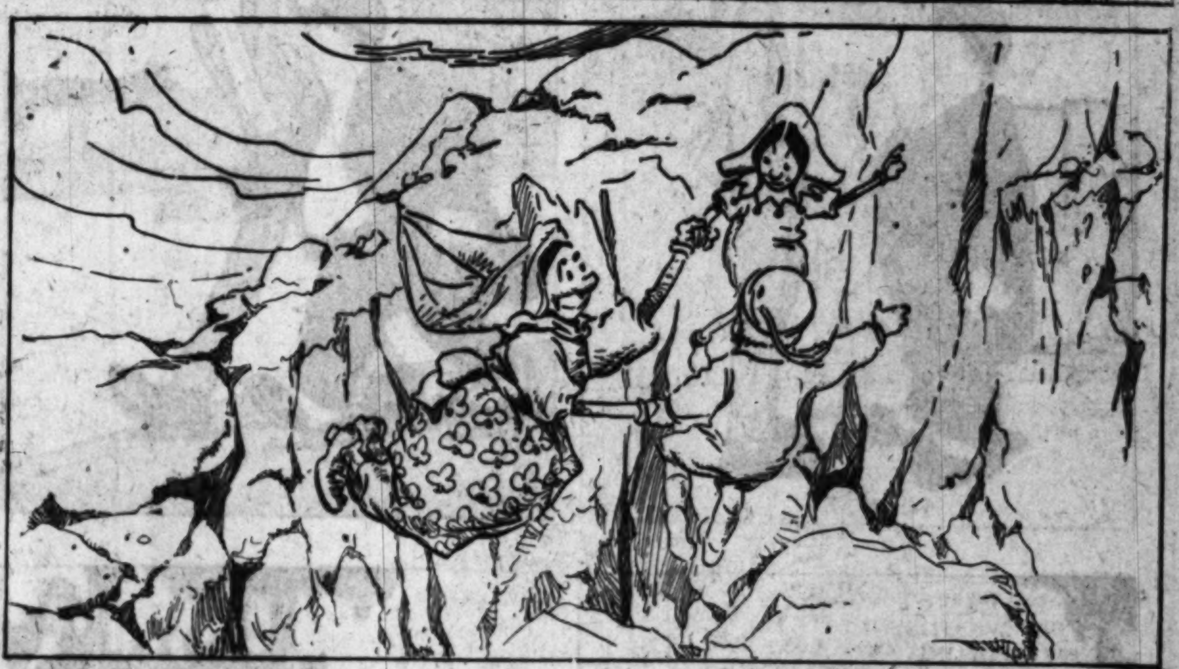
THE ADVENTURE WITH THE FLIPPITY FLOP MAGICIAN.

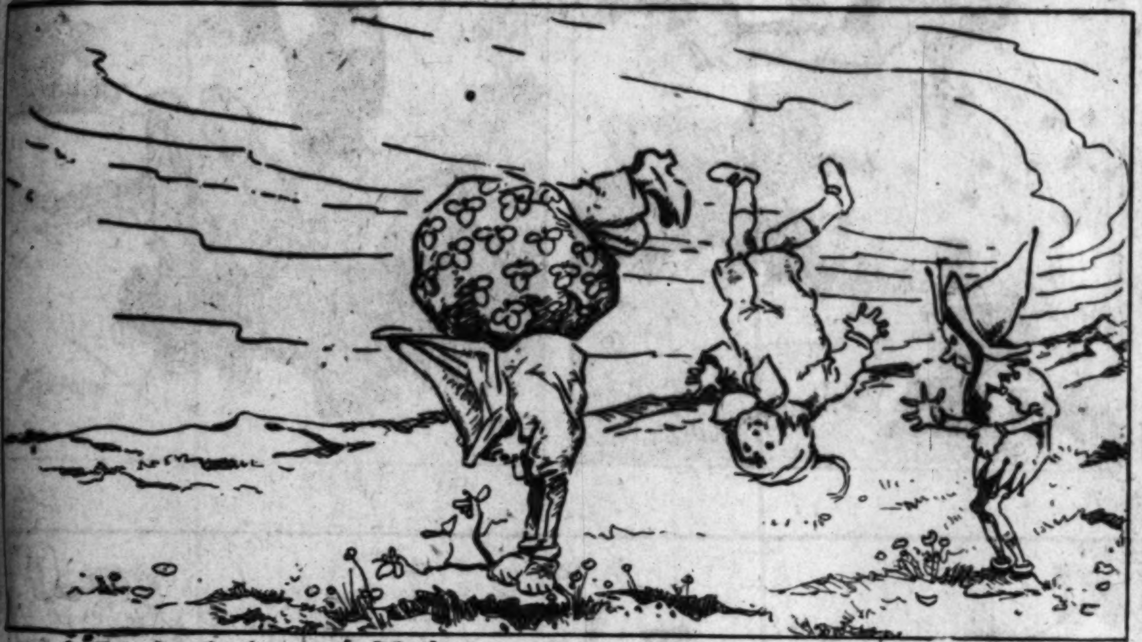
BY JOHN GRUELLE



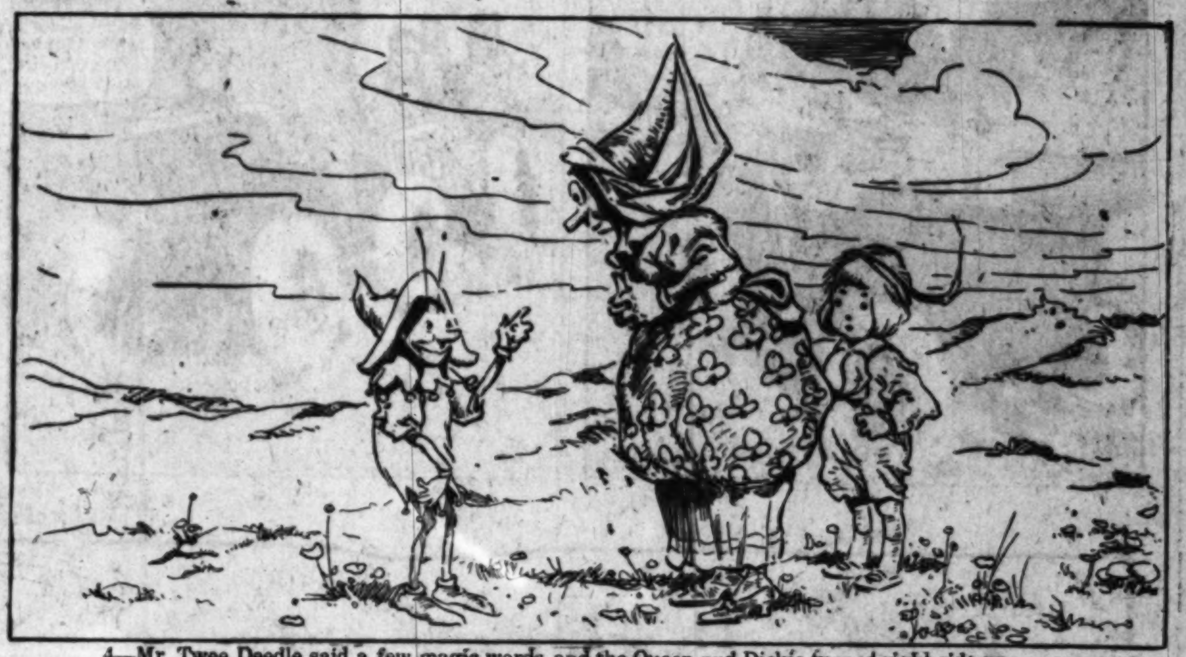
1—"Oh, dear!" cried the Queen of Clubs as she looked at the car she had driven over the cliff. "We will never get to the market and get the things I wanted for dinner!"



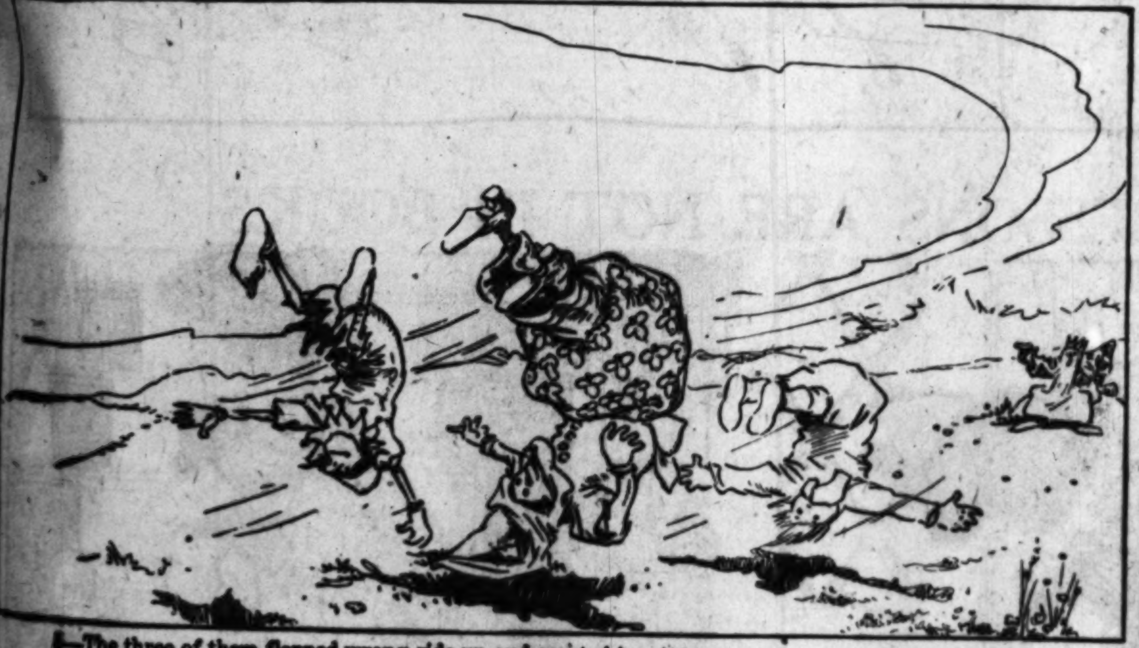
2—"I guess we will find a way," replied Mr. Twee Deedle as he and Dickie took the Queen's hand and flew up the cliff with her.



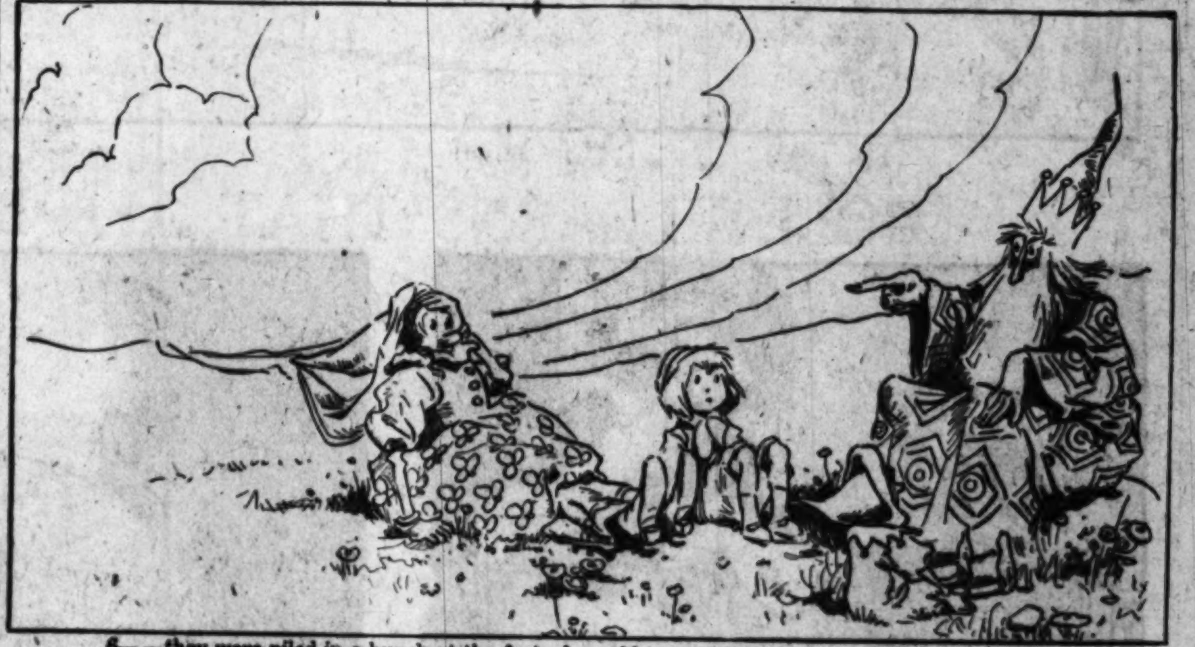
3—But when the three reached the level ground above the Queen of Clubs and Dickie turned topsy turvy and hung suspended in the air. The Queen screamed and clung to a bush.



4—Mr. Twee Deedle said a few magic words, and the Queen and Dickie turned right side up. "My! That made the blood rush to my head!" the Queen cried. "What caused us to do that?" "I am sure I do not knew!" Mr. Twee Deedle started to say, when——



5—The three of them flopped wrong side up and went skimming over the ground at a breakneck speed. "Gribby Grundles!" cried Mr. Twee Deedle, that being the magic word for stop, but no one stopped until——



6——they were piled in a bunch at the feet of an old man with long white whiskers and a crown on his head. "It's old Flapdoodles, the Flippity Flop magician!" cried the Queen. "Nothing can save us!"

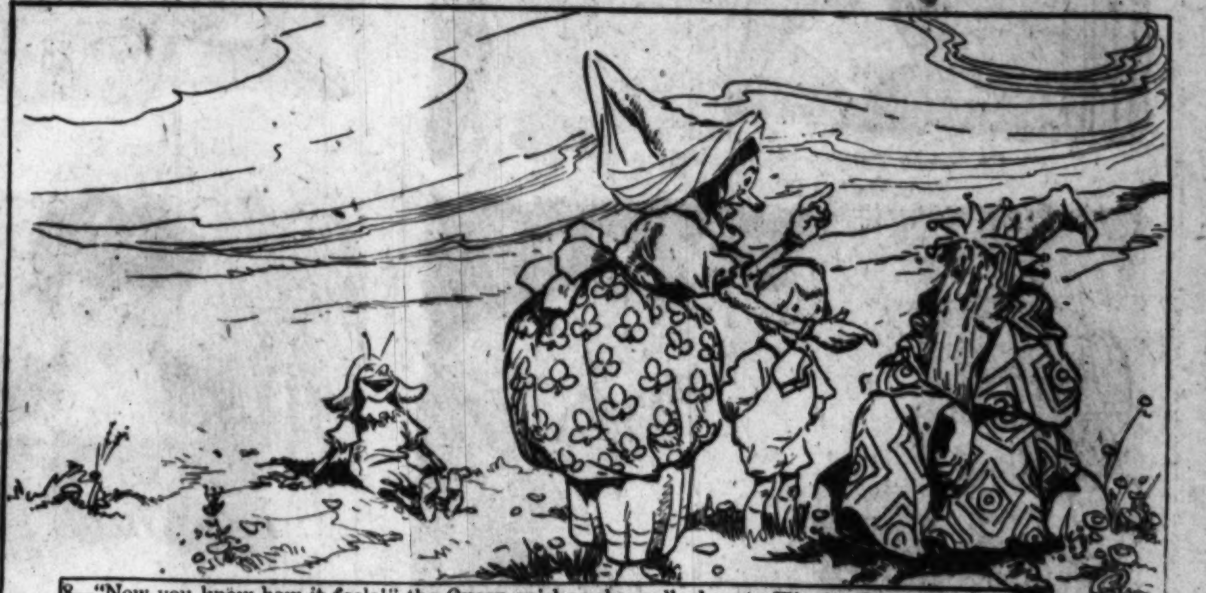
—"Let us try 'Frang doolipercranycrow!'" Mr. Twee Deedle cried as he clapped his hands together. "Hooray!" shouted the Queen as she saw the wicked Flippity Flop turn a somersault in the air and spin around on his head. "His power is gone!" she cried. "You have broken his crown!"



8—"Now you know how it feels!" the Queen said as she walked up to Flippity Flop and pointed her finger at his nose. "I had no idea it made one so dizzy!" the magician cried. "After this, instead of turning right things wrong side up, I will turn wrong things right side up!" "Since you have repented of your thoughtless misdeeds," said Mr. Twee Deedle, "I will let you off without further punishment!"

COMMON SENSE in the HOME

EDITED by MARION HARLAND

HOT BATHS VERSUS COLD.

“WHAT do you think of cold plunge baths in the morning? I have a friend who takes them and is always at me to do the same. She says a good cold plunge, the colder the better, puts her in a glow for the day. I stood out against her for a long while, but finally she persuaded me into trying it. I hated the idea, but I hated the thing itself worse. I really believe it would not have required more resolution to mount the scaffold than it did for me to get into that big tub of cold water, and when I think of it even now it makes me shudder. I shivered all the time I was in the water and I shivered harder when I got out. I didn't get warm for a half a day afterward. Now my friend tells me I am only prejudiced and that if I would form the habit it would brace me and strengthen me more than anything else. Do you agree with her? I am used to washing in cold water—that is, a sponge bath—but when it comes to a plunge, excuse me! But of course if it is really fine for the health I suppose I ought to keep on with it. Only before I start on my torture I would like to have your opinion as to the real merit of cold baths. M. N. V.”

You have come to the right quarter if you wish to be reinforced in your stand against cold plunge baths. For myself, I abhor them. More than that, I think they should be taken with great caution unless under the advice of a physician who understands the constitution of the patient—and even then they may be a mistake.

Perhaps I am hardly a fair authority on the value of cold water baths of any sort because I have such strong faith in the efficacy of hot water for almost everything. I count my hot plunge bath each morning one of the most potent agencies for keeping me in health and strength, following it, as I do, with a vigorous friction with a rough towel and an alcohol rub. More than this, I add sea salt to the water of the bath and find this most helpful in every way.

Other members of my family who take the hot tubs follow it by a cold shower and claim that this gives them the “glow” which your friend declares is the sequence of a cold plunge. It may be. As Mr. Lincoln remarked: “If any one likes that sort of thing that is probably the sort of thing he likes.”

Those whose circulation and heart action are in a condition which brings the rapid reaction after the shock of the cold water may be benefited by it, but I have known many who were, like yourself, chilled for hours after such an experience, and I have heard numbers of persons who I am confident received positive injury from the cold plunges which they were in the habit of taking. It sounds Spartan and heroic to talk of breaking the ice on the tub before the plunge into it on arising from a warm bed in the morning, but, as I have said, such drastic treatment should not be undertaken unless backed up by medical advice. The hot bath is far safer.

When I say “hot bath,” do not think that I mean a long soak in tepid water. I mean as hot water as you can get into comfortably, a quick immersion of the body, just long enough to permit of your getting clean—and the person who has the habit of a daily bath does not need strenuous scrubbing, as a rule—and the hard rubbing down immediately afterwards with a Turkish towel. If you have any tendency to take cold the alcohol rub is a safeguard and is undoubtedly tonic and strengthening to any one. The grain alcohol must be used for this purpose, not the wood alcohol, or the denatured variety, useful as these are for other services.

I have spoken of taking the hot bath in the morning, but there are some persons who prefer it before going to bed, claiming that it rests them and makes them sleep better, while others aver that the hot bath at bedtime is exciting and banishes drowsiness. This is a matter the individual must settle for himself. The main point is that he should have the bath once a day, if possible, and the hour for it may be decided by his own preference and convenience.

It may be of interest to remark here that those persons who find a short hot bath before retiring provocative of sleeplessness may be benefited by a long bath. This is recommended by many doctors at present. The bath should be agreeably warm in temperature, plentiful enough to cover the bather as he lies in the tub, and should last from twelve to fifteen minutes. I have friends who had never been able to take ordinary hot baths late at night without discomfort, who have found the long hot baths soothing and conducive to restful slumber afterwards. The experiment can do no harm, but such a bath as this should not be taken every night.

Although I agree with you in your objection to cold plunge baths, I carry my distaste even further and oppose cold sponge baths except as a possible tonic application to follow a warm bath. If the intention of the sponge bath is to acquire cleanliness, the hot water is worth immeasurably more than the cold.

Years ago I read with interest and approval the statement of Florence Nightingale that one could make the body cleaner with one quart of hot water than with a tubful of cold, and all my observation and experience have confirmed her statement. Cold water closes the pores and thus aids them to retain any alien matter; hot water relaxes the cells of the skin and encourages them to open and release deposits and excretions.

Try for yourself in the simplest way. Wash your soiled hands in cold water, then again in warm, and see the dirt which comes away by the second treatment. Later reverse the process and see how much cleaner your hands are after they are washed first with the warm water. The result is the same when the entire body is bathed, and whether the bath be taken by plunge or by the sponge you will find that better and quicker effects are wrought when the water is heated, even if only to blood warmth.

It is interesting to those who have always followed the cult of the bath to see how much an appreciation of bathing grows with every year. The time was, and not so long ago, when no one thought of more than one bathroom for even a large house. Now it is nothing unusual to have two or three, and I know of houses where there is a bathroom to nearly every bedroom or suite of bedrooms. Showers, plunges, hot and cold water, in abundance, are demanded in up to date residences, whether these be whole houses or apartments, and it may safely be questioned whether or not there is another country in the world where persons of moderate means have the facilities for bathing which are enjoyed by Americans.

Yet while the plunge bath is undoubtedly a delightful luxury, it is not essential to cleanliness. You can get as clean with hot water and a basin as with a large tub. Sometimes I think you can even get cleaner, since the entire person must be rubbed by the wash cloth, instead of only dipped into the water, as in the plunge. I may say, by the way, that for those whom circumstances oblige to rely upon the so-called sponge bath that few articles are more insanitary than the bath sponge, pleasant as this may be for use. Germs accumulate in its recesses. It cannot be scrubbed and boiled. The air cannot get at its inner cells. Those who have a genuine sanitary conscience should banish the sponge from their bathrooms and rely upon wash cloths.

My own preference in this line is for the cloth knit of white cotton. I like the little roughness of the surface and the fact that the cloth can be soaped and scrubbed clean or boiled when it needs it. Such cloths I knit myself, yet there are so many of these to be found now that it is easy to select a variety which will prove satisfactory. The bather who is not blessed with a tub would do well to buy the bath mittens which simplify

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

“AS I live quite a distance from the meat market I find it rather hard as well as expensive to get meat. I have discovered that a good nut bread takes the place of meat to some extent. Here is my recipe for such bread: One well beaten egg, half a cup of either white or brown sugar, one and a half cups of ground walnut meats, three teaspoons of baking powder, one teaspoon of salt, four cups of flour, one and a half cups of sweet milk. Mix all together, put the dough into well greased pans, using enough to make the tins about half full, and let stand thirty minutes before baking. Bake from thirty to forty-five minutes, according to the size of the loaves. Do any of the Cornerites know the exact formula for dough beads? If so, I would like it very much. “H. M. O.”

I am glad to get this recipe for the nut bread, as it is rather different from those I have hitherto received. In those the nuts were broken or chopped into pieces, not ground. This season of year when the fresh nuts are coming in is a good chance for trying how far nuts can be made to take the place of meat. They do not agree with every one, but I have had friends who would eat a few good nuts instead of meat at lunch or dinner and declare themselves as well satisfied as with steak or chops. A little salt eaten with the nuts generally aids in their digestion and served thus as a dessert or with raisins they may take the place of other sweets. Are dough beads the same as salt beads or cornstarch beads? We have already given numerous recipes for these and I am afraid I can hardly allow space to repeat them unless the dough beads are of a different variety.

While on the subject of beads it does not come amiss to print the following, which came to me by the same mail as the above request:

“Let me give a tip to makers of the pretty allspice beads. Be sure to dampen them before stringing them. I have a sensitive nose and after working all day over a plate of dry whole allspices I had to go to a doctor for relief to my distressed nasal passages and throat, but of course such tenderness may be unusual. My rose beads are made of really, truly rose petals, not dried, but ground daily through a food chopper and allowed to lie between grindings in an iron pot, which turns the pulp black, making the addition of iron for coloring unnecessary. The little old lady who made them kneaded in just a drop or two of rose perfume and then rolled the beads perfectly smooth and round, after which each bead was grooved with the eye of a big darning needle, pierced for threading, and permitted to dry. The result is a strand of shapely beads, apparently carved, with a suggestion of perfume that is noticeable only when the beads have been shut up tight in a case for a few days. These beads are now four years old. H. H.”

My rose beads are more than four years old and still deliciously fragrant, but I do not think there was any perfume put with them when they were made. The allspice beads are new to me, although they are undoubtedly familiar to the Cornerites in these days when every one is wearing strings of beads of one kind or another. I wonder how many of you are familiar with the beads made of sealing wax? They are extremely pretty and I am told are no more easily broken than those of wax or of glass such as we have worn for years.

Pictures from Old Magazines.

“I have written to several Cornerites for their old magazines and hope to get some good pictures such as I wish. I never heard from the woman to whom I sent silk samples for her quilt, but suppose she got them. M. O.”

Lack of gratitude and appreciation is not a common thing among any of our Cornerites. Thanks come with every mail, and I could not find room for half of them without taking up the space due to other letters. It is possible that the letter of acknowledgment may have miscarried and that she is not really so ungrateful as she seems, or you may yet hear from her. The following is the kind of note I receive constantly: “I wrote for the address of Mrs. S. and after receiving it sent her a number of different things. She has been most appreciative and has written me such nice letters. I read the Corner every week and enjoy the letters and helps. Perhaps I can send in some recipes, as I have some good ones. “Mrs. S. J. C.”

I am sure we shall be glad to get the recipes and I am pleased to get this evidence of the appreciation Mrs. S. J. C. has received in return for her kindness.

About Fifty Magazines.

Here are several letters having to do with reading matter:

“I have about fifty magazines which you are welcome to for distribution among those who cannot afford to buy something to read. I will venture to say that there are many people who would gladly send you more magazines than you could readily find places to send them if they knew you would care to have them. In many apartment houses I have seen magazines thrown away in the rubbish box after they had been read because they did not know that any one would care to have them. Permit me to suggest that if you were to insert a card on your page stating that they might be sent to some given address in your name you would hear from a lot of people, or if you had some one mail a postal card to the different apartment houses requesting the landlord or landlady to ask the tenants to save the magazines for you they would gladly do it. There are in this jolly old world thousands of people who would take a keen delight in doing a kind act, visiting the sick, feeding the hungry and distressed, but they don't know just how to do it, they don't know where to look for them, and so it is left to organized charity to investigate while the poor suffer from want. I believe you could also get contributions of books, magazines, etc., from the different clubs in town if they knew you wanted them. I will have the magazines at my office or will send them where you direct. J. H. W.”

I am delighted to hear that this reader has magazines to give, and I am sure that there will be early and eager applications for them. I am obliged to him for his suggestion as to the way of getting such periodicals, and I regret that it is not feasible to put it into effect. Unfortunately we have no central depot to which magazines can be sent and stored until needed, and, as I have said often before, it is not practicable to print the actual addresses of those who wish reading matter or other help. Hardly a day passes that there is not a request for something printed in our Corner, and those who read these applications can readily drop me a line asking to be put into touch with the applicants—requests which I am always glad to answer promptly. I understand all the disadvantages as well as the merits of “organized charity,” but thus far it seems the best method devised for getting at the wants of the worthy and discovering impostors who would get the help needed by others. I hope the letter of J. H. W. may attract the attention of some of those who have more magazines than they know what to do with and are at a loss as to where to send them. It always pains me to see such material as that wasted when there are so many who lack it and long for it.

Suggested to Small Town Clubs.

“I have a large number of magazines I would be glad to pass on to some one willing to pay transportation charges. If sent by freight the drayage charges added to the freight would make it about as expensive as to have them sent by express. I have often thought of writing some official in the small towns to inquire if some club would not be interested enough to be willing to pay charges for quantities of magazines, which might be loaned out at a small amount, and would enable the club to subscribe for other magazines or buy books and thus establish a library on a small scale. If any one wishing to study a standard system of shorthand would write me, I would be glad to teach them. I have often thought of writing and sending recipes, but am a busy woman, and the weeks slip by so fast. I hope I may be able to help some of the magazine lovers to good reading. “Mrs. L. M. A.”

These suggestions are excellent, and the offer of magazines is most alluring. The idea that some club in a country town would be enough interested in securing a stock of good magazines to be willing to pay charges on the transportation of a number of periodicals and make money by loaning them for a small fee is worth consideration, and I shall hope to hear further about it from club women interested in putting the suggestion into practical effect. The chief difficulty always about forwarding the heavy magazines is the cost for postage or freight, and if this could be defrayed there are many women who would be delighted to send their magazines where they were sure of appreciation. To any one who wishes to take advantage of the offer of help in learning shorthand I will send this correspondent's address. I hope Mrs. L. M. A. will some time find leisure to send us the recipes to which she refers. Judging from her letters and her suggestions I am sure the recipes would be practical and helpful.

Offers Vocal Lessons.

“I am a young vocal teacher with some experience. I desire to give lessons to some refined young woman who has talent for this work but cannot afford to pay for lessons. If you will print this offer perhaps some one will be made glad. “N. R. J.”

There is little doubt that some one will be rejoiced, and I only hope several may not be disappointed because of their inability to avail themselves of the generous offer. I will send the address to applicants writing for it and inclosing stamp for reply.

Kerosene Best Remedy.

“In this climate where insect life is rife, I being blest (?) with a thin skin have tried all sorts of remedies and have finally settled upon kerosene for both prevention and cure. It must be used thoroughly and frequently. It has the merit of becoming less offensive with use, while all other oils and prescriptions seem to me to become more unpleasant with time. I would gladly give my modus operandi to any one wishing for it. Since reading of your success in locating songs and poems for others I have wondered if you could find a book for me. ‘The Glens,’ written by J. L. McConnell, published by Charles Scribner in 1851, was presented to me by the author, but later was

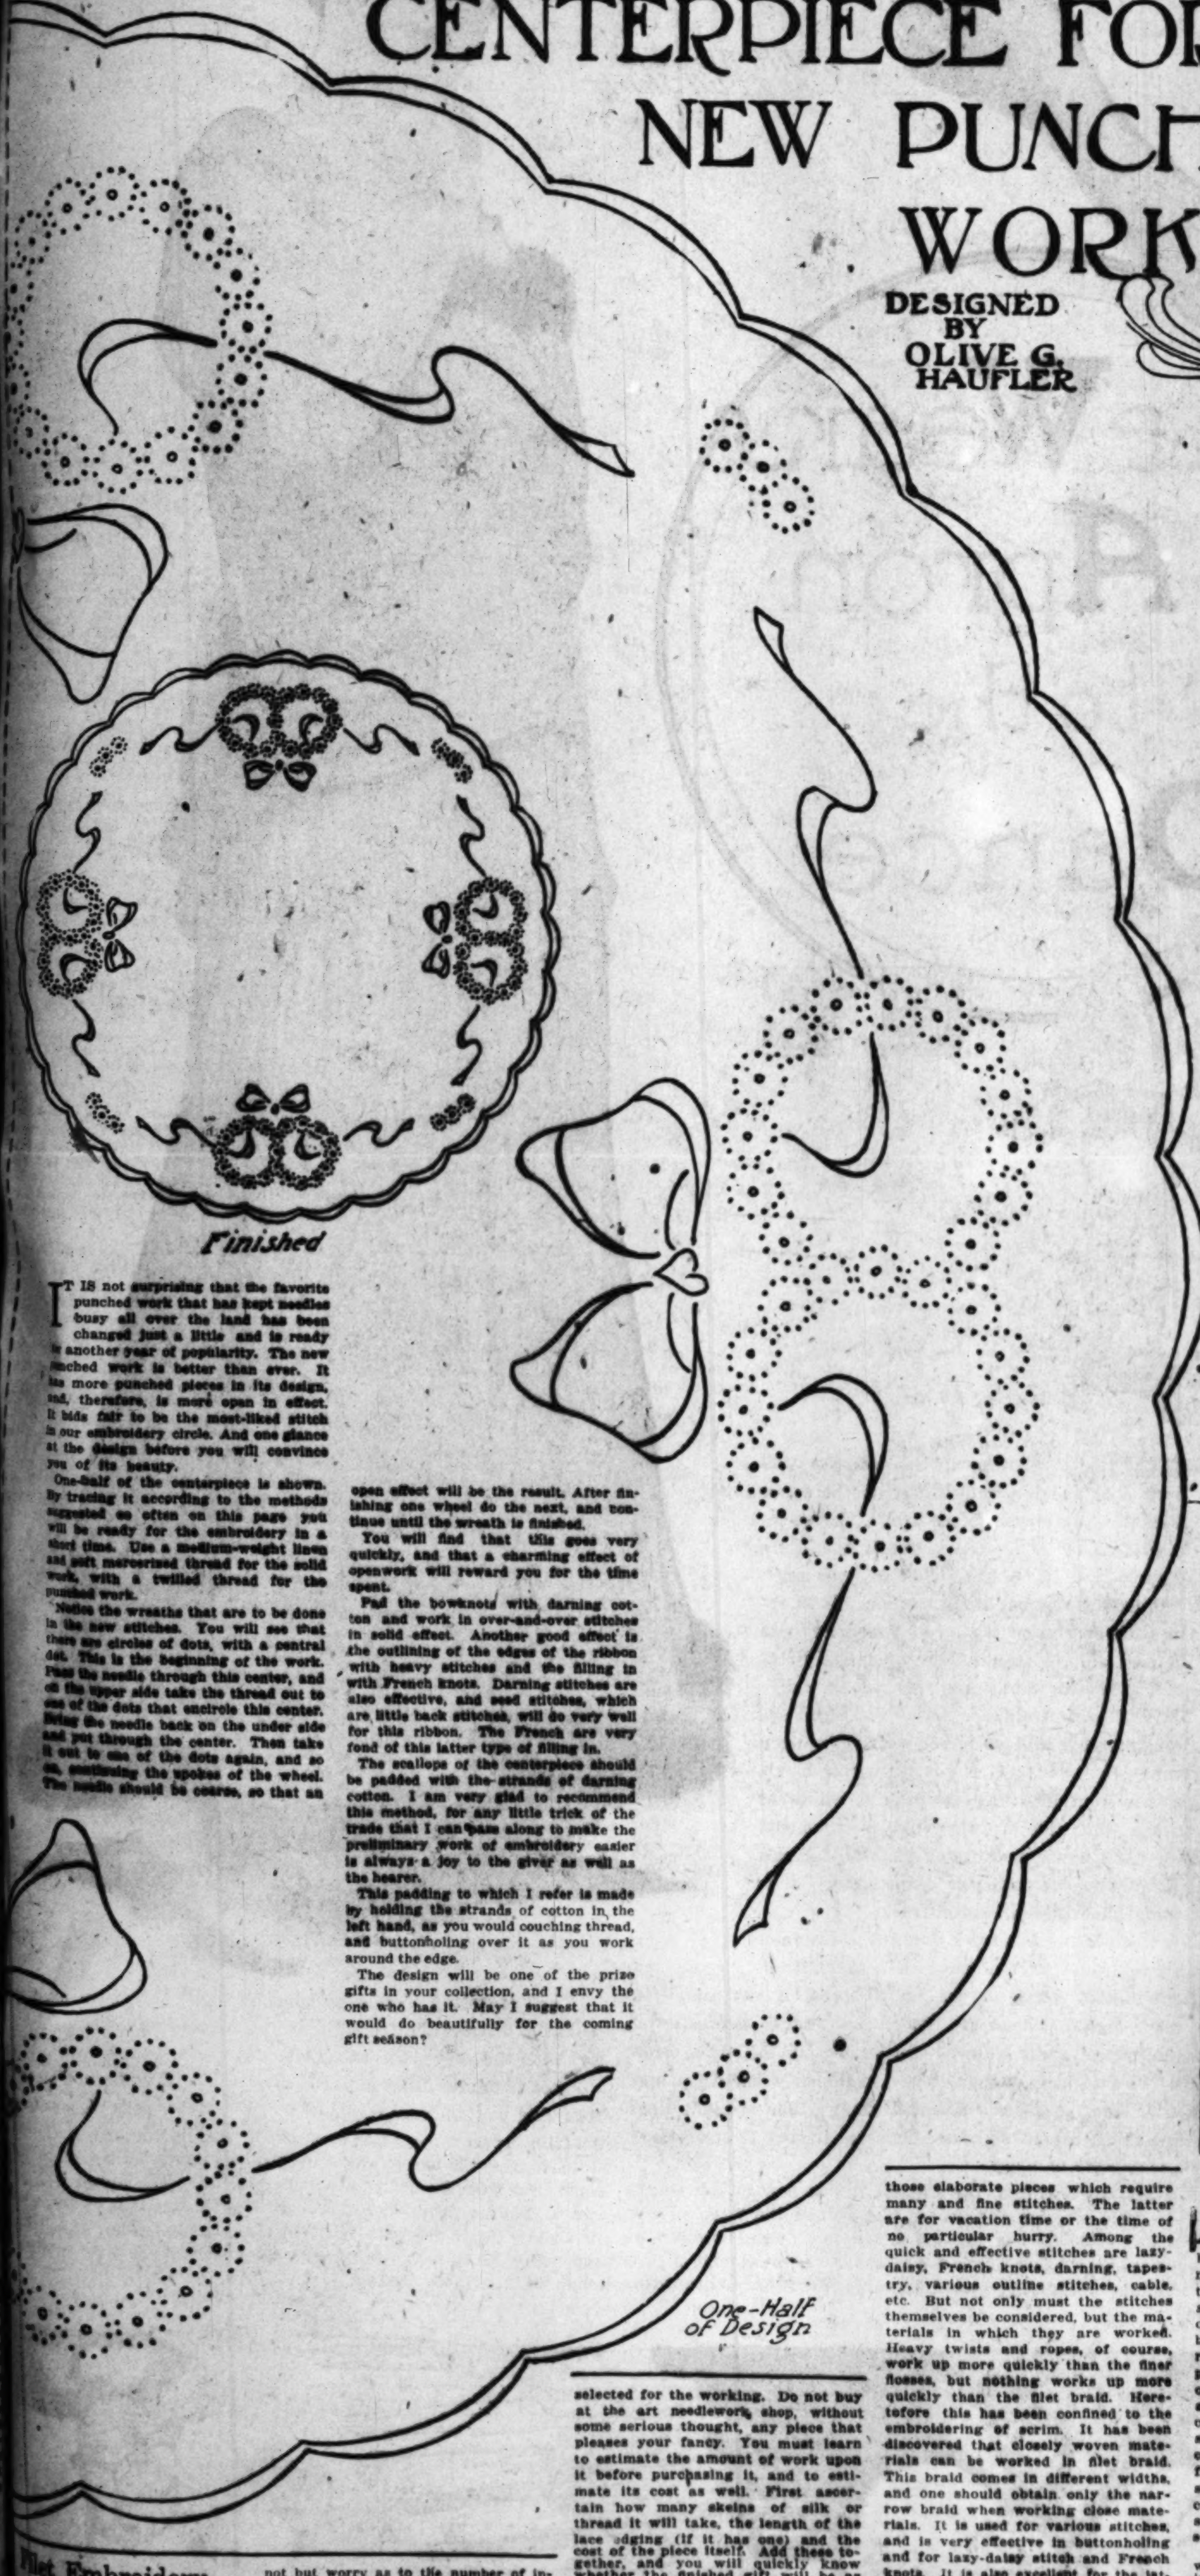
For the INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

By ADELAIDE BYRD

CENTERPIECE FOR THE NEW PUNCHED WORK

DESIGNED BY OLIVE G. HAUFLER



Finished

IT IS not surprising that the favorite punched work that has kept needles busy all over the land has been changed just a little and is ready for another year of popularity. The new punched work is better than ever. It has more punched pieces in its design, and, therefore, is more open in effect. It bids fair to be the most-liked stitch in our embroidery circle. And one glance at the design before you will convince you of its beauty.

One-half of the centerpiece is shown. By tracing it according to the methods suggested so often on this page you will be ready for the embroidery in a short time. Use a medium-weight linen and soft mercerized thread for the solid work, with a twilled thread for the punched work.

Notice the wreaths that are to be done in the new stitches. You will see that there are circles of dots, with a central dot. This is the beginning of the work. Pass the needle through this center, and on the upper side take the thread out to one of the dots that encircle this center. Bring the needle back on the under side and put through the center. Then take it out to one of the dots again, and so on, continuing the spokes of the wheel. The needle should be coarse, so that an open effect will be the result. After finishing one wheel do the next, and continue until the wreath is finished.

You will find that this goes very quickly, and that a charming effect of openwork will reward you for the time spent.

Pad the bowknots with darning cotton and work in over-and-over stitches in solid effect. Another good effect is the outlining of the edges of the ribbon with heavy stitches and the filling in with French knots. Darning stitches are also effective, and seed stitches, which are little back stitches, will do very well for this ribbon. The French are very fond of this latter type of filling in.

The scallops of the centerpiece should be padded with the strands of darning cotton. I am very glad to recommend this method, for any little trick of the trade that I can pass along to make the preliminary work of embroidery easier is always a joy to the giver as well as the hearer.

This padding to which I refer is made by holding the strands of cotton in the left hand, as you would couching thread, and buttonholing over it as you work around the edge.

The design will be one of the prize gifts in your collection, and I envy the one who has it. May I suggest that it would do beautifully for the coming gift season?

One-Half of Design

Filet Embroidery

[illegible] season is approaching for [illegible]-gift making. Yet an [illegible] embroiderer does not wish to [illegible] any carelessly worked [illegible] as the time shortens she cannot but worry as to the number of intended gifts that must be purchased at the last minute, instead of lovingly made with her fingers as she had planned.

Many of the "last minute" purchases can be avoided, however, if the proper stitches and designs are selected for the working. Do not buy at the art needlework shop, without some serious thought, any piece that pleases your fancy. You must learn to estimate the amount of work upon it before purchasing it, and to estimate its cost as well. First ascertain how many skeins of silk or thread it will take, the length of the lace edging (if it has one) and the cost of the piece itself. Add these together, and you will quickly know whether the finished gift will be as reasonable in price as you can afford to spend. In the gift season time is quite as precious as money, and we should count our hours as we do our dollars, and so it is that gift season should be the time of quick and effective stitches rather than those elaborate pieces which require many and fine stitches. The latter are for vacation time or the time of no particular hurry. Among the quick and effective stitches are lazy-daisy, French knots, darning, tapestry, various outline stitches, cable, etc. But not only must the stitches themselves be considered, but the materials in which they are worked. Heavy twists and ropes, of course, work up more quickly than the finer flosses, but nothing works up more quickly than the filet braid. Heretofore this has been confined to the embroidering of scrim. It has been discovered that closely woven materials can be worked in filet braid. This braid comes in different widths, and one should obtain only the narrow braid when working close materials. It is used for various stitches, and is very effective in buttonholing and for lazy-daisy stitch and French knots. It is also excellent for the lattice work of baskets and the like. A coarse needle is used, so as to make the hole in the material sufficiently large for the braid to enter.

Work your next new piece in filet braid, and please yourself with the effect and the saving of time.

Handbags to Match Suits

WHEN you plan the dress or suit for afternoon be sure to make allowance for a little handbag to go with the gown. If you notice the stocks that are high priced and have a note of exclusiveness, you will see that there are many little bags of oval shape with metal tops and tasseled ends that hold the handkerchief, coin and any little book that will be needed for shopping or calling. The lower ends are gathered into rings or shirred disks and ornaments attached. The lining can be of satin or silk, and have any of the various pockets and cases sewn in. The needlewoman can for herself plan the separate bag so that it will spell completeness.

A black moire bag of this type can be lined with white satin and embroidered with white beads in rose design over the top. The ends can be gathered in under a black-and-white tassel and the top drawn up over black-and-white cords. This in any heavy silk, such as bengaline, brocade or silk poplin, will serve as an excellent idea for the handbag.

Broadcloth to match your suit for the season must be used for a separate bag. The outer edge can be outlined with silk fringe, from which tassels can be made for the bottom. With heavy black silk an embroidered motif in conventional form can be placed on the upper surface. Braid can be used also, especially if this is the decoration on the suit.

A military bag is another accessory that will complete the idea of the smart military suit that will be worn. The bag is easily made of satin or cloth to match the material of the gown. The outer edge should be bound with metallic braid and a decoration of braided frogs or disks should be placed on the upper flap. Cords and tassels will finish the bag, while a bright lining of metallic tissue or satin will give a contrast when the bag is opened.

Many little pieces of embroidery and silk from the scrap box can be utilized in making bags that will be varied in effect. A black satin bag with a bit of Japanese embroidery would be appropriate for any afternoon costume. The lining should be of gold satin and cords of gold silk or gold metallic thread. The use of jade rings or any of the imitation porcelain rings that are purchasable for as little as 10 cents apiece can help you to strike the economical note. Do not let the little piece of embroidery go to waste. The separate bag is the thing. You can make it.

How to Transfer

PLACE a sheet of impression carbon paper between your fabric and the newspaper design, the latter on top. With a sharp pencil or a glass-pointed pen go over the outline. The design will be transferred to the material and will last until worked.

IF YOU CROCHET

IF YOU crochet, there are ever so many cozy and acceptable things you can make for the gift season. These articles include gifts for man, woman and child, and really afford a larger selection in this respect than embroidered articles.

For the man who yet attends evening affairs there is the fine knitted scarf of silk to wear with his evening clothes, and the silk or wool sweater for outing purposes. If the young man hunts in cold weather, there is the pair of heavy woolen socks to be knitted for him, the like of whose warmth he cannot find outside of the home knitting needle. Men, too, will wear knitted bedroom slippers, particularly the elderly men. They should be made without frills or ribbons and in a very close, plain, fine stitch, so as not to look like "fancy work." These slippers should be knitted in dark colors, for a man will shy at pinks and blues.

Bed slippers are welcomed by all ages and both sexes, but particularly are they welcomed by the old people when the circulation becomes sluggish, the nights become cold and the sheets seem to be in sympathy with the outside temperature. These slippers should be knitted so as to come well up about the ankles. If they are rather tight at the ankles they will be all the more snug. They are made without soles and are, consequently, not for use when walking about the floor, as are the usual soled knitted slippers.

Knitted gloves, too, are welcomed by the men and boys of the house, particularly if they are nature lovers. The men will not, of course, wish to wear them along the city streets, unless they be sufficiently elderly to disregard the fashions; but for outing wear these knitted gloves will be found to surpass the kid glove, no matter how warmly lined. For the schoolboy and girl they are excellent, and can be made very attractive to the children by bright yarns.

Knitted hats that are quite new and made in the shape of the soft little turn-down mushroom hats of felt can be crocheted in dark colors. These hats are ornamented with bands of grosgrain ribbon tied in regular hatband fashion at the side. They are excellent school hats and well liked by the average boy. They are comparatively new. The stitch is very close and fine. One frequently finds duplicates of the cut in the little fabric hats affected by schoolboys.

If crocheted in very fine stitches, smart outing scarfs for girls, which they have recently been wearing in place of furs, can be made in dark wools. These are used as wide throw-stoles, and are worn outside the coat. They are worn in dark blues, grays and browns usually.

There are sacks, caps, socks, afghans, shawls, etc., that can be made for the baby. The baby will also welcome mitts.

Women, old and young, welcome sweaters, small knitted jackets to wear under the coat, bed and bedroom slippers, etc., to say nothing of the innumerable things which can be made of cotton and linen thread for the lingerie and the linen closet, etc. The woman who crochets need not look beyond her own skillful fingers and her glistening needle for a solution of the gift-season problem.

New Cameo Embroidery

SOMETHING new and decidedly dainty is the cameo embroidery. The name is very appropriate, for when completed the work is an excellent imitation of shaded brown and white shell cameos. The stamped design is shaded before being worked. In fact, it is usually shaded before going to the purchaser from the needlework department, and it remains only for the needleworker to embroider the design. The cameo design is in the form of medallions or ovals exactly like grandmother's huge shell cameo brooch. Different stitches are used in the cameo work, sometimes only the simple outline being employed. The shading, of course, does much to supplement the simplicity of the stitch. All sorts of articles are done in the new cameo work. It is, however, particularly suitable for bedroom chiffonier and dresser covers, etc. Cushion tops, too, are effective done in the work. It is less used for the table, but can be utilized for that purpose if you wish. While occasionally used for library table-runners, the cameo work is so essentially feminine that it is more appropriately confined to the boudoir.

Wool Embroidery

THE old-fashioned wool embroidery is being revived and improved upon. The lusterless warm wools are relieved with a touch of silk that gives them life. Leaves are done in solid stitch and edged with silk of a lighter shade. The leaves are also veined with the silk. Flowers are edged and sometimes intersected in much the same way with silk. The wool embroidery consequently takes on a new life and beauty foreign to the old wool work of our grandmothers. This work of wool and silk can be done on any materials but those of cotton and linen, unless, of course, the linen or cotton materials be very dark. Silk materials and wool fabrics are excellent for the purpose. Velvet, while sometimes used, is really too heavy for the purpose and is not a good contrast for the lusterless wool. Table runners and cushions are effective when done in wool embroidery, as are also portieres, provided the portieres are lined to conceal the back of the embroidery.

A Cushion for a Man

IF THERE are any young men or boys for whom you are thinking to make a gift cushion, do remember that a fussy pillow is their pet abomination. Besides, it will look horribly out of place in a properly furnished bachelor apartment. Cushions for men or boys should be first of all durable, of dark rich colors, and, last of all, without too many frills.

A clever-fingered mother who knows her boy's dislike of fussy things in his dormitory room made him three leather pillows of which he is inordinately proud. Besides, he is the envy of his fellow-students. This particular mother went to a shoe factory and bought, for a very small sum, a quantity of their small patches of leather, or rather, kid, which were left over from their shoes. These she patched together in true patchwork style. One of the pillows was entirely of brown and another in black, while the other was a combination of brown and black.

Sometimes, however, it is possible to procure kid in different bright colors, such as red, green, etc. If this is so, one can make a pillow of the college or fraternity colors. Those who cannot procure the leather at a shoe factory may be able to obtain it in the art needlework department for the purpose of pillow-making. Take a square of some sort of strong material the color of the leather, or in some dark shade, and baste the pieces of leather upon it so that they form a square and entirely cover the foundation cushion top. For those places which the pieces will not cover, special pieces of kid will have to be cut to fit. After these have all been basted to the material, large stitches on the wrong side and small ones on the right, an over-and-over stitch of thick silk is used to join the kid together, the bastings thus being entirely covered. If the pieces of kid were overlapped they would in all probability be very bulky unless the kid happened to be very thin. The bastings are allowed to remain in the kid. A fagoting stitch may be used to join the leather if you do not wish to use the over-and-over stitch. The over-and-over stitch, however, is better. When the kid is very thin it is sometimes possible to first stitch it to the foundation by machine.

BABY'S MILLINERY

Scallops for Trimming

A Flat Front Flap

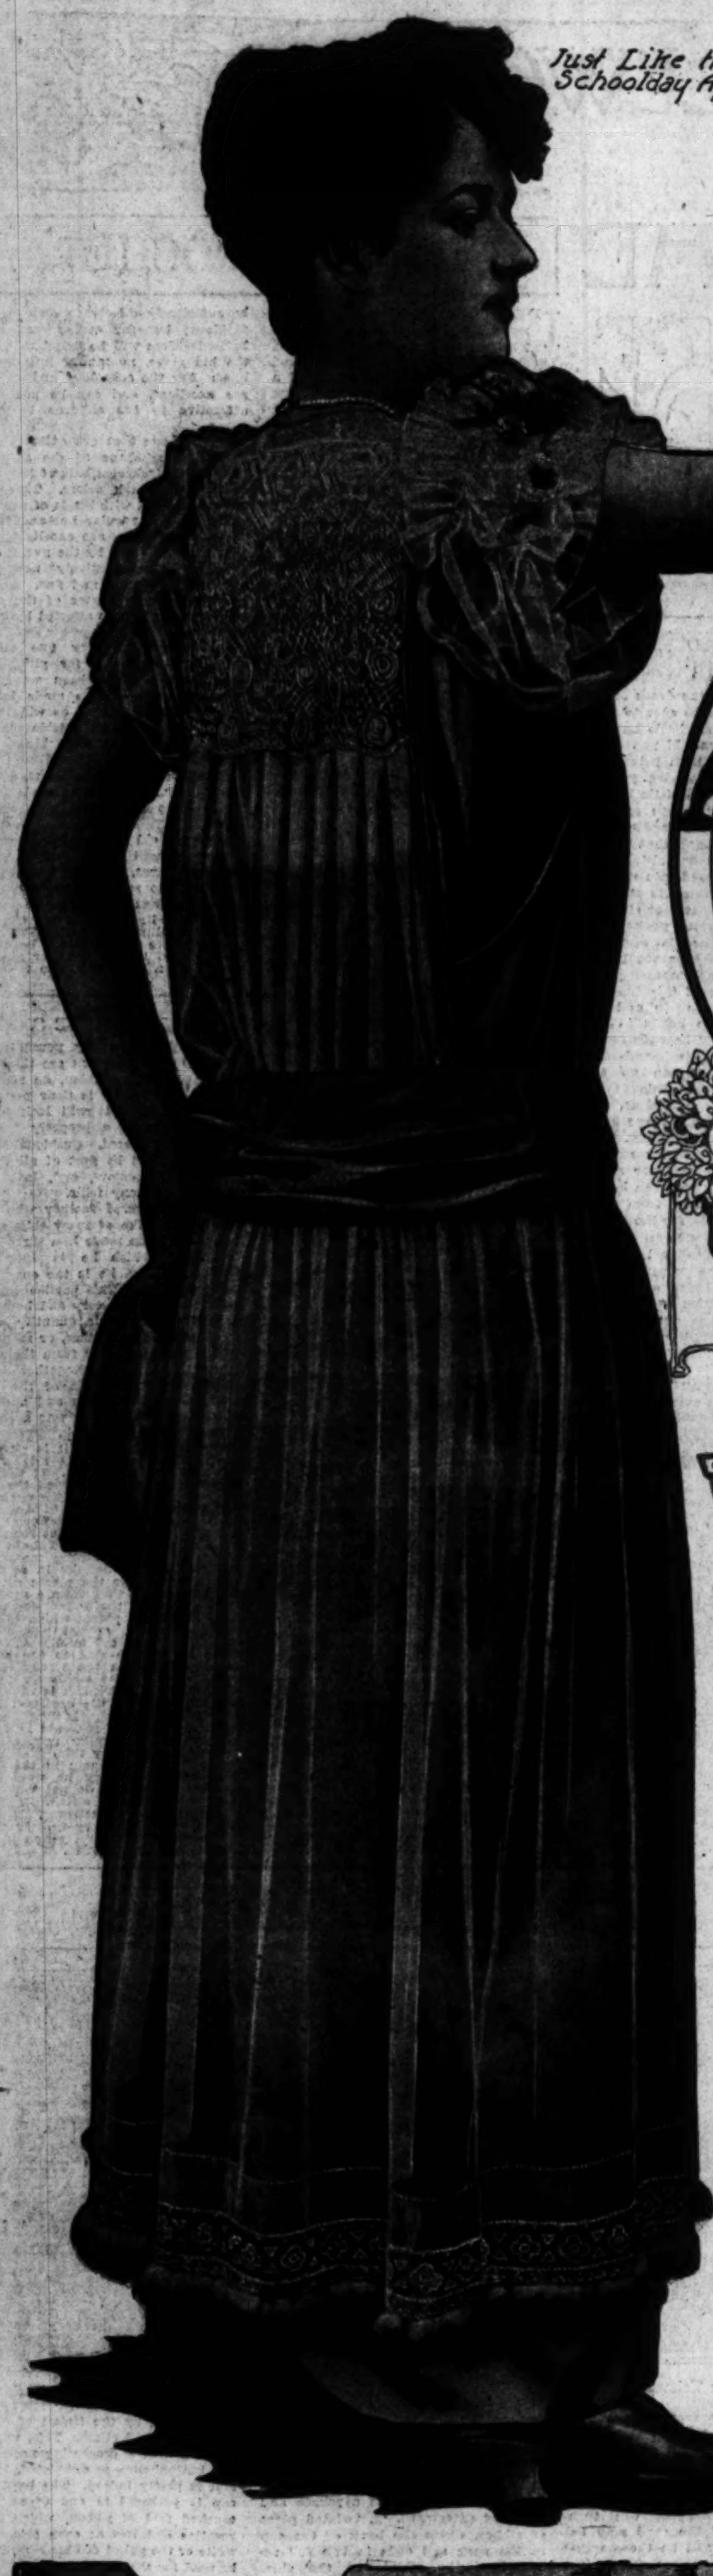
Gathered at the Back

AS THE gift season approaches those embroiderers who are in any way connected with a new baby begin to think of purchasing materials for the working of gifts for that little person, and it is safe to say that many thoughts will turn capward. Some of the caps may be batiste, but more will be those warranted to keep Jack Frost from nipping tiny ears. The latter are made of various materials, but few are as appropriate for baby's headgear as cream or white serge, and sometimes soft French flannel. Besides being of this heavier material, the caps are frequently lined with a soft quilted silk lining, and where this is not convenient, the cap is lined with thin silk, but there is an interlining of some warm material.

The chic little Dutch model shown, with the soft-roll turned-back front, is of white serge embroidered in white. The flap is scalloped and worked in buttonholing, while about the inside of the scalloping is a border of French knots with seven-petaled flowers of lazy-daisy stitch. Tiny pyramids of the knots are embroidered over each flower also. The centers of the flowers are composed of one French knot each. The crown of the cap is merely simulated by a circle of the border employed on the cap edge. The flap may be cut in one with the cap or made separate and attached afterward. A twisted piece of ribbon edges the back of the cap at the neck and ends in two full rosettes of the ribbon at the side. White, palest blue or pink ribbon may be used.

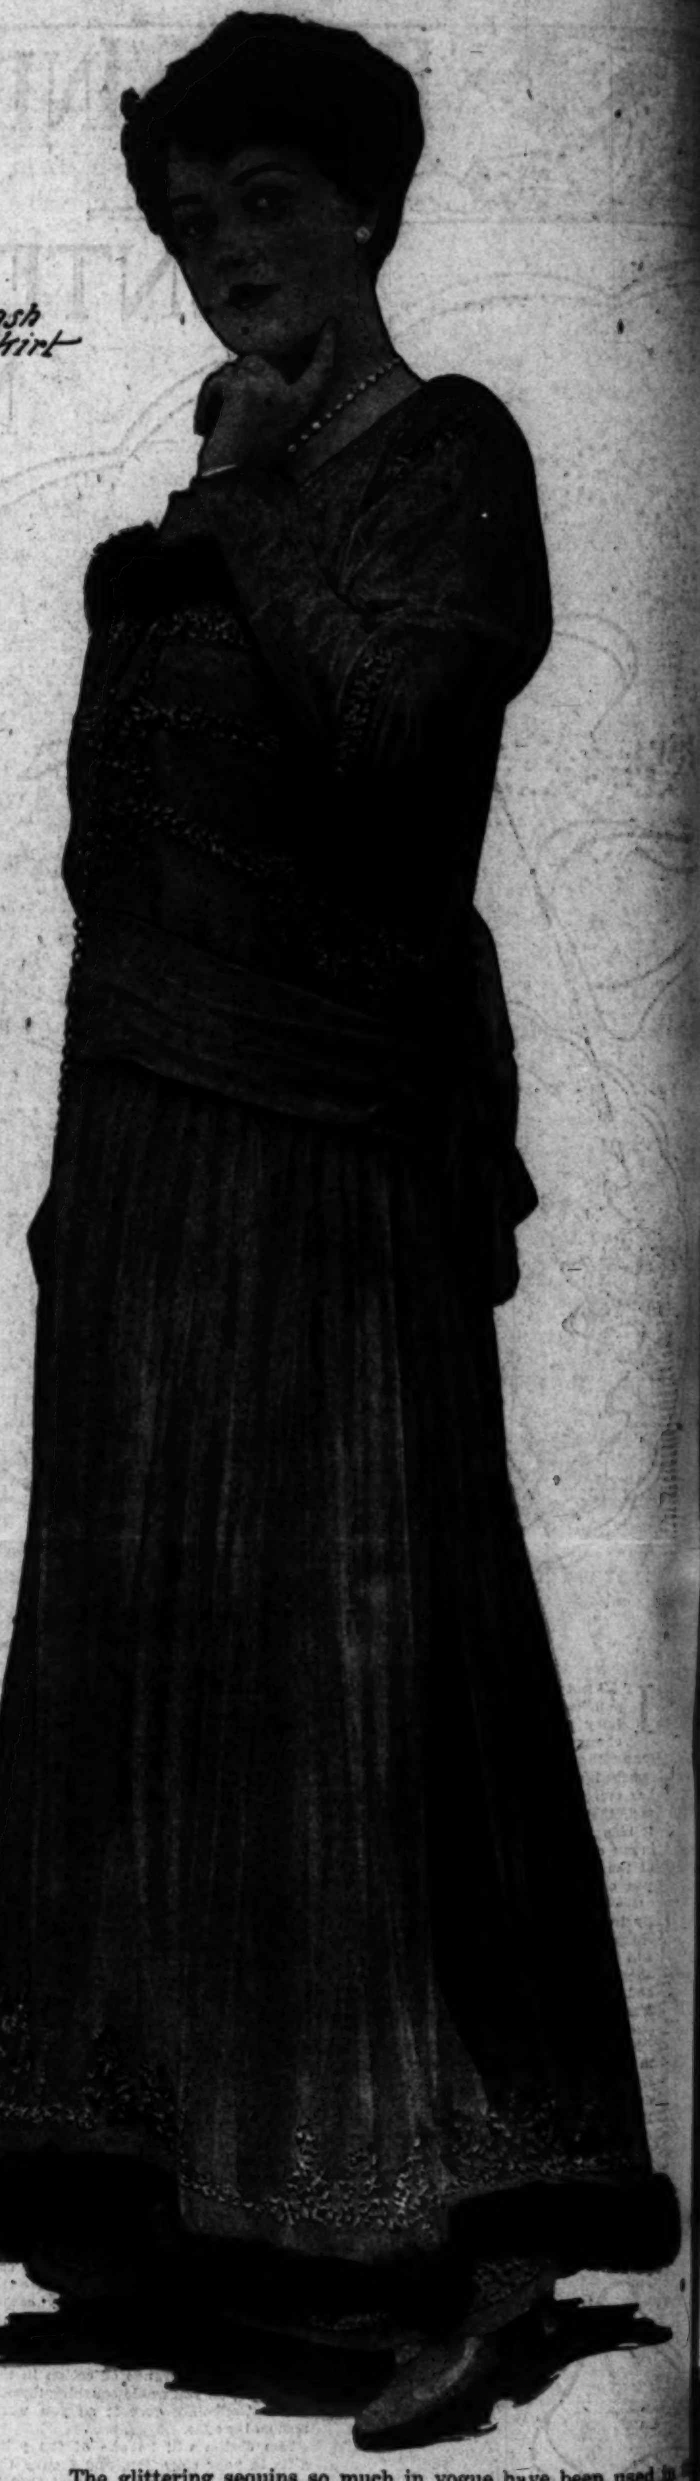
Odd is the little bonnet ornamented with buttons and buttonholing. The cap is cut in one piece, with the exception of the flat flap about the front of the cap. There are diagonal slashes at the sides of the cap, and the raw edges of these are buttonholed and lapped over the other raw edge, which remains unfinished by embroidery. In every other scallop there is a tiny silk button, which you may ornament with five-petaled flowers made of the tiniest of French knots. Little forget-me-nots are pretty embroidered upon a cap in this way. The forget-me-nots are repeated in the flat flap of the front, having little half circles of solid dots in white about them. The foliage is done in two shades of rather pale green. The buttonholed edge in the illustration is enhanced by the tiniest of edges of crochet in shell stitch. This, of course, is done with a crocheting needle after the buttonholing is completed. The result is pretty indeed. The back of the cap is gathered in and edged with a crushed fold of ribbon, which ends in rosettes and ties at each side. Either white or the palest of blue ribbon should be used for the purpose.

Just as pretty is the simple little cap without a turn-back flap. This, too, has the buttonholed, crocheted edge of white or cream, according to the shade of the material used in the cap. The floral design is an arrangement of palest pink wild roses, formed by petals in lazy-daisy stitch. An odd conceit is the working of most of the flowers as though they had lost part of their petals. Both the forget-me-not and wild-rose designs used in these caps are so simple that one really doesn't need a stamped design for them. The leaves are just as easily made, only that a curved line in pencil would be best as a guide for the little vine on the last described cap and the simulated crown design, the straight border on the little Dutch cap and the circle for the crown, and the half circle of dots on the buttoned cap.



Just Like the Schoolday Apron

She Wears An Apron to the Dance



With Bib Sash and Full Skirt

WHEN the taxi is chewing up the dollars at the front door and it's time to put on the dance frock for the terpsichorean frolic, the up-to-date woman goes to her wardrobe and gently but firmly extracts an apron from it. Oh, no! You are very much mistaken. It isn't a regular kitchen apron. It is related to the little-girl apron that, you remember, was worn in the dear old golden-rule days when the fortunate owner of a lace-trimmed apron was rich indeed.

Yes, the little-girl frocks are here. Can't you see yourself "wagging your tail" when you were very angry at Mary Ann? How you held it out with your hands and wagged it in front of the very noses of all who were arrayed on the other side of your childish argument! Yes, indeed! And now you can wag your tail in glee and pride at all who line up at the dance today! It is the right thing, this little-girl apron frock.

Look at the bright green frock that has a white net dress that might just as well have been taken from little sister's outfit, for it is the finest apron of net tnat you will see in a night's tangoing. There are ruffled sleeves, that are short and very willing to show the dimples in the arms below their frills. There is a sash that drops a trifle below the waist line, as all children's sashes have a habit of doing. The straight lines of the apron frock give a childish silhouette to any figure. Mark them well, O dancers of today!

With a big bow—in fact, the biggest ribbon bow in the neighborhood—the pale blue apron frock is tied around the waist of the other fortunate. The skirt of this apron bells out at the bottom and fur adds the season's touch to the top of the bib and the edge of the dress. Pink under this net gives a changeable effect that is beautiful.

The glittering sequins so much in vogue have been used underslip of an apron frock that combines the simplicity of a girl with the suggestion of a Cleopatra.

Let the apron hang in peace, little sister. It must not be around in your nervous fingers when the teacher calls on you how much you know. You must never take up the end of the thing to wipe the tears away when the best dancer in the room come near you the entire evening. Oh, no! The apron is a apron—not for the uses that little girls put it to. It is of all that show the underdress. It is soft and easily made. It is in and white. And if you are very, very good, maybe your mother make one for you. Ask her

An American Merchant Marine.

Time was when America possessed a merchant marine which carried the flag into every harbor on all the Seven Seas and made the name of America known and respected throughout the world. That was the time when wooden ships propelled by sails were in the great carrying business of the world, and the American clipper ship built in Maine or on some other coast of the United States was the most beautiful inanimate thing ever created by the hand of man, and so swift that she could show a clean pair of heels to any craft that floated on the waters of the globe.

That was before the war when Confederate cruisers built in England to prey upon our commerce drove our ships under foreign flags, and since that unhappy day we have never had a merchant marine worth speaking of engaged in foreign commerce. Of course we have had our coastwise and lake commerce carried on entirely between ports in the country, and a great commerce it is. It has been the means of training sailors to man ships, which in case of a war would be of exceeding advantage to the country.

Since the war iron ships propelled by steam have taken the place of the old craft irreverently dubbed "windjammers." England had the call in building this kind of ship, and on account of our laws to protect American shipbuilders we have been utterly unable to compete at all for the carrying trade of the world. It has been recognized that no modification of the laws would have availed in this respect. Low wages prevailing in England, together with cheaper money there, gave that country the advantage in building ships, and if we had been allowed to buy them we should have had to employ foreigners to man them because of the low wages prevailing upon foreign ships. Even if we had hired foreigners at going wages in foreign countries to man vessels under our flag, that would not have remedied the case, for every other country but the United States has directly or indirectly subsidized its great steamer lines plying to all parts of the world.

While shallow-minded and muddle-headed people were clamoring to do away with the duty on foreign-built ships to permit them to be registered under the American flag, and while the same class of people were foolishly, radically and utterly opposed to granting subsidies in a direct or an indirect manner to our vessels, our statesmen and legislators have recognized the futility of any attempt to build up an American merchant marine, and our business men have recognized the wisdom of this decision.

Now comes an opportunity to rehabilitate the American merchant marine. The opportunity, we are sorry to say, arises out of the sad conflict raging all over Europe, destroying the commerce of every nation but one or two, and crippling that of those countries. It is a poor American heart that gloats over the opportunity coming to us through the affliction of others, but it is a foolish American head that does not see the propriety, indeed the necessity, of our getting in and doing this work. The task is placed on our shoulders, and it would be weakness, not strength; foolishness, not wisdom; cruelty, not kindness, to the rest of the world, not to take up this burden manfully and bear it to its goal.

The Alexander bill, introduced some time ago in Congress, seeks to provide a way for us to do this necessary work, and bless the world in doing it. The plan is to provide a great corporation composed partly of the government, partly of private individuals, to finance a great fleet of merchant ships under the American flag. It is proposed that the government should hold 51 per cent. of the stock in this corporation, and individuals the other 49 per cent. This would give the government control of the corporation, and that, according to the idea of the framer of the bill and its advocates, would guarantee the country against any monopolistic practices on the part of the corporation, insuring the lowest carrying rates compatible with making the concern a profitable one.

The immediate purpose of the measure was to take over ships belonging to European belligerents, change their flag and register, and make them American. Anyone broadly conversant with the history of commerce in modern days might have known and would have known that there would be strenuous opposition to the proposition from the nations now engaged in the carrying trade of the world, and most particularly from Great Britain. The lion roared savagely when the proposition was placed before our country, and gave prompt notice that any ship owned by belligerents before the war broke out, if transferred to our flag, would be subject to seizure as a prize upon the high seas. That roar of the British lion has naturally dampened in some respects the ardor of those behind the Alexander bill.

But there were ships under foreign flags owned by Americans who had put their capital into them but had hoisted a foreign flag over them because debarred from using them under American register by our tariff laws. The consequence has been to give us quite a fleet of ocean-going vessels under the American flag.

As to the wisdom of a partnership between the government and the people we have misgivings. It is our unalterable conviction that the less the government has to do with the business of the people the better it will be for the government, for business and for the people. That is Jeffersonian dogma, the wisdom of which has been held time out of mind by all American statesmen of deep insight and profound wisdom. The socialistic tendencies of our day, with which the dominant party at Washington is soaked like a sponge with stagnant water, of course make things look differently from the way Thomas Jefferson saw them. We are still of those who prefer the wisdom of the patriots who founded this country to the shallowness of Karl Marx, W. J. Bryan, and Theodore Roosevelt.

We hope that in spite of the unnatural alliance of the government with the people the plan may work out well. Europe will be bankrupt for the next quarter of a century if not for twice that length of time. Great Britain will have its fleet of merchant ships after the war is over, and France one of lesser numbers. These two countries are so closely related that if left to do the carrying trade of the world it would become almost a natural monopoly. The only competition in sight is that to come from a great American merchant marine, and therefore the plan has our best wishes and hopes for its success.

Faint-Hearted Politicians

It no doubt came as a surprise to a vast number of intelligent American people when the Secretary of the Navy a few days ago announced that there were not half enough men in the American navy to man the ships already afloat. He said it would require an addition of 18,000 men to man all the ships now under the flag. These ships cost, many of them, $15,000,000 each with their equipment, and if we got into trouble one-half of them would be without any practical use. Almost in the same breath came the announcement from an officer in the army that we were spending other millions of dollars in coast-defense preparations, and that the army was not sufficient to man one-half of these batteries. Why is this so? Because the gentry under the brand I.W.W., Sam Gompers and his trouble-makers, are afraid of a standing army and raise a loud howl whenever any proposition is made to increase the ranks of our fighting men. There is not a Congressman in the whole body that does not know these facts, or if there is he is unfit for his place, and those who know it are just as unfit, for they are tongue-tied, afraid to say a word lest they should incur the enmity of those who do not want a standing army for the same reason that their kind prefers darkness to light, "because their deeds are evil."

By the Western Sea. Land of the Great Southwest.

Where Can You Match It?

ON SPRING street between Fourth and Fifth, where the Al Workman building once stood and where in pioneer days the late Robert McGarvin had a wagon shop at which he repaired vehicles for the neighborhood, stands now the Hotel Stowell, a magnificent building of twelve stories, with a ground area of 60x160 feet to a twenty-foot alley, containing 264 guest rooms, while on the ground floor there is a great lobby and two stores. It is one of the finest products of the year 1914. The building is solid as a rock, and the facade is strikingly beautiful in its artistic treatment. All this lacks every thrill of sensation in Los Angeles or any other great city like this, but where else can you match the statement that every bit of material in it, from the cement in the foundation up through the bricks in the walls, and all the beautiful woodwork inside, the terra cotta in the tiles, the electric lights, and every other bit of material in the building, might bear the imprimatur, "Made in Southern California." It is surely something of an achievement.

Influence of Panama Canal.

IT IS surely a long cry from "the days of old, the days of gold, the days of '49," when there were only three routes to Los Angeles. That across the continent by prairie schooner occupied six weeks of laborious effort and incurred many dangers. This was known as "the plains across." Another lay around Cape Horn and was known as "the Horn around," and occupied in the swiftly-sailing American clipper ship from three and a half to six months. The third was known as "the Isthmus over," and that was half as long as going around the Horn and more than half as dangerous as crossing the plains. With the completion of the first overland railroad in 1869 it was a good deal easier, shorter and less dangerous to get to the Pacific Coast. Then with the multiplication of overland lines time was shortened and fare lowered until a passenger could come in a palatial Pullman in about three days from Chicago to Los Angeles at a cost of about $80. In the old days it took freight six months to come around the Horn, and often longer. The cost was about $20 a ton. The railroads have been hauling fast freight in a couple of weeks and slow freight in a month at a good deal lower than the all-water fare around the Horn. With the Panama Canal completed, Los Angeles and all the western coast of America are decidedly on the map at last. It no doubt surprised a good many unreflective people to read in the Sunday Times on October 25 that the steamships operating through the canal from Atlantic ports were already carrying 65 per cent. of the freight destined for the Pacific Coast, leaving only 35 per cent. for the railroads. We are on the highways of the commerce of the world now, and can get our products to the market at reasonable prices, and all the products of all the world can be laid down at our gateway promptly and cheaply.

A New California Product.

SEVERAL weeks ago, when the sugar-beet growers of Southern California raised a complaint about the scarcity of beet-seed, which we have been getting from Europe and which is now cut off by the war, this department called attention to the possibility of growing sugar cane in the Imperial Valley and other parts of California. While the reflection was being written and before it was printed, enterprising pioneers in that wonderful valley were already experimenting. Go into the Chamber of Commerce on Broadway between First and Second streets in Los Angeles, and there may be seen the concrete results of the experiment. There is a sheaf of seven canes, and they average more than six feet in height and are topped by a blade of about equal length. The stems are about six inches thick, and altogether they show the possibility of a new and important industry in the Imperial Valley.

Colorado to Yukon.

THE greatest stride forward made on the western coast of America in the last half-dozen years is in the construction of systems of fine highways in every part of the Coast. In Orange county they are busily engaged in uniting the coast towns one with another. In Santa Barbara county, to the north of Los Angeles, a commission has been appointed and the Supervisors have voted to purchase $400,000 worth of State highway bonds to complete the State highway through that county. In the county a campaign is being carried on to authorize an issue of road bonds to the amount of $1,000,000. So all up the Coast the same movements are going on, and already one can ride, in the alliterative language of old days, "from Siskiyou to San Diego," on level roads almost without a break. Meantime the other branch of the alliterative phrase is nearly realized in a system of good roads "from the Sierras to the sea," yes, from the top of the Sierras to where the waves roll in on singing sands or the breakers thunder on some bold headlands. The automobile people ran on up into Oregon, and crossing the Columbia go through the State of Washington. Now come the people of British Columbia with earnest purpose to complete their link of the chain which will carry the system of good roads up to Alaska, which is under the flag, and where Americans will soon take the system on to the mouth of the Yukon. This is a system of roads of thousands of miles, and every mile has a thrill of fine natural scenery, in towering mountains capped with snow, in mountain ranges clad with pine and fir, with magnificent streams running through broad, fertile valleys, and noble rivers draining the country to the sea. It may well be named the country of thousands of wonders and of 10,000 thrills. It is every bit peopled by those speaking the English tongue. It is all blessed with the highest type of modern Christian civilization. The war has cut off our tourists from Europe, but they have a playground broader, longer, grander, far more inspiring, than any they have lost with the outbreak in the Old World.

About the Last of Them.

ANNOUNCEMENT was made in the daily Times the other day from Bakersfield of the approaching breaking up of the vast holdings of the Kern County Land Company around Bakersfield. The item related that the company had one offer for the whole of its vast holdings, and that this was now under consideration. This, with the old Miller & Lux ranch, lay along the Kern River from the Sierras to the sinks of the old Tulare Lake. They long ago pre-empted all the waters of that river and appropriated it in actual use on the plains where thousands of bands of horses, flocks of sheep and herds of cattle roamed the plains knee-deep in lush grasses. The companies have abattoirs where they do their own packing, granaries where they store their cereals, and it requires an army of men to operate the various industries. The late J. B. Haggin was one of the owners, and Lloyd Tevis was his partner. William S. Tevis is the president of the Kern Land Company of today. The Tevis grounds near Bakersfield are among the most beautiful in the world. The two holdings cover more land several times over han the Kingdom of Belgium comprises. The whole of the San Joaquin Valley if peopled like Belgium, or anywhere near as densely, would have a population of about 50,000,000.

Seward Justified.

WE ARE surely the heirs of all the ages. When the acquisition of California from Mexico was being discussed some three-quarters of a century ago the great Daniel Webster in the United States Senate opposed the project with all the powers of his eloquence, describing the country as made up of inaccessible mountain heights, arid plains as bald as a desert, and altogether unworthy of serious consideration. When we came near to war with Great Britain over our northern boundary the government of that foreign country sent a commissioner to look over the ground. He was a Scotchman named Sir James Douglas, and we got Oregon and Washington because this canny Scot in his report said that in a hundred years there would not be a hamlet of white men in the whole territory, which is mostly mountainous, and the woods all over the country were so dense that in a hundred years the white man's ax would make no impression upon them. Sir James Douglas even blamed the fish of the Columbia River. He said those waters were teeming with salmon, but that the fish did not have sense enough to rise to the fly. When Seward, then Secretary of State, proposed to Congress to swap a few old obsolete gunboats left over after the Civil War with the government of Russia for Alaska the same objections in different terms were made by the wise people of the East. Since then Alaska has been giving up seven or eight million dollars' worth of gold a year, and the annual catch of salmon, which Americans have learned to take whether they rise to the flies or not, is worth more than all the territory cost us. And now comes a report of the richest find of gold ever made in the whole world up in that same Alaska. It is north of Seward in an almost inaccessible region, but if the gold is there Americans will get to it, and get it, too.

Shortest Transcontinental Cut.

LOS ANGELES lies at a very advantageous point on the western coast of America. It lies at the narrowest neck of land between the two oceans in American territory. The Santa Fe Railroad Company is about to establish through passenger service between this city and Galveston, Tex. J. J. Byrne, assistant passenger traffic manager of the road, says the line will be opened in about two months. The line is only 1596 miles long, and during the past year the company has expended $365,000 in improving the line. The Southern Pacific has had a line for years with a steamship service between the Gulf ports and New York. The completion of the Panama Canal is making the roads stretch every nerve to compete for business.

Big Increase in Asphalt.

ALTHOUGH there was a decrease in the production of natural asphalt in the United States in 1913, including all the varieties of natural asphalt and asphaltic sandstone and limestone, there was a far greater corresponding increase in the output of manufactured or oil asphalt, according to the United States Geological Survey. Oil asphalt obtained as a residue from the distillation of Mexican, Gulf and California asphaltic oils, and even from those of the Middle West, is becoming more and more available. There is correspondingly less interest in the development of new sources of natural asphalt.

The production of natural asphalt in 1913 amounted to 92,604 short tons, valued at $750,713, a decrease from 95,166 short tons, valued at $865,225, in 1912. On the other hand, the output of manufactured or oil sphalt in 1913 was 436,586 short tons, valued at $4,531,657, against 354,344 short tons in 912, valued at $3,755,506. The total quantity of asphalt imported into the United States for consumption in 1913 was 228,178 short tons, valued at $910,611. The island of Trinidad furnished the greater part of this—125,273 short tons.

Platinum Production in 1913.

ALTHOUGH the high price of platinum encouraged prospecting in the United States in 1913, says David T. Day in an advance chapter from Mineral Resources, 1913, on the production of platinum and allied metals, now in press by the United States Geological Survey, the expected increase in the production of crude metal was not realized. The total production from California and Oregon, the two sources of platinum ore in this country, amounted to 482.87 crude ounces and was valued at $18,477.

A considerable output of platinum is also obtained in the United States from the refining of gold and copper bullion. A portion of this platinum originates in old scrap, sweepings, etc., sold by jewelers and dentists. About 650 fine ounces, however, was derived in 1913 as new metal from gold and copper bulletin from domestic mines. The production of refined platinum in this country in 1913 from domestic sources was 1034 troy ounces valued at $46,530 against 1005 troy ounces valued at $45,778 in 1912.

Russia has been the greatest producer of platinum in the world, the output of crude platinum in 1913 being 250,000 troy ounces.

The value of platinum imported for consumption in the United States in 1913 was valued at $5,040,210 against $4,503,682 in 1912.

In late years platinum has come into greater use in the jewelry trade, but this increased demand has been compensated for by the decreased use of the metal for electric light bulbs.

"Column Forward!"

FRESH REPORTS OF PROGRESS IN THE ADVANCING SOUTHWEST.

Optimism continues to be the [illegible] note in the song of progress sung in Los Angeles, all over Southern California, [illegible] out the Great Southwest, and all along the Western Sea. On some lines the [illegible] ment is not so rapid nor so broad as a [illegible] of years ago, but speaking generally we [illegible] unaffected here by the war in Europe [illegible] all financial and industrial affairs are [illegible] ently more encouraging here than anywhere else.

The notable event of the week just [illegible] was the acquirement by C. Wesley [illegible] of the interest of the Citizens' National [illegible] in the property at the corner of Third [illegible] Main streets, a deal of the magnitude [illegible] $300,000.

At Huntington Beach an eighty-acre [illegible] of bean land has been sold at $40,000.

An extension of the yellow car lines [illegible] North Broadway and Pritchard street [illegible] boundary lines of South Pasadena will [illegible] new access to the city and a five-cent [illegible]

Near Garden Grove the acreage of the [illegible] planted to Chile peppers is about [illegible] or twice as much as last year.

During six months the Campbell-[illegible] Company reports sales of lots at [illegible] the-Sea totaling $250,000.

The Pacific Electric Railway Company [illegible] about to build three stations in San [illegible] dino county, one at Etiwanda, the [illegible] Alta Loma and the third at Rialto [illegible] aggregate cost will be $20,000.

The Santa Fe Railroad Company is [illegible] to expend $25,000 on its tracks [illegible] land, where a new pre-cooling plant [illegible] established for fruit shippers.

The contract has been awarded [illegible] Long Beach Board of Public Works [illegible] new bridge at Belmont Heights at [illegible]

A group of fourteen mining claims [illegible] ing to Phillips & Crane in the [illegible] Mountains near Caliente is reported [illegible] $90,000.

At Whittier a ten-acre Valencia [illegible] grove is reported sold at $40,000.

Bungalow courts are becoming [illegible] Los Angeles. A new one has just [illegible] pleted on Lake street between [illegible] Fifth at a cost of $20,000.

The Santa Fe Railway Company [illegible] propriated $100,000 for improvements [illegible] line in the Los Angeles division.

Sam Behrendt is about to have [illegible] a beautiful residence in Windsor [illegible]

One hundred and thirty-six acres [illegible] Highland Home ranch near [illegible] reported sold at $61,000.

At No. 2812 West Temple street a [illegible] room flat building is about to be [illegible] at a cost of $6000.

The McCarthy Company has let a [illegible] tract for street work in its West [illegible] tract.

At Whittier a seven-year-old [illegible] Valencia orange grove of five acres [illegible] ported sold at $20,000.

At $4000 an acre, citrus fruit groves [illegible] seem dear, but here is one of five [illegible] a half at East Whittier sold by J. L. [illegible] to Charles H. Rath from Iowa for [illegible]

Work is reported progressing on [illegible] ange county coast boulevard to [illegible] of the coast cities together.

At Niland an effort is being made [illegible] tablish a stage road between that [illegible] the Palos Verdes Valley.

DEARLY BELOVED, before another week-end rolls around and the Eagle screams once more from his aerie on the granite tower you will be called to the ballot boxes to register your convictions as to national and State policies and your verdict as to who shall hold office for another term in national and State positions. It is far better to be called to the ballot box to settle your differences peacefully in this greatest and freest country, where the majority are intended to rule, and generally do rule, than to be "called to the colors" to settle your difference by shooting one another and tearing whole countries limb from tree as they are doing over in Europe.

The Eagle is the American Eagle, and is for America from the rising of the sun to the going down thereof, to use a biblical phrase, or first, last and all the time as the politicians say, or from Hades to the matutinal repast, as the wits put it. So long as America is safe The Eagle will be satisfied in a large way, although he is sympathetic with all the nations and grieves over the sufferings of people of all countries.

The Eagle thinks it is an inestimable privilege to the people of America to be able to govern themselves without the dictation of tyrants or despots of any kind, and looking at it in this way he thinks the elective franchise imposes a grave and sacred duty on the citizens of the great Republic. It grieves The Eagle deeply, as it does everything that is truly American, to observe any disposition on the part of the voters to take lightly their privileges or lazily to neglect their duties.

At the election to take place November 3 there are very weighty matters to settle, and the prosperity of the country in the future will depend largely upon the way you cast your votes. It is inexcusable for any American citizen not to vote at all. If he pleads inability to determine how to vote he confesses his unworthiness to be an American citizen. There never was a country that provided its people with the means to acquire intelligence to guide them in their voting as is done in the United States. There are schools as free as the water that runs in the rivers or as the air that blows over its plains to acquire enough education to be able to get at the sources of information. And then with the untrammeled press of the country to set out clearly the issues at stake it is every citizen's own fault if he lacks ability to vote intelligently, which means to vote right.

The Eagle is not partisan in any personal sense of the word. He does not care a sou marquis, a bawbee or even deuce aces, for the brand on a politician. When it comes to personalities The Eagle would vote always for the man who was sober, honest and competent to fill the office. That you know is an old Jeffersonian formula, and a mighty good one. But there are fundamental principles at stake in every election of a national scope which go deeper, spread farther and rise higher than even personal considerations. When it comes to these principles the Eagle would be guided in voting for the side that was most truly American as measured by that wonderful organic law of the country, the Constitution.

The Eagle often grieves in his heart when he hears men talking as if that organic law were merely a thing of shreds and patches, a scrap of paper and nothing more, to be torn to atoms by the fingers of ignorant men of improper impulses. The Eagle knows a good deal about human governments and the constitutions of different countries ancient, medieval and modern, and without any undue prejudice because he is an American it is his deliberate opinion carefully reasoned out that there never was an organic law like the Constitution of the United States. His policy is therefore to ally himself with the party that stands most firmly and most nearly universally for the Constitution and all its fundamental principles.

If The Eagle voted on Tuesday of next week he would scan carefully the measures proposed and the candidates presenting themselves, and if he found one such candidate, progressive, liberal or radical enough to utter one word in contempt of the fundamental law of this land he would vote for the proverbial yellow dog, singed cat or His Satanic Majesty before he would cast his ballot for anyone so mischievous, so ignorant or so foolish as to despise the general principles laid down in the Constitution.

This is the land of liberty above all other lands of today or of any other day. If The Eagle found any measure on his ballot that infringed upon the personal liberty of the individual in any improper way he would vote "No" on that proposition with a scream of indignation so loud that it would tear a hole in the circumambient air as big as that made by a bursting shell from a sixteen-inch howitzer over in the war zone in Western Europe. There is, in the Declaration of Independence, the wisest document ever issued from uninspired writers, a statement which sets up the contention that every man is entitled to his life, his liberty and the pursuit of happiness. The great inspired book asks the question: "What will not a man give for his life?" It is obvious that life is the most valuable of all possessions. Next comes liberty, for the slave's life is worth very little to him, and third comes the pursuit of happiness. Liberty and the pursuit of happiness are so closely allied that they are practically one. Now The Eagle thinks the American conception of liberty and the pursuit of happiness is that the free American should be permitted to pursue his happiness in his own way as long as he does not interfere directly with his fellow-citizen chasing happiness in his way.

Scan very carefully, dearly beloved, your ballots in the coming election. Do you think it is granting freedom to an American citizen to dictate to him how many hours he shall work? Do you think it is conserving the freedom of American citizens to make of the Christian Sunday a pharisaical Sabbath, and forbid the doing of work which if not essential to the life of the community is certainly essential to the pursuit of happiness on the part of individuals? Was there ever a man more earnestly sympathetic for the welfare and happiness of mankind than Jesus of Nazareth? Answer that, and then think what He said to the Pharisees who rebuked His disciples for appeasing their hunger by plucking heads from the growing wheat, rubbing them in their hands and eating the kernels. He reminded these day-of-rest people of old that the Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath.

There are other provisions which will be found on your ballot, dearly beloved, next Tuesday morning, which The Eagle would vote "No" on, because they do not make for the liberty or the happiness of individual Americans, but make a large portion of the community slaves to the views of others who are in no way injured, whose rights are not molested, whose way of life is not interfered with by those they would enthrall. No one in the world ever saw an inebriated Eagle, and The Times Eagle always has been a strenuous advocate of temperance. But he is a wise bird, intelligent in the ways of mankind, and knows what he is doing. He has no use for saloons, and never drinks ardent liquors of any kind. He has been in many countries and has observed that where light wines with very little alcohol in them are the common beverage of old and young, of rich and poor, of men and women, drunkenness is an unknown thing. He has seen drunkards reclaimed from their awful habit by the constant regular use of the light wines of California, on whom gold cures and every other kind of nostrum had utterly failed.

Now, dearly beloved, will you not discard prejudice and lay aside all thought of imposing your views upon others and give these subjects careful consideration? Above all, will you not go to the polls next Tuesday morning, noon or evening, exercise your privilege, perform your duty, register your verdict as to every candidate presenting himself for office and for every measure proposed for the government of the State? The voter who votes right is a worthy American citizen. One who votes wrong may not be so worthy, but the most unworthy one is the one who does not vote at all.

Yours,

The Eagle

THE LANCER

THIS failure of the income tax is a national calamity. Have we forgotten that we are a nation of millionaires? Have we forgotten that the whole foundation of our society rests upon that assumption? Have we forgotten that whatever boast other nations might make we have always been able to come back with the clinching argument that we, at least, could buy them up several times over?

The pitiful income-tax exposure is alarming. Think what it means. Only a paltry [illegible] incomes over the million mark. Only a pathetic ninety-one over half a million. Only a pettifogging 1200 between [illegible] and $250,000.

And when it comes to the $5000 limit, behold the estimates nearly 150,000 persons out! As for incomes round about $10,000, behold the pitiful handful, with the government [illegible] people out in their expectations. What has happened to all our rich men? Are they suffering from a wave of modesty? Have they seen the error of purse-proud ways? Of all other taxes, the income tax should have been the safest, the most infallible of taxes in the United States. Whatever else we had not, we have always been able to assume the balance even, with dollars to make weight on the other side.

Now it appears we are a poverty-stricken nation whose bank balance is in violent reverse. Where formerly we displayed our wealth with haughty assurance, we now hasten to disclaim any financial distinctions whatsoever. Directly the subject of incomes arises, we assume a modest, woebegone demeanor and throw ourselves on the mercy of the assessor. Perhaps after all it was well this income-tax question should have come up. Maybe the absence of an income tax has made us reckless as to our assets and liabilities. We have been in the habit of regarding Great Britain as a poverty-ridden nation, but we mustn't forget they have the income tax always with them, the income-tax assessor as a perpetual acquaintance, a fact that evidently makes for modesty in financial claims to distinction, in the reckless display of wealth.

Maybe, minus the income-tax assessor, Englishwomen could present as regal and expensive an appearance to the world as the American woman. Perhaps, now we come to think of it, those lords and dukes are not such a hard-up, penniless crowd as we are wont to assume. Remembering their last assessment, unearned increment tax, inheritance tax, improved property tax, and a 6 per cent. income tax into the bargain, maybe they have learned the wisdom of modesty and the hard-luck story, through bitter experience.

But can we afford to lose our dollar prestige in this way? They still have their titles upon which to swank it in society, we have naught but our dollars. Should we not be well advised to make the payment of huge income tax a matter of family honor—the more we pay the greater our distinction?

If, indeed, we are as poor and paltry as the income-tax returns would indicate, shouldn't we demand of the government a system of titles to make up for our lost social prestige?

Honor Where Honor is Due.

THE government might, with advantage, consider a system of honors for income-tax payers. Coats of arms for the millionaires, family crests, medallions, shields, a guide for social precedence. With what enthusiasm would we hasten to the income-tax assessor if we could be sure that our sacrifice would be rewarded with some befitting distinction. Why not medals, with varying numbers of bars, as for military honors? Income-tax virtue ought to be rewarded no less than bloodletting. It often takes more heroism to disgorge a state tax, when concealment is so simple, than to march proudly into battle where glory awaits the brave.

It is time governments became more original in their methods. The taxpayer is the salt of the nation. Why should he not receive some of the honor? Maybe the soldier does do the fighting, but, dash it all, we pay his wages!

An income is a very beautiful thing. Its social eminence is far above mere salaries and wages and pay. There is music in its very sound. It is a shame that one should be goaded into hiding such a delicate light under a bushel. We should be encouraged to exhibit it to the world. If the government would but introduce the blue-ribbon idea for incomes, there should be little difficulty in collecting those ambitious estimates several times over. The man with a big tax receipt in his pocket should be entitled to flaunt a blue ribbon in his buttonhole.

Oh, there are vast possibilities in this idea. One is a totem pole at the entrance of our house, notched and engraved to show the superb total of income tax paid. There would be something so delightfully tangible about an aristocracy on those lines. We should know exactly where we were. As it is, spurious millionaires can lord it all over us and we never realize what painfully mediocre company we have been keeping, with such trustful satisfaction, until we happen upon his own sworn income returns to the assessor! Some of us are very particular whom we know and there ought to be some safe means of deciding such a vital question.

Hard Times.

WHICH reminds me. Did anybody say hard times were with us? Did anybody say money was tight? Then he should have been at last week's society amateur performance at the Mason. There we were in our prosperous thousands, our women begowned and bejeweled, everyone a Cleopatra, an oriental queen, wealth-laden, luxurious, worth a king's ransom as she stood! And the men, oozing that well-nourished, opulent look at every pore.

The bouquets alone that we handed over the footlights would have done credit to a royal marriage—would have paid vast income taxes.

And a stroll down Broadway on any ordinary day shows the department stores crowded to suffocation. Not society folk, these, but just the plain, ordinary mass of us, all with money to spend.

We here in America don't know what hard times are. We growl and shake our heads with mournful pessimism when we are called upon to live on three and four times the income that a family in any other land would deem riches. We simply don't understand economy. When our women think they are economizing, they have merely reduced their expenditure to the place that other nations would regard as comfortable prosperity. Some really hard times would do us all the good in the world. We need the experience for our characters' sake. One of the most illuminating evidences of this is our city garbage. The things we discard would break a Frenchwoman's heart. Another complete city could be fed and clothed comfortably on what we are pleased to call refuse in California. "Refuse"—exactly. We refuse to utilize anything that isn't new, fresh, plentiful, expensive. We throw away boots that a German housewife would have neatly mended and wear for another three months. We discard clothes that English people would clean and renovate for another six months' wear. And we should feel brutally hard done by if any other course was expected of us, where other nations regard it as a matter of simple custom. Every European traveler is amazed at our extravagance, our wastefulness. We are the spoiled darlings of the world, and, oh, it will go hard with us if we are ever called upon to experience real hard times.

The most dismal whine I have heard for years came from a man who has had to sell four of his polo ponies. He looked the picture of wretchedness as he confided in us the painful news. Several women of my acquaintance are bemoaning the fact that they may have to give up their automobiles, and their attitude is one of dismal, hopeless despair. Ye gods! what is to become of a nation that regards such paltry tribulations as hardships?

Big Farms of Chile. By Frank G. Carpenter.

Great Haciendas.

HOW THEY ARE MANAGED IN SOUTH AMERICA.

DAIRY FARMS OF THOUSANDS OF COWS AND VINEYARDS THAT PRODUCE MILLIONS OF GALLONS OF WINE—ELECTRICITY AND CHILEAN FARMING—THE INQUILINO OR TENANT—HOW HE LIVES AND WORKS. THE CHANGES IN THE ARMY—LABOR UNIONISM ALONG THE WEST COAST—STRIKE IN PERU.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CONCEPCION (Chile.)—For the past week I have been traveling here and there through the central valley of Chile. This extends from Santiago to Valdivia, more than 500 miles south. It contains the largest and best estates in the republic, although there is an extensive wheat-growing region below it in which great forests are now being cut down and the clearings turned into farms.

The central valley of Chile is one of the garden spots of the globe. It will grow anything if it can only have water. As one of the haciendados said to me: "All you have to do is to spit on the ground and drop in a seed, and, presto, there is a tree." There is no part quite so fertile as that, but trees do grow here three times as fast as in North America. I have seen groves of eucalyptus that are 100 feet high, and still only ten or fifteen years old. I have already described my visit to Santa Ines, the fields of which are walled with poplars as high as a church steeple. There are thousands of trees on that estate as high as any in the eastern part of our country, and they have all been planted in the past twenty-five years. It is the same with all kinds of vegetation. In the irrigated sections, peach trees bear at one and two years, and grains and grasses, including alfalfa, are wonderfully luxuriant. This is so, notwithstanding some of the land has been under cultivation for many generations. The lands about Santiago have been tilled for 300 years, and today among them are numbered some of the fine farms of the world.

Where They Are.

But before I describe the big haciendas, let me tell you a little more about the region in which they are seated. The central valley is a wide strip of lowland ranging in width from fifteen to 100 miles, and about 700 miles long. It begins above Santiago, and winds its way south through about one-fourth of Chile. On the east of it are the snowy walls of the Andes, with here and there the mighty cone of a dead volcano rising above the other peaks, and on the west are the lower mountains and hills of the Coast range, their tops almost a desert, but their foothills covered with green. The average width of the valley, all told, is about thirty miles, and its area is somewhere between those of West Virginia and Maryland. This country is settled throughout. It has many large towns along the State railroad, which runs through it from one end to the other, and the most of its lands are divided up into large estates.

In the north these estates are all under irrigation, and it is only in the far south that the rainfall is sufficient to dispense with the artificial watering of the crops. Much of the country is slightly rolling. It is cut by many creeks and little rivers which are fed by the Andean snows. Some of these streams carry down a great deal of silt, making fat the lands over which they go. Others such as the Bio-bio are as clear as crystal from one year's end to the other.

Riding southward through this country, the scenery is far different from that of the richest part of the Union. There are crops in sight all the way, but the fields are divided by rows of tall poplars or eucalyptus or with walls of mud and stone rather than fences. It is only along the railroad that there is any barbed wire. The chief buildings to be seen are the great rambling structures, the homes of the haciendados and the mean mud-walled thatch-roofed huts of the laborers. There are no barns standing out on the fields, and no elevators at the stations for storing the grain. There are plenty of cattle and horses, but very few stables or outbuildings. The weather is so mild that the stock graze out of doors all the year round, and this is so all the way from Santiago to the Strait of Magellan. Therefore, there are no haystacks or strawstacks. Such grass and alfalfa as are cut are put up in bales and shipped to the cities or north to the nitrate desert, where they bring higher prices. The climate of the central valley is about the same as that of Lower California, save that there is less rain, and in the upper part of it nearly everything has to be irrigated. At uresent there are something like 2,500,000 acres now reached by artificial canals, and I am told that it is possible to put water upon as much more. The most of the non-irrigated lands are in the south. I shall write more fully of them in the future.

Oxen everywhere take the place of horses and mules. They are yoked to clumsy carts by wooden bars tied to their horns and are driven with long goads with steel spikes in the ends. Nevertheless, the farming is well done, and on many estates it is equal to that of the United States.

Big Business.

Nearly everywhere the business is on a grand scale. In many parts of the valley 200 acres is little more than a garden patch, and the irrigated farms of 5000 and even 10,000 acres are common. There is one farm of 20,000 acres, and several which have 15,000 and more. There are some very large vineyards. The estate of Lo Urmenta contains 2000 acres, and of these 200 are now bearing grapes. It has cellars with a capacity of 500,000 gallons of wine, and it bottles and ships vast quantities every year. The Errazuriz vineyard, at the foot of the Andes puts up 6000 bottles of wine a day in addition to that which it stores away in casks. It ships more than 100,000 bottles of wine every month. There is another vineyard that ships 400,000 gallons a year.

One of the richest families of Chile is that of Augustin Edwards, who is now Minister from here to the Court of St. James. He has one hacienda about twenty-five miles north of Valparaiso that supplies a part of that city with milk. He has 800 milch cows, and he breeds fine dairy stock. He is also noted as a breeder of horses not only for racing, but for heavy draft. He has in his stables seventy-five Arabian mares, eighty Percherons and 110 Yorkshires. He has ten shorthorn bulls, some of which w brought from England. Another big hacienda, which also supplies Valpara that of Don Tomas Eastman. On that tate there are several thousand cattle, cluding 1000 milch cows. On the D dairy farm there are still more. The hacienda has the biggest silo in the and one of the queerest. It is nothing than a great ditch 350 feet long, 20 fe and 12 feet in depth. This is filled with clover which has been trodden to pieces driving horses over it and then laying it

enda has electric lights and the cows

porches, and their windows look out on the gardens. They are situated in a grove of trees which are at least 100 feet high, and among these are wonderful palms. When I visited it the house contained about two score of guests, in addition to the thirty children and grandchildren of the family of its owner. Each of these children had its own pony.

Others of the haciendas here have beautiful buildings of modern construction, with great parks, with miles of shady drives, and all of the other surroundings of a millionaire's home in the States. Many of them are using modern machinery, and some are now experimenting with fertilizers and in intensive cultivation. Everywhere I go I see American plows, and there are three or four importing houses in Chile who have their traveling salesmen going over the country drumming each haciendado as to the introduction of American harvesters, reapers and windmills.

The Laboring Class.

One of the interesting features of farming in Chile has to do with the labor. This is made up almost altogether of a class known as inquilinos, or the class of which travelers sometimes speak as the rotos. This is wrong. The word roto is a contemptuous word, meaning torn or ragged, or, as it might be called, ragamuffin. The proper term is inquilino, or farmer. He is a respectable person and he may or may not be ragged. These people are the descendants of the Indians and the immigrants from the northern provinces of Spain. They are the laboring class of the country, and they correspond to the peons of Peru, although they are far above them in character and efficiency. They are excellent workmen, and they can learn almost anything that requires handiness and craft. They are very proud and will not tolerate blows or insult. You might kick a Peruvian peon and he would slink away humbly. The Bolivian Indian is afraid that his master is angry if he is not punished now and then, but the inquilino would be likely to resent such treatment and leave. Indeed, I doubt if it would be at all safe for his master to lay his hands on him. On the haciendas where I have been there seems to me a good spirit existing between the haciendado and the laborers. The latter are deferential and the owners sustain a sort of patriarchal relation toward them. They are interested in treating them well, for if they do not the inquilino will leave, and it is upon his labor that the man must depend for the work upon the estate.

The conditions of employment are somewhat like that of the old feudal times. The haciendado owns the land, and he lets each of the workmen have a small tract to cultivate and also pasturage for his stock if he has any. This tract may consist of two, three, four, five or ten acres, and it may be only enough for a house and garden. In return for the use of the land the inquilino agrees to give one man's work to the owner when he requires it. This means that he pays a rent for the house and grounds of about $2.50 a week, and at the same time has a house for his family to live in. In some cases small wages are paid, but as a rule the man is expected to furnish one hand for his labor. If his family does work, they, of course, receive an additional payment. Many of the inquilinos are in debt to their employers, but the laws here are not like those of Peru and Bolivia, which make the peons almost debt slaves.

Have Poor Homes.

The huts of the peons are of the rudest description. They are seldom more than fifteen feet square. They have walls of sticks covered with mud and the roofs are of thatch or rude tile. The huts are seldom lighted except from the front, and some have no light but from the door. The ground forms the floor, and, in many cases, the bed of the family. Boxes usually take the places of chairs, and if there is a bedstead it consists of a ledge of sticks built up from the ground. The bedstead may be separated from the other part of the room by a curtain.

I would say, however, that some of the farmers are paying attention to the better housing of their workmen. On the Santa Ines estate they are building tenant houses of concrete and on some others of the haciendas they are putting up what are called model houses.

I am told that the inquilinos are contented with their lot. They seldom strike, and seem satisfied if they can get enough to eat and wear and plenty to drink. One of the great evils of the country is alcoholism. Nearly every one of the lower classes is addicted to it, and this is so in both city and country. A census of saloons of Santiago was recently taken and it was found to have 6000 places where liquor was sold, while Valparaiso was reported to have more cases of drunkenness than English cities of ten times its size.

It is this custom of drinking added to unsanitary conditions of living that is responsible for the great mortality of Chile. The death rate is enormous, and that among children is so high that I fear to quote the figures which have been given. Dead babies are called little angels and are supposed to go straight to heaven, but no one supposes that this has anything to do with the deaths. It is said that 55 per cent of the children of Santiago die before they are 5 years of age, but I do not believe this to be true.

Boys Called to the Army.

There is one institution in Chile now that promises to bring about a change in the conditions of the inquilinos. This is the army, and the law provides that every man in the country shall spend at least one year of his life in the service. This year is at about 19 or 20. All of the boys are drafted, and no matter whether they are of the working class or not, they have to spend this one year as a soldier. This brings the young inquilinos away from the farms. It teaches them what it is to have board floors to walk on and good beds to sleep in. They get a taste for the better food of the army and do not like to go back to their beans and toasted wheat that until then have formed a large part of their diet. As a result, after leaving the army many go out to seek work otherwheres. You find them as laborers about the ports, as the employees on street-car lines and other railway construction and doing all sorts of common labor in the cities. Moreover, they are natural mechanics, and they soon learn the various trades.

It is somewhat owing to these changes that a modern labor element is developing in Chile. There have recently been several strikes on the state railways; the hands upon the wharves have their unions and are, I am told, growing very independent. These men in the nitrate ports struck the other day because they were not allowed to use grappling hooks to handle the heavy bags. They had seen such hooks used for dragging about cotton bales, and they found it easier to move the nitrate the same way. The hooks make holes in the bags, and for this reason the exporters of the nitrate objected.

A similar unrest among the laboring element is going on all along the west coast of South America. Peru has been sending agitators to Chile, and Chile has sent labor delegations to discuss such matters in the cities of Peru. Moreover, some of the politicians of the several republics are catering to the laboring element, and among the latter is the former President of Peru. When Billinghurst was President, he boasted that he was the friend of the workingman, and did everything he could to get their friendship and support. At one time he sent a command to the head of the Peruvian corporation which manages the Central Railway that he must at once raise the wages of all his employees 25 per cent. The official replied that this could not be done. Billinghurst insisted, whereupon he was shown that such an increase would stop the running of the road, for the receipts would not leave enough for the interest on their bonds after running expenses were paid. He also showed President Billinghurst what an outcry would come from the people if the trains should have to stop. The President then saw that he would lose more than he would gain by such a proceeding, and the matter was dropped. It was a number of such actions that brought about the revolution that ended in his being ousted from office.

EFFORT AT HEROISM.

AS A MATTER of confession I do not like it. Frankly, I would much rather peel peaches, but that is a part of the Having secured a leave of absence from indulgent manager, I left the city to carry the acceptance of an invitation to spend vacation in the San Bernardino mountains with a prince of good fellows and charming family. I left with a noble resolve to spend a week of rest, a resolve that only be inspired by the knowledge that free from all restraint. I've been ever since.

host met me with his sturdy Cadillac San Bernardino, and after an hour's ride through scenic grandeur we arrived at his and roomy cabin at Pinecrest on the top of the mountains. Our machine loaded down with provisions calculated the keenest of appetites. Among provisions was a box of peaches. We informed by the lady of the house that would be expected to peel them the following day as a small return for our dinner. to realize then that we would be the landscape instead of peaches.

the next morning we were renewing grease cups on the machine when our attention was directed to a tiny column of in the direction of Job's Peak. This has a little history of its own. In the days when great lumber camps were through these wooded mountains, oxen were used in logging. One old of the herd, Job by name, strayed a nearby sawmill one night and could found for several days. He was located on the top of a high peak, and the peak was destined to carry to posterity. Job's Peak is well with giant pines, and we knew if the reached the summit without check it with unsubdued fury and sweep mountainsides to the desert, there to die the scanty brush of the bleaching We resolved then and there that we our help.

is the life of the sturdy mountaineer great deeds of unheralded heroism. Like grim tragedies of the sea, all hands rush to the aid of the stricken, and while the saving of human life is the highest type of heroism, yet we must strive to save the lives of the mighty giants of the forest—the guardians of our watersheds.

I looked at my watch. It was 11:30, and there was a powerful odor coming from the direction of the kitchen. Even heroes have appetites, and we were no exception to the rule. We feasted on leg of lamb, potatoes a la oven-baked, and other accessories which the Lord, an orange grove, and other sources of income provided. It was well that we feasted, for we did not get back till near midnight, and we were miles from a square meal.

The repast over, we jumped into the machine and headed for the scene of action some eight miles away. We could see the smoke mounting into the sky, and as we neared the scene red tongues of flame could be discerned leaping and licking at everything in its path.

I have always had a sneaking feeling that I would like to be a real hero, accomplishing my end unobserved and unheralded. My ambition increased as we whizzed along the road, and when we finally arrived and started up the mountainside with rake and shovel over our shoulders I felt that my hour had come. We got half-way up the hill and the big dinner started to tell on us. We puffed and blew, and just then a great thought came to me. I had lost all ambition to be a hero. We got a second wind and soon reached the first ridge to find the flames licking up the dry foliage on the ground and racing through the tops of the trees in the teeth of a strong wind.

I stood there a few minutes bewildered and helpless as a cork on a stormy sea. My host left me, and when I saw him a few minutes later he had sized up the situation at a glance and in a masterful way was directing a gang of men in an attempt to head off the rushing flames with a fire-break. I began to feel that I was alive again. I grabbed my rake and started to stamp out the sparks as they fell on the dry grass. They fell so fast and thick and I stamped so hard that I broke the handle immediately. I ran for a shovel and used it for about ten minutes. That finished your city-broke man, and I decided very quickly that I had a greater calling. A happy thought! I would carry water to the relief of the thirsty workers. Here at last was my chance to be a real hero! I grabbed two canteens and filled them with cool, pure water from a nearby spring and started down the fire line. My feet seemed to tread on air, although just a minute before, while stepping around with that shovel, they felt like two tons.

As I glided along, I got my first fill of smoke. Choking and half-blinded I made a run for the open, and when I got there I lost all thoughts of leg of lamb. Instead, I had fresh smoked pork, and smoked pork it was for the rest of the day and night. I went down the line with the water, and I couldn't help but recall the time when I carried H2O to the elephants. The men drank the cool water with grunts of satisfaction, but I was mighty glad they did not have the capacity of the pachyderms.

The fire by this time had increased in fury, and as it raced through the young pine trees cracking and snapping, great volumes of smoke belched forth laden with pungent odors of burning pine oil. They say this pine smoke is an excellent tonic. I do not doubt it. It accelerated my efforts to get out of it about 100 per cent. and 50 per cent. more to keep away from it. The smoke has the same effect on the eyes as the first broken toy of the small boy. Our faces were covered with grime and dirt, but there was a clean streak down each cheek from the eyes, and if we had all been herded together with our grotesque faces, Custer would have thought an Indian war dance was about to take place.

The efforts of a dozen or more men had been concentrated on the making of a fire-break to head off the onrushing flames. It looked as if the fire was under control. About 200 feet from the fire line stood the trunk of a giant pine, long since dead, and towering some seventy or eighty feet in the air. It was dead to the core, but still solid. The wind was blowing hard and in the direction of the monarch. We stood around watching the fire creep up to the fire-break and slowly die out as the flames licked up the few dry blades of grass and pine needles remaining. An alarm was heard, and all eyes turned toward the big tree. Fully fifty feet from the base a tiny curl of smoke arose, and we knew we were beaten. These dead trees are the one source of spreading forest fires. If they are prone, it matters little, as they soon rot and disappear, but if they stand erect and defy the elements to shake them, in times of fire they are the torches of the devil himself, and spread sparks to the four winds. It is hoped that our government conservation plans of the future will include a systematic effort to destroy all dead timber on government reserves as is done today in Germany. If this is accomplished there will be little danger of spreading fire, and ordinary fire-breaks will stop all brush and ground flames.

The new start given the fire was too much for the men to control, and we beat a hasty retreat to a place of safety. All efforts were now directed to keep the fire in a channel with the wind in the hopes that we might head it off further down the canyon and at the same time prevent spreading on either side. In just fifteen minutes' time the old trunk was throwing red-hot coals for a distance of 300 yards, and the whole hillside was a seething mass of flame.

I found both of my canteens empty, and made another trip through the smoke to the spring. This time I took the precaution of holding my handkerchief over my face, and it helped a great deal in keeping out the heavy smoke. The canteens filled, I started back imbued with the beautiful thoughts of Jean Valjean when my vision was rudely awakened by the presence of a mere man with pencil and paper. He asked me my name, and when I started to work. I had to pinch myself to recall who I was before I carried the canteens. I recovered shortly, but with A Grizzly's Memory. By Lewis R. Freeman.

A HUNTER'S STORY.

THERE are some who maintain that a bear's memory is no longer than his tail, and that he does not know the difference between a gun and a hoe handle. This may be true in a general way, but that one bear's memory was as much longer than his tail than is the distance from Mt. San Francisco, Arizona, to Chicago, and that one bear had notions, vague to be sure, and somewhat distorted by circumstances, of the instruments which disabled him and brought about his capture, this story will attest.

I had been out for a month in the cliff-dweller country of the Verde Valley and its northern feeders with an archaeologist from the Smithsonian Institution whom I will call Stair. This section north of the Verde has several streams which, fed by the springs and perpetual snows of Mt. San Francisco, maintain a considerable flow throughout the blistering Arizona summer. The largest of these, Live Oak Creek, rises near Flagstaff, cuts through the mountains at a great depth amid scenery not unworthy of comparison with that of the Grand Canyon itself, and finally empties into the Verde at the side of one of the old Cliff-dwellers' pueblos. The valley at the lower end of the creek is open and fertile, with the arable land all taken up in ranches. The upper fifty miles is rocky and closely "boxed," but affords room for a trail which, occasionally climbing to the mountainside to avoid an unfordable pool at a bend of the canyon, leads through to Flagstaff.

This trail bears evidences of having been used by the Moquis centuries ago, and later Crook is said to have crossed over it in bringing down a battalion of troopers from one of the North Arizona forts to the relief of the besieged garrison of old Ft. Verde. This was in the 70's, but long rows of unmarked graves on the hillsides bear mute evidenc of the blow he inflicted upon the Apaches.

It was while excavating in the ruins of an old pueblo near this famous battlefield that we first met "Grizzly" Greer, reputed the greatest bear hunter in the Southwest, and it was on his suggestion that, when Stair had secured all the old bones and broken pottery which his contract with the Smithsonian called for, we started on a fishing and hunting expedition to the headwaters of Live Oak Creek.

"An' don't fool with any grizzlies if ye happen tu cum crost 'em," the old veteran had admonished me as we rode away. "Ye'll find 'em vastly dif'rent gunnin' than them fat Alasky broots ye've bin tellin' me uv. An Arizony grizzly's a job fer a perfes'nal to tackel, not fer amechurs like yu fellers."

Greer was right. An Arizona grizzly bear is about the same relation to one of the big bears of the North that a rough-and-ready, blood-in-his-eye cowboy of the desert bears to the sleepy, stolid Eskimo. The "streak of fat" runs from end to end in the bear of the high latitudes, both in body and in spirit, and his regular diet of roots and berries tempers his natural savagery. He revels in plenty and grows fat and good-natured. But the rocky desert mountains of Arizona produce no berries or succulent roots, and the watered valleys are all settled. Little is left for food but range cattle and sheep, and the bears of Arizona, in the natural process of evolution, have become strictly carnivorous. This alone fully accounts for their fierceness. The effect of a continued meat diet on the temper of a man is well known, and the difference in disposition of the meat and herb-eating animals the world over is as diametrically opposite as black and white.

Nowhere save in Arizona have I heard of perfectly authenticated instances of unprovoked attacks of bears on men. There I heard repeated accounts of such attacks; not from witnesses of the onslaughts, nor from the survivors, for there had been neither, but from perfectly trustworthy parties who had come upon the partly-eaten bodies of unarmed men who had been waylaid and slain by grizzlies. The distance between water holes is great in the foothills of the desert mountains. The bubbling spring of yesterday may be the dust hole of tomorrow, and thirst is even more potent than hunger in driving man or beast to deeds of recklessness. Sheep are easy game for a bear, but a long-horned mountain-range steer is more formidable than the average man behind a "thirty-forty." An old meat-eating grizzly knows perfectly the difference between an armed and an unarmed man, and I have absolute faith in the claim of veteran desert hunters, who maintain that the grizzly of the arid wastes will attack the latter sooner than he will the former, though he hesitates at neither in time of need.

GILA
[illegible]
GRIZZLY

Warning on "Gila's" cage.

Long of limb, swift of foot, gaunt, ferocious, terrible, the Arizona grizzly stalks over mountain and through valley, the very incarnation of the ruthless spirit of the desert, and his prey is anything that breathes.

The grasshoppers were beginning to jump when Stair and I sat out for the headwaters of live Oak Creek, and we found the fishing first-class, even in the well-whipped reaches of the lower pools, and constantly improving as we worked toward the mountains. We stopped one night at the last ranch below the "box" canyon, a beautiful ten acres of bottom land, with its emerald coat of alfalfa and rows of vegetables and fruit trees shining in vivid contrast to the parched brown of the hills which flanked it on either side. Here we planned to leave our pack animals and cook, and push on ahead light with our riding horses, fishing outfits and a couple of pack-bags of provisions. The owner of the ranch was a young chap from Chicago, who had been compelled, several years previously, to seek the high-dry air of Arizona for his failing lungs. He had won back his health, married the daughter of the ranchman with whom he had sojourned, and finally succeeded to the proprietorship of the ranch upon the death of his father-in-law. This we learned from his wife, he, at the time of our visit, being absent a week on a trip to Flagstaff, where he had gone to make arrangements for the sale of a bunch of cattle from his overstocked range.

He had gone by, and was expected to return over, the Indian trail along the creek. His wife entertained us with characteristic desert hospitality, and as we were about to leave brought out a couple of neatly-done-up packages.

"This one is for you two," she said, tucking the larger package into Stair's saddle-bag, "and this one is for Bert, when you meet him," giving me the other. "You can't miss him, for you both follow the same trail. Probably you'll meet him today, for he expected to be home day before yesterday."

The packages contained dainty lunches, such as only one can appreciate who has toiled for days along a hot, dusty trail on a diet of beans and bacon. We were rather looking forward to seeing "Bert" get away with his little box of "home-made" lunch.

The young rancher we came upon two days later. We had descended to the creek bottom to avoid a mile of closely-walled canyon, which the stream filled rather too completely to make going comfortable for the horses, and were picking our way along a heavy gravel bar thrown up by the creek in high water. Ahead was a thick grove of low-limbed sycamores, growing in a rich spot of bottom land at a bend of the canyon. Beyond towered a sheer wall of red sandstone, its rounded turrets shining in the sunlight 2000 or 3000 feet above the shadowed creek. For an hour we had heard the howling of a dog, coming from somewhere to the north, and as the rattle of the horses' hoofs on the gravel echoed between the rocky walls, it changed to sharp, short barks of defiance which seemed to come from the depths of the clump of sycamores. Swinging our horses from the trail, we plunged in among the trees and came suddenly and without warning upon one of the most pitiful and sickening spectacles it has ever been my lot to witness.

The torn and bruised body of a man was stretched at full length upon the heavy leaf-carpet which covered the ground, the hands clasping in a death grip a slender limb torn from the tree above. A black-and-tan collie, bristling with rage and with the green light of madness flickering in his burning eyes, lay between us and the body. The poor brute's hind legs were paralyzed, probably from a broken back; but it threw its shattered remnant of a body toward us in such a transport of fury every time we approached that Stair mercifully put it out of its misery with a charge of buckshot. The last survivor of a terrible tragedy, it died with its flashing eyes fixed defiantly upon what it doubtless imagined were new enemies come to assail the body of its beloved master. Another collie, evidently a younger animal, was lying—I might almost say plastered, so great had been the impact with which it was hurled against the cliff—on a narrow ledge of red sandstone close by. The body was telescoped, as though thrown from a catapult, and hardly a bone was unbroken. Several empty shells were scattered among the leaves, and another—perhaps the key to the tragedy—was jammed in the breech of a gun which we later found sticking, muzzle first, in a manzanita bush a few feet away.

There was no doubt that the shattered body was that of Bert, the young rancher, and it did not require a Sherlock Holmes to read the story of his death as it stood written there before us. The stamp of grizzly was plain upon it all. The dogs had evidently chased and cornered the animal among the sycamores, and the ranchman, tying his horse to one of the outer trees, where we found the broken bridle later, advanced to their aid. Nervousness, or, possibly, fear of shooting the dogs, had prevented his hitting, or at least dangerously wounding, the grizzly, and the latter had charged. Then the shell had jammed, and the desperate rancher, throwing away the useless gun, had made for the tree. Grasping a limb, he had endeavored to pull himself up, and the limb had either broken under his weight, or the bear had seized him and the two had brought it down. The dogs, we figured, came to grief in the final melee, as a collie is far too intelligent a dog to close with a bear except under great excitement. The fact that the body was partially eaten convinces of the fallacy of the popular belief that a bear will not touch a dead man, although, as I have pointed out, the grizzly of the arid regions differs in many respects from others of the species, and this may be only another of the peculiarities of the Arizona animal.

That night we watched beside the bo dividing the hours between us. We mig have started back at once, but the sha were piling deep in the bottom of the ca yon, and traveling at night would have be most difficult; besides, we were both of secretly glad of an excuse that would d the painful but inevitable task of brea the news to the young widow. The h dragged dreadfully, and to blot out the t rible pictures which kept forming in m mind, I busied myself toward morning setting up a line of defenses around camp. By the light of a nearly full which shone brightly for a few hours, I one of our two rifles and the shotgun lashed them firmly between pairs of yo saplings. Then, with some strong and fragments of baling wire, I complet "spring battery" which commanded the most likely approaches to the still under the tarpaulin. I felt better after strings were up, and managed to sna bit of sleep while Stair stood the last w

In the morning I was about to take the guns, when it occurred to me th would be little trouble to come up lig get them after we had taken the body and that, in the interim, the bear mig turn to his destruction. Then I be myself of the success which had a tended my effort to set a "spring" upon a bear in Alaska, and so I add kodak to the infernal machine I had trived in the night, setting it up besi shotgun. All of the "trigger string" passed within the focus of the cam laid so it would be put of the shadow tree, insuring a good light should sprung while the sun was shining in the yon. The camera string I ran beyon gun string so that the former w touched first. It did not occur that I might have run the two together and thus had a chance curing an exposure at the mome shot struck. For bait I took all our sions, save enough to last us back ranch, and laid them out in a tempting inside the circle. There wasn't much line of bear dainties in the lot, and I minded to leave the bodies of the bait. Stair suggested, however, that able death merited honorable buri we crawled cautiously under the strin erected a cairn of sandstone boulder the bodies of the devoted collies. toned up the bait pile with the c several cans of corned beef and beans, crumpled a generous supply ernment emergency ration over it left it to do its work.

Hardly was the funeral of the rancher over before a messenger from Jerome with a telegram to Stair moning him East on business, and gave me a couple more days in his pany, I decided to leave the guns and era for our man to bring out and to me. I had little idea that anything fallen into my trap, but I gave the ful instructions in regard to rolling film in any event. To "Grizzly" wrote a letter, urging him to go up a try at the bear, but as I learned had already heard the news, and messenger half way.

The guns and camera reached me fornia a fortnight later, and soon aft a letter from Greer, a part of which setting down. Except for the few tion marks which I have added to the sentences, it is identical with the nal, which I still preserve.

Jane Halifacts, Gentlewoman,

And Her Luminous Talks to "The Times."—IV.

SWEET REASON.

THE Gentlewoman sat, trowel in hand, on a rustic seat in her garden. She had just been bedding some pansies, and seeing me walk up the garden path, beckoned to me, so I went over and sat beside her.

It was a perfect California autumn day, following a little shower which had fallen the night before. The garden spread out before us like a perfumed mantle. The rainfall had clustered in heavy drops on the refreshed petals of late-blooming flowers. The good brown earth seemed teeming with newly-awakened life. Even the pansies, lately put in their places by The Gentlewoman herself, seemed conscious of a new environment full of promise, and lifted their heads gratefully to testify their appreciation.

I was fairly intoxicated with the beauty of the day and the place. When The Gentlewoman said, "Let us remain out of doors," as she laid trowel, gloves and garden hat in a little heap beside the bench, I acquiesced joyfully.

"It is sweet today, after the rain, isn't it? These pansies always remind me of children. Do you know it is impossible for me to look at a pansy in bloom and not think of a baby's face?"

"What a charming fancy!" I replied.

The Gentlewoman loves everything that grows—animals, plants, people. And she has a wondrous way of dignifying the common things of life in her thought and speech.

"I'm a bit old-fashioned and quaint, maybe," she went on, "even about my garden. This might have been your grandmother's garden, yet it seems to suit me. My garden is the physical expression of things I hold dear to my heart. A garden, like anything else, must express character if it is to have charm. My snapdragon hedge, my clump of [illegible], my bed of gay hollyhocks, sweet [illegible], crocuses and snowdrops in season, [illegible], syringa, all mean something very real to me. For instance, the snapdragons, always straight-standing and stately—I fancy I hear some one playing a sonata somewhere when I look at them. Maybe one of Beethoven's, full of dignity, tenderness, grace and exquisite beauty of form. The [illegible] means just one thing—modesty. Those radiant, flaming hollyhocks fairly revel in the joy of life. They are brave and [illegible] in their enjoyment of sunshine, air and rain—God's good gifts to them. And those red geraniums—the hedge of them bordering the back fence—express so perfectly [illegible] defiance of all hard conditions that [illegible] will let nothing interfere with them. My husband does not care for scarlet as a color in gardening, and I do not care at all for purple. So we compromise. I keep my red geraniums, and he has his bougainvillea vine."

"I think it a beautiful idea for the General Federation of Women's Clubs to plant the trees and shrubs indigenous to each State along the Lincoln highway, from Coast to Coast. And the finest thing about the effort is, I think, the determination to make each tree planted express an attribute of the noble character of Lincoln. I notice from newspaper articles that the California club women contemplate a generous use of poppy seed. Now what could more beautifully pro[illegible] the golden glory of Abraham Lincoln's [illegible] benevolence than would miles of California poppy (copa de oro) greeting [illegible] on the highway? It is a fine thing [illegible] club women to do."

I quite agreed with The Gentlewoman in the matter of gardens. They should express [illegible], and blooming things have a real [illegible] for all of us if we try to discover it. The garden before us seemed perfectly to [illegible] to The Gentlewoman. The quiet dignity of it, the color, the perfume, the total absence of any slavish attempt at imitation, the quaint individuality of it, and the compelling charm of the ensemble, reflected the character of The Gentlewoman herself.

We talked gardens awhile, and then The Gentlewoman said: "It seems to me that in everything in life we should keep to [illegible], and work with a purpose. And I know of nothing to which this can be so [illegible] applied as to the multitude of active, engaging women. It is of course [illegible] to see the great body of women, enfranchised, taking seriously not themselves but their duties as citizens. But in analyzing the tendencies of western women who are taking such an active part in club and political life, I find they have an inclination to disregard certain great fundamentals which underlie all true development along any line. One striking thing to me, which I think is a grave mistake, is the fact that most women, consciously or unconsciously, are imitating men in the organization, conduct, form and purpose of their activities. This can but result in a half-length accomplishment along whatever line is attempted, because women are not men, and no amount of social change can make them think and feel alike. When they do, something is wrong with one sex or both sexes. This was very well illustrated by a little experience which I had with a young woman—a typical product of her time—who has charge of the financing of a department of charitable work in which I am interested. I objected mildly to some of her methods, suggesting that we adopt a more dignified and equally, if not more effective, way of proceeding. She looked at me with something like pity in her fine, big eyes as she said: 'But you don't seem to realize that times are changed; that we are dealing with men, and that we must deal with them in their own terms.' It was really not worth while trying to bring her to my point of view, so I let the matter stand. But there you have it; trying to deal with men in their own terms. The terms of men are not the terms of women. And when women try to model their careers after men's careers there is going to be trouble somewhere. It makes me indignant, this slavish homage paid men! Why, aren't women as good as, if not better than, men? Why should we try to be like men? Why not just be ourselves—strongly? Women in becoming amateur men are not doing the things that men do half as well as men can do them, and they are leaving undone the things that men will never do, or can not do. Woman certainly has her work in the world. It is big and important, but she must do it her way, or she will only half succeed. Where will the super-woman we have dreamed about come from if women become more and more like men? We can have no super-men until we have super-women for their mothers."

I had long wanted The Gentlewoman's opinion of Ellen Key, that wonderful woman philosopher who has not a great deal of patience with the masculine tendencies that the development of women is taking, and here was my chance to ask it.

"What do you think of Ellen Key's ideals for women of today?" I asked.

"Ellen Key," replied The Gentlewoman, "is a woman far ahead of her time. She often has trouble bringing herself down to the level of the women to whom she talks. I mean the intellectual and spiritual level. We do not seem to think of Ellen Key as moral, we think of her as spiritual. Morality is the word for those who must have laws to keep them in order. Spirituality is the word for those who no longer need such laws. I love Ellen Key because she recognizes that women have work in the world which transcends in importance the work of men, and she boldly tells women they must do this work as women, not as half-men or half-women. While she pleads for the largest individual development, she recognizes the individual's relation and obligation to the whole, and she does not think that anything can justify an individual's development at the expense of the whole. But she does say in her fine little book, 'Love and Ethics,' that there are times when the sacrifice of the individual to society is justifiable. And I committed this to memory, it so well expresses what I have long believed and maintained: 'It is an indisputable fact that if the majority of women no longer had the calm and repose to abide at the source of life, but wanted to navigate all the seas with men, the sex contrasts would resolve themselves not into harmony, but into monotony.' She has also many times said that, until women come to recognize this, the gain to society is nothing if millions do the work that men could do better, and evade, or fulfill but poorly, the greater tasks of life and happiness, the creation of men and the creation of souls. Oh, yes, I love Ellen Key. She is a great soul, with a wonderful message to the women of her time."

"But don't you think that the activities of women, in the main, aim at service?" I questioned.

"Yes, I think they undoubtedly do. The case of a woman leading a movement for public welfare, or the betterment of humanity in any way, for her own purely ambitious and selfish reasons, is, I believe, exceedingly rare. Women have become alive with a passion for service. It is the great mother love of women at work. But in their eagerness to go forward—to accomplish—they are, as I said a few moments ago, disregarding certain great fundamentals which will make their present achievement a house built upon the sands, I'm afraid.

"Of course I realize that a general statement like that would be grossly unfair without an explicit example. Here it is: Women clamor for political expression, for the activity that comes with the vote. When they have it, what do they do? They begin planning, just as men do, political careers from altruistic motives I grant you. But they model their political activities after men's. They meet and debate and caucus, and split into party factions, and deal in invective and intrigue, occasionally, just as men do. In other words, they deal with men in the terms of men. They imitate men as far as they can. And in the last analysis they line up with men and vote with them. Of course they must use party machinery as they find it, but I should be glad to see women attaching less importance to pure politics as such. By the very nature of politics—and politics will always be the same, because human nature is what it is, and it will never be perfect—women, to find their finest expression, must not look for it in this field. They have a great new work to do, but it is social in its nature, not political. It aims at the welfare of the race, not the promulgation of party principles. This party participation is all very well, but it is just what the men will surely see to—and are we sure that men will see to the peculiar work of efficient municipal housekeeping, the conservation of certain great centers of spiritual forces, provisions benevolent in their nature, aiming directly at the happiness and comfort of the people?

"A great field of work involving these considerations lies before women, but they will never be equal to it, going at it as amateur men. They must go at it as women, with every womanly quality enhanced, every spiritual force strengthened, every faculty peculiar to women vitalized. And above all we women—you notice I say 'we women' now, for I am coming to something that includes myself—must be fair. We must learn to judge matters correctly. We must not decide a case until all the evidence is in. We must always look at the largest aspect of the thing with which we deal. We must follow it to its logical end, and see what the ramifications of the conclusion are, and how they affect the people as a whole. Of course our present failure in this respect—and we are failing in it every day—is due partially to our lack of training in public affairs, and then it is due to something else. It is due to an inherent tendency towards being short-sighted, critical, impulsive and unfair. Mostly to the tendency towards unfairness. I never come in contact with women in large bodies, or small groups, that I am not impressed by their tendency to be unfair in matters with which they deal. They haven't the large perspective, it seems, necessary to unbiased judgment. I say this not in criticism of others more than myself. I find myself most frequently involved in unfair judgments, biased opinions, and conclusions too quickly reached. Of course this sort of thing is purely an individual matter for each woman of us. It really keeps me quite active mentally, at times, trying to get both sides of a thing I wish to judge. Not only a 'thing.' I find it applies to people and their motives. Women are more prone to misjudge than men are, and they arrive at their conclusions more quickly, making the evil all the greater. I have found that in dealing with my children I have often failed to consider their motives; I have many times failed to be perfectly fair; I have often misjudged. I have suffered so acutely over this that a sense of fairness has become in a measure ingrained in my flesh and bone. I suppose that is why I make so much of unfairness in women. I know what needless suffering it works. And then, too, we are hard on our cast-off vices, you know. The best insurance of an open mind is a pure heart. That is why, my dear, you will always find Thomas of Kempis' wonderful book, 'The Imitation of Christ,' on my desk. It, more than anything else in the world, has taught me to be fair and just. Whenever anything looks too dreadful to me, and I am inclined to be a little set up over my own righteousness, I read something from that worn volume, and reflect how unlovely I must look to any archangel who chances to cast a glance my way. That always humbles me, and helps me to see things both ways. Sweet reasonableness is the golden mean.'"

The Gentlewoman's fine, slim hand had closed over mine. We sat for a moment so, and I could not resist the courtly impulse of raising her hand to my lips, even though we are both women, and I am not so much younger than is she. "Come again, dear," she called after me as I bounded away down the garden path to catch my car back to town.

The South American Trade.

[Philadelphia Inquirer:] Last year the ten principal South American nations bought $1,000,000,000 worth of goods from Europe and America. Of this amount we shipped the comparatively insignificant amount of $115,000,000 worth.

That looks bad, but the worst is that we bought of these same countries goods to the value of $250,000,000, so that we had to send them $95,000,000 in cash when we should have sent them goods.

Now these nations can get very little from Europe, and they must come to us for a market. Philadelphia alone ought to be able to send $100,000,000 of needed goods south, and we think it can be done if there is enough enterprise on the part of our manufacturers.

Able for Duty.

[Chicago News:] "I see you complain of a sore throat," said the regimental doctor, looking at his report as the last member of the sick parade stepped up.

"Yes, sir; terribly sore!" answered the bandsman, huskily.

The doctor examined him carefully.

"Yes, it is rather inflamed," said he. "You had better not strain it in the band. I shall strike you off duty for a week; come to me again at the end of that time, and in the interval gargle with salt and water."

At the end of the week back came the bandsman quite recovered.

"That's good," said the doctor. "You're in for duty again now, so you can return to your work today. By the way, what is your instrument?"

"The side drum, sir," answered Tommy without the flicker of an eyelid.

The Fall of the Gods.

Now totter they, the old gods;
  Now totter they and fall,
Swift crashing from their altars,
  Ranged squat against the wall.
All that we built and worshiped—
  False dreams we dreamed before—
Fall crashing with the old gods
  That ruled before the War.

Swift fall they now, the old gods,
  The gods of Sloth and Shame,
Swift crumbling 'fore the new gods,
  The gods of Steel and Flame.
For these shall purge your borders;
  For these shall make ye whole,
Uprooting all the cankers,
  That festered in your soul.

So shall ye rise the stronger,
  (All ye who do not fall)
Firm 'stablishing the new gods
  Within your frontier wall.
By Peace prolonged ye wither,
  By Strife forgot ye fade;
Strange ills and dangers gather
  Where rusts the warrior's blade.

So shall ye read the message—
  The tale the new gods bear;
With Sword and Trowel together
  Your battlements uprear.
For toil with Pen and Hammer
  Shall Progress bring reward—
But power to hold your freedom
  Rests sole upon your Sword.

MARSHAL SOUTH.

The House of Many Flowers. By Florence Willard.

THE "SETTLEMENT."

IN THE MIDST of the dirt, the filth, the squalor that mark the very poor of a certain southern city, stands a low white house surrounded by a tangled garden of vines and flowers. To left, to right, on every side, stretch the shacks of poverty, crusted with grime and reeking with foul odors; but the white house in its circle of green seems always fair and lovely, like some little pool that reflects the sky in the midst of a muddy street. Some call it the "Settlement," but to the children of the poor, those for whom it is primarily intended, it is "The House of Many Flowers." Here, in the great sunny rooms, they meet together, all ages, all nationalities, held together by the common bonds, ignorance and poverty.

It was a warm Saturday afternoon, and the Settlement was full of children. Little Miss sighed as she bent over Panca and adjusted the tangled floss with which she was striving to embroider a bit of cardboard. The girl looked up with a grateful smile as she dug her needle into her work. Little Miss turned away. The child who had given her that name had long since left the circle and was dead, or gone, no one knew where, but the name still clung to her. She was a slight little woman of perhaps fifty years. Her hair was gray and waved about a face a little worn, a little lined with care, but full of a sweetness that mirrored the soul within. The twenty years that Little Miss had spent in the Settlement had given her more things than her name. There had been joys that almost erased the thought of the tragedies she had witnessed; but today—somehow, today seemed different. After twenty years Little Miss had paused to think, and today she was passing judgment on her work.

It had begun that morning when Little Miss, at her solitary breakfast, had picked up the paper and on the front page had found the story of a convict's escape. Little Miss rarely read the more sensational parts of the paper, avoiding them with the nice distinction of long practice, but today the picture of the convict had been published, and Little Miss caught and held by the eyes. The young face reminded her of something, someone—she scarcely knew what, and she paused to read the column beside it. "Patrick O'Harren"—the name was familiar. Her mind worked back along the years, and suddenly she remembered. So he was a convict now, the little Patsy O'Harren who had worked and played in this very house ten years before. She remembered with a pang that he had committed some small offense and had left her for the reform school, a lad of ten or twelve. She had lost track of him, and now—now he was an outlaw, being hunted like an animal. She searched the column for his crime. Some jewelry, a matter of a year. He was an "old offender," it seemed—an old offender at twenty-two! It was on his way to prison that he had made his escape, and now it was reported that he was in the south. Little Miss had thrown aside the paper and risen from the table. She felt tired and very, very discouraged. This was the way it ended, her work. She toiled with them, taught them, loved them, and they ended in prison, or worse. She had worked for twenty years and failed, and yet—she wondered wherein the fault lay—what she could have done to make her influence more lasting.

Somewhere within, the clock chimed the hour, and Little Miss hurried about her accustomed tasks. Her assistants joined, and soon after came the children. At their advent the rooms seemed to blossom into life.

There was little time for thinking now, and yet the smiles on the faces of the children brought a sort of pain to Little Miss, and as she bent over them, directing their awkward fingers, putting a stitch here, a stitch there, the same question rose again and again her mind. How long would they remember?

Little Guiseppe with the soulful eyes and the grimy fingers, would he go out of her life forever and leave behind all that he had gained? Ludwig, bending over his woodwork, Pedro, wielding his brush with romanic skill—would they, too, pass on and forget?

She called herself from her reverie with a start in time to prevent her scissors from disappearing into the cavernous pockets of Kanakitchi Lamuro. Kanakitchi received her words of admonishment with an inscrutable expression in his slant eyes. Usually the incident would not have worried her; she was too well acquainted with oriental ideas of morality to be surprised by anything, but today it seemed of moment. It had even crept into her classes, this sinister thing. No wonder Little Miss sighed as she bent over Panca's sewing.

It grew late, and the children one by one gathered their work into their lockers and ran laughing into the streets without. Little Miss watched them go, and a pain stabbed at her heart as they turned to wave good by to The House of Many Flowers. Some time they would leave it forever and forget.

It was almost like a dirge ringing in her ears again and again. They would forget, forget. She tried to shake it off, and leaving the house stepped out of the French windows into the garden. Dusk had come, and the tangled shrubbery was all aquiver in the light breeze. From without came the sound of calling, of busy wagons, of clanging bells, but within everything was quiet. Suddenly Little Miss heard a step, and looking up found that she was not alone. A man stood before her. He was poorly dressed, even ragged, but he was not a man of the neighborhood. He loomed before her, large, shambling, evidently ill at ease. Little Miss was not frightened. She was used to calls of help at any hour of the night.

"Well," she said kindly, "is there anything I can do to help you?"

The man took a step forward out of the shadows. "Little Miss," he said, "I'm Patsy, Patsy O'Harren."

The woman's heart gave a leap within her. He was one of her boys, and he had come back! She took a step toward him and held out her hand. "I'm glad to see you, Patsy," she said, "so glad"!

The man looked at her furtively. "You've seen the papers?" he asked.

Little Miss made no answer, but motioning him to follow, entered the house, where she drew the curtain and lighted the light. Then she spoke. "You must be hungry," she said quietly. "I'll make you some tea." She hurried about her preparations. The man stood in the center of the room and looked about him as though he would drink in his surroundings. He put his hand almost lovingly on one of the little low tables that stood around the wall.

"We uster call it The House of Many Flowers," he said slowly. "Some little dago named it that, I bet. They wasn't so bad in them days, the dagos." He turned to Little Miss with the ghost of a smile on his face. "Do you remember Pedro Rafael?" he asked, "and Toni—I disremembered his other name?"

"Little Miss, looking back through a myriad of Pedros and Tonis returned the smile. "Yes," she said, "I remember them, and I remember you, too. You were such a fine little fellow, and you enjoyed the work so."

The man turned on her almost fiercely. "D'y know," he said, "'twas the only thing I had that wasn't bad, rotten bad, the only thing." It all came out in a torrent, a stream of almost incoherent words. "My mother—well I'll not say anything agin her, for 'twas not her fault, but the old man—" his fists clenched. "Many's the time I've come here with my back raw from beatin'. They was all bad, rotten bad, but this wuz just—heaven. Some might have stood the other without goin' down, but I wuz rotten, too, I guess. Th' judge said so, 'tany rate, an' I got send up for thievin' an' general deviltry. When I came out, they all know. There weren't nothin' to do, so I snitched some stuff an' got sent up for three months, an' then I didn't care. When they caught me this time I took my chanct an' lit out, an' then, somewhow, I just come here." He ended simply.

"Poor boy," said Little Miss, "you must eat."

The man doubled his length awkwardly into the chair she drew up to the table and fell to eating ravenously of the things it contained. Suddenly there was clanging from without, and he sprang from his chair. A cup dropped from his hand and crashed on the floor unheeded.

"The Black Maria!" he cried, breathing hard.

The patrol clanged past and the hubbub in the streets subsided gradually. Neither the man nor the woman had moved or spoken, but now he turned to her.

"They're after me," he said, "I'd [illegible] forgot, an' I ain't got any place to go!" [illegible] was no longer a man, he was a [illegible] frightened child, coming to her [illegible] Little Miss put her hand on his arm.

"Listen," she said, "Listen! I could [illegible] you—yes, I might even keep you [illegible] a time, but you'd always be a fugitive, [illegible] you never could be anything but an [illegible] convict, while if you go back—"

"Go back!" cried the man—"to that?"

"Listen, Patsy," she pleaded. "Go [illegible] and take your punishment like a man, [illegible] back, and then come out and start [illegible]

"Start fresh!" cried the other, [illegible] in on her words. "Who'd give me [illegible] chanct after this?"

It was a question that had puzzled [illegible] theorists than Little Miss, and she was [illegible] for a minute. There were steps on the [illegible] and some one rapped heavily on the [illegible] Little Miss went white. Suddenly she [illegible] to the man.

"Don't you see, she cried, "your [illegible] is here, among your own people? Come [illegible] to me and I will give you work here [illegible] The House of Many Flowers."

The knocking was repeated, and she [illegible] ried down the hall and unbolted the [illegible] On the step she found the policeman of [illegible] beat with several others.

"Pardon, Miss," said the officer, [illegible] "we saw a man come in here awhile [illegible] Is he still here?

For the fraction of a second Little [illegible] paused, uncertain of her reply.

Then a voice rose behind her. "I'm [illegible] said Patrick O'Harren, as he stepped [illegible] the hall. "And if you want to take [illegible] quiet and don't alarm the lady."

The man behind the officer put his [illegible] to his hip, but his companion arrested [illegible] arm. "He's surrendered, you fool," he [illegible] gruffly, and drew from his pocket a [illegible] of metallic objects that gleamed in the [illegible] light. The man winced as the [illegible] touched his wrists, but submitted [illegible] The detective beside him put his [illegible] his shoulder.

"Better get a move on," he said [illegible]

Patrick raised his head and looked [illegible] him from the chairs and low tables [illegible] flower pots at the window. Then he [illegible] to the woman who stood beside the [illegible] staring at him, white and silent.

"I'll come back, Little Miss," he [illegible] ly, "I'll come back in a year."

The woman started forward, her [illegible] outstretched. "You won't forget?" [illegible] pleaded. "Oh, you are very, very [illegible] won't forget?"

The man turned and looked down [illegible] and his eyes were the eyes of the [illegible] Patsy of long ago.

"No, Little Miss," he said, "I'll not [illegible]

Then he passed into the hall beyond [illegible] burly policeman at his elbow.

The trampling steps passed down the [illegible] the door slammed, the gate clicked, and [illegible] tle Miss was alone in The House of [illegible] Flowers.

The Man Who was Starving. By May C. Ringwalt

BROTHERS.

IT BEGAN to rain—the first slow drops soon whipped to a dashing speed by quick, sharp little lashes of wind. A good-natured panic swept the downtown crowd, men and women scurrying for shelter into convenient doorways or racing under bobbing umbrellas to their final destination. But Higgins, a colorless figure blurred in loose-hung shabbiness of clothes, who had slouched upon the outskirts of the throng, pushed his battered hat down over his shaggy eyebrows and with a supreme disregard of the downpour shuffled on.

Toward the end of the third block he came to a hesitating halt, glanced stealthily about him, then shot in between slaps of the heavy storm doors at the white marble entrance of one of the city's highest-priced office buildings.

Inside, he began wearily to climb flight after flight of white marble stairs, for beggars were not allowed in the building and he wisely judged his appearance too suspicious to risk an elevator's boy scrutiny.

As he approached the top floor, the sound of voices brought him to a sudden standstill, a tiny pool of water from his dripping clothes gathering at his feet as he flattened himself to the shallow shadow cast by the side wall upon the white glare of the stair.

"I'm awfully sorry to turn you out of these diggings, old fellow," a man in the hall above was saying, "but now I'm back, I suppose I've got to buckle down to work again."

"The idea of apologizing, Fred!" came the answer. "I'm under everlasting obligations to you as it is."

"Everlasting fiddlesticks!" tossed back the first speaker. "The accommodation was mutual. You hadn't a studio yet, and I wanted some one to look after my traps. Don't go until you find what you like, for I shan't come in before the first of the month anyhow. And say, Griffith, can you dine with me at the club tomorrow evening? Good! Meet me in the lobby at seven."

Higgins hugged his shadow close as a man in a fur-lined overcoat and high silk hat strode past the stairs to the elevator, then, reassured by the swish of the descending car down the cage, he cautiously tiptoed toward the studio—with a twitch of glances to right and left in nervous dread of a janitor.

The studio door was still open and he stole in unseen by the artist standing by his easel, his gaze riveted upon the floor.

There was such a silken delicacy about this man that to Higgins—scornfully measuring him from the careful part in the middle of the fine light hair down to the embroidered tip of his slipper—the artist's refinement seemed the embodiment of effeminacy, borne out rather than belied by the precisely trimmed flossy beard.

"A spoilt baby pouting over the loss of a pet nursery!" the intruder sneered to himself. "I wonder," his thought leaped fiercely on as a hand clinched in his empty pocket, "how he'd feel if he hadn't money for a night's lodging!"

The artist suddenly looked up.

"What do you want?" he asked sharply.

"I thought you might need a model, and—"

"And I don't!" cut in the artist.

Higgins slowly turned toward the door.

"It's hard on a fellow willing to work when nobody wants anything he can do."

"It is hard," said the artist in a [illegible] tone. "Wait a minute."

Higgins stepped eagerly back.

"It is storming," said the artist as [illegible] the rain and the wind had just [illegible] him from his dream of comfort in the [illegible] heated room. "Here you can at [illegible] warm. You're quite welcome to [illegible] while."

"A man who is starving," angrily [illegible] Higgins, "has no time to stand idle [illegible] a steam heater."

The hand of the artist, instantly [illegible] into his pocket, came out slowly, and [illegible] was a peculiar expression in the [illegible] ing down at a dime upon the soft [illegible] he held out the coin.

"Buy something to eat with this"

The brute in Higgins, grown [illegible] passionate through suffering, flamed [illegible] sire to break that delicate, blue-veined [illegible] with a single blow.

"I'm not a beggar. I asked for [illegible]

Reluctantly the artist dropped [illegible] back into his pocket.

"I had no intention of insulting [illegible] said, "but it isn't pleasant to think of any one being hungry."

With a deep-drawn sigh, he sat down on the arm of a chair.

"You're right, though," he declared in a tone that sounded more like a challenge to an opposing argument than one of agreement. "Better starve than beg!"

The hard line of Higgins's mouth curled. Again there rang in his ears the parting words overheard on the stairs. A swell who dined at clubs could so easily talk of the advantages of starvation.

"It isn't so much what you take," went on the artist vehemently. "The danger is in forming a habit—of taking until you pauperize your manhood."

The circumstances of their respective positions gave a brutality to the words falling like unnecessary blows upon one whom the world had already beaten down, and this time it was with a kind of bitter satisfaction that Higgins turned to the door.

Instantly the artist broke away from his heroics.

"Stop," he said quietly. "I've changed my mind. You can sit for me after all."

He slowly rose and and picked up a sheet of drawing paper from a littered table.

"I'm not feeling quite myself today, but I can work a little while. Long enough to make a rough charcoal sketch. One that will only take about half an hour, so you needn't expect to get more than your dime," he concluded brusquely.

A strange glitter came into Higgins's eyes as their glance rested upon the wealth of beautiful canvasses about him, and the scornful lips were parting in resentful refusal when suddenly there seemed flaunted under his very nostrils a fragrance of coffee, of soup, of—

"I'd be obliged to you, sir," he said cringingly.

Griffith posed him upon a stool on a small platform and seated himself at his easel.

For the first few minutes Higgins sat looking down at the artist—disdainfully smiling as he noticed the trembling of the hand that sketched and thought of old days when he had wielded a sledge hammer for hours without a quiver of his strong wrist; scowling furiously as he contrasted his hard luck with this fellow's good fortune, his own failure in life yawning deeper and blacker in the limelight of the other man's success.

Then gradually his mind fell back into the apathy that chronic discouragement had made a mental habit, the unaccustomed heat of the room lapping all his senses in a rising tide of drowsiness.

"The time is up," said a voice that sounded faint and far away.

Higgins gave a start; rubbed his eyes; got down from the platform—stood waiting for his dime.

But the artist seemed exhausted from plying so heavy an implement as a bit of charcoal. As Higgins stared dully at the drooping figure still seated at the easel again his thoughts sneered. He impatiently shuffled his feet—coughed. The artist did not heed.

"My money sir," gruffly muttered the model.

The artist made no reply.

With his eyes ablaze, Higgins strode toward the easel.

Then suddenly he caught himself up, stood motionless, hypnotized by the ghastly whiteness of the face sunk upon the artist's breast; by the new strange starkness of the silken man's form—by the horror of silence crowding round him in spite of the lashing storm outside.

He wrenched his will free at last and took quick steps toward the door. Only his word against that silence. They would run him in for vagrancy, for intent to steal—hang him for murder on circumstantial evidence. He must not be found there.

But at the threshold some inexplicable impulse arrested his flight; made him lay a finger upon the electric bell until it fairly shrieked through the building; held him to whisper broken snatches of explanation as they came running to him—the lawyer from the office opposite, the artist friends from down the hall, the doctor summoned from the floor below.

He even lingered at the opened door after they had all pushed past him into the horror of silence inside.

At first he could hear nothing that was said by the men crowded about the easel at the other end of the room, for they also whispered in broken snatches, but later two drew apart from the rest, and as they stepped nearer the unnoticed figure in the doorway, their excited words fell on his ear.

"Heart failure was the direct cause," said the first speaker, a little man with a professional alertness of eye and manner, "but—" he paused, slowly shaking his head—"from the poor fellow's condition he could not have had proper nourishment for weeks."

Aghast, the other man clutched the doctor's arm.

"What do you mean?"

"In plain English," answered the doctor curtly, "I mean that he starved to death."

"Impossible! I know Griff couldn't sell his pictures, but he never so much as hinted that he was hard up!"

"Those empty pockets!" shrugged the doctor. "With the pawnshop tickets and that one poor little dime!"

Surprising Nancy. By Florence M. Moote.

SOMEBODY BLUNDERED.

IT WAS 10 o'clock, exactly the hour at which Evelyn Franklin, a bride of two months, telephoned her husband every morning. This was part of an intricate system by which these two, whose honeymoon had not been bounded by the wedding trip, assured each other that their love remained unchanged during the hours that the young husband was occupied by business duties.

As the clock struck its first peal, Evelyn hastened to place the last candied cherry in the shining expanse of white icing, and held the cake up admiringly.

"There, Mr. Cake, you're all done, and you do look just as pretty as any of the cakes mother used to make.' Um! but you look good—if you don't make Jack forget all the cooking his mother ever did, I'm going to be mighty disappointed. And now for the telephone!"

As Evelyn took the receiver down, she gave a little gasp of surprise that was quickly smothered; then, as she listened a few seconds, a happy smile overspread her features.

"Jack's voice!" she exclaimed, as she hung up the receiver. "Crossed wires! And what was he saying? 'Sorry, Tom, but I can't be at the directors' meeting tonight. My wife's sister is coming on the 6 o'clock—somewhat of a surprise. Sorry I couldn't send you word sooner."

Evelyn clapped her hands delightedly.

"Dear old Nancy! Coming all the way from Fremont, the first time since the wedding! She was going to surprise me, and if it hadn't been for the crossed wires I should never have known. I wonder if Bob is coming with her. And Jack must have been part of the conspiracy, too. Well, I'll surprise them all. Let's see."

A tiny pucker appeared on the pretty forehead for a few seconds, then quickly cleared.

"I have it!"

Mrs. Franklin buoyantly sought the telephone.

"Hello."

"Oh, mother; this is Evelyn."

"Mother, I have a favor to ask, such a big one I'm almost afraid to ask it."

"Will you?"

"Well, I want to borrow Anne all day."

"Yes, I want to give a little dinner party. And I want you to come, of course. Please consider this a formal invitation."

"By the way, have you heard from Nancy lately? No? Good!" she murmured in a guarded aside. "She's going to be surprised, too. Er—what's that? Why—oh, it's to be a secret—a little surprise, you know. I mean a big surprise, a great big

"Well, you'll find out this evening. Thank you so much. Come early, won't you? Goodby."

"Dear old Anne will help me just splendidly. And now for the others! There's Aunt Mary and Cousin George, and—well, I'll phone these first."

When all the little circle of relatives had been invited and mysteriously informed that there was a great surprise in store, Evelyn made a tour of refrigerator and pantry shelves, with a cook-book in one hand and a pencil in the other.

"Oh, dear, I don't believe I ever planned a dinner-party menu before, all by myself. Let's see—here's a can of pineapple, and Nancy always did like fruit salad. Isn't it lucky I made that cake this morning. Oh, and decorations! Just as soon as Anne comes, I'll let her go on with the menu and I'll sketch some place cards. I DO want everything nice, for it's my very first affair in my own home."

"Morning, Miss Ev'lyn," said Anne from the doorway, as she proceeded to unwrap a gingham apron of generous dimensions. "You're goin' to have a shore-nuff party, ain't you?"

So all day the two worked faithfully, and as Evelyn proudly brought out her new silver baking dish and drew her very best silver spoons from their green case, she was planning a little speech of welcome for the guest of honor. Yes, she would put on the blue-flowered frock with the big butterfly girdle, and meet them on the front porch. Then, after her welcoming speech, she would open the door and, sweeping majestically into the living-room and waving her arm gracefully toward the dining table, shining with wedding-present silver and cut-glass, and plainly visible from the living-room of their bungalow home, she would say:

"You see the welcoming banquet is ready, and the guests are soon to arrive!"

Or perhaps it would be better to act as though she had been expecting Nancy all along, and had planned for weeks for her coming. She smiled dreamily to herself as she saw, mentally, the bewildered expressions on their faces; she heard their exclamations of wonder and their rapid questioning, but she only smiled mysteriously and led Nancy to the guest room.

"You shore look happy tonight, chile," said old Anne, as Evelyn appeared in her dainty blue and white frock. "An' you grow prettier every day. Mister Franklin mus' take good care ob you."

"Oh, Anne, do I look all right? And will you fasten just this one hook back here? I couldn't quite reach it. Thank you. Are the patties ready? Now I'll take just one last look at everything."

The guest-room, dainty with crisp ruffled curtains and bits of hand embroidery, and brightened with fresh flowers, was immaculate, while nothing more inviting could be imagined than the dining table, with its sparkling array of cutglass and silver. Evelyn placed a match to the candles, beneath their ribbon shades, and a rosy glow spread over the table.

"Oh, it's just perfect," breathed Evelyn, as she drew back admiringly.

A cheery whistle sounded without, that very special whistle by which Jack always announced his coming to his bride. Evelyn flew to the door, opened it, and—stared. Jack was alone! Absolutely alone!

"Hello! Why this festive air?" he demanded, taking in party frock, candelabra, and decorations in one bewildered glance.

"Why, where is Nancy?" asked Evelyn, sinking limply into the nearest chair.

"Nancy? Up in Fremont, getting dinner for her fond hubby, I suppose," stated Jack, with a feeble attempt at jocularity. "You surely don't think I have her concealed in my pocket, do you, my dear?"

"Jack! But didn't you—weren't you—telephoning someone this morning about your wife's sister coming this evening, so you couldn't go to a directors' meeting, or something?"

"This morning? No, love, I can prove my alibi easily—I was out in the machine all morning, showing property to that man from Michigan. Wasn't even near a 'phone. But what made you think——"

"Oh, dear! I took down the receiver to call you up just at 10, and there I could hear someone talking already—it sounded exactly like your voice, Jack Franklin—and the man was saying that his wife's sister was coming as a surprise. I thought the wires were crossed, and you were on our line. Oh, Jack, are you SURE it wasn't you I heard?"

"Quite sure," he assured her solemnly.

"Then whatever shall we do?" moaned Evelyn, with a trace of tears in her voice.

Jack was down on his knees beside his wife instantly.

"Why, sweetheart, what difference does it make? Can't she come some other time just as well?"

"Oh, but look——" Evelyn pointed tragically to the dining-room, with its festive array. "I've invited everybody—yes, everybody—all your relatives and mine, to surprise Nancy tonight, and now——"

"Well," declared Jack, with masculine obtuseness, "the table's ready, and we're here, and there's something to eat, isn't there?"

"But, Jack," she wailed, "I've inveigled all those people into coming here with the hope of a surprise. I didn't tell them why I asked them—I just said I had a big surprise. And now I haven't the courage to confess the true state of affairs to them. I'll never hear the end of it—my first affair, and the relatives-in-law coming, too."

"Never mind," comforted Jack. "There'll be some sort of surprise, if I have to perform a stunt myself. Shall it be a soprano solo or a Grecian dance? We can at least tell them it's a housewarming. Cheer up, little girl!"

"Oh, Jack, dear, think, think HARD! We must do something! There's that lame fiddler down at the Settlement House—he's an odd character; his way of talking is more interesting than his music, and they've never heard him. But that sounds so tame."

"Well, honey, you think, and I'll think, and we'll compare notes immediately after dinner. Here's George and Isabel already, together as usual."

Evelyn's cousin Isabel and Jack's cousin George usually were together, as a matter of fact, though they constantly protested that their interest in each other was purely of a cousinly nature, strengthened by the marriage of Jack and Evelyn.

"Where's the surprise?" demanded George, peering curiously around.

"Do hurry and tell us," begged Isabel, excitedly.

"Not yet," said Evelyn, with a tragic look at Jack. "I'm busy with dinner. Just amuse yourselves as you please for a while, like dear good people."

The little procession of relatives hastening up the street showed how great had been the suspense. Mrs. Pryor entered breathless with interest, but hesitated a moment in the doorway as she saw George and Isabel standing together by the fireplace. Then, with that same tendency to jump hastily at conclusions which Evelyn sometimes displayed, she rushed forward, impulsively extending a hand to each.

"So you're the surprise! You dear couple, I wish you joy!"

Isabel blushingly protested, confusion alternating with astonishment. Her protests, however, were overwhelmingly drowned by the showers of congratulations with which she and George were besieged by the circle of relatives who had now assembled.

"And you didn't even tell your own mother!" exclaimed Aunt Mary reproachfully. "You naughty girl! To think that I should first learn of your engagement at an announcement party!"

"When did it happen?" asked Uncle James genially.

"Not very long ago," admitted Isabel reluctantly. "But we didn't intend to tell for for a long, long time. How did you all find out about it so soon?"

"Why, isn't that the surprise Evelyn invited us here for?" demanded Aunt Edith Boice.

The announcement of dinner at this juncture saved Evelyn from an embarrassing confession.

As Isabel passed Evelyn, she gave her hand a quick squeeze and whispered:

"You sly puss! It was so dear of you to tell the relatives this way. But how DID you know?"

But Evelyn only smiled mysteriously, while Jack heaved a sigh of relief that the responsibility of providing a surprise had been lifted from his shoulders.

Submarines in the European War.

By a Special Contributor.

DEADLY "WATER BUGS."

JULES VERNE, decades ago, wrote of the then unbelievable adventures of Capt. Nemo and his fabled submarine, the Nautilus. September 22 of this year the "Unterseeboten, Number Nine"—or, to give it the more familiar designation it bears in the German submarine flotilla, the "U-9"—proved to the world that Verne, dreaming his thought-to-be-impossible vision, was even then pointing a prophetic finger toward one of the most dangerous engines of war in today's all-European struggle.

Early in the hostilities the submarine boat made its appearance in the present conflict, picking off unprotected and isolated ships of small tonnage. But the real significance of the deadly little "water bugs" of modern sea fights did not become apparent until that September morning when, in a light haze which spread across the grim reaches of the bleak North Sea, his Britannic Majesty's cruisers Aboukir, Hogue and Cressy lay gray-bulked against a leaden sky on patrol duty.

Something very like the shadow of a great porpoise stood toward the Aboukir. It was the German submarine, U-9. The periscope of the submersible, cutting the sluggish waves, told the German crew, safe inside her cigar-shaped skin, that the British cruiser lay, a fair mark, half a nautical mile away.

Somewhere within the cold steel bowels of the German "water bug" an "air flask" coughed and a spindle torpedo left its tube, headed unerringly upon a journey of death and destruction.

With a hole ripped to her vitals on her starboard beam, the Aboukir wallowed, stricken to the death. Her consorts closed in to stand by, the Hogue dead ahead, the Cressy about 400 yards on her port beam, both lowering boats to pick up survivors, under the mistaken belief that the wounded ship had struck a mine.

Thirty-five minutes later the Aboukir went to the bottom, to be followed at short intervals by the Hogue and the Cressy, upon which the submarine had opened fire. So within a short hour the little U-9 had cleared the waves of three of England's great fighting craft and sent down with them sixty officers and 1400 men.

And here is the message which the U-9 sent to the world through her torpedo tubes, September 22, in the gray North Sea: The submarine is the greatest offensive as well as defensive craft ever designed.

"Submersible Cruiser."

Already has a Russian naval officer perfected the plans for a "submersible cruiser" which can be lowered in the water until her decks are awash, presenting little or no target to an enemy, and rendering her gray-painted self almost invisible. A craft such as this, should it prove practical, equipped with the new "heavy oil burners"—a type of smokeless engine recently perfected—would give to the great battleships of the world a type possessing many of the advantages which now make the submarine the most dreaded form of maritime war engine.

As a matter of fact, any of the nations now at war may possess a submersible cruiser, or a giant form of submarine, for all the rest of the world may know about it. And, just as Germany produced in the trenches before doomed Liege a monster siege gun of a type never before seen, so she, or any of the other nations, may suddenly wave the wand of war and sow the waters of the seas with some hitherto unheard-of form of submarine.

This gigantic possibility in the construction of submarines has even at this early date given rise to weird rumors. It is practically certain that the U-9 sank the three British cruisers in the North Sea. She is a small torpedo boat, even as the submarines go today, and was an ideal craft for operations in the spot where the cruisers were attacked. She may or may not have been aided by other ships of her class.

Yet the report became current that the deadly work of September 22 had been done by a gigantic submarine, 400 feet over all, and armed not with torpedo tubes, but with a single eighteen-inch rifle, carrying a 2800-pound projectile propelled by the stupendous force of a 250-pound charge of Makarite, an explosive named after the ill-fated Russian submarine expert Makaroff, who went down with the cruiser Petropavlovsk, torpedoed off Port Arthur. But, needless to say, the naval experts give this report scant credence.

No superdreadnought can withstand the attack of a submarine torpedo, and the ultra battleship's only safety lies in flight. Awash, or submerged, the submarine travels invisible, and since the sinking of the Aboukir and her consorts every man aboard the thousand armored hulls of the warring navies must keep constantly before his mind the fear that without warning or sign, any minute of the day or night, cloudy or fair, he and his hundreds of sailormen brothers of war may be wiped from the face of the shifting sea at the tick of a single moment!

The United States government realized these truths in the late eighties, at a time when the British Admiralty scoffed at the idea, declaring that a submarine was but a weapon of defense for a weaker nation. But Great Britain was converted, and her first submarine was launched at Barrow-in-Furniss November 2, 1901. Today the United States has fifty-one of the craft built or building and eight, one of which is to be of the giant sea-going type, authorized, while Great Britain in January, 1914, had seventy-two built and twenty-two building.

Germany at first held an opinion akin to that of England. But in 1905 she, too, became convinced, and at the beginning of this year she had twenty-four built and twelve building.

France, the first nation to actually make a submarine—or rather, a so-called "submersible"—an engine of war, had at the same time seventy-five built and eighteen building; Japan thirteen built and two building; Russia, thirty built and twenty-five building, and Austria about eight built; so that somewhere in the seven seas today there are approximately 324 of the mosquito war vessels, each capable of doing untold damage.

The Holland Type.

It has been a far cry from the first practical torpedo boat to the present efficient submarine which is to be found in all of the first-class navies of the world. John P. Holland, an American inventor, perfected the first practical craft of this sort. Of his boat, which was tried out on the Potomac River, Admiral Dewey said: "Had the Spaniards owned two such boats, I would never have been able to take Manila."

The Holland boat, at that period embodied only the rudimentary principles as shown in the submarines of today, but in almost every modern tpye of submersible the influence of the Holland boat can be traced, although the modern submarine is a craft of some 800 tons displacement, with a surface speed of seventeen knots, and the United States is at present asking bids for the construction of a sea-going model, to be approximately of 900 tons displacement, a twenty-knot speed, and armed not only with torpedo tubes, but with rapid-fire rifles.

The submarines of Great Britain's fleet today are frankly developments of the Holland idea. That calls for a single, spindle-shaped hull—built in the shape of a giant cigar. It is made submersible by the action of horizontal rudders acting in conjunction with "ballast tanks" which may be flooded with water. These boats dive as a porpoise dives, nose first, instead of sinking with an even keel. They are driven by 1600-horse-power heavy oil engines at a surface speed of seventeen knots and are of some 1200 tons displacement.

And what Great Britain thinks today of the submarine as a weapon of offense is best set forth in the official report following the sinking of the Aboukir, the Hogue and the Cressy. The report read:

"The sinking of the Aboukir was, of course, in the ordinary hazard of patrol duty. The Hogue and the Cressy, however, were sunk because they hastened to the assistance of their consort, presenting an easy and certain target for submarine attack. Wounded ships should therefore be left to their own resources."

A Different Style.

The French and German submarines differ from the Holland type in that they use a double-hulled craft, and have departed from the spindle shape, constructing their submarines more "ship-shape." The French developed their type from the Narval submarine, designed by M. Labeuf. The German type, while adopting the double-hull feature, is known as the Krupp-Germania boat, and is the outcome of the designs of M. d'Equivelly, supplemented, it is said, by a generous piracy of American submarine ideas. The French boats are of about 830 tons displacement, and for surface travel are driven by 4000-horse-power steam turbines.

The Russian submarine is the latest type of Holland boat of about 850 tons displacement.

Even before the exploit of the U-9, Great Britain was giving considerable thought to the menace of the submarine, and in June a controversy arose between many of the foremost naval experts as to the importance of this engine in maritime war, and what steps could be taken to offset the terrible destructive possibilities of these craft.

Under conditions existing in the navies of the world today, once let a submarine get under way, sink until she is traveling "awash," or, better still, sink completely beneath the surface, and there is no known preventive to insure the safety of any above the water cruiser, torpedo boat destroyers to the contrary notwithstanding.

Hard Problems to Solve.

Ever since the invention of the submarine those seeking to improve this form of fighting craft have been held back by the necessity of solving a good many vital problems which had to be overcome.

Compared with other difficulties the problem of submergence, involving, as it did, the operation of sinking a heavy metal bulk beneath the surface and raising it at will, was accomplished with surprisingly little difficulty. To accomplish this the submarine boat of today is fitted with ballast tanks; and when the craft is traveling on the surface, or, as they term it "going light," it can be made to sink so that the decks are "awash," or about the level with the waves, by the simple expedient of flooding these tanks. If it becomes necessary to dive or to disappear entirely beneath the surface, this is done with the aid of the horizontal rudders, controlled by electric mechanism, and not by taking more water into the tanks.

The periscope solved the difficulties of learning what was going on upon the surface when the boat was submerged. The periscope is an instrument which protrudes above the surface and, through lenses, casts into the conning tower of the submarine a reflection of the sea surface. Modern periscopes have a range of sixty degrees of vision, and can be operated to sweep all degrees of the horizon.

Mice as Life Preservers.

With those problems disposed of, the inventors were face to face with a third—the question of propulsion. Various forms of gas and petrol engines were tried out. But in the case of petrol the slightest leak would make of the submarines veritable death traps. So until that question was solved it was quite usual to find half a dozen white mice among the crew of a submarine. These little animals, swung in a cage high upon an overhead beam, could instantly detect the presence of gas, resulting from a petrol leak, and would squeak a warning in time for the boat to rise to the surface. Electrical engines are used almost entirely for running submerged, and the petrol danger has been abolished by the installation of "heavy oil" engines for surface running.

But over the heads of submarine crews there still lurks one ever-present danger—the likelihood of disaster which may happen when the boat is submerged and cut off all chance of raising her. The history of submarines is filled with such instances. A score of such disasters have been recorded in the past decade.

There was the Russian Delphine, in 1904, sunk by a swell, and from whose hatches twenty-three corpses were taken.

There was the British A-1, the same year, struck by a steamship and flooded. Thirteen of her crew perished. And the

There With the Answer.

IN A PUBLIC school one afternoon the teacher was instructing a class in physiology, and finally, in order to test the memory of the youngsters, she closed the book and began to ask questions.

"Willie," said she, addressing a bright-faced boy near the head of the class, "can you give me a familiar example of the human body as it adapts itself to changed conditions?"

"Sure!" was the confident rejoinder. "My Uncle Jake gained fifty pounds in less than one year, and his skin never cracked."—[Philadelphia Telegraph.

Short.

ROGER W. BABSON, a business statistician of Boston, said to a reporter:

"This war is going to lower prices. Our market will be glutted with grain, shoes and so forth. Thus prices will come down. And they who now boost prices are as short on honesty as Stubbs was short on stature.

"Stubbs, a lawyer, was pleading in a strange court, and so short was he that when he began his opening speech the judge said to him:

" 'Stand up, please, Mr. Stubbs.'

" 'I am standing up, Your Honor.'

" 'Then stand on a chair.'

" 'Your Honor, I am standing on a chair.' "—[New York Tribune.

Speaking of Big Fishes.

THE late Justice Brewer was with a party of New York friends on a fishing trip in the Adirondacks, and around the camp fire one evening the talk naturally ran on big fish. When it came his turn the jurist began, uncertain as to how he was going to come out:

"We were fishing one time on the Grand Banks for—er—for——"

"Whales," somebody suggested.

"No," said the justice, "we were baiting with whales."—[Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Awful 'Sponsibility.

TWO women were absorbingly engaged in an intimate conversation on the street car. No wonder another woman was much interested when she overheard the following:

"Got a letter from my ol' man. Hadn't heard from him for a long time. Says he's comin' home."

"Now, ain't that too bad," said the other consolingly. "An' you got such a good start."

"Yes, I hate it. Was gettin' along so well."

"My experience was th' same. Was makin' money and livin' easy, when my ol' man come back. He set aroun' and et until my easy time was over."

Then the woman who had received the letter heaved a sigh. "It's an awful 'sponsibility on a woman, havin' a husban' at home," she said.—[Indianapolis News.

Proud of Their Capacity.

APROPOS of West Virginia's dryness, Mayor Rockwell of Pleasant Farms said:

"On account of its high summer temperature the consumption of beer in this State from June to September used to be remarkable. There were some ill-advised West Virginians who were even proud of it.

"Two such men, residents of Grafton, spent their summer vacation in New York. Their first evening in New York was devoted to roof gardening. On a cool roof garden, under the shining stars, they saw on every side well-dressed people drinking iced drinks through straws.

"This sight amused them, and, when the waiter came for their order, the older Graftonian said:

"We're from Grafton. Bring us two buckets of beer and two gas pipes.' "—[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Didn't Like the Taste.

REPRESENTATIVE WILLIAM A. ASHBROOK of Ohio received an almost tearful letter recently from a woman in his district imploring him not to send any more government seeds or bulbs into their once tranquil home. It seems that Ashbrook, not content with sending a few radish and lettuce seeds, had franked a large consignment of narcissus and tulip bulbs as nuggets of good cheer to a few of the more fortunate among his constituents.

One woman set only part of the bulbs into the ground and put the others away for future reference. Then she hired a new cook and shortly thereafter gave a dinner, a feature of which was to be a certain kind of salad containing onions. Many a thoughtful reader has doubtless guessed by now what happened—how the bitter taste of the narcissus bulbs inadvertently substituted for onions complicated the feast—and how all was woe.

"We will not care for any more government bulbs," the woman wrote to Ashbrook; "the flowers could not possibly recompense for the trouble we had over the salad."—[Fred C. Kelly.

An Indelicate Remark.

"ONE cannot be too careful in his remarks on some occasions," said a young clergyman, in speaking of a tour of inspection which he, in company with older divines, made of a penal institution.

"The leader of our little expedition, a truly good man, was so impressed by what he learned from the story of one young man imprisoned for burglary that he felt he should offer him some encouragement, of what kind he hardly knew. So, after many hems and haws, he delivered himself of the following:

" 'Ah, my friend, we must not lose sight of the fact that we are here today and gone tomorrow.'

" 'You may be, sir,' rejoined the burglar, 'but I ain't.' "—[Harper's Magazine.

THE department-store special on the College-avenue line was jammed to suffocation when it stopped at Tenth street a few mornings ago.

A good-natured woman stood in the street and as she surveyed the crowded platform a smile spread itself over her face.

That beats my flush," said the man on the bumper.

"My two pair go to the ash heap," said another.

"Say, grandfather," said the boy, "who does this machine belong to?"

"It belongs to me until you have made the last payment. That was the agreement, you know. But why do you ask?"

"Well, I just wanted to make sure," remarked the boy, with a grin. "Your motorcycle needs a new tire."—[Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

King Henry's Merry Wives.

THE English literature class of one of the schools of Los Angeles was recently requested to memorize the titles of Shakespeare's plays.

One bright boy, called upon to recite them, began with the "Henry" plays because those were the easiest for him to remember. He rattled the names off with much glibness and ease. "Henry IV, Henry V, Henry VI, Henry VIII—and—and Henry's Wives of Windsor!"

One More Duty for Mayor.

THE Mayor of an Indiana city was called by telephone when he was in the office of a friend and found at the other end of the wire a woman who in an excited voice, but an authoritative one, commanded:

"Come out to No. 93 Blank street right away, Mayor."

"What's the matter—somebody sick?" asked the Mayor, who is a physician.

"No, nobody's sick," was the reply, "but you're the Mayor, ain't you? Too Deep a Problem.

THE other day Representative A. W. Lafferty sat figuring with a pencil on a piece of paper.

"Well, it's too much for me," he remarked with a yawn after he had been at his task some few minutes. "I never was much of a hand at figures, anyhow."

"What are you trying to figure?" he was asked.

"I was trying to estimate," replied Mr. Lafferty, "how many fir trees must be cut down each year to make wood pulp to make white paper to make the pages of the Congressional Record that Jim Mann over yonder covers with language."—[Fred C. Kelly, in New York Sun.

The Married Life of Helen and Warren.

By Mabel Herbert Urner.

THEIR ENGLISH VALET.

"WHERE do you want this, ma'am?" the porter lowered the trunk from his shoulder.

"Right here behind the door." Helen moved a chair out of the way. "That small one you can put there by the dresser."

While he unstrapped the trunks, Helen got out her purse. Would a sixpence tip be enough? But at the last moment his brass buttons and gilt braid made her fumble hurriedly for a shilling.

When the door closed after him she began an eager, delighted inspection of the rooms. They were the "bachelor chambers" of an army officer now in the war. "Bedroom, living-room and bath; valet and catering," the advertisement had read.

As they were to be in London several weeks longer, Helen had rebelled at the hotel room without bath, for which they were paying an exorbitant price.

This place she had found through sheer luck—and the London Times. The furnishings were ideal. There was an air of distinction about the low bookcases, the carved sideboard and the walls hung with deer heads and foreign trophies.

To Helen it looked like the stage setting of a bachelor's room in a Pinero play, the scene where the indiscreet young wife is discovered by her husband. There was even a screen for the lady to hide behind.

"Shall I unpack Mr. Curtis's things now, madam?"

With a start Helen turned to find Leopard, the valet, beside her.

"I beg your pardon, ma'am, but if you'll give me the key to Mr. Curtis's trunk—"

Helen thought fast. Her knowledge of a valet's duties was vague, gathered mainly from what she had seen on the stage. She did not want this man to unpack Warren's trunk, but she was too much awed by him to say so.

Nervously she watched him take out the things and arrange them in the closet and chiffonier. On account of the war they had brought few clothes, and she was uncomfortably conscious that Warren's wardrobe must appear very meager to this smart English servant.

She tried to seem absorbed in her own unpacking, as with elaborate care he refolded a pair of worn, faded pajamas that she had thought Warren could wear once more before she threw them away.

Warren's soiled linen he had already carried off, while she looked on helplessly. Now he threw a suit over his arm and started off again.

"Is there anything of yours you'd like brushed, ma'am?"

"No, I think not," relieved to have him go.

But with soft-footed stealth he kept reappearing. He brought back Warren's suit, then took away his shoes. Then he came in to look after the open fire. He did not knock and Helen found herself looking nervously over her shoulder to see if he was there.

Disconcerting as was his presence, it gave her a delightful feeling of affluence. Helen's idea of luxury had always been the luxury of the English novel and play. And now that she was in something of that atmosphere she tried to "live up" to it.

Instead of unpacking in her cotton-crepe kimono, she slipped on a silk negligee. And when at 4 o'clock the valet brought her tea, she leaned back in one of the luxurious leather chairs while he served it before the fire.

It was after 6 when Warren came. She greeted him joyously.

"Hello, all settled?" as he hung up his overcoat.

"Oh, yes, dear, isn't it wonderful? I could hardly wait till you came. I'm wild about these rooms!"

"Looks like we're going to be pretty comfortable here."

"And just think—it'll not cost any more than the hotel."

"Not as much—not so many tips. How about that valet? He showed up yet?"

"Dear, he's been here every minute! He doesn't knock, and he walks so softly you can't hear him."

"Don't like him gum-shoeing around, eh?"

"Oh, yes—yes," hastily, "if I could only know when he's coming."

"Might mine the entrance hall," grinned Warren. "Hello, where'd this come from? Been having a highball?" as he took up a half-filled syphon from the sideboard.

"Oh, I found that down here." Helen opened the cupboard underneath. "The valet must have overlooked it. And these, too," taking out a box of cigarettes. "Look, they're crested and initialed."

"Huh, don't think much of a man who has his cigarettes initialed. One of those monocled, white-spatted Johnnies."

"But, dear, he does have good things. Did you notice this sideboard? And this rug," turning one up with her foot, "it's an antique Bokhara. You wouldn't think he'd rent these rooms."

"Guess he needs the coin," shrugged Warren.

"Well, the valet ought to put some of these best things away."

"Don't you worry; that agent was mighty keen about our reference. They're not taking anybody in here without knowing who they are."

"I love this lamp shade—doesn't it give a soft light? Look how it's made—just strips of Japanese embroidery. Some girl made that for him." Then musingly, "That's just what I'll get for our library."

But Warren was busy exploring the sideboard. From a lower drawer he produced a corkscrew, a shriveled lemon, some cloves and a broken spangled fan.

"Huh, a gay old codger! That valet overlooked a lot of things."

Helen was examining the fan. It still held a faint fragrance.

"Can't you picture an after-theater supper here—and she forgot her fan? Maybe that's she," glancing at a photograph in a silver frame.

"Maybe it isn't," scoffed Warren. "That imagination of yours'll get you into trouble yet." Then as he stepped into the bedroom, "Say, how about this bed? Looks mighty narrow to me."

"Why, dear, we've often slept in a three-quarter bed."

"Well, if we're going to stay here, I want a good wide bed. I'll speak to that agent tomorrow."

"But these are Col. Craigs's things. They couldn't change the bed."

"Well, if they've rented these rooms to two people, they've got to put in a bed two people can sleep on. See here, this ought to be locked." He had opened the door of a narrow closet crowded with boxes, papers and letter files. "We're not going to be responsible for all this truck. Where's that valet? How did you get him, anyway?"

"I don't know; he's been here all day. Wait, I'll try this bell. Just think, dear, when we get back we can say we've had a valet over here!"

"Not on your life!" scowled Warren, who

MOTHER.

I called you from beyond that chasm where Unembodied wait, and did prepare,
With tender hands and with a longing sweet,
The pathway for your little feet.

I watched you slipping, slipping down the years,
[illegible] apprehension, smiles and tears;
[illegible] you drifted from her, hid the pain

[illegible] a stranger—yet she sees in you
[illegible] thing that wore the tiny shoe
[illegible] before you. As you clasp her hand
Her eyes are brimming—do you understand?

[illegible] About Mother.

Not long ago I was talking to a man of [illegible] earthy—sybaritic in his feeling for all of the good things which it [illegible]. But in some way I vibrated the [illegible] chord in his nature. It is in [illegible] matter how impossible it may [illegible] will be brought forth at the [illegible]. When the angel of justic shall [illegible] the fine scales in the finalities, one [illegible] be weighted down by the con-[illegible] of this man for his mother. [illegible] consist in mere physical demonstrations, which is, alas, too often substituted for the genuine article. This man [illegible] who gave this kind of love to [illegible]. But this one made a home [illegible] mother, and saw that all of her [illegible] answered, that she had everything to make her comfortable and con-[illegible]. He further permitted this mother [illegible] infant son of a widower brother, [illegible] dying from neglect, and bring it [illegible] life and health, helping her in [illegible] he could, and supporting this [illegible] well as his mother. The other [illegible] grew to pay little heed to the [illegible] contributing nothing to her support. [illegible] this good, kind mother passed into the mystery of silence, these brothers hastened to put in an appearance, appraising the value of the household possessions. They appropriated everything of any value, even a piano about which the sentiments of the good brother clung because of associations with a dear, dead sister, who had been his closest comrade. But there was a limit to the good brother's patience, and he insisted that the others assume certain expenses in connection with the great change. They agreed; but when, some time later, there was an attempt to collect, these brothers came to the good brother in a rage, and demanded an explanation why they should be "dunned." They knew that their behavior was disgusting, and they knew that the good brother had much fineness of feeling in this matter, and depended upon this fineness of feeling to lead him to assume the responsibilities, in order to stop any discussion on the subject. There were tears in the eyes of the good brother, but he faced the scamps with scorn in his voice. "You miserable specimens!" he said quietly, "you never did your duty to our mother while she lived. You snatched away everything in the home endeared to me by sentiment, when you had no sentiment, and did not even want what you took. You can't ever square things up, but you'll pay out your dirty dollars on these bills. I dare you to repudiate them!" And he hastened to the stable, to lay his head against the neck of his little black mare, and to breathe a cleaner moral atmosphere.

A mother may not love her son better than she does her daughters, but in the secret sanctum of her heart she expects more of him. Woman is constantly comparing the man who is nearest to the ideal of manhood in her heart. She wants first of all to feel that she can depend upon him, not alone in her prosperity, but that in those darker moments, when her little feet are bewildered and know not which way to go, he will be there with firm, strong hand, to counsel, guide and help. She wants to turn to him, and to no other. Even though she be strong and wise in herself, she wants to feel that he has let her lean upon him, not for any material gain to herself, but because of the satisfaction it brings to her heart—the gratification it brings to her pride in the man. This is so whether the man be husband, brother, sweetheart or son. Why is it that men so often seem not to understand this—nay, often seem wilfully to misunderstand? Is it because to understand would lay an obligation upon them?

O son of whatever mother, when you gird on your armor, bid farewell to your boyhood and fare forth on your own responsibility, we know that you must live your life in your own way—that you must find experiences, and learn the meaning of all things for yourself. We know that you must pass through much that the mother would never understand. We know that you must settle your own life and heart problems for yourself, according to your lights and your conscience. But we pray you never let go of that golden rope of the mother's pride in you. Even though you cannot always fulfill her desire, be true to her pride by being true to the cleanest, clearest light in your own consciousness.

And when she will not believe that ill you know of yourself, treasure that loyal scepticism. If she does not always hold in her dear hand the solution of all your problems, save her as much as may be from the hurts that must come to you. Take to her your joys—not your sorrows. Of these last let her know little save what she traces with delicate touch on those lines which grief have furrowed into your face, O loyal son or daughter. Be kind—be kind; you cannot be too kind.

Do's and Don't's for "Pets."

Don't bring up your household pets in an ill-disciplined way, reserving their correction for a time when guests are present. The pets won't understand, neither will the guests. Chaos will reign; peace and pleasure will depart—so will your guests, never to return.

Be discriminating in the sort of thing you make a pet. A spoiled man pet is a horrible inconvenience in a household. Dumb brutes are less troublesome, because they cannot swear, grumble at the food, refuse to go out with you, tell you how unbecoming your hat is, and snub the visitors they don't happen to like.

Don't make such a pet of daughter that she is constantly demanding something new to wear, when she already has an abundance; tears the house upside down every few days because it doesn't suit her, and finds fault with pa's and ma's table manners.

Don't make such a pet of eldest son that when he grows up he crowds dad out of his place as head of the household and makes slaves of his mother and younger sisters.

Don't make a pet of the hired girl so that you dare not ask for anything but bacon and eggs for breakfast, nor for a clean table cloth more than once a week.

Don't make such a pet of the kiddie that he won't eat anything but salads, pickles, pies, tea, coffee and sweetmeats, and makes all of the meals pleasant with howls, upset mugs, broken dishes and coaxings.

Don't—if you must make pets of turtles, lizards, snakes and the like, take it for granted that other people like them as much as you do, and insist upon your unhappy visitor taking one of these slimy darlings in his hand. Try to confine your selection of pets to wholesome domestic beasts.

Don't compel your guest, arrayed in black broadcloth or velvet, through politeness, to let the white angora sit on her lap.

Don't let your "cute" little terrier bark at your guest throughout the visit.

Don't insist upon outsiders kissing your pet, whether it be a molasses-smeared kiddie, a cunning-mouthed kitten, or a love of a dog with floppy ears. All people may not be moved by affections similar to your own.

Don't be offended because the visitor absolutely refuses to let the dog or cat sleep on his bed. It may be absolutely true that your dog or your cat is a heap cleaner and more decent than many human beings, but if your visitor happens to be one of those particular beings it is a waste of time trying to argue this fact into him.

Poultry Culture in the Southwest—

A Plea for More and Better Poultry.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

In the Show.

SUGGESTIONS ON GROOMING BIRDS FOR COMPETITION.

THERE will be held in this State some twenty-five poultry shows during the next five months; in Oregon about half as many; and in Arizona and Nevada possibily six. Allowing for this, it is obvious that many of the Times Illustrated Weekly poultry readers will either be exhibitors or visitors to these functions. If the former, it is essential to know something of show-room conditions and the conditioning of birds for the competitive classes; if the latter, a knowledge of what constitutes a winning bird will add much to the pleasure of inspecting coops filled with choice specimens.

The first essential in selecting the birds that are to compete for show honors is to be quite sure that they are free from disqualifications. The experienced fancier and breeder is quite apt to guard against this barrier of his ambitions to win; to the novice and inexperienced disqualifications are quite apt to be overlooked in making a selection of good birds from the several pens or flocks. To such we say, study the Standard of Perfection, and carefully note the general disqualifications that apply to all varieties and breeds, and then proceed to master the special disqualifications that apply to particular breeds and varieties. Having selected the ones that are exempt, you are on reasonably safe ground to enter competition, and your exhibit will necessarily command that critical attention that sound judgment commands in making the awards.

The next step will be to place the birds in separate pens on a clean bed of chopped straw or pure sand, and the fewer to a pen the better. Males can with advantage be placed in single pens, and hens in trios or pairs. If they have been taken from free range they should be made tame by gentle treatment, and thoroughly familiarized to the presence of people and the sound of the human voice. The docile and contented bird has the advantage over one that is nervous and "skeery."

With the parti-colored birds (Barred Rocks, Silver Wyandottes, Spangled Hamburgs, etc.,) the process of washing the plumage is not necessary when a clean environment is provided. The action of clean straw, and especially clean sand, used as a dust bath, will in a few weeks produce a clean plumage. With solid colors, and especially the white sorts, washing is essential to a perfect show-room toilet, which should be done the day before they are to enter their respective show-room alleys. The plumage of solid black birds will take on an added luster if kept in a semi-dark situation for a week or ten days, and the feathers stroked the smooth way. At an earlier period broken feathers should be removed. Shanks on smooth-legged breeds should be clean and perfect, and combs free from defects.

Washing birds is no small item, and among experienced breeders is quite generally practiced even with the partly-colored breeds. It must, however, be done right, or it may lead to negative results. So experienced a fancier, breeder and judge as I. K. Felch (who has been "in the game" for fifty years) gives the following specific instructions, based on long years of practice:

"Use Pear's or Ivory soap, as soap with rosin in it will ruin all chances of a successful washing. Thoroughly soap and lather to the skin, and leave it on long enough to cut all dirt, or any gummy or adhering substance in the plumage. Then remove to a second tub of clean lukewarm water, deep enough to submerge the fowls, and by gently rubbing with a large sponge with the feathers, remove every bit of soap. Then shake the plumage in the water thoroughly, and rub it to the usual smooth condition. At last plunge in a tub of cold water that has been blued (which do not overdo,) as the housewife blues the water for the linen in her wash. By gentle manipulation of the plumage thoroughly rinse it with this blue water, and take the bird out into a wire-bottom dripping cage, allowing the specimen himself to shake the water out, and then he may be removed to either of two rooms.

"Now the best in the world is a room the floor of which is covered four inches deep with clean sand, and the atmosphere heated to 100 degrees, having been warm long enough to heat the sand to 100 degrees. Then allow the room to cool to 70 degrees at the height of a man's waist. This will cause the heat to rise from the sand, and the fowls will, with the water in the plumage, secure a steam or Turkish bath that will make the plumage spread out to its fullest extent, and be immaculately white.

"Or, put the bird in a cage with a wire bottom and cut straw that is absolutely clean, and set this cage over a register so as to heat the straw to 100 degrees in a room of 70 degrees; and in this let the bird steam dry. When washing brush the black dirt out from under the scales of the legs and toes, as one cleans one's fingernails."

Just previous to the show, head, comb, and wattles should be gently cleaned with a sponge and submitted to a little vaseline gently rubbed on.

The diet need not necessarily vary unless the specimen is short in weight. For forcing, whole corn, grit and raw beef is good, but the forcing must not be overdone, or it will lead to other complications. For a few days previous to the opening it is not a bad practice to duplicate as near as possible the show-room rations.

But be sure first of disqualifications, second that the birds have become docile and familiar with the presence of people and show-pen conditions, so that they will "show off" to the best advantage, third that their toilet is as near perfect as you can make it. These things properly accomplished, it will be a satisfaction to know that your full duty has been done, and though you may not win, it will be only quality in the other bird that beats you. And if you are a real sport, you will not want it any other way. And finally, see that your coops are clean and sanitary; that you have them properly tagged; and that the express charges are prepaid and the birds shipped in ample time to be properly cooped in the showroom before the judging takes place.

THE PLANT OF A CITY LOT FANCIER.

Poultry on a City Back Lot.

There are undoubtedly many city people who would like to have a few chickens so that they might be assured of fresh eggs and healthy table poultry, but think that they cannot for lack of room and time to properly care for them. It would be a revelation to them if they should visit the plant of H. D. Armstrong at No. 603 West Forty-first Drive, where he raises Partridge Plymouth Rocks. Four years' experience with one variety of fowls has demonstrated that close confinement is not detrimental to their health and vigor, and he has in his yards some of his original stock four years old that are in excellent condition.

If the hens and pullets did not lay well, or the eggs did not hatch well, or the chicks were weak and stunted, or the birds did not mature in a reasonable time, then one would look around for the cause, and it might be their close confinement, their food, their care, or because there has been no new blood introduced into the flock, but when one can point to a hen that has laid 100 per cent. for eight days and have sixty-six chicks hatch from sixty-six fertile eggs from five sittings at one time, or show a six months cockerel weighing 7½ pounds, or a pullet of the same age weighing 6½ pounds; it must mean that conditions cannot be radically wrong. The view shown herewith will give one an idea of the uniformity of the arrangement of the portable coops on this plant. The rear forty feet only of the lot is devoted to poultry, as a city ordinance requires that poultry coops be kept twenty feet from your neighbor's house. Most of those used here are twelve feet long and four feet wide, with wire of two-inch mesh around the sides and over the top of the uncovered portion. The perches are one by three inches, placed lengthwise in the upper part of the rear five-foot section, which is covered with roofing paper with removable panels of the same on the sides, which provide sufficient shade. The nest boxes adjoin, and directly below is the trough for dry mash and the water dish with slatted fronts. At the front of the run is fastened a galvanized iron trough suitable for wet mash when such is used. With these conv ort from Consul J. F. Boomer of Manila, dealing with the present and prospective outlook of the poultry industry in that faraway country. The consumption of eggs and poultry meat is quite as pronounced as it is elsewhere, though there are no standards covering either the product or the live stock itself.

The native chickens are small and more like bantams than the larger European and American breeds. The eggs produced are therefore much smaller than those laid by American hens. But the native hen is a good layer, and the country produces a large number of eggs in proportion to the hens kept.

In spite of the shortage of eggs in the country and the yearly necessity of importing millions of dozens, more attention is given to raising cocks than to breeding hens. The fact that no Filipino of the common class regards himself equipped for living without at least one male chicken explains why the islands, although raising so many chickens, still import eggs. As in all cock-fighting countries, the fighting bird in the Philippines is a personal pet which the owner carries about during practically every idle moment of the day and on which he lavishes enough care to raise many laying hens.

The attempts that have been made to introduce the larger American and European breeds have on the whole been but indifferently successful. Under tropical conditions the Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes, Langshans and Orpingtons, the Cornish and Dorkings seem to require greater care and are less able to endure their new environment when left to shift for themselves, as all of the native breeds have to. A desire to get an increase in the size of eggs and a better weight of carcass by trying to acclimatize these breeds has not given the results anticipated.

Fresh eggs are quite as much of a consideration in Manila as in Los Angeles, but the prices are a trifle lower, ranging from [illegible] cents per dozen. The imported eggs bring from 15 cents to 25 cents per dozen. Poultry is usually sold alive, bringing from 20 to 50 cents each, according to size. Artificial incubation and brooding is not generally practiced; neither are incubators and other poultry machinery and appliances to be had in the open market, hence they must be ordered directly from abroad. Ducks are grown to some extent and geese only in limited numbers.

Poultrymen's R.F.D. Letter Box.

Mrs. Perry H. Poor, University Place, Los Angeles, writes: "I have nine hens and twenty-two young chicks which are seemingly in a healthy condition. All in separate yards, that is, the hens by themselves and the cockerels from the pullets. On killing a cockerel some time ago I discovered, upon cleaning the gizzard, something that looked like a very thin, disappearing thing, and upon examining closely, found worms adhered to the lining and I suppose were feeding thereon. I am worried over these worms. Please enlighten me as to the cause and what is a remedy?"

Worms in fowl are of two kinds known as the round and the tape. The former is the more common, and unless in masses gives the bird but little trouble; indeed, its presence is often only discovered on dressing the carcass. It is often caused by fowl eating from the droppings of infected birds, or may be introduced by other means, as catching or eating dead mice or other animal foods. For a remedy give turpentine in the soft foods in the proportion of two to three drops for each bird. Remove the droppings frequently to prevent reinfestation.

Mrs. J. P. P., Los Angeles, writes: "I have a pullet which seemed to have a cold. I doctored her and she is all right except a rattle. I would like to know what to do for her and if it is infectious? She eats and is lively and lays."

If there is no odor your bird is still suffering from a cold; if there is a 'roupy smell,' the trouble is roup and not merely a cold. For remedy, see the Illustrated Times of October 4.

Far and Near.

Barred Rock hens at the Rosecroft poultry yards at Point Loma (San Diego) have a combined record of eggs during a period of five months, to October 4.

fifty poultry shows are already scheduled to take place on the Pacific Coast this coming winter, exclusive of those held in conjunction with agricultural fairs.

The average weekly shipments of poultry and eggs from the White Leghorn town of Petaluma average at present about 115,000 dozen of eggs and 1300 dozen poultry—all of which goes to show that the poultry business is no small affair.

The Sonoma County Poultry Producers' Federation is organized somewhat on the same lines as the Southern California Fruit Exchange, with local bodies or districts throughout the county. At the present writing there are eleven districts, all of which hold weekly meetings, and so keep in close touch with changing market and the Federation headquarters in Petaluma.

From the Santa Rosa Republican we learn that the great Plymouth poultry yards, famous throughout the State, have been sold by Mr. Freisinn to W. A. Summerhayes of Berkeley. There are now 12,000 laying hens on the ranch, which consists of about 102 acres. The ranch is located seven miles from Santa Rosa, and one of the interesting sights each week is the large wagon from the yards, carrying from fifty to 100 egg cases, with a capacity of thirty dozen each.

The poultry breeders in England are at present making a campaign against fox breeding for sport on the part of the owners of game preserves, the arguments being that foxes are vermin, and that their preservation for hunting purposes must not be at the expense and loss of poultry-keepers; and that the development of poultry-keeping is a question of national food supply, and poultry-keepers must be protected against that repression, which is even more serious than the actual loss incurred.

Scratchings

[Philadelphia Record:] The main object of the majority of those who keep poultry is the production of eggs and meat. To develop the fowl that it will have some meat on its bones is not so hard. To have the proper amount in the proper time is not so easy. To grow fowls to the standard weight in the given time, according to the breed, and then have them commence laying in the fall and winter, means careful management, and only under this kind of treatment will a flock of poultry grow, mature and shell out hen fruit during the fall and winter months. Perhaps at no time of the year must the poultry raiser exercise more judgment in handling the flock than during the fall. It is during this time that the pullets, if properly grown, are reaching full maturity and they require good care in getting them in laying condition, and then in keeping them at the work of steady egg production throughout the winter. A good start means a good egg yield, unless poorly managed after they have commenced to lay. Properly grown Leghorns should begin to lay at from five to six months of age. If they do not do this there is something wrong with the stock, or in the management of the flock. Wyandottes begin to lay at five and one-half months to six and a half from the shell. Rhode Island Reds and Plymouth Rocks a little later. The laying period is due very largely to the strain of fowls and in the care.

[Baltimore American:] In housing layers an important item is to hold down the cost of the house, and at the same time give a house that will meet the ideal requirements for high egg production. Money invested in a house that is not absolutely necessary is dead capital and brings no returns on the investment. On the other hand, the house should have certain substantial considerations or there is loss in low egg production or in the health of the flock. If $10,000 is invested in a house for 1000 hens when $2000 would have housed them just as satisfactorily, the extra $8000 is money thrown away. The price for housing future layers varies with the style of building. Two dollars per bird is the top price and 50 cents is perhaps the minimum that can ever be hoped to be attained. The ideal figure is about $1 per bird. The roof of the house should be what is known as shed type, sloping from the front to the rear. Light penetrates better in a shed type and more sunshine can get in than in any other style of house. In the winter the sunshine will reach further back in a shed-type house. Whatever dead and foul air accumulates will rise to the roof and pass out through the front. The shed type is easy to build, turns water to the rear, and the roof will last longer than any other kind.

[Chicago Herald:] We don't advise overdoing the thing. We would not keep a lot of surplus males not fit for sale or use as breeders. Don't keep a lot of drones, or deadbeats, or a lot of old hens which have outlived their usefulness. Get rid of all dead weight, but do not become unnecessarily alarmed and sacrifice a valuable flock, which is almost certain to make you good money before the next season has closed.

[New York Sun:] There is usually some field on the farm where the poultry houses can be scattered to avoid the necessity of using fences. If garden or orchard is near, one must decide whether to fence these in or the hens out. On my own farm of seventy acres I have found it best to provide the laying stock large yards, but give free range to the chickens until they are six months of age. Fences are costly, are some trouble to maintain and should be planned to save first expense and future maintenance. Most flocks in large yards, especially the heavier breeds, will be retained by a four-foot wire fence, without bottom boards. The breeding flocks may require a higher fence and some means of preventing the males from fighting, such as bottom boards or inch mesh wire at the bottom. If you breed as I do, largely from yearling and two-year-old hens, the four-foot netting is plenty high enough when you have added two feet of boards at the bottom.

[New York Herald:] The thing to do is to make the selection of the breed and variety according to your own taste for a large or small bird or for some particular color. The matter of strain then is to be considered. Be sure that you buy from some one who has a strain of known egg producing powers. If you get such eggs for hatching you are just starting even with the breeder himself. He has worked to bring his birds up to a high standard of excellence in producing powers, and you are taking him at his best. If you will act wisely in this matter there is no question that you will make good with poultry. Start right, and keep right after you have made a start.

[New York Sun:] In view of the scarcity of meat foods and their high prices, the specialists regard such a universal waste as has taken place in the poultry supply as almost a national calamity. They therefore are urging poultry packers to handle their goods along the line suggested by the department through its bulletins and through its poultry demonstration car, in order to prevent a repetition of this waste at another time. The value of poultry destroyed in New York City by the Board of Health around Christmas amounted to more than $100,000, and this, it is stated, is but little when compared with the quantities which dealers refused of their own initiative. Many tons of these products went to the fertilizer pile or crematory. The specialists are positive that not a single pound of this poultry would have been wasted if the shippers and handlers had followed proper methods of chilling, dressing, storing and handling of poultry.

Safe and Sane.

If I could learn to love a rose
  As much as I love you,
I'd save myself from many blows,
  And many heartaches, too;
For I could find another flow'r
  As pure and fair as this,
And never know the bitter hour
  That follows human bliss.

If I could find within the sea
  The sating, deep content
That comes when you are near to me
  As if from heav'n 'twere sent,
My soul could rest, for tides are true
  And murmur to the shore,
Forever sweet, forever new,
  The same songs o'er and o'er.

I'll gaze upon a shining star
  And not into your eyes;
I'll fix my heart on lights that are
  Within the steadfast skies;
For mortal love I surely know
  Means mortal frailty—
A madness that will come and go
  With no security.

Fighting Forest Fire.

a reluctance, because I realized my fond hopes of being a hero had perished. The man proved to be a time-keeper for the forest ranger, and I was to be paid for my services rendered—services that a moment before had been held priceless. I objected, and said I was working for the fun of it, but my name went down, and fond hopes with it. From that moment I was liable to arrest, imprisonment and fine if I did not carry water, and believe me, I carried water the rest of the day.

It was now almost dark, and a fire-break six feet wide had been made down the east side of the fire for over a mile ahead of the flames. The men were exhausted, and started back to camp to await the ranger and a fresh force of fighters which had been sent up by motor truck from San Bernardino. They arrived near midnight, and we left for our beds.

The first conscious thing I felt the next morning was that somebody had made a terrible mistake and had beaten the muscles of my legs for a frying process. My host was up bright and early, and actually had the courage to ask me if I wanted to start out again. I could have heaved a mountain at him, and it would have taken several such heaves to shake his unconquerable desire to save the forest from destruction. The fire was still uncontrolled and he started out—but alone.

I remembered my duty to the housewife and the peaches, and when I felt my aching muscles, it didn't take me long to decide that this duty was stronger impressed on my conscience than duty to the government. So I stayed and peeled the peaches, and after they were pared, I do not believe I ever appreciated the taste of peaches more than these.

The fire was controlled that night by the force of fighters sent up by the ranger, after having burned some 200 acres of forest. This experience took place on a Sunday, and of course we did not get a chance to go to church, but we saw hell-fire a-plenty—a powerful sermon in itself.

As a school for strategy a forest fire is an excellent subject, and as a violent exerciser to knock out a novice it is unsurpassed, but as a means for making real heroes it is strictly passe.

Plain Truths and Simple.

The Hookworm in California.

MOST people are not aware that California, like the South, pays toll to the hookworm. "A single California mine employing over 300 men is estimated to have lost 20 per cent. of the wages paid, or $20,000 a year, because it has to carry on the pay roll a large body of men to replace those periodically unable to work because of hookworm anemia," says the Journal of the American Medical Association.

A peculiarity of this disease is its gradual, insidious onset. It may take months before symptoms become pronounced; but, given time enough, the victims all succumb—become pale, puny, shiftless, and languid, unable to exert themselves, and robbed of their mental alertness as well as their vitality.

The disease is caused by little worms about one-third of an inch long which infest the intestine, where the females deposit from 1200 to 1500 eggs daily. These eggs are expelled unhatched from the intestinal tract. But when they are brought in contact with warm, moist soil, they hatch into larvae of microscopic size which cling to blades of grass, leaves, or any convenient object.

When these larvae find their way into the alimentary canal, they develop into full-fledged hookworms, set up business for themselves, and begin producing their daily quota of eggs and taking their toll of nourishment from their victims. It is this sapping of the victim's vitality that produces the symptoms.

Penalty of Going Barefoot.

Bare feet and legs are especially attractive to the hookworm larvae. They cling to the skin when brought in contact with it, and burrow through it in a few minutes, thereby producing a local inflammation which is called "ground itch," or "dew itch." This condition is transient. But meanwhile, the industrious larvae have entered the tiny capillaries and are circulating about in the blood streams. Eventually they reach the vessels in the lungs which are too small for them to pass through. So they begin burrowing again, reach the air spaces of the lungs, pass along to the throat, and eventually are swallowed and become permanent residents and egg producers in the intestinal canal.

This is their indirect method of entering the body. But frequently they get into the digestive tract by clinging to the surfaces of fruit or vegetables.

Hookworm disease is easily detected, easily prevented, and easily cured. The presence of the worms in the excreta is positive evidence of the disease. They may be prevented from entering the body by proper sewerage systems, well-cooked food, and feet protected by shoes and stockings. The disease may be cured by alternate use of Epsom salts and thymol, combined with a little judicious dieting for a day or two.

Croquet for Mental Rest.

Periods of mental relaxation are absolutely essential to brain structures. And the more complete this relaxation, the greater the renewed energy with which the mind will return to its task. Each great thinker has his own peculiar way of securing this relaxation; but a very common method is that of reverting to childish frivolities, particularly during periods of great mental stress.

Louis L. Stedman, who was with Gen. Oyama's army during the Russian-Japanese War, gives a striking illustration of this, which he witnessed during one of the strenuous campaigns in Asia, following a great council of war in which the generals had just participated.

"On leaving the council chamber, one of the strangest sights ever witnessed at the headquarters of an army presented itself. Directly in front of Marshal Oyama's personal office was a croquet ground, and there at play, like happy children, were Gens. Kodama and Fukushima and two other members of the general staff, Gens. Matsukawa and Ochi. Kodama and Matsukawa were matched against Fukushima and Ochi, and the combat was vigorous. They had named one of the posts Harbin and the other Kirinand, and fought for positions as eagerly as though on a battlefield. Every true shot at long range was greeted with shouts of applause, while if a general went wide of his mark he was called a Russian. When a ball rolled too far its owner would dance before it, making crosses on the ground with his mallet and beseeching it to stop, while the others screamed with laughter."

Everyone familiar with the working of mental machinery will understand that this croquet-ground played a part in winning battles almost as important as that of the council chamber.

Dangers From Overweight.

Everyone knows that excessive fat lessens the chances for longevity. But life insurance and hospital records show that even relatively thin layers of adipose may be disadvantageous at certain periods of life, although beneficial at others.

Thus it appears that the "best mortality" among children and young adults, to use an insurance phrasing, is found in persons who are somewhat over the accepted standards of average weight in proportion to height. After middle life, however, the slender person's chances for longevity are much better than those of his portly neighbor.

In this connection Dr. William J. Mayo recently reported that "of all the cases of gallstone disease operated on in the Mayo clinic, age for age, the patients average heavier weight than do the average patients with other diseases." In other words. fleshy persons are more likely to have gallstones than slim ones. And this disease is only one in many that threaten the overfed.

Obviously, then, it behooves every person to avoid overweight after middle life, not only for his own personal comfort, but as a means of prolonging life. This is a difficult task, which requires sustained effort and will power of a high order. But if one will persist in taking moderate exercise, and has the stamina to resist excessive quantities of sugars, fats, and starchy foods, and to refuse "second helpings" of all kinds, it can be accomplished.

The Best Foods for Infants.

Infant feeding has passed through a remarkable cycle in the last two decades. The studies of "food values," which threatened to dethrone Nature as a food manufacturer ten years ago, have established the venerable old dame on her throne again, with the comforting assurance that laboratory-made infant foods are rank pretenders in comparison with the kinds supplied by cows, chickens, and broad acres.

Dr. Henry Dwight Chapin, who has been Nature's sturdy champion for a full generation, has this to say about infant foods:

"All experiments with animals tend to show that milk, eggs, cereals and legumes, when fed in various combinations, produce the highest possible physical development, while attempts to base feeding merely on protein, fats, carbohydrates and calorie yield, are moves in the wrong direction. The most scientific foods for infants, that is, foods which will produce the best physical development, are readily prepared from milk, eggs, cereals and legumes, through simple, easily-learned methods by which their chemical integrity is but slightly altered. The most natural methods of taking these natural specialized foods apart and putting them together in attempts to improve on Nature may produce unscientific food, because an important, although small, element may be left out or put in wrong. Such methods of feeding have little to commend them.

A Dangerous Distributor of Disease.

It is a Russian physician, Prof. Verjbitski, who has recently discovered that the "retiring but ubiquitous bedbug" is responsible for the transmission of all manner of contagious diseases, among them infantile paralysis, measles, smallpox, and scarlet fever. It is seriously suggested that this insect is perhaps the most important of all agencies for the spread of epidemic diseases, particularly in the tenement regions of cities.

Unfortunately, as a recent bulletin of the United States Entomological Bureau points out, the danger from this source of infection is not confined to the tenement districts. "The physician returns from the slum case, and the lawyer from the court where bedbugs swarm; the maid takes her half-day in a tenement home, the daily paper is distributed by a tenement dweller, the hand laundry often returns from the tenement district; the vacation is spent in unfumigated summer camps, and the traveler's bag or trunk is a usual hiding-place for Cimex; men, women, and children of all social classes come in close contact in railroad stations, transit lines, theaters, schools, moving-picture entertainments, summer amusements, and public inns. Hence the possible invasion of every home."

All of which makes disagreeable reading, but is most important, because the danger of infections from this particular source has not even been suspected until recently.

Care of the Feet.

The most important elements in a soldier's equipment are his rifle and his feet. Both require constant care and attention, and since the fate of an army may depend upon the condition of its feet and its weapons, it is an unpardonable offense for a soldier to have either one or the other out of repair.

Since feet are also very useful, as well as troublesome, appendages to civilians, the rules for preventing sore feet as recommended by the Red Cross Association may not come amiss for anyone. The gist of these rules is as follows:

After washing with soap and water the feet should be dried very gently—not rubbed. They should be dabbed lightly with alcohol on cotton, except where the skin is broken. When dry, they should be dusted with a powder composed of equal parts of starch and boric powder. Reddened skin or recent blisters should be protected by strips of adhesive plaster and corns should be protected in the same manner. Toenails should be cut short. Socks should be washed often, and thoroughly dried before use.

One of the hardest tasks for the soldier (and for many, many civilians) is breaking in new shoes. Soaking with crude castor oil seems to be the most effective method, special attention to the softening being paid to the parts just above the heel, over the instep, and about the great toe.

Colic.

[Youth's Companion:] In simple colic, the patient usually moves about restlessly, and tries first one position and then another in order to gain relief. If, on the other hand, the pain is caused by some grave organic trouble, or if there is real intestinal obstruction or peritonitis, the patient can hardly keep still enough. The expression of the face is also a guide to diagnosis. The expression in simple colic may be agonized, but it is a very different thing from the pinched and anxious pallor that accompanies serious abdominal trouble.

Cheese as a Muscle Builder.

"Cheese is a bargain food, so to speak," says a recent writer; "for at 25 cents a pound it yields a much greater return than beef at 25. An ounce of cheese, roughly estimated, is equal to about two ounces of meat in fuel value, or yields nearly twice as many calories."

But this isn't the only reason why cheese is a "bargain food"—at least in certain conditions. It so happens that, while it contains all the food values possessed by meat, it lacks the so-called purin bodies (bases) which are believed to be peculiarly harmful in certain conditions, such as chronic rheumatism, hardening of the arteries (arteriosclerosis,) and some nervous diseases. Persons past middle life who are afflicted with any of these therefore, will do well to remem cheese bargain-counter in their heal keting trips.

There is an impression which be almost universal, that cheese is gestible and constipating. Exhaustiv periments have abundantly proven th impression is wrong on both counts. it seems to make very little whether the cheese is cooked or or which one of the 156 kinds of used. Cheese seems to be cheese effects, whether it happens to be the creamy kind made in the kitchen, hoary old Gorgonzola, made in—so poorly-ventilated inclosure, one judge.

The Department of Agriculture completed some investigations cheese, with the following results:

Ninety per cent. of the nitrog terial of the cheese (our Americ tory cheese was used) is digested. per cent. of the energy it supplied able. Cheese does not cause or other digestive disturbances. protein seems to be digested by ments of the intestines rather than of the stomach. Cheese does not differ in difficulty of digestion same comparative amount of meat.

A COURSE OF SYSTEMATIC EXERCISES—LESSON II.

By Edward B. Warman, A. M.

Breathing correctly is, indeed, an art, but all persons are not artists. It is natural for everybody to breathe, but everybody does not breathe naturally. Yet every natural child breathes correctly. As we go along in years breathing correctly seems to be one of the lost arts with us, and so we must go back to youth to find it.

For the protection of the teeth, throat and lungs we should breathe through the nostrils. For strengthening and keeping clear the upper air passages we should breathe through the nostrils. The primary function of the nostrils was breathing. It was never intended that we should breathe through the mouth.

I am opposed to so-called "breathing exercises"—except for an invalid—because they produce "forced" breathing (unnatural) instead of "increased" breathing (natural.) "Forced" breathing defeats the very end we have in view—the greater circulation and oxygenation of the blood by the over-distention of the air cells, thereby occluding the blood vessels, thus forcing the blood out so that the oxygen cannot reach it and the imprisoned gas cannot escape; hence the dizziness that follows "forced" respiration. This never occurs, however, with "increased" respiration—the natural result of breathing that accompanies vigorous physical exercise—an exercise such as fast walking, running, hill-climbing, etc.

When taking any form of vigorous exercise it is of the utmost importance that you know how to breathe correctly; by correctly I mean physiologically correct—diaphragmatically, not clavicularly—at the waist line, not at the chest. I shall designate these various forms of diaphragmatic breathing as abdominal (Fig. 4,) intercostal (Fig. 5,) dorsal (Fig. 6,) belt (Fig. 7.)

These are not to be confounded with "breathing exercises." They are for the purpose of educating the waist muscles to respond when so willed to do. When so trained they will always respond unconsciously while exercising in a manner [illegible] deep breathing.

Abdominal Breathing. (Fig. 4.)

Stand in a correct position—the body evenly poised. (By this time "correct position" should be almost, if not entirely, second nature, owing to previous practice.) Place the tips of the fingers, with slight pressure, just below the base of the sternum (the breastbone.) Do not incline the body backward lest you tense the muscles of the abdomen. Inhale, through the nostrils, slowly and fully, causing a strong, outward pressure against the fingers. There should be little or no movement of the sides of the abdomen and none whatever of the upper chest.

Check the movement a moment at the completion of the deep inhalation, then expel all the air possible, the pressure of the fingers following the relaxing movement of the muscles. Do this not fewer than seven times.

If you have any difficulty in getting the movement of the abdominal muscles, lie on the floor flat upon your back. Place a heavy book or other heavy object directly over the place where you pressed your fingers when standing. Raise the object placed on the body by taking a slow, deep inhalation. Check the diaphragm a moment, then slowly expel the breath.

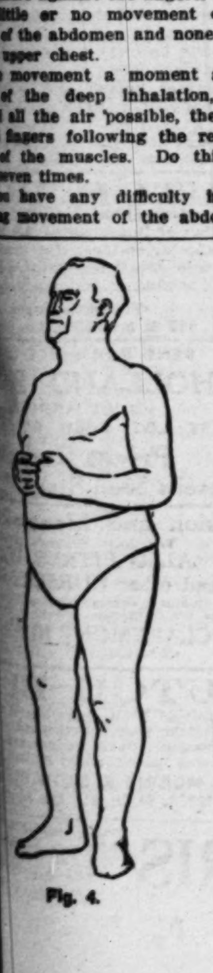

Fig. 4.

Correct abdominal breathing is a healthful and invigorating exercise; the diaphragm contracting and pressing upon the stomach and liver lying directly underneath. This movement of the diaphragm is an excellent aid to digestion and a valuable exercise for a torpid, inactive, lazy liver.

Deep, full, diaphragmatic breathing is essentially a health qualification. The diaphragm is one of the strongest muscles in the body, especially when used in conjunction with the waist muscles. It extends through the body from side to side (attached to the ribs) and from front to back (attached to the breastbone (ensiform cartilage in front, and along the sides of the lower part of the spinal column in the back. It arches in the center and separates the chest cavity from the abdominal cavity. It forms, as it were, a floor to the lungs and a roof to the abdomen—the lungs and heart above; the stomach, liver, etc., beneath.

Intercostal Breathing (Fig. 5.)

Correct standing position. Place the back of the fingers against the lower ribs. While pressing the hands firmly against the ribs, inhale slowly and fully through the nostrils, causing a strong outward pressure, sidewise, against the fingers. Check the movement of the diaphragm and waist muscles a moment when the fullest expansion has been obtained, then relax, slowly expelling the air, the pressure of the hands following the receding movement. There should be little or no movement forward and none whatever of the upper chest. Each exhalation should be as complete as possible in order that the inhalation following may also be complete. Do this not fewer than seven times.

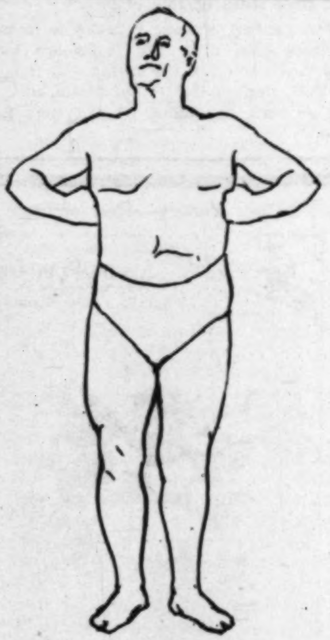

Fig. 5.

Dorsal Breathing (Fig. 6.)

Correct standing position. Place the hands to the small of the back, pressing the thumbs very firmly on each side of the spinal column. Inhale slowly and deeply through the nostrils. The instant you begin inhaling you should feel a strong outward pressure against the thumbs. When the inhalation is complete, check the diaphragm a moment, then slowly exhale until all the air possible has been expelled. The thumbs should be kept in place and should follow the receding of the muscles, ready to repeat the movement. Do this not fewer than seven times.

In each of these movements the hands should remain in the position placed until finishing the count.

Belt Breathing (Fig. 7.)

Correct standing position. Place the hands so as to span as much of the waist as possible. Draw around you an imaginary elastic belt. Inhale deeply and slowly through the nostrils, gradually expanding the entire waist on all sides—abdominal, intercostal and dorsal—as though trying to burst the imaginary belt. Check the diaphragm a moment, then exhale slowly and completely, the hands following the relaxing of the muscles. Do this not fewer than seven times.

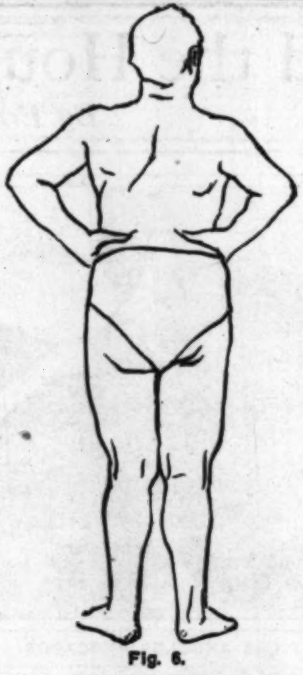

Fig. 6.

In one week's time you should have so perfected these three forms of breathing, and the three in one (belt,) that you can safely forget them and let nature do the rest. Having trained each set separately, when you begin the exercises that compel deep breathing, the training, if thorough and sufficient, will manifest itself and thus relieve you of any effort or even thought as to your breathing.

I want to impress this thought thus early in the lessons; viz., no one does anything well until he is able to forget the means whereby he learned; also that there is a period of conscious application (ofttimes called drudgery) through which every artist must pass. The line between the conscious doing of a thing and the unconscious doing is the line of demarcation between the novice and the artist.

Strange Businesses.

In certain parts of England $5 a hundredweight is paid for green snail shells. They are used for inlaid work by furniture makers and are also turned into buttons.

A great many of the so-called pearl buttons we wear on our clothes are made from certain mussels. The mussel shells upon reaching the button factories are sawed into rough blanks, and then turned on a small lathe to the proper shape of the buttons, including the depression in the center. After this two or four holes are bored for the thread. The buttons are polished by means of a chemical fluid.

Proper Precaution.

In sizing up men, remember empty vessels make most sound.

How to Drink.

Laws which forbid people to eat when they are drinking are not in the interest of health. Liquor taken on an empty stomach does more harm. The tendency of our liquor legislation is to drive people to gulp raw spirits in a standing position, instead of sitting down and sipping a glass of beer with a sandwich.

The Fat of the Land.

You should go slow on oils and fats of all kinds, especially in a warm climate like this. They should only be used freely around the North Pole. Ripe olives are much better than olive oil, just as grapes are better than grape juice, and sugar cane is better than cane sugar. In nuts you get plenty of oil, and corn contains a considerable amount. Fat over-burdens the liver.

No Evidence of Insanity.

A man was recently captured in San Bernardino and removed to the County Hospital for examination as to his sanity. The newspaper reports stated that "he shows a mania for living out in the woods, and an aversion to human beings, except when he is hungry." I do not regard this as an evidence of insanity, although I should not care to eat human beings, even when I was hungry.

Falsely-Called Tonics.

To correct an enervated, or weak condition of the system, the doctors prescribe "tonics," or "good nourishing food," utterly regardless of the fact that when patients are in this condition their digestive powers are below par, and cannot handle the food given to them. The proper thing is gradually to increase the digestive powers while feeding moderately foods rich in the organic salts, as fresh fruits and green leaves.

The End of the World.

The end of the world will come when our sun cools off and takes its place among the dark stars, unless some wandering orb collides with it and smashes it into vapor, to undergo, during billions of years, the stages of evolution that have built up our solar system. It is true that such a collision might occur before the sun cools off, but it will certainly have no connection with a little squabble between crowned puppets on this speck we call earth, as small and insignificant, when compared with the universe, as a mote in the vault of a cathedral dome.

By Ernest Braunton.

San Diego Parks.

WONDERFUL DEVELOPMENT IN TWO YEARS PAST.

BALBOA PARK, in San Diego, has in the lapse of two years undergone the greatest development that has ever come to a tract of equal area in the State of California. Of that part of it occupied by the Panama-California Exposition much was expected, and under the masterful hand of Director of Works Frank P. Allen, Jr., it has developed even beyond the most sanguine expectations. But the exposition officials are good boosters, and need no aid or exploitation of their enterprise from the City Beautiful man. It is the people's public park in which our readers are interested, though all landscape work and much of the architecture of the exposition will, after 1915, be permanent attractions and conveniences of the greater Balboa Park.

The writer of these lines recently spent a week in and about San Diego and made several trips through Balboa Park both with and without the guidance of the superintendent, the magic of whose mind and hand has so quickly made "the desert to blossom as the rose" and undergo a transformation and development little less than wonderful. Two years ago the present site of the park was remarkable for but one thing—the wonderful views to be obtained from its upper heights. The general topography is ideal, hills and valleys succeeding each other in endless and charming perspective. Charming, indeed, it would have been except for lack of vegetation, and a truly marvelous climate would willingly have covered all with a protective and beautifying mantle of green had nature provided the necessary medium so necessary to luxuriance of vegetation—soil. But soil there was none, and the hills and valleys remained bare and cold until 1913.

The San Diego Park Commission realized the need of "the man and the hour." The "hour" arrived when the citizens voted bonds for $6,000,000 to be expended for exposition and park purposes and to be disbursed by the park commission. The "man" was found in the person of John G. Morley, for seven years superintendent of the parks of Los Angeles. Mr. Morley's first report stated he had no soil to "park" with and that many tons of dynamite would be necessary, involving the blowing out of a hole for every tree planted. The commission responded: "Go ahead, we will furnish what Pat called 'diameter' to the extent of your needs." Since then tens of thousands of holes have been blasted in the barren and refractory sandstone, good soil filled in, and as many thousands of trees planted. Today these hills and vales show the most marvelous transformation, time considered, that has ever taken place in the United States, rivalling in importance and sufficiency of results the reclamation of the shifting sand dunes where now is California's finest public park, Golden Gate, in San Francisco.

There are practical lessons to be learned from this work of soil reclamation and subsequent park development and some of these may be given our readers in the near future. The California Association of Nurserymen asked Mr. Morley to address them on "Treating Refractory Soils With Dynamite," extracts from which will be given in these columns for the benefit of owners of soils more or less refractory. Park commissioners may note that they should procure the right man and without undue interference sustain him in his work. They should no more presume to dictate the technique of the work than would a board of hospital trustees suggest to the chief surgeon how he should perform an operation. The people may learn from these splendid accomplishments that liberal appropriations are needed if we are to have parks worthy the name. Los Angeles should give far more liberal support to our local parks than has yet been given, and until we do this no great amount of adverse criticism may properly be launched against our park officials. We need a marked advance in salary of superintendent and a more liberal annual appropriation for maintenance. For future development nothing short of a liberal bond issue will prove adequate to our needs, and this our interested citizens should demand

LOS ANGELES AVOCADOS.

The Avocado.

WE SHALL assume that the avocado has come to stay, for it is not supposable that a delicious fruit of the highest food value, which is found to flourish over a wide range of territory in this State, will be other than increasingly and extensively planted, for aside from its economic value the tree is a highly ornamental evergreen. Some, it is true, confess to but a slight appreciation of the avocado upon first tasting it. This is due in many cases to the fact that the specimen sampled has not been in a proper state of maturity or properly served. The real enthusiasts come from the tropics, where it has been possible to gain a thorough familiarity with the fruit. But even in the case of indifference at the first trial, the liking grows with further acquaintance so that it is a fair assertion to say that practically everyone who has had an opportunity to do so, acquires a liking which would enable him to eat avocados with keen enjoyment the year round.

In Southern California, from Santa Barbara southward, fruiting avocado trees ranging in age from three to thirty years are to be found in quite large numbers. These afford a practical and acceptable demonstration of the adaptability of the tree to this climate and soil, and of its fruitful character. It is not now a question as to whether we shall plant the avocado, it is only a question as to how rapidly the planting of good varieties may be proceeded with. This fact alone will determine the future development of the industry. As to food value, it is not stating the matter too strongly to say that it takes first rank among the wonderful and varied fruit productions of Southern California. As a boon to vegetarians it will assume a position of great importance. As a nourishing and sympathetic food for the invalid stomach it will always be in demand. As a substantial part of the morning, noon or evening meal of the working man, it needs only to be placed within his reach as to price. Given for breakfast two good slices of bread and an avocado of pound weight, he can split rails, dig holes or mix concrete for as many hours per day as the law allows. As an ornamental having as well an economic value, the avocado tree has already gained an enviable place in public favor.

Trimming Fruit Trees.

A LOCAL garden owner wishes to know when to trim or prune peach, apricot and fruit trees of this class.

The general orchard practice is to prune apricots soon after the fruits are picked and peach trees in the spring, but it is just as well, perhaps better, to prune both during autumn, in August or any time thereafter.

FOR THE BEDROOM.

Boy's Laundry Bag.

[Washington Star:] A good laundry bag for a boy's bedroom is made of heavy crash over a smooth coat hanger. The wire slips through an eyelet in the top and hangs easily on a hook. An opening is left in the center through which soiled linen may be inserted. A bag of white canvas makes an excellent laundry bag for a boy's room. It is strong and washable.

The Small Room.

To make the most of a hall bedroom have a folding bed and cabinet washstand which, when closed, makes a suitable table. A small covered box, if softly padded, will make a good window seat, in addition to being a convenient article for holding shirt waists. A folding chair may be kept under the bed, to be brought forth as needed Never hang large pictures in a hall bedroom.

CARE OF EYEGLASSES.

The Frequent Bath.

[Christian Science Monitor:] Do you ever give your eyeglasses a bath? If not, give them a surprise and see how you like the result.

Especially in summer, when dampness and dust form a gummy combination on the eyelashes, the wearer of glasses or spectacles will find his vision, apparently, much improved by giving them a thorough washing daily with soap and warm water, followed by drying and polishing with tissue paper. The gummy substance which collects on the lenses in hot weather cannot be removed by a mere rubbing with chamois or tissue paper, and the more humid the day the more necessary becomes the eyeglass bath.

Alcohol as Cleanser.

An oculist, who knows the importance of well-washed lenses, carried in his pocket a vial of alcohol. It takes but a moment to moisten the corner of a handkerchief and remove the combination of dust and moisture from his glasses. Another business man has the case of his glasses interlined with a folded bit of soft tissue, such as is used for copying letters in offices. This is so soft that it is easily folded into the small space of the spectacle case. No dust collects on this as it does on the velvet lining, and the tissue interlining is renewed every day or two.

NEEDLE NOTES.

The Handy Pillow.

[New York Sun:] The material may be linen, embroidered in any desired pattern; cretonne, ratine or other washable material. One yard of goods thirty-six inches wide is required. When the bag is completed and folded together the dimensions should be 14x18 inches.

Cut the cloth into an oblong strip 18x30 inches and place a pocket 14 inches deep across one end to be used for holding a pillow, which may be made one inch smaller than the pocket. Another pocket of the same size on the opposite end is stitched in the center, making two smaller pockets, one for a book or magazine, the other for writing materials. Small pockets for holding needle-books, pins, hairpins, thread, scissors, etc., may be placed on these large pockets.

Useful for Traveling.

When the bag is folded together these small pockets will be on the inside between the pillow and the books. All of the pockets may be closed with strong snap fasteners and several fasteners also should be placed at the ends of the bag to keep it securely closed and two handles may be added as an assistance in carrying.

The advantages of this bag will be greatly appreciated by a traveler, as it answers for a rest for the head or back as well as a bag, and it is a present that anyone starting on a journey would be glad to receive. The construction may be as elaborate as the taste or the pocketbook of the maker of it will permit, but it should be made strong, as its purpose is usefulness.

KINKS IN THE KITCHEN.

The Floor Covering.

[Indianapolis News:] If kitchens could be made just what they should be, there would be less trouble throughout the entire house. Kitchen conveniences do not necessarily consist of the countless little labor-saving articles each woman accumulates in her house. They mean more than that, for the walls, floors, sink and closet or pantry have much to do with lessening household drudgery. The ideal floor may be either hardwood, tile or covered with linoleum and provided with rugs.

If a kitchen is not warm in winter, and there are little children in the house, then, and only then, should floors be carpeted with wool. Place heavy paper under the carpet, have linoleum or oilcloth at the sink, and zinc under the range. Linoleum in mosaic patterns, or even the hardwood designs, is desirable.

Unfermented Grape Juice.

Wash some Concord grapes thoroughly, using cold water, then weigh them, and allow three-quarters of a quart of cold water to every five pounds of grapes. Boil until the pulp and skins have separated and boiled down. Make a bag of double cheesecloth, large enough to hold the quantity of juice that would fill a small bread pan. Tie the top tightly with stout cord and suspend it from a strong nail, or hook, in such a position that the juice may drip into the the pan. Start it dripping early in the evening. In that way it can drip all night and be ready for bottling the next day. When all the juice has passed through the cheesecloth add one pound of sugar to every five pounds of grapes, and boil for about two minutes. Then take good-sized bottles with tight-fitting corks and heat them gradually in hot water before filling them with the grape juice. Cork them, seal with paraffin wax and keep in a cool place.

CLEANSING MATTERS.

Neutral Remover.

[Washington Herald:] A half-pint of neutral remover to a pail of water will clean badly marked porcelain bathtubs, tiled floors and similar surfaces. It may be used also to soften putty around windows when it has hardened so much that it almost tears out the frames, at the time that a new piece of glass is inserted. Spots from clothing, hats, gloves and carpets quickly disappear with its use. A paint brush that is clogged with old paint can be softened and restored. Printers and lithographers have found it invaluable in cleaning type, presses and lithographic stones.

For Cleaning Brass.

An ounce of alum, put in a pint of boiling water and allowed to cool, and bottled for use at any time, will remove all stains and tarnish from brass and will not injure the skin on the hands or the metal itself. It only requires to be rubbed on the surface and wiped off.

[Truth:] Little Boy: Ma wants a 5-cent cake o' soap, an' she sez you please wrap it up in a good love story."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

[Chicago Herald:] A mucilage which holds with surprising tenacity can be made by boiling a Spanish onion for a short time and then pressing the juice from it.

The inhabitants of French Switzerland and Savoy rub a crushed clove of garlic upon a spot that has been stung by a wasp or a bee. According to Prof. Mermoid of Lausanne, this makes the swelling go down and takes away the pain.

To improve the top crust of a pie brush with milk and shake a little granulated sugar over it. The same is good for rolls of any kind.

A good household deodorizer is a little pan of cloves which have been sprinkled with oil of lavender. Put on the top of the stove or over a gas jet and the fumes will soon penetrate the house, seeming like the odor of the carnation.

After the dust bin has been cleared, burn a couple of newspapers and, if available, a couple of handfuls of straw in it. This will remove grease and damp and make the dust bin clean and sanitary.

Screw-eyes placed in the tops of handles of brooms, brushes and mops, so that they may be hung on hooks in a closet, will allow a neater arrangement of cleaning utensils.

HEARTSEASE.

Happiness Not Puchaseable.

[Caryl B. Storrs in Minneapolis Tribune:] "Real and simple things are so much more healthful and interesting than unreal, perverted things; and the happenings of actual life in field, wood and home are so much more thrillingly true than any which the brain of the novelist, playwright or spinner of fairy tales can invent or depict, that humanity is trading a joyous birthright for a sorry mess of pottage by believing the opposite and regulating its actions accordingly. A serious human error is the prevalent belief that happiness is a purchaseable commodity and that the only way to have a good time is to spend money to secure it from someone who has it to sell."

The Click o' the Latch.

The silence holds for it, taut and true;
  The young moon stays for it, wistful white;
Winds that whimpered the sunset through
  Sigh for it, low and light.

Click o' the latch, and he'll come home—
  A stir in the dusk at the little gate,
Hush, my heart, and be still, my heart—
  Surely it's sweet to wait!

The tall skies lean for it, listening—
  Never a star but lends an ear—
The passionate porch flowers stoop and cling,
  Parting their leaves to hear.

Click o' the latch, and him come home-
  A step on the flags, a snatch of song,
Hurry, my heart, be swift, my heart—
  How did we wait so long!

By Way of a Motorcycle, By Emma Younglove.

THE INNOCENTS.

JOHN GREYSON had been obsessed by a fear that his new motorcycle would break down, though that very week he had come to Sespe upon it from his home in Arizona. But he desired with passionate earnestness that nothing should go amiss on this day. He had with difficulty persuaded his sweetheart to forego a wedding at her cousin's home. Because he was a deaf mute he had shrunk from sharing festivities with those who were gifted with speech. Verna, his Verna, was braver than he in this respect, but at length she had yielded to his wishes. She had also consented, though still more reluctantly, to ride with him to the county seat, where they would obtain a license and then be quietly married at the parsonage.

The motorcycle had not failed, but the suspicion was dawning upon him that he himself had gone astray—that he had taken the wrong road—when, he did not know. It seemed unbelievable, but certainly the country did not look as he thought it should. He was impatient at the idea of delay and then—what would Verna think if she learned that he was taking her out of the way?

Not willing that the unwelcome knowledge should cloud the joy of his beloved until it was necessary, he turned, and, by a nod called Verna's attention to a mass of poppies on the hillside. She moved the hand on his shoulder in an appreciative caress.

The very air was delirious with joy. The sky was blue and flawless, the fields were green, and the hillsides glowed with the soft-hued yellow mustard, while here and there the deeper tints of California's flowers enriched their brightness with pure gold.

Soon John began to slacken speed. Slowly and more slowly he went. Presently the hand upon his shoulder moved in a gentle, unsteady fashion. Evidently Verna was questioning the meaning of this delay. He turned his head and smiled reassuringly.

On he drove until he reached the entrance to a ranch. He turned in. Under the shade of a tree which screened them from the house he stopped. They dismounted. He pointed up and down the road with a puzzled expression in his somber gray eyes and shook his head. Then he swiftly wrote on his tablet, "I am deaf and dumb," and made a feint of pinning the tablet as a placard upon his chest, gazed at it with a look of disgust and another shake of the head, after which, without hesitation, he went up the steps and rapped at the door. A woman opened it a little. Through the crack he saw her thin, narrow face wearing a meat-ax expression.

He stretched toward her his tablet, upon which he had written the message so obnoxious to him. He had added "Please direct me to the city." But the woman repulsed the tablet, unread, he saw her lips move to form the words, "I have not anything for you," and the door was immediately closed. A deep flush spread over his face and mounted to the roots of his disheveled hair. His chin settled on his breast, and the corners of his mouth drooped. He started down the steps, turned and shook his fist threateningly at the inhospitable door.

As soon as Verna caught a glimpse of him her cheek took a fiery hue. She stamped her foot and shook her fist at the house, invisible to her.

How he delighted in her quick, passionate sympathy!

They at once remounted and rode forth. In a few minutes a rancher's team approached. John stopped and awaited its coming. He stepped toward it and held up his hand. The driver halted. John handed him the tablet and was rewarded by having it returned to him containing the reply: "You are not on the right road. You should have turned to the left three miles back. Go on now about half a mile, turn to the left, and, after going a mile and a half, you will come to the forks, where is a watering trough. Turn to the right and you will be on the direct road to the city."

With a written "Thank you" and a bow, the motorcyclist started on. John had no difficulty in finding the way, but the crossroad was so sandy that he and Verna were obliged to walk most of the mile and a half.

In spite of the deep sand and in spite of his chagrin, the lover alternated between delight in being alone with his loved one and anticipations in which joy struggled fiercely with apprehension. The brightness of the springtime was in the girl's heart. She called John's attention to a song sparrow, which hopped from the ground to a low weed, from that to a barbed wire, thence to a taller weed, and at last up to the top of a fence post, where it threw back its little head, while its throat swelled with the melody they could almost see, though they could not hear. John plucked one of the tiny baby-blue-eyes from the wayside and held it up to Verna's face, mischievously looking from the flower to the eyes of his sweetheart, and then throwing the blossom away with an emphatic shake of the head. He was rewarded by seeing the blue of her eyes deepen to violet and the rose of her cheek to rich damask. He adored the brilliancy of her coloring, the smile which burst over her face at the slightest instigation, and, above all, the swift and volatile changes incident to her vivacious temperament.

Yet they did not loiter in their play, but trudged steadily along through the heavy sand. When they reached the main road, however, John was dismayed to note how far spent was the afternoon.

He advanced the spark lever, hoping partially to make up for the time lost. After their long walk the exhilaration of the swift motion was refreshing as they darted along like a swallow, down a lonely stretch of road with orchards on both sides. No person was in sight, nor was any dwelling. Suddenly, without warning, a man stepped from behind a tree at the roadside and signaled them to stop. He was a muscular man of middle age and he wore no mask—so much they had time to note, and no more. Amazed and horrified at being waylaid by a robber in the daytime, on a frequented thoroughfare, John swerve ly and rode furiously past. But a

"JEREMIAH GREER."

As was to be expected under the circumstances, the snapshot did not amount to much, principally, I think, because the exposure must have been made when the canyon was in shadow. The bear had pressed the camera wire, and then pushed right on against that of the shotgun. The camera had snapped and then been pulled over by the drag on the wire. Then the gun had got in its work, and several of the buckshot must have struck the bear's leg, disabling him sufficiently to allow his easy capture, as described by Greer.

In a subsequent talk with Stokes, the man who had bought the bear, I learned that he had, not without difficulty, brought the animal to Jerome. There it recovered the use of its wounded leg, grew at a surprising rate, and was finally sold at a good round figure to the zoo of Lincoln Park, Chicago.

Now as regards the length of a bear's memory: While in Chicago the following summer it occurred to me that it would be interesting to look up the animal for whose capture my trap had, primarily, been responsible, but which, nevertheless, I had never seen.

"Is the Arizona grizzly here?" echoed a keeper in answer to my question. "Oh, yes; very much so. Come along with me."

"He's a pretty bad one," he continued as we walked. "Gila (they named him that because one of the park commissioners said it was an Arizona name) don't make steady trouble, but he gets fearful tantrums now and then; flies at the bars and grabs at people for no cause at all that we can see. So at last we put in the flower bed and railing, so that no one can get within his reach, even if they wanted to."

I told the keeper something of the animal's early Arizona history, and he said that he had heard that bear had been wounded when they captured him, and that possibly this had something to do with his uncertain temper.

"You want to take his picture, do you? All right; step inside the rail. It's against the park regulations, but I'll look the other way. There he is now, sunning himself; one of the biggest grizzlies in captivity. Weighs close to 2000 pounds." Turning to answer a question of a woman beyond the railing, I was left alone in the snapdragon bed by the cage.

Gila was lying on his back, with all four paws stuck straight up in the air, giving the sun full play on his round, hairy paunch. Now and then he bit at a fly, opening his jaws to their full width and bringing them together again with the ping of a wolf trap. I called him by name, and asked him if he had any recollection of anything which had occurred in Live Oak Creek, Arizona. He evinced not even a polite show of interest in my inquiry. I threw him a peanut and he snapped at a fly. So with a second, and a third. Then I called him names—not "Gila," but names with descriptive adjectives before them—told him, in short, just what I thought of him. Not a quiver of an eyelash greeted it all, not a sign of quickening conscience. Snap! and another fly was captured. The play of the great jaws fascinated me. I wondered if I could get a picture of those gleaming rows of ivories in one of their momentary flashes. I decided to try.

Unslinging my camera, I hastily ran it out to short focus, and cautiously poked the lens through the bars, bending all the time over the finder. Now the image of the head showed clear and sharp, and I waited, bulb in hand, ready to snap the shutter as "Gila" snapped a fly. I saw, in the finder, his beady eyes roll back and turn for an instant in my direction. "He's tired of flies," I said to myself. "I'll probably not get my snap after all." Behind, I heard the woman ask the keeper how many lions a bear like "Gila" could whip at once, and he began to answer her, soberly and at length.

Then, suddenly, the image in my finder became a blur, and I was conscious of a rush and a roar before being thrown back with terrific force against the railing. I came to a few moments later with my head on the keeper's knee. He was fanning me with his hat, and a policeman was doing a like service for the inquisitive woman, who appeared to have fainted. People were running from all parts of the ground, which was hardly to be wondered at under the circumstances.

Bellowing and roaring like a Titan in torment, "Gila" had climbed almost to the top of his cage, and with all the power of his mighty strength was straining at the bars. Several of the latter bulged out a foot where he had struck when he first sprang at me, and one was torn from its socket in the cement.

I retained the camera in my hand through it all, but modified my desire a bit regarding the kind of a photograph that I wanted. Standing back a good twenty feet, I snapped the roaring monster as he raged against the bars. The sight of the camera seemed to stir his rage anew, for the roars burst forth with redoubled fury, and he renewed his attack upon the unyielding bars. Then I remembered. It was the same camera that had stood beside the shot gun beneath the sycamores in the Arizona canyon the day that "Gila" received the wound which had delivered him, bleeding and helpless, into the hands of man, and he probably laid all the blame upon the black devil with the red nose and the shining eye in the end of it.

I told the keeper what I thought might have been the cause of "Gila's" tantrums, and that is the reason why, when I visited the zoo a week afterward, I found this hastily-scrawled sign upon one of the bear cages:

The Call of the Wild.

I know a place where the fern is deep,
And the giant fir waves high,
And a rocky ledge hangs dark and steep,
And a laughing brook leaps by.
And it's there to be with a soul that's free
From the street's discordant jar,
With a blanket spread on a cedar bed,
And the voice of the world afar.

I know of a pool in a leafy dell
That the wary trout love best,
And a timid trail to the chaparral
Where the red deer lie at rest.
A night bird's call when the shadows fall
And a cougar's eerie cry,
A silence deep, and a dreamless sleep
Under the open sky.

The Way of a Woman.

The way of a woman is God's own way
Of making a beautiful thing of life;
Of healing the hurt of the toiling day,
Of lifting with love the shadows of strife;
Of reaching our sorrow and cark and care
With the inner sweet of her perfect soul;
Of giving us courage to trust and to bear,
Of helping us grow to the life that's whole.

The way of a woman is God's own creed
Of patience and sweetness through all that comes;
The grief and the sorrow, the cross and the deed,
The trumpet's call or the roll of drums;
Of making us better that she is near,
Of keeping us better that she hath borne
The gift of the aching heart and the tear,
The grace of the glory of golden morn.

The way of a woman is God's own law
That unto the lives around her feet
Her love shall lift us to holy awe
And make us better, and true, and sweet;
And make us wiser than merely wise,
And make us stronger than merely strong,
To struggle and strive for the peace that lies
In the rest that floats from the wings of song.

HUMOR.

[Judge:] Mrs. Tittle: Why do you think of moving?

Mrs. Tattle: I might just as well. I've found out all there is to know about my neighbors.

[Musical Course:] "I'd like to rent your hall, please."

"What for?"

"Well, you see, we're organizing a fraternal society called the Sons of Moving-picture Veterans of the Mexican War."

[Kansas City Journal:] "She loves her husband."

"But why is she so furtive about it?"

"You can't blame her for that. It might injure her standing in society if it got out.

[Pittsburgh Post:] "My wife is going through some army maneuvers with her last year's hat."

"What d'ye mean, army maneuvers?"

"Well, she's turning the wings."

[Louisville Courier Journal:] "Where are you going with those garden implements?"

"I don't want 'em any more. Shall try to pawn 'em."

"I see. Going to hang up the shovel and the hoe."

[Cincinnati Inquirer:] The man put his hand in the horse's mouth to see how many teeth the horse had.

The horse closed his mouth to see how many fingers the man had.

The curiosity of both was satisfied.

[Seattle Post-Intelligencer:] "Saw a local Sir Walter Raleigh today."

"Did he spread out his cloak to save some lady's footgear from the mud?"

"No; he spread out a newspaper."

[Philadelphia Ledger:] City Girl: How savagely that bull looks at me!

Farmer: It's your red parasol, miss.

City Girl: I knew it was a little out of style, but I didn't think a bull would notice it.

[Le Figaro:] "How do you like your new music master?"

"He is a very nice, polite young man. When I made a mistake yesterday he said: 'Pray, mademoiselle, why do you take so much pains to improve upon Beethoven?'"

[Stanford Chaparral:] Hi: What course is Sarah studying at the boarding-school?

Si: I can't remember, but I think it's cosmetics.

[Paris Le Sourire:] "Why does she always play 'Last Thoughts of Weber?'"

"I guess because she is sure that this Mr. Weber cannot object."

[Paris Le Rire:] "It's no use insisting, gentlemen. I will not sing. The doctor has forbidden it."

"Why? He lives in this house, then?"

[Washington Star:] "You say your wife never loses at bridge?"

"Never. If the game goes her way, she wins. But if it goes against her, I lose."

[Munich Fliegende Blaetter:] "Do you believe the Countess' pearls are genuine?"

"I don't quite know; but I guess of all things about her they are most genuine."

loathed any form of pretense. "Any blowing about this valet business—we'll can right now!"

Helen flushed. "Well, Mrs. Stevens is always talking about the way they travel, and the wonderful rooms they have. I'd like her to know—"

"Mrs. Stevens can blow all she wants to. But don't let me hear you—"

"Did you ring, sir?" Leopard stood in the door.

"Yes, you'd better lock up this closet. We can't be responsible for all these things."

"Yes, sir, the key's been mislaid, but I'll have one fitted, sir."

"Well, see to it tomorrow."

"Yes, sir; thank you, sir. What time shall I draw your bath, sir?"

"That's all right; I'll draw my own bath. You can serve our breakfast at 8:30 sharp. And order me the Times. That's all."

"Thank you, sir." At the door he hesitated. "I—I don't find any boot trees in your trunk, sir. Perhaps you left them at the hotel, sir."

Breathlessly Helen waited for Warren's answer. It came crisp and curt.

"Never had a pair of boot-trees in my life."

"I—I beg your pardon, sir," and Leopard departed precipitately.

"Oh, what made you say that?" gasped Helen.

"What'd you want me to say—that 'my man in New York left them out?'" mockingly.

"Of course not, but he needn't know—"

"Know what? That I'm not apeing any of these bounders over here? Jove, you love pretense! Fairly wallow in it—don't you? Want everybody to think we've a pile of money, eh?"

"Warren, I don't," Helen flushed painfully. "You know I don't."

"Huh, I know you make things out a whole lot different from what they are. Both times we've been over here it's been on business—and on the cheap, too. You're a darn sight more careful of the coin than I am. Yet to hear you talk, anybody'd think we came abroad every year for our health, and spent money like water."

"That isn't true," indignantly. "You can't tell me one thing I ever said—"

"I can't, eh? How about that hot air you always get off about buying your clothes 'abroad?' And we never have anybody to dinner that you don't manage to ring in something about getting our China in England. And all you ever bought over here was six teacups!"

"But, Warren—" began Helen feebly, the color flaming her face.

"I've stood for that, but I'll be hanged if I'll stand for any talk about 'our valet.' The first time you put on that company air of yours and spiel off something about 'the valet Mr. Curtis had in London'—well, there'll be trouble. Now just remember that!"

FACTS PERTINENT TO THE AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY

Owing to its equable climate, Los Angeles is the one city in the United States in which automobiles are used every day in the year. As a result, there are more automobiles owned and more automobile accessories sold in Los Angeles than in any other city of equal size in the world.

The total number of machines owned and operated daily by persons residing in the city of Los Angeles is in excess of 40,000. Total registrations in California 109,912.

Los Angeles, which has a population of 516,317, uses 8,400,000 gallons of gasoline a year, and has 726 miles of graded streets.

436 miles of good roads radiate from the city through the county of Los Angeles.

That the Los Angeles Times, the largest newspaper in America, is ever alert to promote the interest of both automobilists and dealers is indicated by the great quantity of automobile news it regularly prints.

FIGHTING SEA-PLANE NO. 9

FIRST BLOOD IN THE AIR

BY CLAUDE GRAHAME-WHITE
Aviator and Aeronautical Engineer

HER crew was small; but what it lacked in numbers it made up for in spirit and in sheer enthusiasm. There was Herring, her pilot — or, as his friends called him, "the man at the wheel." Tall and fair, he had a sparkle in his eyes that even the most vicious of wind-gusts, smiting at him unawares, could not for more than a moment dim. Then there was Grant; a proud man, and with reason; for was he not one of the first, and also one of the most expert, of those who had learned to handle a machine-gun from an aero- ne's bow. Right out in front of Sea-plane 9, in a little cockpit of his own, sat t; and just before his seat, swivelling in all directions, was the trim and d gun — a gun that would cough out death with a rattle in its throat. -faced and chubby was Grant, with a cheerful laugh and a contented mind. to be forgotten was Hetherington — the wireless man; rather a sober fellow comparison with such optimists as Herring and Grant; but with a quiet of humor none the less, and an absorbing interest in the mechanism he con- In the center of the sea-plane's tapering hull, with the shadow of the plane above his head, Hetherington had his kingdom; and nobody, under of fearful penalties, must touch or meddle with his strange devices.

w's the old bag of tricks this morning?" Grant would ask him, with a dis- tful but cheery grin. And Hetherington would smile slowly and glance his low seat amidships; and then, a moment later, he would be engrossed with his delicate machinery. Hetherington was a person of importance; be who, with the sea-plane jumping and rolling in a squall, would tap out into the empty air and talk, as by a miracle, with some land station les away.

lly, there was Bland — Artificer Bland; a simple, reserved man, whose terests in life were the two motors, each developing its 120 horse-power, e tended in a cramped little engine-room at the rear of the sea-plane's nd with nothing between him and sheer space but the racing and whirling ropeller. Did anyone in the Naval Flying Corps know more about motors Bland? It was unlikely. He had served an apprenticeship that was ardu- ng; engines of many makes, and with queer internal ailments, had passed his hands; and he had pulled them to pieces, and performed daring opera- them, until there was no part of their mechanism with which he was liar. Bland would sit and listen to his big motors, as they revolved at ore turns a minute; and so sensitive was his ear that, should a valve be ble or a cylinder missing fire, he was aware of the fact instantly, and ate the defect.

LL crew, it knew every detail of its work, and was as keen as a crew could t just now, as the four walked together through the narrow streets of their way to the air-station, there was a grave expression upon their d what they talked of was the crisis in Europe which, growing from a bigger than a man's hand, was now shrieking at England from the d threatening at any moment to develop into war.

There was no mistake; war it was. Politics were swept aside now; phrases had lost their value; the grim, lean dog had broken his chain, ope was to be plunged in war. But it was no large issues that Herring His mind ran, like a flash, to Sea-plane 9. Here was work at last — rk perhaps. Who could tell?

luck is yours, my boy," he said, "well — all I wish is that I could ."

CHAPTER II.

IT WAS a queer night, with a drizzle of rain and a wind that rose and fell in uneasy sighs; and here and there the moon filtered through, and lit up a patch of sea. It was the sort of night upon which an aircraft, even heavily-built and fast in flight, would roll and swing awkwardly.

In the shadow of Sea-plane 9, working by the light of an acetylene flare, her crew of four were busy. There were many little things to be done, and not one of them must be forgotten; but soon her tanks were full, and Bland, after listening for a moment to the drone of the motors, declared they were all right and that she might be lowered down her slip. So along this slip-way, upon her polished floats, the aircraft moved, and took the dark water of the harbours with an easy grace.

"All aboard," said Herring, climbing to his wheel and levers in the bow, just behind the seat where Grant sat already with the gun.

Then Hetherington and Bland stepped from the slip to the aircraft — the former after a last word with the operator who, on duty at the station, would be waiting for messages from out of the night.

The launching had been as methodical as for an ordinary practice flight. There was nothing to suggest war or any grim work ahead; and yet in the minds of that crew of four, embarking so quietly for a rush through the night, there lingered no illusion; long had they discussed fighting in the air; and to its risks not one of them was blind.

BUT now the motors spoke with a louder note; and the sea-plane, throwing spray from her floats that flickered in the darkness, moved from the slip and was lost to view. Across the harbour she rushed, gathering speed; then Herring, drawing towards him his elevator lever, lifted the machine from the water into the air. She climbed quickly outwards, towards the Channel; and the shore lights of Dover swept away astern.

"Patrol the Straits till dawn; that's the idea," called Herring to Grant, and the latter turned behind his wind-screen to reply:

"Right ho, old man! But it'll be dull unless we run across something worth seeing. What's the odds about a Zeppelin blundering up the neck of the Channel?"

"Sporting chance, I think," answered Herring.

Still outwards and upwards drove Sea-plane 9. Herring switched on the electric light by which he could read his instruments, and saw their height was now 2,000 feet. Dover lay behind — a smudge of lights; below and in front was a dark, empty void; and the choppy wind of the Channel, striking the planes now here, now there, made the aircraft heel and labour as she was thrust forward by her motors.

Tap-tap! Crackle! Rap-tap-tap! Above the hum of the well-silenced engines could be heard Hetherington's wireless. Bending low within the hull, out of the wild rush of the wind, he was sending a test message through to Dover. A little table, mounted upon springs to deaden the vibration, was fixed before his seat; and upon it was his transmitting key and a pad of paper and a pencil; while just above him, throwing a ghostly white light upon his work, shone an electric lamp. Next Hetherington, towards the stern, crouched the motionless figure of Bland — lost to all else save the care of his two engines, which were well warmed to their work and developing their power with a smooth rhythm of sound.

Now Herring spun his rudder-wheel and the sea-plane, banking heavily and diving under the influence of a sudden gust, sped down Channel in the direction of Folkstone. A rain-squall lashed at them, and Grant — out in the fore-front of the hull — cringed behind his screen.

THE pilot glanced again at his dials. The altitude-metre registered 3,000 feet, and they were driving ahead at 70 miles an hour — albeit with a side-way roll that, to any but an expert crew, would have appeared perilous. So they clove the night; and it was cold, gloomy, dispiriting work. Nothing was to be seen but the distant shore lights; and even these, when they plunged into a sea of clammy mist, were temporarily lost to view. Herring, in disgust, spun his steering-wheel again and altered their course; and now they bored their way out towards mid-Channel. The wind seemed easier, but the mist was troublesome, lying in banks and patches, with moonlit spaces intervening, in and out of which the sea-plane flitted. Grant, who acted as observer when his gun was not required, tried to see what lay ahead — his eyes just above the level of his screen. But accurate observation, in such will-o'-the-wisp darkness, seemed impossible; and he turned presently to Herring.

"Confound this mist!" he cried. "It piles itself up in all sorts of funny shapes. Enough to give one the jumps, it is. If I were you, Herring, I'd ——"

Grant never finished the sentence because Herring, releasing one hand from his steering-wheel, seized his arm in a grip of steel, and swung him round so that he looked again ahead.

The sea-plane had, in its swiftly flown course, shot out suddenly into a clear, moonlit sky. Above, faintly shining, were the stars; dead ahead of them lay another bank of mist; and from behind this screen, silently and deliberately, the bow of an airship was beginning to force its way!

The surprise was complete. Grant, seeing what Herring had seen, drew in his breath with a gasp; and for a fraction of a second the sea-plane, driving on unchecked, devoured the distance that lay between her and the other craft. Then Herring woke to action.

"We'll climb," he shouted to Grant. "If I drive her up, as steeply as she'll go, they may just miss seeing us from their fore-car."

Grant nodded his head, his eyes riveted upon the (Continued on page 263)

HUSH! I was speaking of a week's journey, not of a life's voyage, Mr. Schmidt," she said, her face suffused.

"I was speaking of a honeymoon," said he, and then remembered Mrs. Gaston. She was leaning back in her chair smiling benignly. He had an uncomfortable thought: was he walking into a trap set for him by this clever woman? Had she an ulterior motive in advancing his cause?

"But it would be perfectly silly of you to follow me in a car," Bedelia, trying to regain her lost composure. "Perfectly silly, wouldn't it, Gaston?"

"Call me Rex for the present," said he. "I will supply you with a better one later on."

"May I call him Rex?" she inquired of her companion.

"In moderation," said Mrs. Gaston.

"Very well, then, Rex, I have changed my mind. I shall not cross the Brunig motor since you insist upon risking your neck in pursuit of me. I shall go by in the morning,— calmly, complacently, stupidly by train. Instead of a ling dash for liberty over rocky heights and through perilous gorges, I shall like any bourgeoise in a second — or third class carriage, and the only thrill shall have will be when we stop for Baker's chocolate at the top of the Pass. that time I expect to be sufficiently hungry to be thrilled even by the sight of of chocolate. "That's a sensible idea," he cried. "And we may be able to accommodate your pursuers on the same train. What's the sense of leaving them behind? only catch us up in the end, so we might just as well take them along"

We will keep well ahead of them. I insist on that. They can't get here tomorrow afternoon, so we will be far in the lead. We will be in Vienna days. There I shall say good-by to you, for I am going on beyond. I am to Graustark, the new Blithers estate. Surely you will not follow me

CHAPTER XXI.

MR. BLITHERS ARRIVES IN GRAUSTARK.

WILLIAM W. BLITHERS arrived in Edelweiss, the Capital of Graustark, on the same day that the Prince returned from his tour of the world. atter of fact, he traveled by special train and beat the Prince home by the of three hours. The procession of troops, headed by the Royal Castle it was announced would pass the historic Hotel Regengetz at five in the on, so Mr. Blithers had front seats on the extensive porch facing the Platz. id not know it, but if he had waited for the regular train in Vienna, he have had the honor of traveling in the same railway carriage with the royal man. ("Would" is used advisedly in place of "Might," for he would have in it, you may be sure.)

ever, he erred in another particular, for arriving at the same instant and arm-in-arm with the country's sovereign, he could hardly have been kept the procession itself. When you stop to think that next to the Prince he most important personage in the realm on this day of celebration, it ought be considered at all unreasonable for him to have expected some notable n, such as being placed in the first carriage immediately behind the country's sovereign, or possibly on the seat facing him. Missing an opportunity like n't at all Mr. Blithers' idea of success. He was very sorry about the train. If it hadn't been for that train he might now be preparing to ride ards behind a royal band instead of sitting with his wife in the front row on a hotel porch, just like a regular guest, waiting for the parade to come It certainly was a wasted opportunity.

AD lost no time in his dash across the continent. In the first place, his nts in Paris made it quite clear to him that there was likely to be "ruc-Graustark over the loan and the prospect of a plebian princess being the throne whether the people liked it or not; and in the second place, pplegate had left a note on his desk in the Paris offices, coolly informing she was likely to turn up in Edelweiss almost as soon as he. She added g postscript. She said she was curious to see what sort of a place it had been wasting his money on!

hat he was put out by Maud's aggravating behavior would be stating h excessive gentleness. He was furious. He sent for the head of the ency and gave him a blowing up that he was never to forget. It ap the detectives had followed a false lead and had been fooled by the in a most humiliating manner. They hadn't the remotest notion was, and evinced great surprise when informed in a voice loud enough a half-block away that she was on her way to Graustark. They said be possible, and he said they didn't know what they were talking about. e with them. They could step out and ask the cashier to give them a check for their services, and so on and so forth. He did not forget to notify them that they were a gang of loafers.

Then he dragged Mrs. Blithers off to the Gare de l'Este and took the Express to Vienna. He would see to the loan first and to Maude afterward.

He had no means of knowing that a certain Miss Guile was doing more to shape the destiny of the principality of Graustark than all the millions he had poured into its treasury. Nor had he the faintest suspicion that she was even then on Graustark soil and waiting as eagerly as he for the procession to pass a given point.

Going back a day or two, it becomes necessary to report that while in Vienna the perverse Bedelia played a shabby trick on the infatuated Robin. She stole away from the Bristol in the middle of the night and was half-way to the Graustark frontier before he was aware of her flight. She left a note for him, the contents of which sufficed to ease his mind in the presence of what otherwise might have been looked upon as a calamity. Instead of relapsing into despondency over her defection, he became astonishingly exuberant. It was relief and not despair that followed the receipt of the brief letter. She had played directly into his hand, after all. In other words, she had removed a difficulty that had been troubling him for days: the impossibility of entering his own domain without betraying his identity to her. Naturally his entrance to the capital would be attended by the most incriminating manifestation on the part of the populace. The character of R. Schmidt would be effaced in an instant, and, according to his own notion, quite a bit too soon to suit his plans. He preferred to remain Schmidt until she placed her hand in his and signified a readiness to become plain Mrs. R. Schmidt of Vienna. That would be his hour of triumph.

IN HER note she said: "Forgive me for running away like this. It is for the best. I must have a few days to myself, dear friend,— days for sober reflection uninfluenced by the presence of a natural enemy to composure. And so I am leaving you in this cowardly, graceless fashion. Do not think ill of me. I give you my solemn promise that in a very few days I shall let you know where I may be found if you choose to come to me. Even then I may not be fully convinced in my own mind that our adventure has reached its climax. You have said that you would accompany me to Graustark. I am leaving tonight for that country, where I shall remain in seclusion for a few days before acquainting you with my future plans. It is not my intention to stop in Edelweiss at present. The newspapers proclaim a state of unrest there over the coming visit of Mr. Blithers and the return of the Prince, both of whom are very much in the public eye just now. I prefer the quiet of the country to the excitement of the city, so I shall seek some remote village and give myself up to — shall I say prayerful meditation? Believe me, dear Rex, to be your most devoted, though whimsical, Bedelia."

He was content with this. Deep down in his heart he thanked her for running away at such an opportune time! The situation was immeasurably simplified. He had laid awake nights wondering how he could steal into his own domain with her as a companion and still put off the revelation that he was not yet ready to make. Now the way was comparatively easy. Once the demonstration was safely over, he could carry on his adventure with something of the same security that made the prowlings of the Baghdad Caliphs such happy enterprises, for he could with impunity traverse the night in the mantle of R. Schmidt.

Immediately upon receiving her letter, he sent for Quinnox and Gourou, who were stopping at a hotel nearby.

"I am ready to proceed to Edelweiss, my friends," said he. "Miss Guile has departed. Will you book accommodations on the earliest train leaving for home?"

"I have already seen to that, highness," said Gourou calmly. "We leave at six this evening. Count Quinnox has wired the Prime Minister that you will arrive in Edelweiss at three tomorrow afternoon, God willing."

"You knew that she had gone?"

"I happened to be in the Nordbahnhof when she boarded the train at midnight," replied the Baron, unmoved.

"Do you never sleep?" demanded Robin hotly.

"Not while I am on duty," said Gourou.

THE Prince was thoughtful, his brow clouding with a troubled frown. "I suppose I shall now have to face my people with the confession that will confirm their worst fears. I may as well say to you, my friends, that I mean to make her my wife even though it costs me my kingdom. Am I asking too much of you, gentlemen, when I solicit your support in my fight against the prejudice that is certain to ——"

Quinnox stopped him with a profound gesture of resignation and a single word: "Kismet!" and Gourou, with his most ironic smile, added: "You may count on us to support the crown, highness, even though we lose our heads."

"Thank you," said Robin, flushing. "Just because I appear to have lost my head is no reason for your doing the same, Baron Gourou."

The Baron's smile was unfaltering. "True," he said, "but we may be able to avoid all that by inducing the people of Graustark to lose their hearts."

"Do you think they will accept her as — as their princess?" cried Robin, hopefully.

"I submit that it will first be necessary for you to induce Miss Guile to accept you as her prince," said Gourou mildly. "That doesn't appear to be settled at present."

He took alarm. "What do you mean? Your remark has a sinister sound. Has anything transpired to ——"

"She has disappeared, highness, quite effectually. That is all that I can say," said Gourou, and Robin was conscious of a sudden chill and the rush of cold moisture to his brow. "But let us prepare to confront an even more substantial condition. A prospective father-in-law is descending upon our land. He is groping in the dark and he is angry. He has lost a daughter somewhere in the wilds of Europe, and he realizes that he cannot hope to become the grandfather of princes unless he can produce a mother for them.

unwieldy monster which, its engines at half-speed, was uncovering itself slowly from the sheltering mist.

Obedient to Herring's tug upon the elevating lever, the bow of the sea-plane leaped skyward, and with a jerk that threw Hetherington partly from his seat. Looking forward in surprise, he saw for the first time what the pilot and observer had seen; his mouth framed itself to a silent whistle, then he tapped Bland's arm.

But now Grant, peering sideways round the abruptly-rising bow, saw the fore-car of the airship clear itself from the mist; and so close were they to the leviathan, and so clear was this patch of moonlit sky, that he could just distinguish the shapes of those who stood within the car.

"No good, old man," he called to Herring; "they're bound to see us."

And, even as he spoke, the matter was placed beyond doubt. There was a movement among the figures aboard the airship; then two spluttering jets of flame leapt suddenly from her fore-car, and there sounded a harsh rattle through the air.

"That settles it," cried Herring, with grim quietness.

Grant swung round to him.

"German Zeppelin — certain," he added. "Recognized us by the set of our planes, and opened fire without a by-your-leave; but she hasn't our range."

"And isn't likely to get it," answered Herring; "not just yet, anyhow."

WITH her engines at their maximum power, the sea-plane whirled up through the air, and in a moment or so, unscathed, they flew above the airship's hull and out of range of the guns in her fore-car.

"They've a gun on their top platform, ing," said Grant, warningly.

plane leaped ahead, still ris- airship in a minute or so, and far below. Back from glanced Herring, as though the distance that lay between heir foe; then suddenly, as fied, he signalled Bland to motors; and, as the hum of way, he dived his craft sea- unge so steep that it seemed al. Grant, throwing him- his seat and wedging his feet floor-boards, looked sheer some 5,000 feet of space, and saw the waves of the Channel, heaving coldly under the light of the moon.

Down the aircraft planed, or rather fell like a bird to its prey. Her engines were quiet, but the wind rushed through her struts and wires; and now, even while she dived, she began to swing round — round until a half-circle had been made, and she faced the airship which flew beneath. The latter, still far astern and a long way below, had increased her speed and was pushing up her bow to rise; and so she looked to Grant, who peered directly upon her, like a giant caterpillar which was raising its head to the sky. Down, with a wail and a whistle of wind, dived the sea-plane; and as she plunged towards her bulky foe — Herring still crouching tense at his levers — Grant swung clear his gun and sat wide-eyed and alert. Every second had its value; were they to do what they planned, each mind and hand must act with lightning speed.

But now, while Grant watched the airship across the shortening gap of moonlight, he distinguished a small railed platform upon the top of her hull; and upon this platform, his keen eyes told him, tiny shapes were busy round an object that reared itself skyward.

"Look out!" he called to Herring.

The gun was fired almost as he spoke, stabbing the night with its jets of whitey-red flame. But the sea-plane sped unhurt. Like a faint grey shadow she fell towards her foe, and no gunner who was human could have hoped to hit a target such as this. As she whirled down, disdaining the spluttering of the gun below, Herring leaned forward in his driving-seat, measuring with his eye the space between the craft. Steeper, for a moment or so he made the dive; then he steadied the sea-plane a little in her plunge; and as he did so he called to Grant:

"Now, old man — lively!"

Grant, crouching behind his gun, lifted one hand in token that he heard; and in a second or so the work was done. But it was a second or so of fighting such as men had not known before.

Checked in the steepness of her glide, but still sweeping swiftly forward, the aeroplane bore directly upon her foe; and Grant, the instant he could see below the airship's projecting bow, and so cover the cars which carried her machinery and crew, set his gun to work and pumped out a vicious stream of lead. Almost at the same moment that he opened his fire, the gunners in the fore-car of the airship, seeing their opponent clearly for the first time, set up a clattering din with two machine-guns and another heavier weapon which threw an explosive shell. So, for the space of a few heart-beats, both craft blazed at each other — a shattering, murderous fusillade. But it was the sea-plane's fire which first told its tale. Herring, peering over Grant's lowered shoulders, saw the gearing of one of the forward propellers of the airship collapse in a tangle of twisted tubes; and, even while he watched, the second of her two bow screws, fixed upon the opposite side of the hull, seemed to tear itself from its bearings, hanging by the car in a ruin of buckled rods.

HERRING smiled — a grim little smile. This havoc by Grant's gun was no surprise to him. Many times, in all its details, had such an attack been planned by the crew of Sea-plane 9.

The smile next instant was swept from Herring's face. There came a crash and a roar beneath the sea-plane's keel; she swung suddenly sideways; and, from some part of her structure, sounded a ripping and rending of rods and stays. Further she lurched, as though reeling from a blow; and Herring had to throw his rudder hard round, with a movement that was instinctive, to prevent her from rolling right over upon her side.

So, for another fraction of a second, they seemed to hang, the airship's cars spouting flame at them; and then, diving and swerving, the sea-plane swept down beneath her foe, and out of the range of her murderous guns.

Grant's voice was heard first. He bent anxiously over the side of the hull; then shouted back to Herring.

"They've hit one of our floats and broken something, I think; but that seems the worst of it."

"Right ho!" called back Herring coolly. "She's quite controllable still, although she seems to want to fly like a crab. And now for round two. You did fine, old man."

Suppose your children had their choice of homes to which to go for breakfast—

And one home offered them a dish like this—Puffed Wheat or Puffed Rice with cream and sugar, or mixed with any fruit.

Suppose they saw these dainty grains, flaky, crisp and tempting. Grains brown and porous, puffed to eight times normal size.

Suppose they tasted one and found a fascinating flavor, much like toasted nuts.

Where would they go for breakfast?

Suppose your folks, for a dairy-dish supper, had their choice of bread or crackers, or Puffed Wheat or Puffed Rice—

And they saw these toasted Puffed Grains—airy, thin, inviting—floating in bowls of milk—

And they knew that these were whole grains, made four times as porous as bread—the most digestible cereal foods known.

With all these attractions, have you any question which morsels they would choose for their milk?

"Thanks," said Grant simply, and bent again towards his gun.

Herring steadied his craft's dive, and brought her upon an even keel; then he signalled to Bland to start the engines; and, directly the machine was under power again, he wheeled her round and began to climb. Up leapt the sea-plane, and regained the level of her foe, being now far in her rear. But, as he rose, Herring noticed that the airship was ascending too.

"She's trying to shake us off by getting rid of her water-ballast," he called to Grant, and then added: "But we'll finish the game before it's a question of altitude."

Again Grant nodded, his eye upon the airship, which had re-opened fire with her machine-guns, although the sea-plane was obviously out of range. Herring, having risen to a sufficient height, swept wide in a sideway turn, and drove ahead till he flew level with his adversary. Then he threw over his rudder suddenly, and darted in upon her, his motors at their fullest power. Like a dragon-fly, the sea-plane whirled upon her bulky enemy; it was a swift blow and a desperate one, and relied for its success upon the sheer speed of its making.

Grant, behind his gun, threw a jet of lead into the center of the airship's hull, ripping a gash in her outer sheathing, and breaking slender rods inside. Here again was he putting a theory into practice; and, just as he had concentrated upon her propellers, so now did he pour his fire into one vital section of her hull.

On, like a pigmy fighting a giant, did the sea-plane rush; and, as she came, she met a broadside from the airship's guns. Shot ripped her planes and shrieked past the armored bow of her hull; but still, like a thing of life, she sped relentlessly towards her foe. A shell burst above her with a crash; but the aim was faulty, and it did no more than make her plunge for a moment and falter in her flight. And, to confuse the enemy's marksmen in their aim, Herring swerved the sea-plane as she flew, now to one side and now the other; then, following a succession of these quick lurches, he would hold her rock-steady for an instant, so that Grant might ply his gun.

But now, from one of the machine-guns upon the rear-car of the airship, came a sudden rattle of shot among the petrol and oil tanks above Bland's head. Instinctively, to see that none of the feed tubes to the motors had been severed, the engineer sprang to his feet; and, as he did so, Hetherington saw his body jerk convulsively and his hands grope towards the nearest stay. But they closed upon empty air, and, toppling sideways before Hetherington could reach him, Bland reeled against the framework of the hull, and stood thus for a second; then he pitched over backwards and fell sheer from sight—down through 3,000 feet of space to meet death—were he not already dead—in the coldly-heaving waters of the Channel.

Hetherington sank back in his seat; he was convulsed by a shudder. This was war—actual war!

BUT ahead of him, in the smother and splatter of the gun, bending tense at their posts, neither Herring nor Grant was conscious of the tragedy that had happened within three paces of them; and the two big motors, although robbed of their guardian, still sent out their hum of power. The tanks above them, being armored, had resisted the penetration of the shot; and none of the feed tubes had been cut.

But of the next few seconds who can write? That the sea-plane still flew was in itself a miracle. Guns roared at her; shot and shell shrieked and whistled past her; but on she came—the very swiftness of her onset, and her erratic swings and darts from side to side, proving her salvation. And, while she bored her way in, Grant was busy with his gun; steadily he played his fire upon the enemy's hull; and now this concentration began to tell its tale. Two of her gas-containing balloonettes had burst and lost their contents, and the gash in her side was beginning to weaken the rigidity of the airship's hull.

On, as though she meant to transfix the dirigible with her armored bow, sped the aeroplane; another second or so passed with a fierce clamor of guns; and then, with an abrupt throwing forward of his elevating lever, Herring dived his craft. Down she slid, like a silver-grey arrow—down so suddenly and steeply that she seemed to those on the airship to fall sheer from view; down, until she sped at 100 miles an hour beneath her enemy's keel.

But, even as he began thus to dive, Herring felt a jerk and a jar upon the wheel in his hands; and a moment or so later, when he sought to steady his craft from a sideway roll, he found that his balancing planes, away out at the tips of the main wings, were no longer operative.

"The control wires have been shot through," he told himself; then, as an afterthought: "I must steady her as well as I can with movements of the rudder."

He pushed the rudder over, but the sea-plane responded sluggishly; she was nearly out of hand now, and yawed and veered as she flew. Herring set his teeth, and worked grimly at his controls; and then, a moment later, his attention was distracted by a cry from Grant.

Just as they had dived beneath her, there had sounded an ominous grating and rending from the airship above; and now, as Grant and Herring flung a glance backward, her great length of hull began to kink and sag inwards towards the center; she swung round helplessly and drifted into the wind; and, then, as they watched her, she began to sink away seaward—stricken, helpless, and beyond control.

"Grant," cried Herring, "you're a dandy with that gun."

And, as he spoke, he jerked round his rudder with a sudden shout, and wheeled the crippled sea-plane almost in her length; for out of a bank of mist just in front of them, and driving ahead at full speed, came the long grey hull of a second Zeppelin!

"Jove" gasped Grant; and then Herring called again.

"We're not gluttons, are we?" he asked with another of his crooked smiles; "we know when we've had enough; and one airship, for tonight, is about as much as we can manage."

So, limping through the air, but still flying gamely, Sea-plane 9 slid off into the mist and vanished on her way towards the English coast.

* * * * * *

COMMANDER HENSON it was who sighted her, just as she stole in towards the dawn. She was expected—eagerly awaited; for Hetherington's wireless had been at work and—albeit laconically and without verbiage—he had tapped the outline of the tale; doing so with difficulty, however, as his labors had to be divided between his transmitting key and the now untended motors.

Down the sea-plane glided towards the motor-boat that awaited her; and those who watched her saw that she flew with a heavy list. Then, striking the water clumsily, owing to her damaged float, she turned half over and began to sink. But there were willing hands ready; and her crew were drawn to safety and quickly brought ashore.

The Commander met them on the slipway.

"Boys!" he said—all official reserve gone—"Boys! It's first blood! I've heard from Harwich not ten minutes ago; and the best their machines have done during the night is to report the movements of one of the enemy's squadrons. First blood it is for us—first blood in the air!"

Herring nodded and shook hands; but his eyes were clouded.

"Poor old Bland!" was all he could say. "Poor old Bland!"

How Horace Greeley Wrote

JAMES BURRILL ANGELL, President Emeritus of the University of Michigan, recounts this reminiscence of Horace Greeley:

"During war-time I was editor of a paper in Providence, Rhode Island, and saw something of Horace Greeley. I remember one night when he was in our office—a night of excitement, when there was great news at hand. He wished to write and I offered him my desk, only to be greeted with a snort of disgust.

"'That's no way to write,' he said. 'Give me some books.'

"Several bound volumes were brought and he placed them on the table before him, already a high one.

"'More,' he called.

"He erected a pile, the top of which was level with his chin. On top of this he placed the copy paper and, with his hand even with his eyes, settled himself with the remark,

"'That's the way to write.'

"Since then I have never wondered that Greeley wrote badly."

The Prince of Graustark

At present he seems to be desperate. He doesn't know where to find her, as Little Bo-peep might have said. We may expect to catch him in a very ugly and obstreperous mood. Have I told you that he was in this city last night? He arrived at the Bristol a few hours prior to the significant departure of Miss Guile. Moreover, he has chartered a special train and is leaving today for Edelweiss. Count Quinnox has taken the precaution to advise the Prime Minister of his approach and has impressed upon him the importance of decrying any sort of popular demonstration against him on his arrival. Romano reports that the people are in an angry mood. I would suggest that you prepare, in a way, to placate them, now that Miss Guile has more or less dropped out of sight. It behooves you to ——"

"See here," broke in Robin harshly, "have you had the effrontery to make a personal appeal to Miss Guile in your confounded efforts to prevent the ——"

"Just a moment, Robin," exclaimed Count Quinnox, his face hardening. "I am sorry to hear words of anger on your lips, and directed toward your most loyal friends. You ask us to support you and in the next breath imply that we are unworthy. It is beneath the dignity of either Baron Gourou or myself to reply to your ungenerous charge."

"I beg your pardon," said Robin, but without lowering his head. He was not convinced. The barb of suspicion had entered his brain. Were they, after all, responsible for Bedelia's flight? Had they revealed his identity to the girl and afterward created such alarm in her breast that she preferred to slink away in the night rather than to court the humiliation that might follow if she presumed to wed Graustark's prince in opposition to his country's wish? "You must admit that the circumstances of her secret flight last night is calculated to — But, no matter. We will drop the subject. I warn you, however, that my mind is fixed. I shall not rest until I have found her."

"I fancy that the state of unrest will be general," said Gourou, with perfect good nature. "It will go very hard with Graustark if we fail to find her. And now, to return to our original sin: What are we to do about the ambitious Mr. Blithers? He is on my conscience and I tremble."

IT MUST not be supposed for an instant that the City of Edelweiss and the court of Graustark was unimpressed by the swift approach and abrupt arrival of Mr. Blithers. His coming had been heralded for days in advance. The city was rudely expectant, the Court uneasy. The man who had announced his determination to manage the public and private affairs of the principality was coming to town. He was coming in state, there could be no doubt about that. More than that, he was coming to propitiate the people whether they chose to be mollified or not. He was bringing with him a vast store of business acumen, an unexampled confidence and the self-assurance of one who has never encountered failure. Shylock's mantle rested on his hated shoulders, and Judas Iscariot was spoken of with less abhorrence than William W. Blithers by the Christian country of Graustark. He was coming to get better acquainted with his daughter's future subjects.

Earlier in the week certain polite and competent gentlemen from Berlin had appeared at the Castle gates, carrying authority from the dauntless millionaire. They calmly announced that they had come to see what repairs were needed in and about the Castle and to put the place in shape. A most regrettable incident followed. They were chased out of town by an angry mob and serious complications with the German Empire were likely to be the result of the outrage.

Moreover, the citizens of Graustark were openly reluctant to deposit their state bonds as security for the unpopular loan, and there was a lively sentiment in favor of renouncing the agreement entered into by the cabinet.

The Prime Minister, in the absence of the Prince, called mass meetings in all the towns and villages and emissaries of the crown addressed the sullen crowds. They sought to clarify the atmosphere.

As for Miss Blithers becoming the Princess of Graustark, that was simple poppycock, declared the speakers. The crown could take oath that Prince Robin would not allow that to happen. Had he not declared in so many words that he would never wed the daughter of William Blithers, and, for that matter,

THAT'S the thought that will make your mind at ease when you are at your office desk hereafter, if you send this coupon right now. Every year more men are hurt, more men are killed by accidents. Today the startling toll is one man in seven—one man in seven killed or injured by accident. And no human being can tell when, where or how accident is going to happen to him. In train or street car, on a boat, in an elevator, falling down stairs, the smallest slip, and it may be too late. Now, while you can,

ÆTNA-IZE

Send the coupon and let us tell you about the wonderful Ætna Accumulative Accident policy; the policy that increases every year you own it—annually for five years—so that if you start at $5,000, the sixth year it is worth at least $7,500 and your premium remains the same.

Let us tell you how this policy will pay as much as $15,000 if you lose your life, or two limbs or both eyes; how it will pay half as much if you lose one hand, foot or eye; how it will pay hospital bills, operation fees, surgeons' fees; how it will pay you $50 each week as long as you live if you are totally disabled; how it will pay you $25 each week if you are just partially disabled.

Ætna-ize—and no matter what accident may come, you will at least know that your wife and children are taken care of.

It is not in your power to prevent accidents, but it is in your power to make those accidents bear as lightly as possible on yourself and those who depend on you. Send this coupon today. For the sake of your family—don't neglect this chance.

hadn't the young woman also announced that she would have none of him? There was one thing that Mr. Blithers couldn't do, and that was to marry his daughter to the Prince of Graustark.

And so, by the time that Mr. Blithers arrived in Edelweiss, the people were in a less antagonistic frame of mind,—though sullenly suspicious,—and were even prepared to grin in their sleeves, for, after all, it was quite clear that the joke was not on them but on Mr. Blithers.

When the special train pulled into the station of Edelweiss Mr. Blithers turned to his wife and said:

"Cheer up, Lou. This isn't a funeral."

"But there is quite a mob out there," she said, peering through the car window. "How can we be sure that they are friendly?"

"Don't you worry," said Mr. Blithers confidently. "They are not likely to throw rocks at the goose that lays the golden egg." If he had paused to think, he would not have uttered such a careless indictment. The time would come when she was to remind him of his thoughtless admission, omitting, however, any reference to the golden egg.

The crowd was big, mobile, surly. It lined the sidewalks in the vicinity of the station and stared with curious, half-closed eyes at the portly capitalist and his party, which, by the way, was rendered somewhat imposing in size by augmentation in the shape of lawyers from Paris and London, clerks and stenographers from the Paris office, and four plain clothes men who were to see to it that Midas wasn't blown to smithereens by envious anarchists; to say nothing of a lady's maid, a valet, a private secretary and a doctor. (Mr. Blithers always went prepared for the worst.)

He was somewhat amazed and disgruntled by the absence of silk-hat ambassadors from the Castle, with words of welcome for him on his arrival. There were a plentiful supply of policemen but no cabinet ministers. He was on the point of censuring his secretary for not making it clear to the government that he was due to arrive at such and such an hour and minute, when a dapper young man in uniform — he couldn't tell whether he was a partolman or a captain — came up and saluted.

"I am William W. Blithers," said he sharply.

"I am an official guide and interpreter, sir," announced the young man suavely. "May I have the honor ——"

"Not necessary — not necessary at all," exploded Mr. Blithers. "I can get about without a guide."

"You will require an interpreter, sir," began the other, only to be waved aside.

"Anyone desiring to speak to me will have to do it in English," said Mr. Blithers, and marched out to the carriages.

He was in some doubt at first, but as his carriage passed swiftly between the staring ranks on the sidewalks, he began to doff his hat and bow to the right and the left. His smiles were returned by the multitude, and so his progress was more or less of a triumph after all.

AT THE Regengetz he found additional cause for irritation. The lords and nobles who should have met him at the railway station were as conspicuously absent in the rotunda of the hotel. No one was there to receive him except the ingratiating manager of the establishment, who hoped that he had had a pleasant trip and who assured him that it would not be more than a couple of hours before his rooms would be vacated by the people who now had them but were going away as soon as the procession had passed.

"Get 'em out at once," stormed Mr. Blithers. "Do you think I want to hang around this infernal lobby until ——"

"Pardon me," said the manager blandly, "but your rooms will not be ready for you before four or five o'clock. They are occupied. We can put you temporarily in rooms at the rear if your lady desires to rest and refresh herself after the journey."

"Well, I'll be ——" began Mr. Blithers, purple in the face, and then leaned suddenly against the counter, incapable of finishing the sentence.

The manager rubbed his hands and smiled. "This is one of our gala days, Mr. Blithers. You could not have arrived at a time more opportune. I have taken the precaution to reserve chairs for you on the verandah. The procession will pass directly in front of the hotel on its way to Castle avenue."

"What procession?" demanded Mr. Blithers. He was beginning to recall the presence of uniformed bands and mounted troops in the side streets near the station.

his trip around the world," said the manager.

"He ought to have been back long ago," said Mr. Blithers wrathfully, and mopped his brow with a hand rendered unsteady by a mental convulsion. He was thinking of his hat-lifting experience.

True to schedule, the procession passed the hotel at five. Bands were playing, people were shouting, banners were waving, and legions of mounted and foot soldiers in brilliant array clogged the thoroughfare. The royal equipage rolled slowly by, followed by less gorgeous carriages in which were seated the men who failed to make the advent of Mr. Blithers a conspicuous success.

Prince Robin sat in the royal coach, faced by two unbending officers of the Royal Guard. He was alone on the rear seat, and his brown, handsome face was aglow with smiles. Instead of a hat of silk, he lifted a gay and far from immaculate conception in straw; instead of a glittering uniform, he wore a suit of blue serge and a peculiarly American tie of crimson hue. He looked more like a popular athlete returning from conquests abroad than a prince of ancient lineage. But the crowd cheered itself hoarse over this bright-faced youngster who rode by in a coach of gold and brandished a singularly unregal chapeau.

His alert eyes were searching the crowds along the street, in the balconies and windows with an eager intensity. He was looking for the sweet familiar face of the loveliest girl on earth, and knew that he looked in vain, for even though she were one among the many her features would be obscured by an impenetrable veil. If she were there, he wondered what her thoughts might be on beholding the humble R. Schmidt in the role of a royal prince receiving the laudations of the loving multitude!

Passing the Regengetz, his eyes swept the rows of cheering people banked upon its wide terrace and verandahs. He saw Mr. and Mrs. Blithers well down in front, and for a second his heart seemed to stand still. Would she be with them? It was with a distinct sensation of relief that he realized that she was not with the smiling Americans.

Mr. Blithers waved his hat and, instead of shouting the incomprehensible greeting of the native spectators, called out in vociferous tones:

"Welcome home! Welcome! Hurrah!"

As the coach swerved into the circle and entered the great, tree-lined avenue, followed by the clattering chorus of four thousand horseshoes, Mrs. Blithers after a final glimpse of the disappearing coach, sighed profoundly, shook out her handkerchief from the crumpled ball she had made of it with her nervously clenched fingers, touched her lips with it and said:

"Oh, what a remarkably handsome, manly boy he is, Will."

Mr. Blithers nodded his head proudly. "He certainly is. I'll bet my head that Maude is crazy about him already. She can't help it, Lou. That trip on the Jupiter was a Godsend."

"I wish we could hear something from her," said Mrs. Blithers, anxiously.

"Don't you worry," said he. "She'll turn up safe and sound and enthusiastic before she's a week older. We'll have plain sailing from now on, Lou."

Tit for Tat

Thomas W. Churchill, president of New York's Board of Education, likes to poke fun at Job E. Hedges. Mr. Hedges always takes it good naturedly, of course, and when the two men happen to be listed for speeches at the same banquet the diners are assured of fire-works.

"I happened to come in the room just after my friend Hedges spoke," said Mr. Churchill at the dinner of the Sons of Ireland the other night, "and I passed a hallboy who had listened very attentively to Mr. Hedges.

"'Who was that last speaker?' he asked me.

"'My boy, that is the Honorable Job Hedges, the greatest after-dinner speaker in America,' I said.

"'He didn't eat any dinner tonight,' said he.

The diners laughed at the expense of Mr. Hedges until that gentleman responded with:

"Churchill's the only Irishman I know of who isn't funny at times."

And Mr. Churchill sat down.

KING AIR RIFLES

BOYS must play. The King Air-Rifle is the right kind of play. It takes the boy into the healthful outdoors. Your parents know that nature put two irresistible hungers in every boy—one for food and the other for play. The one is as necessary as the other for a boy's natural development.

¶ With a King-air-rifle the boy has no end of clean, manly, wholesome fun. It is not a toy—it is a man's gun in action, appearance and everything but destructiveness. And the King is more than a plaything. It helps utilize and direct the boy's natural powers; satisfies his play hunger as nothing else can do; teaches accuracy; clear, quick thinking; self-reliance and develops his mind, eye and hand.

¶ Give your boy a King. He will love you more now, and reward you later because you made him better thru play.

Who Wouldn't Like To Be Admired Because of a Fine, Clear, Youthful Complexion?

How to get and hold a fine, youthful complexion! That is the problem.

Ask some woman of 40 whose complexion looks like 20. Ask some man whose fine, wholesome skin radiates health and cleanliness. They'll tell you the secret.

They'll tell you what it is that makes husbands look with new admiration at their wives. They'll tell you what it is that makes so many men and women mutually admire each other. It is the use of Pompeian Massage Cream.

Rub a bit of Pompeian gently into the skin. Soon the cream begins to roll out of the pores, bringing with it the dust and grime that soap and water could not reach. This process not only cleanses the skin thoroughly, leaving it clear and fine, but the gentle friction action also arouses the sluggish circulation, creating a fine, healthy skin. No ordinary cream can do this.

When you want to look your best and subdue the tired lines of work and worry, just use Pompeian. You will be as delighted as have several million men and women before you.

Clip the coupon now for a sample of Pompeian and for the 1915 Art Panel, along with your choice of a Christy or Hutt picture.
